"THE HEIGHTS OF HAZARD"

(Vitagraph Blue Ribbon—V-L-S-E—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

LIKE all picturizations of stories from the pen of Cyrus Townsend Brady, this photoplay has a story to tell, tells it neatly and convincingly, and then stops.

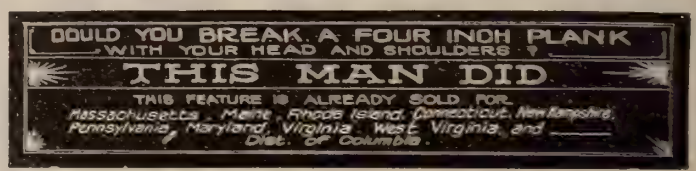
Also like all Mr. Brady's writings, which have reached the screen, "The Heights of Hazard" offers a plot out of the ordinary, a theme that is refreshing, in this case, because it takes the same material presented in many other pictures, and makes it mean something where they would make it mean very nearly nothing.

THE HEIGHTS OF HAZARD ARE FINALLY SCALED

Here is a picture that presents a rudely interrupted betrothal dinner, the abduction of the near-bride by masked men, and a hurried ride in an automobile to the apartments of the abductor-in-chief. Then the abducted one actually falls in love with her captor.

You have seen nearly all that attempted in pictures before, but when you see it in "The Heights of Hazard" you will see that the whole thing is done with intelligence, which is only another way of saying that the picture contains a real idea.

The heroine, betrothed to a duke, had announced at the dinner that "There is no longer any romance in American life." Whereupon several of the guests tell the stories of their romances. One gained a wife by carrying her away in aeroplane; another by making a daring rescue from drowning, and so on. But the heroine doesn't mean that kind of romance. She means romance of the days when men had to scale heights of hazard in order to win their women.



A few minutes later, when she is walking in the garden, the man who has been scaling those very heights to win her, makes his appearance.

The difficulties he met he tells her after they have reached his apartment. Even then she does not know his name, and has to ask it, when her irate father appears, astonished to learn that his daughter is to marry the man who had abducted her.

The whole thing is delightfully done by a cast headed by Charles Richman, who, in the role of the hero, gives a thoroughly finished characterization. Eleanor Woodruff is the romantic heroine, and her work is acceptable. Charles Kent, Hattie de Lara, Frank Holland as the duke, J. Bloomer, Miss Alexander and George De Beck are the other principals—all of them pleasing.

Harry Lambart, the director, has seen to it that the production moves smoothly. The sets are good. The action proceeds a little slowly in the first reels, but that fact is easily forgotten in the excellence of the picture as a whole.

"The Heights of Hazard" leaves the spectator filled with that warm glow of satisfaction which only an unusually good picture can give.

"Decidedly" Distinctive"

KRITERION PROGRAM

Mess. C. H. Hauff, Ltd., of London, England, have closed a contract for prints of the new Kriterion program far in excess of what was expected of England.

Their expert, who examined carefully a complete sample set of the coming productions, wrote "I may say that if your future productions are as good as the ones you sent us, you may look forward with every confidence to a good sale for your films in Great Britain and her colonies."

The coming Kriterion program will be well received here because it has been planned with foresight and judgment. It is well balanced, novel, big in conception. Some of the stars and plays will impress you as material ordinarily employed for features—and they are FEATURES in everything but length.

A big program, like a great painting, is the issue of thought, preparation and intelligent conception.

Kriterion is being planned by business men, on a business basis, surrounded by every safeguard that good business would demand—that is why we are making haste, slowly.

Investigate Kriterion—resources, plans, financial strength and the men behind it.

ENGLAND CAPITULATES

The First Long-Period Contract for RAVER-THOMAS Film Productions Gives England First Honors.

For two years, THE INTERNATIONAL CINEMATOGRAPH CORPORATION Ltd., of London, will supply the British trade with the Raver Film Corporation's great plays and stars in Pictures, with an optionable renewal.

Betts, the English Company's representative personally investigated the RAVER organization. He analyzed its policy, estimated the value of its collection of plays, determined Raver's facilities for securing talent, studied his producing staff and then satisfied himself the enterprise was financially sound.

He was clever enough to foresee competition ahead and decided to tie up the RAVER BRAND in advance.

The tremendous popularity of AUGUSTUS THOMAS' PLAYS is as great in England as at home. BIG, WHOLESOME, HUMAN STORIES are in demand everywhere.

RAVER-THOMAS PRODUCTIONS will be shown in Picture Theatres of the Better Class. Territorial distributers will be selected with care. REPRESENTATIVE exchanges will be given preference.

Forty-two applications for territory are now on file. Some of these will qualify. Others will not "measure up" mentally or financially.

Every day, almost, someone begins to realize the opportunity offered.

"THE OTHER GIRL" is coming soon

From every indication, she and Good Business will travel Tandem.

These Feet are Worth a Million Dollars

ROYALTY, society, wealth have gazed at them in admiration; newspapers and magazines have printed pages and volumes about them; keen, far-visioned business men have put a picture of them on their products and gained for them immediate popularity.

They are the feet of the most famous dancers in the world—the originators of the One-Step, Tango, Maxixe; owners of the Castle House; the stars of New York's greatest musical comedies—the most discussed couple in all America.

And these million dollar feet can wend their steps into your box office and put over for you as big a show as you have yet known. Motion picturedom now welcomes

Mr. & Mrs. Vernon Castle

Since they became famous bids have gone high to bring them into motion pictures. We have paid their price. Although the outstanding memory of "The Whirl of Life" is in those wonderful dancing scenes in ballroom, on stage and in richly lighted royal cabarets—this feature is as powerful a drama as has come before you this year. It is written around the almost unbelievable lives of these two young people. It abounds in surprises, villainy, pathos, humor, excitement—such as would rouse the envy of a Jules Verne. If you find one section of padding throw this picture out and ask for your money back.

The Globe Theatre, N. Y., put it over, a big hit, as a $2 feature. If this picture cannot pack your house then no picture will.

The WHIRL of LIFE

Story by Vernon Castle—Produced by Oliver D. Bailey—Adapted for screen by Catharine Carr.

Buyers of territory base choice on the judgment of these hard-headed buyers:

A. Caille & Co., Majestic Theatre, Detroit, Mich., bought the States of Michigan and Ohio; Authors Film Co., Inc., Empire Theatre Building, New York, bought Greater New York and New York State, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, while the Celebrated Film Co. of Chicago purchased Illinois and Wisconsin. Warren Short, Equitable Building, New York, has just purchased Virginia, Georgia, Alabama, North and South Carolina. Options on other territories have already been taken. It is worth a telegram, a telephone call or a personal call.

Inauguration of Triangle Plays Received with Enthusiasm

The same Triangle Plays which appeared at the Knickerbocker Theatre in New York, the Chestnut Street Opera House in Philadelphia, and the Studebaker Theatre in Chicago are now being shown by many exhibitors throughout the country and are receiving marked attention in the local newspapers.

The opening in Minneapolis, Kansas City, Cleveland, St. Louis have all been marked with expression of great enthusiasm from the moving picture and dramatic critics.

"Triangle Plays have come to stay if one may judge of the enthusiasm of those who have seen the opening program at the Liberty Theatre. In the 'Lamb' Douglas Fairbanks finds play for all the enthusiasm and magnetic qualities he has shown on the spoken stage."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"Each Triangle Play in the opening program is alone worth the price of admission, and the four are varied enough to be shown on one program to great advantage."—St. Louis Star.

"Romance, revenge, fairness and fate are compellingly linked to provide rich measure of entertainment in the film play 'The Sable Lorcha.' "—Philadelphia Press

These are but a few of the newspaper excerpts about Triangle openings. More will be given next week.

Triangle Quality Triumphs at Regular Theatre Prices

When the dramatic critic of the New York Evening Post said in reviewing one of the first of the Triangle Plays:—"It is plays such as these that makes possible the presentation of motion picture plays at two dollars," he spoke for the New York public.

His statement has a wider applicability, however, and Triangle quality proves its right to consideration from the standpoint of values in other parts of the country.

Some skeptics said that the first bill was too good—that we had set too high a standard and could not stand the pace. They were sure the quality could not be maintained. We knew better, and subsequent reviews have proved our judgment correct.

Not alone New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and Brooklyn are willing to pay regular theatre prices for dramatic and comedy material that ranks in value with the product of the spoken stage, but—

Louisville, Columbus, Cleveland, Richmond, Norfolk are all catering to the needs of their respective populations at the regular theatre scale with Triangle Plays.

They find that the question is one of values and that alone. Triangle Quality is of that class that commands the regular theatre price, and that in itself is sound as the Treasury at Washington.

STORY

Through his friend Jack Arden, a widower with one child, Ashley is brought to the realization that he is growing away from his wife, Margaret, and Eileen, his daughter, on account of his devotion to his books.

Margaret's sister, Dora, who is weak and frivolous, starts a flirtation with Jack Arden Margaret attempts to help her sister escape from the attentions of Arden. Ashley misunderstands the situation and when he sees Arden embrace Margaret by mistake, shoots and kills him. Ashley denounces his wife and turns her out of the house She goes to a convent.

Fifteen years later, Eileen, now a young lady, falls in love with young Robert Arden, but Ashley objects without giving an explanation Ashley is striken with apoplexy and dies

Dora, who had gone to India, returns and tells the whole story. She goes with Robert to the convent, where Eileen's mother is, and explanations follow Margaret forgives Dora and Robert marries Eileen.

36—What is the difference between direct and alternating current?

Ans.—Direct current may be generated through chemical means as is the case in ordinary primary batteries, some of which, like the Sal Ammoniac and dry kind, are intended for intermittent service only; or of the old crow-foot or blue-stone battery or the Edison Primary battery, if used, a continuous Direct Current electric service may be had for driving small motors, lamps or the like. It must, however, be understood that no chemical source of supply is intended for heavy continuous service. Therefore, you should never expect to be able to operate more than a very small motor, maybe ⅛ H. P., from a primary battery.

The next means at hand for making direct current is the electric generator driven by an engine or other source of power.

The electric generator or dynamo, as it is also called, for direct current, consists of four main parts:

1.—The field magnets.

2.—The armature.

3.—The commutator

4.—The brushes by which the current is collected from the rotating armature.

I will not at this time go into a description of the direct current generator as this will be reserved for detailed discussion in later chapters, but it is sufficient to state that when the armature is revolved within the field an electric current is generated which, through the means of the brushes on the commutator, is collected in such a way that the current will flow continuously in one direction; that is, one terminal of the armature or one of the brushes becomes positive from which the current flows over the line through the various translating devices such as a motor, incandescent lamps, moving picture arc, electric heating device, or any other apparatus and then the current returns, after performing the work, to the negative brush, back through the armature.

A properly designed electric generator will deliver a constant voltage, the pressure or potential of which depends upon the windings and the speed at which the armature is revolved.

Due to the fact that the direct current flows in the one direction when you apply the positive wire to a rheostat and then from the rheostat to the upper carbon of a projector arc lamp, the current will flow from the upper carbon point to the lower carbon point, when the carbons are put together, continuing to flow back to the negative brush of the generator.

When you separate the carbons, the upper carbon point becomes what is called the positive (+) crater, and the greater part of the light living element is centered in this crater. The arc which continues to flow is not a light giving medium. It is merely the medium by which the heat at the upper crater is maintained in order to voltalize the carbon and the lower or negative carbon is also merely an instrument for maintaining the current flow and intensity of the upper or positive crater.

Fig. 26 will clearly illustrate the direct current electric system by a water motor installation.

Referring to Fig. 26, "A" is a motor or engine which is driving, in this case, a rotary water pump "B." The pump takes the water from pipe "C" and puts it under pressure in pipe "D" supplying the water motor "E" with a pressure suitable to revolve its moving member at an even speed, depending upon the load applied to the shaft and upon the pressure in pipe "D," at the jet "F."

You will observe that if the pump "B" runs in a fixed direction as indicated, there will be a continuous pressure at the jet "F," and the shaft of the water motor "E" will be driven in one direction at high speed giving a steady source of power at the shaft. In a like manner as illustrated in Fig. 27, the motor or engine "A" drives the Electric Generator "B," which sends forth positive continuous current over wire "D," through the controller or jet or rheostate "F" to the positive carbon over the crater "E," where the continuous direct work in one direction is performed, over the arc, through the negative carbon and return wire "C," to the negative brush of the generator, thus completing the continuous work in one direction maintained at a constant fixed potential or voltage, flowing in the same direction at all times.

By increasing the speed of pump "B" in Fig. 26, the pressure will be increased at the jet "F," which, if allowed to be with the same opening as before, will admit more water to the blades of water motor "E," which will then, of course, run faster or develop more power but always in the same direction.

Referring again to Fig. 27, we have exactly the same condition as with the water system. If we increase the speed of Generator "B," its potential or voltage will increase and if we allow the jet or, in this case, the rheostat "F" to remain with the same opening or admittance, which means with the same resistance as it was previously, more amperes will flow over the arc and the positive crater will glow with greater brilliancy, thus performing more work, but always flowing in the one direction.

In Fig. 26, "G" is the exhaust or the medium through which the water is allowed to get away after it has performed its work. You understand, the exhaust is of no use as far as producing power at the shaft "E" is concerned. It is merely an incident to the system to allow the water which has done the work to return to the pump.

In Fig. 27, the lower carbon "G" is the exhaust pipe, or medium through which the current, after it has performed its work at the crater, passes along to the exhaust or return wire "C," to the generator. Please note that the lower carbon which is the negative "G" in no way contributes to the illumination or usefulness of the power expended and concentrated at the crater "E." It is merely an incident to the system and serves as a conductor for the return of the current to the generator after the potential has done its work at the arc.

Theatre on Cornfield in Chicago Model Film House

The Albany, Located on Site Where Five Years Ago a Field of Maize Flourished in Limits of the City, and Seating One Thousand, Has Gained Reputation for Capacity Runs, and Is Known for Attractice Devices Installed by Builder for Making It a Perfect Theatre

FIVE years ago the site of the new Albany Park theatre, Chicago, which was opened on October 16, was a corn field. This theatre is located in the northwest part of Chicago, seven miles from the business district.

The fact that since its opening it has been running to capacity is interesting in showing both the growth of Chicago and also the growth of the demand for the better grade motion picture theatre.

While this is a neighborhood house, many of the people who have been packing its doors have travelled from miles around to see it, passing on their way several houses which cannot compete in comfort and modernness with this playhouse.

Not only are the films shown of the best kind produced, but the theatre itself is built and decorated with the idea of appealing to the better class of audiences.

Neither its exterior or interior contains superfluous ornamentation, the too prevalent display of gold leaf, or the high and trying colors. Everything about it is in the best of taste.

Subdued Ornamentation Is the Best

F. Foltz and Son, the architects, worked on the theory that the over ornate, highly colored theatre was just as distasteful to the majority of the people as the crude pictures which were formerly shown in motion picture houses.

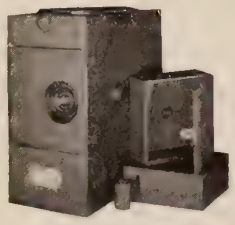
So they paid more attention to the quality than to the quantity of the ornamental features.

The interior ornamental plaster work was done by the Decorators' Supply Company, of Chicago, and speaks well for both their good taste and experience in decorating theatres. The color scheme is old ivory with no striking contrasts, and the lighting effects run to warm colors that are very pleasing.

A Kimball organ aids a good orchestra in supplying excellent music for the pictures.

The one thousand seats were made by Heywood Brothers and Wakefield, and are carefully designed with their backs at a proper angle with the floor. They are well upholstered and thoroughly comfortable.

The building is absolutely fireproof, having steel and hollow tile floor and roof construction, and brick walls. The hollow tile construction, installed by the National Fire Proofing Company, eliminates moist walls which result in streaky ceilings so often seen in motion picture theatres.



Tempered Blast System Installed

The ventilating system is of the tempered blast type. The air is drawn through a stack of the American Radiator Company's Vento Tempering coils, thence through a Sturtevant Multiblade fan, with a capacity of 25,000 cubic feet per minute.

This fan blows the air through concrete tunnels under the auditorium floor, and introduces it into the auditorium through wall registers located just above the heads of the audience.

A slight air pressure being thus created, the air finds its way out through large exhaust registers located near the floor at the back of the auditorium. This system keeps the theatre supplied with fresh air at the proper temperature.

AN ACHIEVEMENT

Motion Picture News is now issued from New York on Tuesday morning, instead of Thursday, as heretofore.

Every exhibitor in the United States and Canada (excepting only British Columbia) will now receive Motion Picture News within the same week it is issued here in New York.

The "News" gives this notable service exclusively and for the first time in this industry.

It means that exhibitors on the Pacific Coast will have in their hands Friday or Saturday of every week a trade publication giving completely the very latest news, advertising announcements, complete reviews and release dates for the coming week.

It means that exhibitors everywhere will now receive at the earliest moment the latest and most complete trade journal service.

It means that every motion picture page editor in the Country will have the "News" in his hands each week before his Saturday or Sunday department goes to press.

WE ARE MOVING

We made the above announcement eighteen months ago, when we moved to offices three times the size of our previous ones.

February first, 1916, we move again, this time to offices one-third larger than our present ones, which are overcrowded.

Our new offices will cover ¼ of the fourth floor of the new 16-story building at 49th Street and Seventh Avenue, built especially for the film trade and to be known as the Motion Picture Board of Trade Building.

Our friends, we know, will be glad to note this evidence of our progress, and our new and better facilities for publishing

Operating Electricity — Questions Answered — Repairing Equipment

Who Will Answer All Questions You Send in, No Matter How Simple or How Difficult

REDUCING FLICKER ON AN EDISON KINETOSCOPE

J. A. P., Blakely, Ga.:—We are subscribers to your valuable magazine and get some good ideas from same. In your section headed "Hallberg Helps" we frequently find little things that are valuable. I am using an Edison Kinetoscope Exhibition model inside shutter and have trouble with the picture flickering. I am sure it is the shutter that causes this trouble, but no matter how I try to adjust it I always have this trouble or worse. Could you tell me the proper position in relation to the star wheel? I also have trouble with keeping a light on the arc, for the first few minutes after it heats up the light is fine, then it begins to dim. Sometimes it hardly gives enough light to distinguish features on the screen. I use 110 volts, 60 cycle A. C. Have an Economy Lamp Regulator manufactured by Electric Appliance Co., rated for this current. Keep all connections good and tight. My arc lamp is the type that was furnished with this equipment. Also manufactured by Edison. Can you tell me what the trouble is?

Ans.—The only way to reduce flicker on the machine you refer to would be to remove the revolving light interrupting shutter and rivet or fasten on to each side of each blade a strip of thin metal or the like, of such width that both blades will be exactly alike and the width of the blade must be such and the shutter must be so set; that it will shut off the light on the screen just as the intermittent sprocket begins to turn to move the film downward, and it must continue to shut off the light until the intermittent sprocket has stopped moving the film downward; then it should uncover and expose the light on the screen. A simple way to make this test is to strike your arc, open your film gate and let your light flow on the screen. Now move the flywheel in the direction it rotates until the intermittent sprocket just begins to move; then set your shutter so that it cuts off the light. Tighten the shutter and keep on turning the flywheel until the intermittent sprocket stops; then if the shutter has uncovered the light on the screen before the intermittent sprocket stopped, you must widen the blade of the shutter enough to shut off the light until the sprocket does stop. That is the whole trick and it is very simple. You must remember to make the shutter just a little wider than actually suggested above, because there will always be a slight shake in the gears and in the transmission devices between the sprocket and the shutter shaft, so that if the slamb or shake of the shutter, when you hold the flywheel still, makes the shutter move ¼ inch, make the blade ¼ inch wider to overcome this back slamb; then make the second blade just the same size, and I guess your troubles will be over. In some of the older type machines the blade which covers the light when the intermittent sprocket moves, is made wider than the interrupter blade which is the other one, and this in itself makes an uneven light balance on the screen.

You will lose some of the brilliancy of the picture by making the second blade as wide as the main blade, but you will do away with the greater part of the flicker.

Concerning your light, I want to say that a good many regulating devices depreciate with age, due to loose contacts, poor contacts if sliding devices are used, etc., which may in time cause a decrease in the light.

If you use a high grade carbon, such as the Speer Bio or Electra, you ought not to have any trouble. If you use the ⅝ inch or preferably the ¾ inch size, if you are running the regulator on the high notch, the setting of the carbon in the Edison lamp as used in the old machines is not the best for alternating current. It would be better for you to remove the old lamp all together, and put in a new post and a new lamp of such type as will allow setting the carbons so that the lower carbon will sit straight up and down and the upper one at an angle of about 25 degrees to 35 degrees backwards from the vertical position, or you may set both carbons straight up and down, one immediately above the other in perfect vertical line; then you will also secure perfect results.

NEW STYLE MOTOR ATTACHMENT WILL SOLVE THE DIFFICULTY

H. S. E., Hinton, W. Va.:—I would thank you to advise me whether or not it would be good policy to connect motor with a new model Simplex from above. That is, cut belt holes in casing and belt groove in flywheel. The motor we have will not drive machine on wheel especially constructed for it.

Ans.—I would not advise you to groove the flywheel on the Simplex projector and cut two holes in the metal case, enclosing the mechanism. My main reason for not recommending this scheme is that in order to groove the pulley you have to take the mechanism all apart and remove the flywheel. Another reason which I offer against this method is that a belt always carries a great deal of dust, and it would certainly be detrimental to not only open the case by means of the holes, which would admit dust, but the belt would pick up a lot of outside matter and before long the interior of the mechanism would become dirty and clogged.

The Precision Machine Company make a new style motor attachment, which is very serviceable and works beautifully. It has friction control and can be set at any speed. I recommend that you put in one of the new motor drives rather than to run the chances of injuring your machine.

HOW TO AVOID REPRODUCTIONS OF CARBONS ON SCREEN

L. A. P., Grand Rapids, O.:—I am using A. C. 110 volts through a Ft. Wayne Compensarc, Power's No. 6 lamb house, with about 0 ft. throw. Sometimes I get the carbons on the screen that is the exact reproduction of my carbons reflected on the screen with, of course, a black space between them. What is wrong?

Ans.—The trouble which you describe is caused by the fact that your arc under the condition mentioned is centered on the aperture plate, instead of the spot from the upper carbon. From indications I would say that you ought to lower your lamp, may be ⅜ inch and then move the lamp forward, maybe ½ inch so as to focus only the upper carbon crater on the aperture plate, leaving the lower creater to expose itself above the aperture.

With the Ft. Wayne Compensarc it usually is demanded that you maintain an arc about 3/1 inch to ¼ inch long, but if you should keep the carbons very close together you may be able to focus both the upper and the lower crater at the same time, but even under this condition you would see a streak across the screen where the carbons are separated and where the arc is being maintained between the carbon points. Under the circumstances I believe the first suggestion would be the better one in your case, to follow.

RADIUM GOLD FIBRE SCREEN IS SUITED TO ALTERNATING CURRENT

T. V. H., Canadian, Tex.:—I am figuring on buying a Radium Gold Fibre screen and I use alternating current. Will picture be plainer on a Gold Fibre screen than on a cloth curtain? What size picture will give the best results. My theatre is 25 feet wide; ceiling 18 feet; throw 86 feet. Have a 12 x 12 cloth curtain at present.

Ans.—The Radium Gold Fibre screen, such as is used in the Strand theatre, New York City, and in many other equally important theatres, is giving splendid satisfaction. It does not matter whether your current is alternating or direct in the use of these screens, because a metallic screen of that kind will intensify the brilliancy of your picture more than double. It is claimed that where the current supply at the arc is alternating, where the light is generally tinted on a bluish or purple cast, the golden surface produced by the Gold Fibre screens changes the tone of the picture from the cold and harsh appearance to a soft and agreeable tone. For a theatre 25 feet wide and with a ceiling 18 feet high, and where throw is not over 86 feet, I would recommend a picture of either of the following sizes: 9 x 12, or 10 x 13 feet 5 inches. If you believe a larger size picture more suitable to your condition you may put in a screen for 10 feet 6 inch picture by 14 feet wide, which, however, in my opinion is somewhat larger than the size house you describe, demands.

THREE-YEAR CLAUSE A STUMBLING BLOCK TO SOME BALTIMORE EXHIBITORS

NEGOTIATIONS between the members of the Maryland Branch Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America and the Motion Picture Operators' Union reached a climax November 11 in Baltimore when the operators declared that except in the houses where the exhibitors had signed the new contract operators would decline to work. By that night a number of the exhibitors had not signed the agreement.

The new agreement provides for an increase of $2 a day in the wage scale, but there are no complications on this score. All of the exhibitors have been paying wages equal to the increase or are willing to meet the demands. The hitch occurs in a clause in the new contract which binds the exhibitor for three years. The exhibitors who are holding out maintain that this clause is not acceptable to them. The members of the Operators' Union are not willing to abolish this provision in the new working agreement.

J. Howard Bennett, who, together with J. Thomas Bohannon, Frank H. Durkee and Edward W. Price, have been representing the exhibitors' league, is very optimistic about the matter.

G. Kingston Howard, president of the Operators' Union, said that more than 60 picture theatres of the 120 in Baltimore and suburbs had signed the agreement. In some cases the union operators were at work in houses that had not signed the agreement on November 11. This is taken as an indication that the operators who were conducting the negotiations with the exhibitors still have hopes of reaching an agreement. In cases where the union operators were not working, the exhibitors or their managers held license as operators and were conducting their own operating room.

In some places the final question of signing the agreement was postponed until November 12. Many of the operators who went to work the night of November 11 carried the contracts with them for their employer's signature.

STRAND, CHATTANOOGA'S NEWEST PICTURE HOUSE, OPEN TO PUBLIC

THE Strand, Chattanooga, one of the most modern and up-to-date motion picture theatres in Tennessee, has been thrown open to the public. The new film house has been in the course of erection for some time and is located on Main street, South Chattanooga's busiest thoroughfare. A. J. Alper and A. Solomon are backing the new enterprise.

Particular attention was paid to the ventilation and heating systems for the theatre. The best pictures obtainable will be booked for the Strand. These will be selected from the open market.

A photoplay instrument will furnish the music, this costing approximately $3,500. A Minuso Gold Fiber screen has been installed. The Power's 6A projection machine will be used. The operating room will be fireproof and modern in every way.

INDIANAPOLIS OPERATORS IN A NEW CONTRACT WITH EXHIBITORS; WAGE INCREASES ONE OF ITS FEATURES

A NEW agreement has been signed by the representatives of the Indianapolis Moving Picture Operators' Union under the jurisdiction of the National Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and the Indianapolis Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association. The new contract is effective until August, 1917.

The agreement was signed by E. M. Mouser, B. A. Barton and J. H. Gavin, in behalf of the exhibitors, and E. C. Scobey, John Benner and J. C. Geiger, for the operators.

Features of the agreement are clauses dealing with fires in picture houses and the responsibility of the machine operator for fires growing out of machine trouble. Under the heading of "House Working Rules," all operators are compelled to keep the operating room free from all accumulations of combustibles as far as possible, and the operator must clean the booth once a day."

Another rule positively forbids smoking in the booth, "and any operator having a fire while operating shall be suspended until a thorough investigation has been made by the Board of Arbitration and another competent operator shall be furnished in his place."

The new contract calls for increases of $1 a day in the wage scale for night work, and from $1.50 to $2 a day for day work, depending on the hours and conditions of employment.

Under the terms of the contract, the operators working from 10 a. m. till 11 p. m. shall receive $23 a week, and those working from noon till 11 p. m. shall receive $21 a week. Operators working in vaudeville or burlesque houses shall receive $21 a week. In houses open only during the evening the operators shall receive $13 a week, the same scale to be paid in airdomes. Various other scales have been determined on for different kinds of work and conditions of labor.

The agreement contains a non-strike clause providing for arbitration of any differences between members of the two organizations working under the contract. The agreement provides for a board of arbitration to be made up of two representatives from each organization with a fifth and neutral member to be chosen by the other four. The decisions of the board shall be final and binding on both parties to the contract.

The Exhibitors' League controls fifty-one picture houses in Indianapolis, and the Operators' Union has a membership of about one hundred.

STEELTON, PA., HAS A NEW PICTURE HOUSE, SEATING 1,000

A FINE new motion picture theatre was opened November 8 in Steelton, Pa., where the main plants of the big Pennsylvania Steel Company are located. The building was specially constructed for theatre purposes by Robert M. Frey, who has leased the theatre to Harry L. Sellers, long the manager of the Standard theatre in the same borough.

The new theatre, which is at Front and Pine streets, is the most pretentious in Steelton, and one of the finest in Central Pennsylvania. The building is 45 by 100 feet and two stories high, the first floor being used as the theatre. It has a ceiling height of 26 feet.

The building is modern in every respect and fireproof, and the seating capacity is close to 1,000. The theatre is known as the Strand.

Mr. Sellers, in addition to conducting the Strand will continue to manage the Standard. He has just become sole owner of the Standard, having purchased the partnership interest in the house that had been held by Samuel Couffer.

E. H. PHILIPPI APPOINTED CHAIRMAN OF ADVERTISING COMMITTEE

E. H. PHILIPPI, of the Industrial Moving Picture Company, has been appointed chairman of the Industrial Movies Committee of the Advertising Association of Chicago

The function of this new committee is to show once a month, or possibly once every two weeks, some interesting moving pictures of industrial or educational value, of such a nature that they will be of particular interest to advertising men.

Mr. Philippi has called a special meeting of his committee, and expects to have a definite report to submit in writing to the Board of Directors of the Advertising Association on Monday evening, November 8.

OPERATORS AND ELECTRICAL WORKERS AT ODDS IN INDIANAPOLIS

TROUBLE between the Moving Picture Operators' Union and the Electrical Workers' Organization in Indianapolis was brought to light at a meeting of the Central Labor Union, when John Benner, business agent for the operators, said the electrical workers had made an attempt to infringe on the jurisdiction of the operators. He said the electrical workers had attempted to sign a contract with the exhibitors and charged that the electrical workers had agreed to take the places of the moving picture operators in case a strike was called.

Henry Courtot, business agent for the electrical workers, said he had received orders from the international headquarters of the union to endeavor to get members of the Moving Picture Operators' Union to become members of the Electrical Workers. He said he was acting under the orders from his international office, and that he did not think such steps as had been taken to carry them into effect had been illegal.

No action in the matter was taken by the delegates to the Central Labor Union. It is not regarded as likely, in labor circles, that any serious trouble will result from the disagreement between the electrical workers and the picture operators, as the operators recently signed a new working agreement, effective until 1917, with the Exhibitors' League of Indianapolis.

LEARS SUPPLY COMPANY PUTS MANY SMALL THEATRES IN DE LUXE CLASS

THE Lears Theatre Supply Company of St. Louis reports that the business done in the month of September, 1915, has exceeded all previous Septembers since the firm has been in existence. More than fifty theatres were equipped during that time, and it is a notable fact that the quality of the equipment sold is getting better and more substantial.

A higher grade of furnishings, better chairs, and more modern projecting machines are being installed than formerly. Not only are the city theatres being improved and beautified, but small town theatres are patterning after their city neighbors, and it is a very small and unimportant village in Missouri that does not boast of its de luxe motion picture theatre.

2 THEATRE MEN JOIN STRAND COMPANY STAFF

THE Strand Theatre Company, of Chicago and Indianapolis, has announced that J. F. Mackenzie, who has been manager of "It Pays to Advertise" company, has joined the executive staff of the company, and will be manager of the Indianapolis Strand, when it opens.

Mr. Mackenzie is well known from his nine years' association with George M. Cohan's Chicago organization. The company also has obtained from the Chicago Grand. Opera House its treasurer, Eugene Quigley, who is to be the treasurer of the New Strand in Chicago.

SYRACUSE PUBLIC SAFETY COMMISSIONER SWOOPS DOWN ON THEATRES

ORDERS have been issued to the owners of all motion picture theatres by the Department of Public Safety of Syracuse, N. Y., to the effect that the lobbies of all theatres must be cleared of picture standards, popcorn booths and obstructions of any kind.

The police have found during the past few weeks that theatres are putting in popcorn machines and easel standards in the lobbies, which is the cause of the order that all obstacles must be removed.

The police believe that in case of fire or panic in any of the houses that the obstacles might result in many serious accidents.

LOUISVILLE MANAGERS SETTLE DIFFERENCES WITH BUILDING AUTHORITIES

AN agreement entered into between the Board of Public Safety and the managers of seventeen of the largest motion picture houses in Louisville, Ky., is expected to end the overcrowding of theatres. All of the managers have signed a formal statement to the effect that they will in no way violate the laws governing motion picture houses.

As a result of the agreement, the Board of Public Safety has instructed the Building Department to withdraw the warrant against the Walnut theatre, which charges overcrowding during the run of a feature film in that city several days ago.

Because of a misconception of the requirements of the law before the conference between the Board of Safety and the exhibitors was held, the board decided upon the withdrawal of the warrant.

Inspectors of the Building Department will visit the theatres at intervals to see that the laws of the department are strictly enforced.

DELICATESSEN MEN THREATEN ACTION AGAINST MILWAUKEE EXHIBITORS

ONCE again the bugbear of Sunday closing is looming up before Milwaukee exhibitors. A few weeks ago it was a disgruntled barber, who, not allowed to keep his shop open Sunday, threatened to close the theatres.

This time it is the delicatessen men who threaten to close up everything on Sunday.

A new law, which passed the legislature at Madison at the request of the butchers and grocers, who as a whole stay closed an Sunday, prohibits the delicatessen men from remaining open. If enforced, as the police promise it will be, they threaten to evoke the old blue laws again and close up theatres and all. About the only thing that will escape, from present indications, are the saloons, which are allowed to run wide open on Sunday.

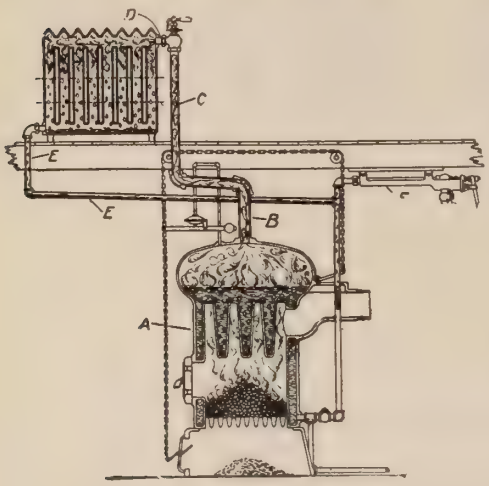
New Heating System Keeps Theatre Comfortable



Vapor-Vacuum Plan Greatly Superior to Old-Fashioned Devices, Because It Distributes Temperature Evenly Throughout Auditorium, and Is Guaranteed to Effect Twenty-five Per Cent. Saving in Fuel Consumption—Detailed Description of Construction and Just How It Works

THE heating of a moving picture theatre is a big problem if one tries to solve it by means of the old-fashioned systems, hot air, steam or hot water. To obtain just the right amount of heat—not too much or too little—to keep the cold side of the auditorium as comfortable as the warm side, to have the temperature just right for the afternoon or evening exhibitions, without wasting heat throughout the rest of the day, are some of the difficulties which confront the proprietor.

These problems may all be solved by the use of vapor-vacuum heating (Kriebel system), the system giving just the right amount of heat required at the time desired, being flexible, easy to run and a real coal saver.

The removal of atmospheric pressure in the plant is the principle under which vapor-vacuum heating (Kriebel system) operates.

Water boils at sea level where the air pressure is about fifteen pounds to the square inch at 212 degrees. If a perfect vacuum could be produced it would boil at 98 degrees. Although science has demonstrated that an absolute vacuum is impossible, the nearer we can approach that point the lower the boiling point becomes and the less fuel is required to produce it. Vapor-vacuum heating (Kriebel system) creates a partial vacuum within the system, thus accomplishing a great saving of coal. This partial vacuum in the system acts as a pull on the entire system, pulling the vapor or steam into the radiators when there is absolutely no pressure at the boiler. Thus a very low fire maintained during the night or when the theatre is not in use, will produce heat enough to warm the building.

In firing up an ordinary steam system the heating of the radiators is a slow process because all the air in the system must be pushed out through the pinholes of the automatic air valves against a heavy atmospheric pressure constantly opposing it. The air is kept out by the heat of the steam acting on the automatic valves, closing the latter, but the moment the steam drops, the greater air pressure on the outside predominates and pushes its way in again. Thus we have a continual warfare between the steam and the air.

Advantages of Kriebel System

Different is the effect with vapor-vacuum heating (Kriebel system). The air is expelled easily, quietly through a half-inch elbow at each radiator thence down the air line to the controller in the cellar which closes when the system is emptied of air and stays closed, first by means of the heat within and later, should the pressure lower, by the air pressure on the valve of the controller. Thus vapor-vacuum heating (Kriebel system) makes the air a useful rather than a harmful agent. As the vacuum is produced by condensation in the system, no pump or complicated machinery is required.

The illustration used here illustrates a simplified system consisting of the boiler, one radiator with the supply and return pipes leading to and from it, and the controller. This simplified system is used here in order that the operation may be absolutely clear to the reader.

Shortly after the fire has been started in the boiler (A) and when the thin bodies of water, enveloped by the products of combustion, begin to absorb heat, the vapor commences to rise from the water and suspend in the space at the top of the boiler above the water line. (See illustration.) It then quickly makes its way into the main supply pipe (B), to which is connected the branch pipe (C) to the radiator. As the vapor enters the piping, which has until now been filled with air, the air is rapidly forced ahead of the vapor which makes its way to the radiator. Entering through the inlet (D), the vapor speedily dislodges the air from the radiator through the return air pipe (E), and on through the return main to the controller (F), where it is ejected from the system—the controller performing the function of air valve for the entire system. The vapor forcing the air from the system naturally follows the same course to the controller, but is prevented from escaping through the controller by the instant action of the heat on the brass expansion tube. This action closes the system.

The system is now filled with vapor, and the vapor takes its place as a heating agent, transmitting the heat from the radiator to the air in the room. As heat is transmitted to the room, the vapor condenses, creating the vacuum and exerting a constant suction on the boiler, pulling the heat up into the radiators.

Fuel Economy a Strong Point in Its Favor

All this may be accomplished without indicated pressure at the boiler, and as soon as the drafts are closed and the rate of combustion lowered, vacuum is created.

The advantage of vapor-vacuum heating from this standpoint of fuel economy alone should be sufficient to give it a strong recommendation.

But this fuel economy factor is only a part of the story.

This vapor-vacuum inlet valve is made of genuine steam bronze metal, nickel-plated. It is of the rotary cylinder type, "quick opening," has a neat lever handle, and with a single motion of the wrist (an easy motion, at that) can be thrown from the minimum to the maximum supply of heat or the reverse if desired. How often it occurs, especially in moderate weather, when only a small quantity of heat is needed, one wishes he might open the valve just a little instead of heating up the entire radiator. Right here is where the vapor-vacuum inlet valve demonstrates its real value. This valve contains a rotary cylinder with a graduated port of opening through which the vapor passes into the radiator.

The stem, to which the lever handle joins, turns the cylinder and when the larger end of the aperture is set opposite the opening into the radiator, the entire radiator is heated, while the smaller end of the port permits just enough vapor to enter the radiator to heat only about one-third of its surface.

The valve produces the "as much or as little" idea, against the old method—"too much or too little." Its value as a convenience is almost incalculable. It means that you can regulate the amount of heat exactly to weather requirements, and to the temperature desired in each room to be heated.

The Vapor-Vacuum Controller is the basic feature of the Vapor-Vacuum idea. It is located above the boiler in the basement, as was shown in the illustration. It is here that the air is expelled from the system; it is here that the vapor is prevented from escaping, by the expanding action of the brass tube; and it is here that the air which has been freed from the system is prevented from returning by the action of the automatic Vapor-Vacuum Controller.

Right Amount of Heat at All Times

To sum up, Vapor-Vacuum Heating (Kriebel System) offers advantages that any other system offers, and many important advantages that no other system can offer.

Exactly the amount of heat wanted when wanted.

Exactly the amount of heat desired in each individual radiator.

Even temperature, like the hot-water system—but a much greater range temperature.

Full steam pressure when extreme cold weather requires it.

No heat when heat is not desired. The heat can be turned clear off in any radiator, and one doesn't have to wait for the air to get out of the system before he gets heat when he turns it on again.

A guaranteed twenty-five per cent. saving of fuel is given with each instalation, over fuel consumption in old-time one-pipe or two-pipe low pressure system.

LEADING BUSINESS MEN OF INDIANAPOLIS IN COMPANY TO BUILD $225,000 PICTURE THEATRE

THE Monument Realty Company, composed of well-known Indianapolis business men, has filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state of Indiana, and the erection of a new photoplay theatre in Monument Place on the site of the Horace Wood livery stable has become an assured fact.

The new company has incorporated with a capital stock of $210,000, of which $110,000 is a 6 per cent. preferred stock and the remaining $100,000 is in common stock.

The theatre is to be built on standard theatre lines, and is to be devoted to pictures of the highest order. The total cost of the building and theatre will be approximately $225,000. Virtually all of the capital in the enterprise is to be provided by Indianapolis business men, the stockholders consisting of leading merchants, with the following directors: Robert Lieber, of H. Lieber & Co.; M. Efroymson, of Efroymson & Wolf, department store owners; A. L. Block, president L. Strauss & Co.; Ralph Norwood, Isidore Feibleman, of Bamberger & Feibleman, attorneys, all of Indianapolis, and M. Cohn, of Denver. Mr. Cohn is the owner of two large stores in the Colorado capital.

The officers of the company are: A. L. Block, president; Robert Lieber, vice-president; Ralph Norwood, secretary, and M. Efroymson, treasurer.

Rubush & Hunter, architects, are now completing the plans for the structure. It is expected to have the new theatre open not later than May 15.

The directors of the company have made several trips to the East, inspecting the larger motion picture houses, which have been so successful in the prominent cities, including Rochester, New York City, Syracuse, Buffalo and Detroit, and the plans for the new theatre will be based on the observation of the best in each of these Eastern houses.

The Monument Realty Company has acquired a ninety-nine year lease on the property, which the business men connected with the enterprise regard as an unusually favorable one. The issue of $110,000 of 6 per cent. preferred stock on the property has been taken by Gavin L. Payne & Co., of Indianapolis.

BOSTON THEATRES MAKE CHANGES IN SERVICE SUPPLIED BY FEATURE COMPANIES

THERE are several changes in service in Boston theatres. The Modern has begun to use first-run Paramount pictures, using the Thursday releases, while the Park uses the Monday releases. The Modern also uses Fox features. The Harvard at Cambridge is now showing Paramount. The St. James, on Huntington avenue, has dropped Paramount and taken on World and Equitable features. This is a most prosperous house, nearly always full, and its personnel and every feature of its management reflects great credit on Mr. Brennan, the manager.

The district which the St. James serves, to some extent, is also to be served a bit later by the new Fenway theatre, wihch is fast nearing completion. The owners of this theatre hold an option on the Triangle service for Boston.

The price of the service is said to be $3,500. At this writing it is not known whether first, second or third runs will be used at the new house.

There is also a new house in Charlestown, Mass., called the Thompson's Square. It is managed by Albert C. Haley, who formerly managed the Franklin Park theatre, Boston, when it was running Paramount. It now features Metro.

PHILADELPHIA EXHIBITORS NOW PREPARE FOR THIRD ANNUAL BALL

THE Motion Picture Exhibitors League of Philadelphia, with the advent of autumn, has begun its usual activities. Meetings are held weekly, the principal object of which, at the moment, are preparations for the forthcoming, third annual ball of the League.

The ball will take place on December 8, at Turngemeinde Hall, on Broad street near Columbia avenue. The accommodations are ample for the large crowd which is expected to attend.

Many prominent picture stars have already accepted invitations to be present, with others still to be heard from.

Some interesting novelties are promised by the committee in charge as follows: Jay Emanuel, chairman; Charles Segall, P. J. Cropper, M. Spiers, Jack Delmar, Carl Hess, Lewis Hopkins, Dr. C. Morris, H. Berman, David Sabloskey.

FRISCO CHINATOWN GUIDE SHOWS PICTURES IN CHICAGO TAKEN BY HIMSELF

Chicago, Nov. 10.

A SPECIAL trade showing of a five reel picture depicting the life and customs of San Francisco's Chinatown and Barbary Coast, was given at the La Salle theatre, Friday morning, November 5. The pictures taken by Capt. H. J. Lewis, pioneer Chinatown guide, and Captain Lewis delivered an explanatory lecture during the showing.

Among the interesting phases of the Orientals' life shown, were Chinese gambling, opium smoking, and theatricals.

The scenes taken in the Barbary Coast, showing the various kinds of dancing indulged in there, will be of special interest.

The private exhibition was made under the auspices of the Central Film Company, who have the Illinois rights of the picture.

WARRANT CHARGES OVERCROWDING IN LOUISVILLE THEATRE

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 10.

CROWDING far beyond the danger point is charged in a warrant which has been taken out by the Louisville Building Department against the management of the Walnut theatre. Building Inspector O'Sullivan charges that during a four days' run of the film, "Damaged Goods," the management of the theatre has allowed so many people in the house at one time that the ordinance governing theatres has been broken in a number of ways. The present warrant is the first that the Building Department has ever taken out for violation of theatre regulations in this city.

"Complaints of the overcrowding reached me," said Mr. O'Sullivan, "from many people. Strange to say, more complained of not being able to see because of the crowds than of the danger they incurred through so many people being allowed to stand in the aisles."

The outside of the building is lighted by what is known as the Flood Lighting System. Fourteen searchlights, made by the National X Ray Reflector Company, are placed on the roof of the building diagonally across the street, and trained upon the theatre and the park which fronts it. This results in a blaze of light surrounding the theatre that can be seen several blocks away.

EXTERIOR OF ALBANY PARK THEATRE

The theatre is situated about 150 feet back from Lawrence avenue, thus leaving a large park in front of it, which has been artistically laid out with walks leading up to the main entrance of the house.

Outside Electric Photoplay Announcer

At each of the corners where this park meets the sidewalk has been placed one "outside electric photoplay announcer." These are square box effects, with a place on each of the four sides for a one-sheet poster, and above this interchangeable signs announcing current and coming attractions.

INTERIOR OF ALBANY PARK THEATRE

These boxes are lighted up from the inside by electric lights, which throw into prominence both the colored posters and the interchangeable signs.

This device is comparatively new, and is manufactured expressly for motion picture theatres by the Rawson & Evans Company, Chicago.

Very good projection is obtained on the 115-foot throw by two of the latest motor driven Simplex machines.

The building was designed and erected under the direction of F. Foltz & Son, leading architects of Chicago, for the real estate firm of Tomasson & White.

The theatre has been leased for ten years by Alfred Hamburger.

The stand was lost, and part of take-up gone. By rigging up the old machine runs 'fine as silk,' and if I can get new parts without paying too much, well and good; if not, I'll run without them. CALIFORNIA

K. S. CASHIN, who has a moving picture theatre at Fresno, is preparing to open a new house there within a short time.

The Majestic Theatre at Tulare has been taken over by H. D. Lester, and extensive alterations are to be made.

B. Endert, who conducts a bottling works at Crescent City, recently ordered moving picture equipment for a new house in which he has become interested.

N. K. Herzog is making a number of improvements in the Pastime Theatre at Fourth and Market streets, San Francisco, including entirely new equipment in the operating room.

B. Vivian, for several months manager of the Sequoia Theatre at Eureka has purchased the Pastime Theatre from C. W. Ebeling and is now in possession. Mr. Ebeling came to Eureka recently from San Francisco and took over the Pastime, but business interests in other parts of the State made it necessary for him to dispose of the theatre.

The new Strand theatre will be opened at Vallejo at an early date, under the direction of P. Hanlon, formerly of the Bell theatre. The latter house is now being managed by W. Maupin, a well known exhibitor of that city connected with the Star theatre.

The old Bell theatre in San Francisco has been reopened as a vaudeville and moving picture house under the name of the Electric.

The Ocean Beach theatre, San Diego, is to play a double role for a time, as it will be conducted as moving picture house during the week and as a church on Sundays, the Methodist congregation having leased it for one day out of the seven.

John R. Carlisle has taken over the Alhambra, a motion picture house at 815 Fifth street, San Diego, which was opened several years ago by W. H. Hilts.

ILLINOIS

Carson & Grandcolas, owners of the Lyric motion picture theatre at Belleville, plan the erection of a new theatre to be known as the Hippodrome. It will represent an investment of about $30,000, have a seating capacity of 2,000, and it is expected will be opened about June 1, 1916.

Dick Diamond, owner of the Castle motion picture theatre at Havana, has enlarged his theatre by lengthening it 30 feet. This permitted the installation of 150 more seats, and the theatre now has a seating capacity of 500.

Shepherd & Hill, motion picture theatre owners at Charleston, plan the erection of a new theatre to cost about $15,000.

James Arnett has opened the Elks theatre at Taylorville, and is showing motion pictures.

The Spencer Square Amusement Co., of which Carl Mueller is manager, has opened a new theatre in Rock Island.

C. B. Burkhardt has installed a new Minusa screen in his motion picture theatre in Homer.

A. F. Shallbarger plans to open a new motion picture theatre in Moline about December 1.

Al. J. Bulger has purchased through the Springfield Co-Operative Amusement & Supply Co. a new Minusa screen to be installed in his motion picture theatre at Greenville.

A deal has just been closed whereby H. L. Gumbiner, of Chicago, will add another theatre to his string, which includes the Temple, the Bertha and the Pauline. The new house is to be erected on his property at Clark street and North avenue.

INDIANA

The Gem theatre at Hobart has been closed about one month for repairs.

The opera house at Casselton has been leased by Metcalf and Houghland from Charles Werner.

The Star theatre at Hartford City has been closed temporarily while it is being remodeled. Copeland Newcom, of Hagerstown, is managing the theatre.

The Tokio theatre at Flora, which was bought recently by Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Piper, is running feature films every other night.

Harry E. Lerner, formerly manager of the La Salle theatre, South Bend, has bought the controlling interest in the Popular Amusement Company from Fred Palmer, who had controlled the Bucklen theatre at Elkhart for the last fifteen months. Mr. Lerner has taken charge of the Bucklen. Vaudeville, legitimate shows and Paramount pictures will be shown.

It is understood that a building, which was erected by Julius Goldbert in Gary, has been leased by the Gumbiner Amusement Company, of Hammond, and that a moving picture theatre, seating one thousand people, will be opened in the future.

The Tewntieth Century Theatre at Gary has been re-opened by Harry V. Blaundin as a five-act vaudeville and feature photoplay theatre.

E. M. Mouser has sold the Apollo theatre, at South East and McCarty streets, Indianapolis, to E. W. Howard.

Roy Bair, proprietor of Bair's theatre, and the Fountain Eagle, both in Fountain Square, Indianapolis, has bought the Lincoln theatre at South East and Lincoln streets, from Joe Gavin, one of the oldest exhibitors in Indianapolis. Mr. Gavin has retired from the moving picture business on account of his health. Mr. Bair has closed the Fountain Eagle theatre.

The Starland theatre, 13 West Market street, Indianapolis, has been closed.

The New Star theatre at Greentown opened November 6 with a capacity house. Shows will be run every night by Manager Wickham.

The Arc theatre at Monticello has been bought by H. H. Hornbeck, of Monon, from Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Worth. Mr. Hornbeck is owner of the Majestic theatre at Monon.

Fire which originated in the machine booth of the Victoria theatre at New Albany, caused damage amounting to $1,000 to the building and equipment. Eight reels of film were destroyed. There were but few patrons in the house when the fire broke out and no one was injured.

The Orpheum theatre at Fort Wayne is undergoing extensive alterations, chiefly in respect to the lobby and interior. The walls of the lobby are to be paneled with oil paintings descriptive of the four seasons. The entire lighting system of the interior is undergoing a change, while the walls and ceilings are to be decorated to correspond with the lobby. The Orpheum runs Fox, Metro and World features and maintains as a permanent feature of the house two high class soloists and a seven-piece orchestra.

LOUISIANA

The Escorial theatre, Banks and Salcedo streets, New Orleans, a new suburban house, opened November 17. The building is modern in every respect and seats 700. Manager Edward Ludmann invited exhibitors and exchange men, as well as the general public on the opening night.

John Depnit, formerly manager of the Pearce houses in New Orleans, and later owner of the Wonderland theatre in Canal street, is manager of the new Saenger theatre in Alexandria, which opened October 30. The new house cost about $40,000 and is the latest addition to the string of picture houses operated by Saenger Brothers, of Shreveport.

The Bijou theatre on Monroe avenue, facing the Campus, Detroit, and formerly operated by William F. Klatt, has been leased to Kline & Schram, who will remodel and re-open it as a feature house.

The new theatre of Fitzpatrick & McElroy in Manistee, will be opened the latter part of this month.

Harry Goldstein, 22 East Forest avenue, Detroit, says that under no circumstances, has he abandoned the idea of building a huge theatre at Grand River and Bagg streets. He states that bids will be taken as soon as the present tenants are entirely vacated.

The Garden theatre at Cadillac, is now being operated by A. W. Markson, who formerly ran the Grand theater at Big Rapids.

Lichty & Bell are the new lessees of the Grand theatre, Detroit, which has re-opened after being redecorated.

MISSOURI

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Karsteter, of St. Louis, will soon go to Columbia, to open the Columbia theatre as an all picture house. Mr. and Mrs. Karsteter intend to make a feature house of the place, and charge an admission price of ten and twenty cents.

The Lorelei theatre, at Olive and Taylor avenue, St. Louis, opened on October 30 with a feature program. The house is finished inside in old ivory panels and very handsome stage decorations.

NEW JERSEY

Giovanni Ortolano has leased to John Campomenost the moving picture theatre located at 259 First street, near Park avenue, in Hoboken. The lease is to run for five years on an annual rental of $3,300.

Ground has been broken on the tract at Hermitage and West End avenues, Trenton, for the motion picture theatre which will be opened there under the name of the Strand. Fred R. Parker, who is responsible for the building of the St. Regis theatre and the Strand in Lambertville, is the contractor in charge.

NEW YORK

Albany is soon to have two new moving picture houses. Louis Mann and Harry Hellman have formed a co-partnership and will erect at house at the corner of Quail street, Elberon place and Western avenue. It will be 114 feet on Quail street and 73 feet each on the other streets. The seating capacity will be 1,000. It is hoped to open the new theatre on February 1.

The second one will be located in the Arbor Hill section, which at present is not very well supplied with motion picture houses. It is to be on Swan street and will have a capacity of 800. William F. Reilly, a contractor, is interested in the project.

A. A. VanAuken has assumed charge of the Temple theatre, Syracuse, succeeding Mr. Charles Anderson, who has returned to Keith's theatre at Atlantic City.

OHIO

Cleveland now has two new theatres—the Strand, Ninth and Prospect, and the "Y," at the intersection of West Thirty-fifth street, Altoona and Pearl streets. There are 750 seats in the "Y." The name of the theatre was the result of a contest, and two women who suggested it divided the $25 prize. Fred E. Johnson, who was manager of the Metropolitan for over two years, is manager of the "Y."

The Ray theatre, Prospect avenue, near Twelfth street, Cleveland, has closed its doors and is likely to be dark for some time.

The new motion picture theatre on Park avenue, Amherst, was opened recently by Manager Carl Schultz.

H. U. Yount and Frank Yount have purchased the Favorite moving picture theatre on North Main street, Piqua, of Fred Adams.

OKLAHOMA

A. Bert Estes has succeeded F. G. Doggett as manager of the Busby theatre in McAlester. The house shows picture on nights not devoted to vaudeville and other road shows.

The Strand theatre in Drumright opened to the public on October 17. It is owned by H. W. McCall and operated by H. C. Miller. It has a seating capacity of 1,100.

TENNESSEE

The Gay theatre of Knoxville, under the management of Frank Rogers, enters into a new policy on November 29. They have signed up with the Triangle Program. The new policy will call for a two hour show with admission prices of ten and twenty cents. A ten piece orchestra will be installed, under the leadership of Miss Lillian DeHamper, who has directed the Boston Opera House orchestra for two seasons. A new electric sign has been contracted for which will be 40 feet in height. The decorating and changes are being made under the guidance of The National Decorating Company of Cincinnati, Ohio.

The Lyric theatre, Chattanooga, which has been operated as a motion picture house by the Signal Amusement Company has been leased by the Peruchi-Gypzine Amusement Company, which will present the Princess Players in stock productions.

VIRGINIA

Another change has been made in the management of the Universal theatre, which is operated by the Piedmont Amusement Company, Lynchburg, A. N. Waters, of Washington, D. C., having been oppointed to succeed J. Bryan Craver. Mr. Craver has returned to Charlotte, N. C., to associate himself in another capacity with the Piedmont corporation. His successor has been in charge of motion picture theatres in Greensboro, N. C.; Columbia, S. C.; Jacksonville and Tampa, Fla.

C. A. Goebel, of Bristol, a well-known theatrical man, has succeeded John Sanderson as manager of the Gayety theatre. The Gayety was formerly owned by Webber & Rockhill, a Roanoke firm, and Goebel recently purchased Webber's interest in the local house.

WEST VIRGINIA

The Hippodrome theatre in Elkins is rapidly nearing completion. It is owned by R. H. Talbott, who is also sole owner of the Grand Amusement Company of that section, and also of the Talbott Film Manufacturing Company. The Hippodrome theatre will have a capacity of 1,100 and will run nothing but the biggest features to be found in the market.

In the lobby there will be a large soda fountain and candy counter, and the front will be lighted with three 1,000 watt lights and 185 smaller incandescent lights. The latest machines possible to secure will be installed in the booth.

Kenova will have a new motion picture theatre, according to the statement made by King & Willett, Ashland architects, who are preparing the plans. The structure, to cost $7,000, is to be erected on the main street of Kenova near the Union railway station. One-half of the building will be used for a picture theatre and the other part as a store.

Mr. A. F. Francis, Wheeling, has purchased the Theatorium picture show from Peters Brothers, of Shinnston, W. Va. Mr. Francis has already taken charge of the theatre and has Mr. G. D. Poindexter, well-known local business man, in charge.

WISCONSIN

Architect Charles W. Valentine is taking figures for the erection of a moving picture theatre for L. C. Rosenkrans, to be built on Kinnickinnic, near Howell avenue, Milwaukee. The building is to be of solid brick construction. When finished the theatre will seat about 800. This is the fifth new theatre to be reported from Milwaukee within the past month.

Herman Lewis, who for the last two years has managed the Columbia Motion Picture theatre, Eighth avenue, between Fortieth and Forty-first street, New York, has leased for five years from Honest John Williams the Oshkosh Opera House and has signed up for Triangle films.

HIGHER WAGE SCALE FOR UNION MUSICIANS IN DETROIT THEATRES

A WAGE scale has gone into effect by the Detroit Musicians' Union which has seriously affected the Detroit theatres. The new scale is an increase of from $1.75 and up per man per week.

Among the photoplay houses who feel it the most on account of the large orchestras which they employ are the Broadway-Strand, The Majestic, Washington, Liberty, Strand, Alhambra and Globe.

GOLD FIBRE SCREEN USED AS TABLE CLOTH AT ANNIVERSARY BANQUET FOR E. R. ANDERSON, MINUSA COMPANY

THE ninth anniversary of the first Gold Fibre screen was celebrated on the evening of November 11, with a banquet tendered to E. R. Anderson, the inventor, by George B. Logan, president of the Minusa Cine Products Company, at his country home in St. Louis County. The guests at the banquet were the officers, directors and stockholders of the Minusa Cine Products Company.

Nine years had elapsed since the first Gold Fibre projection screen was made by Mr. Anderson in San Francisco, California. Mr. Anderson has been exclusively in the screen business since the inventing of the first Gold Fibre, having been in recent years, with the American Theatre Curtain and Supply Company, and later with the Atsco, Inc., and after the failure of that company, having organized the Minusa Cine Products Company.

A loving cup, the gift of E. W. Drosten, the St. Louis jeweler, and director of the Minusa Cine Products Company, was presented to Mr. Anderson by Nat I. Brown, sales manager of the company. The only engraving on the cup were the words, "Built By Brains." Instead of using the ordinary white table cloth, the table was covered with three Gold Fibre screens, starting with the original surface and ending with the latest product of the company.

Mr. Anderson gave an interesting talk in which he described to the stockholders the laboratory tests he was conducting for the improvement of the screen, and predicted great progress for the company in the next nine months' growing period.

DE CARLTON OF OCEAN FILM WINS SUIT AGAINST ACTOR-MANAGER GLASER

GEORGE DECARLTON, general supervisor of productions of the Ocean Film Corporation, lately organized by Jesse J. Goldburg, recovered a verdict at the hands of the jury last Thursday, in the Supreme Court, against Vaughn Glaser, actor-manager, in the sum of $1,287.32.

Mr. DeCarlton claimed that he was employed by Glaser on a fifty-two week contract to play a leading role in the "Grain of Dust," and at the close of the theatrical season, to appear in stock.

Glaser denied the claim, first admitting the contract and claiming a cancellation by consent, and alleging that the employment was by the week only.

DeCarlton remained with Glaser's company from September 17, 1912, to February 1, 1913, when Glaser closed the show and disbanded the company.

"SIX DAY THEATRE," OPERATED BY MINISTERS, A FAILURE IN TEXARKANA

THE "Six-Day Theatre," operated in Texarkana, Ark., under the auspices of the Texarkana Pastors' Association as a protest against the other three motion picture theatres, which committed the "henious crime" of showing on Sunday, has failed in that city.

It is stated that the failure of the enterprise was due to lack of sufficient patronage to pay expenses. The new management has advertised that the theatre will open Sunday afternoons.

It is also authoritatively stated that a committee from the Pastors' Association will go before the grand jury, and will ask that body to take steps for the suppression of Sunday motion pictures under the law restricting nuisances.

Exhibitors of Texarkana always have charged admission on Sundays, and it is understood their main purpose in operating in that manner is to create a sentiment in favor of Sunday picture shows.

Music and the Picture

Edited by Ernst Luz

This department is maintained for the exhibitor's assistance with a view of suggesting proper musical illustrations for current photo plays. MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be pleased to help solve any difficulties the exhibitors may have with their musical programs. All communications should be addressed to the Music and the Picture Department.

PICTURE MUSIC SHOULD ALWAYS ENTERTAIN, NEVER MYSTIFY THE AUDIENCE

MUCH is said about the kind of music to play for pictures. The question is often asked, "What kind of music is the best for pictures," and the answer is always the same: "All good or melodious music." Every number that has not been condemned as impossible music for entertaining an audience can be used at some time or other in picture playing.

Many numbers could be used every day, were the public satisfied to hear repetitions, while others cannot be appropriately used more than once a month, while others are necessary even less often. As an example, it is hardly possible to play pictures without a repertoire of good characteristic music, yet it can only be used to good effect when used at screen suggestion and is useless and never appreciated when used at other times.

Picture music is not judged by how big it is and when certain theatre musicians tell you that they are performers of classical music, it more often means that they play music which is not understood by the ordinary person. To let you in on a secret, I have found it to be an excuse for incompetency. The music they play is really not understood by anyone.

Picture music means music that will entertain. The audience comes primarily to the picture theatre to be entertained, not mystified. It is quite a different audience from the one that would go to a recital or symphony concert. This does not need to be explained, when we know that the picture theatre caters to at least five hundred patrons for every one that attends recitals or concerts. A symphony concert does not synchronize with a picture show, for it must detract from the picture which is and must be the important attraction of every picture theatre.

When to Play Big Numbers

When you desire to play big numbers in the picture theatre, it is necessary that you be well acquainted with the number you wish to play and positive of the spot you give it in the picture. It is very discouraging to put your best efforts into the playing of a large number and have it condemned for its lack of synchronization. The placing of overtures is very difficult and most criticised when misplaced. Where the audience desires and appreciates an overture it is far better to give it a spot in the program and show it to the very best advantage for the music and the picture. There are hundreds of compositions, known as classics, by the world's greatest composers, that are perfect for picture playing, which do not require the bombastic instrumentation for playing them.

Mendelssohn, Bach, Shumann, Schubert and others have written many numbers, which give class to your program without detracting from the picture. Modern compositions are all more or less based on the writings of the above mentioned, and when playing them you will recognize the style of one of the old masters. The student who is thorough will soon recognize this and find it of assistance in picture playing. Slow serious numbers that have strains of not too great length, that close with natural harmony, are the most appreciated in the picture theatre.

Your music must appeal naturally, for no picture audience cares to be mystified and certainly will not try to decipher technique. Consequently any attempt at numbers which are technically difficult, when they are not strictly pleasing and musical, is time wasted in the picture theatre. Please your audience en masse and not the one or two who feel it is their duty to tell every musician they meet how much they know of classical music.

NEW $35,000 INDIANAPOLIS PHOTOPLAY HOUSE WILL OPEN THANKSGIVING DAY WITH "DAMAGED GOODS"

THE new Regent theatre, in South Illinois street, Indianapolis, which is to be managed by Bingham, Crose & Cohen, and which will run high-class feature photoplays exclusively, will open Thanksgiving day with the photo production, "Damaged Goods."

The theatre, one of the most up-to-date photoplay theatres in Indiana, was built at a cost of about $35,000. The interior will be decorated in old rose and two tones of gray. It will be of brick, steel and re-inforced concrete and will be thoroughly modern and fireproof.

Music will be given by an orchestra, and continuous shows will be given from 10 a. m. to 11 p. m. The program will be changed three times a week—Sunday, Wednesday and Friday, following the showing of "Damaged Goods," which may be shown for ten days.

The prices will be ten cents, both afternoons and evenings, and shows will be given seven days a week. However, the prices for "Damaged Goods' only will be twenty-five cents.

Bingham, Crose & Cohen also manage the Colonial theatre, the only legitimate theatre now running photoplays exclusively. They have contracts for the photoplays released by the Fox, Metro, Kleine-Edison, V-L-S-E companies and the Pathé Gold Rooster plays, which will be shown at the Colonial and Regent.

CINCINNATI LABOR COUNCIL REFUSES TO BACK MUSICIANS' STRIKE THERE

ACTION by the Cincinnati Musicians' Union, in declaring a strike among musicians employed in certain motion picture theatres of Cincinnati, was refused the backing of the Central Labor Council of the city. Members of the Operators' Union as well as the stage hands, appeared before this body and denounced the action of the musicians as unfair.

The peculiar phase of this situation is that according to the agreement which the union has tried to force upon the exhibitors, musicians already employed would have their wages reduced. An orchestra in every motion picture theatre is the demand of the union. Difficulty was experienced, however, in getting the organists and pianists already employed to join the strike for the reason that they refused to strike for a principle that would reduce their earning capacity.

The exhibitors in a series of meetings at the Chamber of Commerce absolutely refused to recede from their position of declining to entertain the proposition.

TWO FILM AND 2 OPERATIC "CARMENS" AT ONCE IN ST. LOUIS

ST. LOUIS was treated to four different versions of "Carmen" during the week of November 1. Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Cornelius, of the Lyric, leased the Princess theatre, at Grand and Olive streets, for the presentation of the Lasky production, with Geraldine Farrar. Wm. Sievers, of the New Grand Central, about two blocks away from the Princess, had the Fox Film, with Theda Bara.

At the Columbia, a high class vaudeville house, Madame Emma Calve sang an aria from "Carmen," among the operatic selections in her repertoire. At the Shenandoah, Grand and Shenandoah, Sarah Edwards, the Park Opera Contralto, gave a serious impersonation of "Carmen," in "Hallowe'en Follies."

PLAN FOR YOUR ORGAN

A certain theatre owner who built what has been called "the handsomest picture theatre in America," signed the contract for his Kimball Organ on the day the company operating that particular house was incorporated.

This man wanted the architect and the organ builder to consult together and make proper provision for the organ in the original plans, without costly and time-wasting alterations. He wanted—and got—the utmost in musical quality and architectural beauty.

The modern divided electric theatre organ is more intricate than the building which contains it. To wait until the house is nearly ready for occupancy and then to stick in a "stock" instrument of some sort is an unintelligent procedure, unworthy of the men who in so short a time have built up the second greatest industry in America, and is unprofitable.

Give the organ builder a chance!

NO UNION ORCHESTRAS FOR CINCINNATI EXHIBITORS

Cincinnati, O., Nov. 10.

AN effort made by the musicians' union of Cincinnati to force exhibitors of this city to employ orchestras of four or more players in houses of a seating capacity of more than two hundred, has so far failed. Inconvenience to the exhibitors has resulted without measure.

As a result of the refusal of this demand by fifty representative exhibitors, members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, a number of the theatres have been showing without music during the past few days. A general strike was called among the union musicians and in several instances motion picture theatres were "bannered" as unfair to union labor.

Demands of the union were received by the exhibitors on Thursday, October 29. It was in the nature of an ultimatum and informed the managers that the orders must be complied with by Sunday. H. Serkowich, managing secretary of the organization, was notified and arranged for a meeting to be held in the Chamber of Commerce at once.

F. L. Emmert, president of the league, presided, and after a thorough discussion of the merits and demerits of the musicians' demands, a resolution was adopted and sent as an answer to the union.

UNIVERSAL OFFICIALS COMPLIMENT ORCHESTRA LEADER FOR MUSICAL PROGRAM FOR "DUMB GIRL OF PORTICI"

Los Angeles, Nov. 10.

ONE of the features that added to the attractiveness of the private showing of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company's ten-reel production, "Fenella, or the Dumb Girl of Portici," at Clune's Auditorium, Los Angeles, on the night of October 22, was the musical accompaniment by an unusually large symphony orchestra.

This orchestra played the music under the direction of Carli D. Elinor, one of the best-known leaders on the Pacific Coast.

Elinor, who is the regular leader at Clune's Auditorium, largely augmented his orchestra for the occasion, and the beautiful music that was rendered during the two and a half hours of the presentation of the Universal's mammoth production greatly pleased the audience of three thousand persons, who accorded it rapturous applause frequently during the evening.

Henry McRae, director general of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, was so pleased with the praise that came from all sides of the leader's splendid work that he and other officials of the company called on Elinor after the performance and highly praised him for his share in making the premier showing of the picture a success.

Note.—This picture is intensely dramatic as you can readily see by the music plot. When using orchestra the heavy music can be somewhat simplified by using the Tavan-Roberts arrangement of the "La Traviata" selection, as published by Carl Fischer, No. 4 and 6 Cooper Square, New York City, instead of Nos. 9-10 and 11. The numbers marked with X's play long and you should select long numbers accordingly. The storm effects during Nos. 7-13-20 and 22 are very important and can be made prominent. Nos. 1-3-5-9-11-15 are all slow numbers with a heavy pathetic appeal. Nos. 12 and 18 are similar numbers and must be positively dramatic and agitated. The waltzes must all be slow and legato. Those designated by (Hy.) should be in minor key. They are the only opportunities for some slight dramatic relief. No. 17 should be a 4/4 intermezzo. Do not play lively. Nos. 2-7-13-19-20-21-22-23-24-25 and 26 are melodramatic numbers, published by Photo Play Music Co., No. 1520 Broadway, New York City. Music will play a very important part in the showing of this picture. The picture will allow for running slightly faster than usual.

The picture is exceptionally adapted to organ music throughout.

A Lavish Film Production of a Great Drama
PRESENTING That Distinguished Broadway Favorite

GLADYS HANSON

In one of the Strongest Dramas Ever Written

"The Primrose Path"

By BAYARD VEILLER
Author of "WITHIN THE LAW"

FOUR factors enter into the success of this remarkable Broadway Universal Feature. 1st—The fact that the Universal produced it. 2nd—That Gladys Hanson plays the leading role. 3rd—The story is one that grips, sways and fascinates. 4th—Because it's from the pen of that brilliant Author, Bayard Veiller, Author of "Within The Law."

Gladys Hanson, recognized as an emotional actress of great powers, is the late supporting dramatic star with E. H. Sothern. In "The Primrose Path"—the lavishness of the sets—the intensity of the story—the uniqueness of the production throughout places this Universal Broadway Feature among the top-notchers.

Ordinarily had any of the Features makers turned this picture out it would be held at prohibitive rentals—so high as to be out of the reach of the average Exhibitor. Released on the regular Universal program as a Universal Broadway Feature you get it at a price that you cannot only afford but at which you can MAKE A GOOD PROFIT, incidentally enabling you to put your house on a plane with the best house in your town. BOOK IT NOW. Write or wire your nearest Exchange for release date and further particulars.

48 FAMOUS FEATURES A YEAR

Who Are They?

You don't need to see their features—you know them. As a matter of fact, all one needs to do is to mention "dance," "Tango," "One-Step," "Cabaret," "Musical comedy," and you immediately think of them. So, too, do your patrons.

And to those exhibitors in the smaller cities where the Castles themselves have not yet appeared this motion picture should prove one of the biggest business getters of the year.

Mr. & Mrs. Vernon Castle

not only display their beautiful talent as foremost exponents of the modern dance, but they, themselves, act the romance of their lives—which is indeed stronger than fiction, for it rivals the imagination of the most fertile melodramatic writer and gives you a drama replete in thrills, pathos, excitement and genuine comedy.

Story by Vernon Castle Adapted for screen by Catharine Carr

Directed by Oliver D. Bailey

Some of the territories which are already disposed of—A. Caille & Co., Majestic Theatre, Detroit, Mich., bought Michigan and Ohio; Authors Film Co., Inc., Empire Theatre Building, N. Y., bought Greater New York, New York State, Pennsylvania, New Jersey; Celebrated Film Corporation of Chicago purchased Illinois and Wisconsin. Warren Shorts, Equitable Building, N. Y., just purchased Virginia, Georgia, Alabama, North and South Carolina. Options on other territories have already been taken. It is worth a telegram, a telephone call or a personal call.

KRITERION PROGRAM

It is the picture—not the frame that makes a painting great.

It is the character of the productions—not the distributing organization, that makes or breaks a program.

Not that we fail to realize the importance of proper distribution.

It is because we DO realize it, that we are safeguarding the success of the new Kriterion, first by insuring an unusual type of program production and secondly by perfectly linked distribution.

Kriterion is being built on the "safety first" principle—quality of production, thoroughness of distribution—strong financial support.

We invite investigation.

BIG BOX OFFICE ATTRACTION

Read What the Daily Papers of the Country Say About It:

PITTSBURGH, Sun: "An Alien" is an intensely appealing play with humor, pathos and real thrills following so closely that there is not a dull moment in the entire production.

MILWAUKEE, Free-Press: "An Alien" is what might be called a "superfeature," in that it is in eight reels and has an exceptionally good story, is splendidly acted, and produced by Thomas H. Ince with more than usual care to details.

MILWAUKEE, Sentinel: No photodrama ever offered has proven its worth as a promoter of sobbing, tears and smiles, as does "An Alien" in which George Beban is starred.

CHICAGO, The Tribune: Alfred Hamberger seems to have hit upon another winner in the production of "An Alien" which is destined for a long time engagement at the Fine Arts Theatre.

TOLEDO, The News: "An Alien" is one of the greatest productions that have been filmed. The picture ran for weeks at the Astor Theatre in New York, and was secured by the Alhambra at considerable expense.

CINCINNATI, Times-Star: "An Alien," with the celebrated Italian actor, George Beban, in the leading role, has scored a hit throughout the East.

SAN FRANCISCO, The Bulletin: "An Alien" is at the Tivoli where hundreds of theatregoers are being turned away this week. Many requests have been made for a second week of Beban in his massive film production.

CHICAGO, The Examiner: Together Beban and Ince have given the motion picture world in "An Alien" a production of human interest, filled with absorbing situations, gripping and eloquently told, which establishes a high standard in motion picture art.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, Vindicator: Owing to the tremendous success of "An Alien" the picture was booked for the entire week at the Park Theatre, as it was considered that the customary three days would be too short to accommodate the crowds wishing to witness this powerful and appealing story of human emotions. Wherever "An Alien" has been shown it has broken all attendance records.

In all parts of the country exhibitors are pleasing their public

¶ The reason is:

¶ Essanay takes every precaution possible to produce only plays of high standard. It sees to it that they are well cast and that the detail of production is perfect.

¶ But after the play is finished, Essanay has expert critics review the picture. Unless it comes up to Essanay's high standard of excellence it is discarded.

¶ Essanay makes it an invariable rule to permit only of releases that it knows to a certainty will meet with the enthusiastic approval of the exhibitor and the public.

WHO KILLED CORNELIA ALSTER?

A rich woman is shot down in her home.
The murderer leaves no trail, but the grim finger of suspicion points at five persons.
Only one is guilty. Which?
A detective is put on the trail. He follows many blind clews before he hits the right one.
This baffling mystery is revealed in Essanay's five-act photoplay,

"THE ALSTER CASE"

Taken from the Thrilling Novel by Rufus Gillmore

The slayer is not discovered until the denouement.
Can you guess who it is?
This problem keeps every spectator keyed up to such a pitch of excitement he cannot rest until he knows the outcome.

SHOULD A GIRL WED FOR MONEY?

This is the problem in Essanay's fascinating five-act romance

"A Daughter of the City"

Every girl in love will want to see it.
Every mother and father should see it.
It is the story of a girl who rejects the man she really loves because her mother has trained her to look for a marriage for wealth.
A rich man of the world is fascinated by her beauty.
The girl does not see her peril, but her rejected sweetheart does.
She finally awakens to the danger that confronts her.
Her sweetheart comes to her rescue and she is saved on the very brink of disaster.
Marguerite Clayton and E. H. Calvert are featured in this great morality drama, taken from the play by H. S. Sheldon. Directed by E. H. Calvert.

Pictures and the Masses

A MAGAZINE writer has just discovered the bigness of the motion picture.

It has established itself, he says, as the ruling amusement of the masses. Hence its permanency and its tremendous future. Hence its swift growth to fifth place among this country's industries—a rank achieved in only a few years, and one preceded only by world-old industries such as agriculture, transportation, oil and steel.

THE ruling amusement of the masses. Very true. Herein lies the solidity, the broadness of the motion picture. But let us not draw any false conclusions from this truth. It is dangerous. Who are the masses?

We are pretty much inclined to group the masses within a class other than our own. With the snobbishness inherent in some degree in every one of us, we are inclined, like the English aristocrat, to believe that most anything is good enough for them. In our taste and preferences we are individualistic, especially as regards our entertainment. What we don't like we consign to the crude appreciation of the large, vague field encompassing the masses.

AS a matter of fact the masses in the United States, in so far as their instruction and amusement are concerned, include pretty nearly all of us. What we may term the aesthetic class is probably no less a minority than the utterly uncritical.

There was a time in this country before the spread of the public school system, the freedom of university education, the spread of daily journalism and the many-million circulation of the popular-priced magazines, when the educated class was very small. But not so today.

WE have referred often, in this page, to the circulation of the Saturday Evening Post. This seems unavoidable for its analogy to the picture situation is so clear and close.

Before the growth of this publication its millions of readers undoubtedly read a wide variety of periodicals, ranging all the way from the drummers' joke-book to the North American Review. The success of the Post simply proves, beyond all doubt, that all these people, high and low, prefer the best in fiction, feature articles and editorials provided only it is brought within easy purchase at a popular price.

THE Post's opportunity is the pictures' opportunity.

The numerous picture theatres afford the widest possible circulation. Their prices are and must remain popular. The masses are looking to them for their amusement and instruction—but they must be amused and instructed. There remains the uncritical minority, and there remains the highly aesthetic minority—on each side of the broad line.

THE uncritical minority are satisfied with pictures that are very crudely emotional or funny, or informative, and the ethnologist, let us say, is pleased with the picture that gives in minute and correct detail the tribal customs of a lost race. But it is as idle for the one producer or for the other to expect a large circulation.

The time for making pictures carelessly has gone by, just as has the time for filling pages loosely with type matter. The critical majority, the masses, will not have this sort of amusement.

THE producer of crude pictures today—and we are turning out a lot of them—who thinks the market will absorb them is simply butting his head into a stone wall. His falling off in prints is not due to defective distribution. The fault comes right back to his own guiding hand.

And if he isn't qualified to produce pictures that will pass the muster of the masses—and they are highly critical—he had best go to the business he is qualified for, or else make his distribution to the houses where audiences don't care.

SURELY the situation today is enlightening enough. We are producing today fourteen features a week. That is bad enough, in point of number alone, for it is perfectly evident that all of these cannot get first-run prices. A considerable number of them must be languishing on the shelf every week, in every city.

But what of the others that are booked? Does the producer think that people are going to see these features and be satisfied with them just because they are features—as we use the term for multiple reel pictures?

WE live, let us say, in a city where seven new features are booked each week. We look to our newspapers for guidance tonight as to where we shall go. A few, a very few, of the brand names are well known to us. That is to say, they designate a standard through past experience. The producer is consistently putting out a certain standard or kind of pictures—the best of their kind.

We go there. As for the rest we know we will take pot-luck. The brand names mean only uncertainty. We have been distressed before by obvious padding, impossible stories, situations and acting—small defects, perhaps, but inexcusable and enough to spoil consistency.

What chance have such features got? Very little, very long, with the critical majority.

Vol. XII December 4, 1915 No. 22

Fair Taxation For the Motion Picture Exhibitor

FOR what is probably the first time in its history, the motion picture industry is to be adequately represented at Washington this winter, when Congress opens, and measures which vitally concern the picture are up for passage or extension.

The Motion Picture Board of Trade of America has officially committed itself to an active opposition of the Federal war tax, which is likely to be renewed by Congress when that body convenes for the winter session.

THE following resolution, passed at the board's last meeting, is explicit and businesslike enough to make every member of the trade feel that the Board of Trade is a body capable of representing the entire business in a manner calculated to impress politicians and other outsiders with its claims for consideration.

LET the resolution speak for itself:

"RESOLVED, That the Executive Committee of the Motion Picture Board of Trade, on behalf of that organization, protests against the injustice and oppression of the present method of levying the special war tax upon theatres, as provided for in House Bill 18891, Sixty-third Congress. The operation of the law as at present administered works a distinct hardship upon the smaller theatre in that the seats are very rarely, if ever, fully occupied, and owing to the limited population from which it draws, they cannot, as is the case in large cities, fill the seats a number of times daily. On the other hand, the large theatre with its greater receipts, escapes its just share of the taxation and the government loses revenue to which it is rightly entitled.

"RESOLVED, FURTHER, that when the above measure comes up for the consideration of the Sixty-fourth Congress, it be so amended as to provide for the imposition of a tax, not upon the number of seats contained in the theatre, but upon the gross receipts in dollars and cents of that theatre; returns to be made at the discretion of the Treasury Department either quarterly, semi-annually, or annually, as is now done in the case of other commodities affected by the war tax.

"RESOLVED FURTHER, That the Executive Secretary be instructed to use such measures as in his judgment are necessary to secure a suitable amendment of the above bill in these particulars."

EXTENSIVE investigation by the heads of the Board of Trade has proven what every one believed to be the case—that the present method of levying the tax is eminently unjust and unfair.

The injustice of it, as a matter of fact, is so apparent that officials of the government who have been identified with the enforcement of the tax have long realized the weakness of the measure in this regard. In other cases, facts and figures have speedily convinced those who were hitherto uninformed of the inequality of the situation.

THE motion picture business is and always has been ready to bear its just share of any such emergency tax. All it asks is a just appreciation of its resources and an intelligent apportionment of the tax to avoid the infliction of unnecessary hardship.

"The Battle Cry of Peace" Stumbles Over the Hyphen

ONCE more the voice of the agitator is heard in Boston, lifting up his indignation against a motion picture.

Nearly a year ago it was "The Birth of a Nation," concerning which the astute Caucasian politician endeavored to convince his more simple-minded colored brother that the picture was a deadly insult to his race.

Today it is "The Battle Cry of Peace," and the plaintiffs in this case, as might be suspected, are a coterie of German-Americans.

THEY profess to see in Commodore Blackton's spectacle of unpreparedness an insult to the German people. Despite the Commodore's earnest assurances, at the launching of the picture, that every reference to race or nationality had studiously been avoided; despite his detailed explanation of the pains which he had taken to make the film, in letter and spirit, neutral, the hyphenates of the Hub insist they are insulted.

Accordingly they have invoked Boston's made-to-order censor board. Talk of an organization to fight the exhibition of the film is heard, and much more dignified nonsense of the same sort.

WE would like to sympathize with Commodore Blackton, but we can't. Instead, we feel inclined to congratulate him. "All the king's horses and all the king's men" couldn't procure for "The Battle Cry of Peace" such gilt-edged, extra-special, preferred publicity, free of charge, as his German-American adversaries are preparing to give him at their own expense.

The Director and the Story

NOT only is the story the acid test of the picture, but the handling of the story in production is the acid test of the director's ability.

The successful director must have the power of visualization plus the ability to keep several threads of action going at the same time, all perfectly co-ordinated. That is what a narrative is.

If the director hasn't this gift, he doesn't belong in motion pictures.

Unit Program Basis of General Film's New Policy

Manufacturers Invited to Contribute "Locked Reel" Unit of Five or Six Reels Weekly, to Be Rented in Toto on Percentage Plan—Specialization in Production, Decentralization of Distribution, Profit-Sharing with Employes, and Co-Operation with Branch Managers Chief Features

MOTION PICTURE NEWS is able to announce this week the specific and immediate purpose of the new policy of the General Film Company.

The manufacturers have been invited to produce each week a locked reel program consisting of five or possibly six reels. This is to be known as a unit program. It may consist of a four-reel drama and a one-reel comedy, or a three-reel drama and a two-reel comedy, or a five-reel drama, etc. Each will be rented in toto, as a unit, and distributed by the General Film Company upon a sharing or percentage basis with the manufacturer.

Two manufacturers, the Vitagraph Company of America, and the Lubin Manufacturing Company have agreed to issue these weekly units and will begin releasing at once. It is probable that some of the other manufacturers will follow suit; some may not release units at all, or it is possible that two or more manufacturers may combine to issue a unit.

Units in Addition to Regular Releases

These units will be issued in addition to the regular releases which now, under the new plan, amount to about 42 reels weekly. Thus, while Vitagraph and Lubin regular releases now amount to five and four, respectively, each week, the unit releases bring these up to ten and nine a week, respectively.

Vitagraph will issue as follows: Monday, 1 reel; Tuesday, 3 reels; Thursday, 1 reel and 4 reels (locked unit); Friday, 1 reel. The schedule of releases by the other manufacturers will be announced by MOTION PICTURE NEWS as soon as definitely decided.

J. A. Berst arrived in New York Tuesday of last week and has actively assumed the presidency of the General Film Company. To the resignation of P. L. Waters, general manager, and Louis Reichert, assistant general manager, have been added those of Joseph J. Unger, F. L. Smith and J. E. Willis, all special representatives.

The country has been divided into four districts, each under a district manager with whom the branch managers will now do business direct instead of with New York, as formerly. These four district managers will therefore replace the office of general manager. Two of these appointments have been made: H. H. Hicks for the Pacific Coast and F. C. Aiken for the Middle West.

District conventions, at which the district manager and the branch managers will confer, will be held regularly. A house organ for the benefit of the branch managers and all employees will shortly be issued. Co-operation to the fullest possible extent will be constantly upheld between the manufacturers, the district and branch managers and the exhibitor.

Designed to Secure Efficiency

"This is all designed," said Mr. Berst, "to secure efficiency in production and in distribution. Each manufacturer will now be able to feel the pulse of his market right along and to produce accordingly.

"The complete new policy of the General Film Company, involving the unit program, the reduction in regular releases, specialization in production, the percentage system of distribution, profit sharing with the branch managers, decentralization of distribution from New York to the field and co-operation with branch managers is the result of two months' deliberation by the Board of Directors and of conferences with many branch offices.

"This should be characterized as the principle of our new policy. It is premature to say the various elements of this general policy already exist. They do not. They have not been put into effect, and they may not, though they probably shall be. But the details must be fully worked out to the best interests of all concerned.

Details Will Be Worked Out

"For instance, the present contracts between the manufacturers and the General Film Company must be superseded by new contracts, which will be fully satisfactory. The matter of putting employees upon a profit-sharing basis will be worked out, submitted to the Board, and if possible put into effect. So also with the details of other plans. They are being investigated. If found practicable they will be put into effect. If not, the method will be modified to suit.

"One result is certain to be achieved, however, and that is increased efficiency. Production and distribution will be based upon the survival of the fittest. The best pictures will succeed. Employees will be rewarded for merit."

Referring to the attitude of the General Film Company toward the recent Federal decision, Mr. Berst said:

"The General Film Company, be assured, has nothing to fear from the court decision now pending. Its business is conducted in accord with the law. We do not expect to have to appeal from the court decree, but we will do so if the decree is unfair."

Lubin will release a five-reel locked unit each week, together with a three-reel drama on Thursdays and a one-reel comedy on Saturdays. The five-reel unit, to begin with, will consist each week of a four-reel drama and a one-reel comedy.

Early releases of the four-reel dramas will consist of "Heart Aches," by Dr. Daniel Carson Goodman, featuring June Daye, Craufurd Kent and Inez Buck; "The Hour of Three," featuring these three stars, scenario by Anthony Kelly; "The City of Failing Light," also by Anthony Kelly and featuring Octavia Handworth and Lesley Austen; "Beyond All is Love," by Clay M. Greene. The one reel comedies will probably be by the new comedian Dave L. Doty.

Kalem to Increase Coast Activity

Immediately following the announcement of the realignment of the General Film program, the Kalem Company declared the beginning of an era of increased activity on the Pacific Coast, both in the producing end and the sales branch of the company.

The first move was made with the announcement this week that Hamilton Smith, one of the most valued members of the Kalem staff, would start immediately for the West.

"Mr. Smith will have general supervision of the Pacific Coast interests of Kalem," said William Wright, treasurer of the company. One of the most important features of his mission will be to get in intimate touch with the exhibitors and exchange men on the coast. The territory to be covered by Mr. Smith will include the Far West from Seattle on the north to Dallas, and east to Denver.

No definite announcement has yet been made as to the particular moves that are planned on the production end, though Mr. Smith will locate permanently on the Pacific coast.

Hamilton Smith is a product of the Kalem school, to whose success he has contributed as an author and a director. Mr. Smith will locate permanently on the coast.

An occasional five-reel feature, of which "The Black Crook," to be released in January, is the first, will be another feature of the Kalem policy.

Berst Resigns from Selig for Duties with General

Activities as President of Releasing Company Compel Him to Sever Connections with Old Concern, to Regret of the Colonel, Who Let His Confrere Go with Reluctance

Chicago, Nov. 20.

FOLLOWING the departure of J. A. Berst from Chicago for New York City last week to enter actively upon his new duties as president of the General Film Company—his new duties making it necessary that he resign as vice-president and general manager of the Selig Polyscope Company—William N. Selig, president of the Selig company, has again assumed active control of the company's affairs, with offices in Chicago and Los Angeles.

"It is with regret that I sever my connection with the Selig company," stated Mr. Berst before leaving for New York City. "My relations with Mr. Selig have been most congenial and his co-operation has been given me at all times. It was only after I obtained the consent of Mr. Selig that I finally concluded to take up the new duties forced upon me by the members of General Film."

Mr. Selig has issued this statement: "It was with extreme reluctance that I finally gave my consent to Mr. Berst's election as president of the General Film Company. There was a unanimous opinion that Mr. Berst was the man for the office and I felt it my duty to acceed to the urgings of my confreres.

Since Mr. Berst joined the Selig company, our business and social relations have been beneficial and congenial, and the Selig company has prospered under Mr. Berst's able direction. There is no man in the film business today who has a more thorough knowledge of the business and technical affairs of the industry than J. A. Berst.

"His leaving to become executive head of the General Film Company I consider a distinct acquisition to that company, and Mr. Berst will accomplish beneficial work.

"I think," continued Mr. Selig, "that the forthcoming releases of the Selig company, both through General Film and V-L-S-E, will cause the pictureplay world to sit up and take notice. We have a number of exceptionally strong single and multiple-reel comedies and dramas, and our Red Seal plays of the future will surpass in general excellence those released in the past, if that were possible. We have centered our producing forces for the time being at the Los Angeles studios, but expect to reopen our Chicago studios when plans now under way are completely formulated."

Triangle's Opening in Boston Is at the Boston

People Interested in the Fenway Buy Rights, Paying $3,500, Including Cambridge, Chelsea, Medford and Somerville, and Form Big T Company to Handle Pictures

Boston, Nov. 20.

THE little element of suspense, so important in film and dramatic offerings, entered strongly into the Triangle situation in Boston, adding much emphasis to the opening of the first Triangle program at the Boston theatre.

For the Boston, the largest motion picture auditorium, with the possible exception of one, in this city, was the theatre finally chosen for Triangle programs.

Leading up to the final choice were the stories in the News that the men interested in the new Fenway theatre had bought the Boston rights. This proves to be the fact, with the price set at $3,500, and including Cambridge, Chelsea, Medford and Somerville. The Big T Company has been organized to take over these rights.

The Boston theatre under direction of the Keith interests had been showing feature films, with Mrs. Caroline Nicholls' Fadettes Women's Orchestra, and a better organization for motion picture illustration in music cannot be found in this country.

The house was closed last Monday; new machines were installed, and a new Gold Fibre screen. Monday night the first Triangle program was shown before a crowd which almost filled the 3,500 seats. The girl ushers appeared in gray dresses with triangles on their arms.

Boston likes best Mr. Fairbanks in "The Lamb." The comedy, "A Game Old Knight," finds much favor, as does "The Iron Strain," with Mr. Farnum. But "The Lamb" is a most excellent film. It shows careful staging and competent acting, including a new film favorite in Mr. Fairbanks.

The Boston theatre will run the first run Triangle pictures. The new Fenway on Massachusetts avenue will be one of those to take care of the second run. The Triangle theatres in the other places near Boston have not been announced.

Manager Bradley of the New England Triangle exchange announces that in about six weeks he will move his offices from the Kimball building to a new two-story structure at 48-50 Melrose street, in the motion picture exchange district. Triangle will occupy the entire building.

Mr. Bradley has placed Triangle service in the William P. Gray circuit, the Princess in Berlin, N. H.; the Colonial in Augusta, Me.; the Scenic in Portsmouth, N. H.; the Empire in Lewiston, Me., and the Majestic in Rumford, Me., and in Toomey and DeMara's Colonial theatre in Lawrence, Mass.

Vitagraphs for 4th Week Include 2-Part Comedy

On List Are Also a "Sonny Jim" Story, and a Sidney Drew Laughmaker—"Love and Law," Written by William Duncan, Is Produced by Rollin S. Sturgeon

TWO pictures produced by the Western Vitagraph Company at Los Angeles, California, a "Sonny Jim" story and a Sidney Drew comedy, comprise the single-part pictures announced by the Vitagraph company for its weekly program beginning Monday, November 22, a program that also includes a Broadway star feature and a two-part comedy feature.

From out of the West comes the Monday release entitled "Love and Law," a comedy written by William Duncan, produced by Rollin S. Sturgeon and enacted by Mr. Duncan, George Stanley and Ann Drew.

Both Mr. Sturgeon and Mr. Duncan are well known to motion picture fans through their team work in the Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature, "The Chalice of Courage," while Mr. Sturgeon's film successes include "Captain Alvarez," "The Little Angel of Canyon Creek," and "The Sage Brush Gal."

"Saints and Sinners" is announced as the release for Tuesday. It was written by Ouida Bergere and produced by Van Dyke Brooke with a cast including Maurice Costello, Leah Baird, Adele de Garde, Garry McGarry and Mr. Brooke.

A Thanksgiving story, "Sonny Jim and the Family Party," by Ealaine Sterne, in which Bobby Connelly is featured, is the announcement for Wednesday. The story was produced by Tefft Johnson, who selected a cast to support the little Vitagraph star that included Mabel Kelly, Karin Norman, Joe Halpin and Frances Connelly.

The Thanksgiving Day release will be "Ghosts and Fly Paper," a story, as its title implies, that has to do with ghosts, but as they turn out to be flesh and blood spirits, what looks to be a tragedy develops into a delightful comedy. The Western Vitagraph Company, for the second time during the week, is responsible for the screen story and Anne Schaefer, Marguerite Reid, George Kunkel, Alfred Vosburg and Otto Lêderer for its enactment.

Friday, the regular Drew Day release, will be "All for the Love of a Girl," by Lulu Case Russell, in which Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew are featured. The chairman of the publicity committee of the Woman Suffrage Party (Mrs. Drew) and Mayor Hawkins (Mr. Drew) fall in love with each other and the Mayor is converted to the cause.

During a speech he collapses and is taken to a hospital. Here the comedy is accentuated by a dream in which the Mayor sees himself attired in the latest feminine fashion of the year 1950 and is being walloped all over the place by huge man-like women, dressed in exaggerated suffragette style.

An all-star cast features the release for Saturday, a two-part comedy-drama entitled "A 'Model' Wife." Lillian Walker, Antonio Moreno, Louise Beaudet, L. Rogers Lytton and Lillian Burns enacted the story under Wilfred North.

"BATTLE CRY OF PEACE" BOOKED FOR DETROIT AT 75 CENTS

"The Battle Cry of Peace" has been booked for the Broadway-Strand theatre, Detroit, by Harry I. Garson, the general manager. It will run at that playhouse as long as the people come.

There will be three performances daily, and prices will probably be seventy-five cents for boxes, fifty cents for the main floor, and thirty-five and twenty-five cents for the balcony. The engagement begins in December.

To start all motion picture performances with the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" by throwing a slide of the American flag and another slide of the first verse and chorus on the screen is the plan of the Detroit Political and Civic League.

GREENLAND LEAVES RAVER FOR ADVERTISING CONCERN

A. K. Greenland, who was temporarily assigned to the publicity department of the Raver Film Corporation while engaged in special work on several other propositions, leaves Mr. Raver's staff to devote his energies to the latter duties exclusively, as soon as his successor has been appointed.

Feeling that insufficient time could be given to Mr. Raver's company while doing other work previously contracted for, Mr. Greenland leaves his present post, with the best wishes of the company. Greenland will devote his major attentions to the Expert Service Corporation, a lower Manhattan advertising agency.

Denverites Meet in Hotel Savoy to Greet "Bellwether" of Exhibitor Flock, Some Attending from Points in Wyoming —Then Milwaukee and Minneapolis Listen to Manager On Tour Under Auspices of Mutual—Kansas City, Indiana and Kentucky Fete Him and Hear Reasons for His Success

Denver, Col., Nov. 19.

THE Rothapfel-Mutual tour luncheon, held at the Hotel Savoy here, November 12, was the red letter day of the year with the exhibitors of Colorado and neighboring states. Exhibitors came from distant points in Wyoming to join in making this the biggest event of the kind ever held in this section.

About one hundred exhibitors were in attendance.

H. T. Nolan, a leader among the film men of this territory, introduced S. L. Rothapfel with a brief sketch of the "master exhibitor's" remarkable career. Mr. Rothapfel spoke for more than two hours, during which he held the gathering in the most absorbed attention. Cheers and applause at various points interrupted his remarks.

"The Mutual Film Corporation has made a great contribution to the welfare of the film industry, the theatres and ultimately the public in conducting this tour," said Margaret D. Conway, inspector of amusements for the City of Denver, in addressing the gathering.

"The enterprise of the Mutual in sending out Mr. Rothapfel will go far toward stimulation of the exhibitors to efforts that will result in raising the business of exhibiting motion pictures to the plane of real art."

Rothapfel's "Home State" Gives Him Rousing Reception; He Talks of Rialto Plans

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 20.

ONE of the most representative turnouts of motion picture exhibitors ever witnessed in Milwaukee was the demonstration that welcomed S. L. Rothapfel back to Milwaukee at a luncheon held in his honor at the Hotel Wisconsin, Wednesday, November 17.

Mr. Rothapfel, accompanied by Newton Levi, arrived here from Minneapolis where he had just been presented with a huge silver loving cup early Wednesday morning and remained over until the last minute Thursday morning, meeting his many friends in this city.

Rothapfel's return to Milwaukee was in the nature of a personal triumph, as he left here some three years ago practically unknown and out of a position. Not only was there a very representative delegation of exhibitors on hand, but many prominent newspaper men also attended. John Wolf, city editor of the Evening Wisconsin, acting as toastmaster.

Mr. Rothapfel was the principal speaker, his talk running over an hour and a half, during which time he told the exhibitors many interesting things and also set many to thinking of film problems, and questions concerning their theatres.

During his talk he also gave the local exhibitors a peep into the plans of the new Rialto Theatre, New York City, which he is to handle and told how he had worked out a lighting scheme whereby the atmosphere of the production playing there will be carried out into the auditorium among the audience.

By means of a three-colored indirect lighting system it will be possible for Mr. Rothapfel to carry, for instance, the effect of moonlight right out into the audience. By dimming down the blue lights he will cause a faint blue light to suffuse the theatre almost like real moonlight. In place of the usual pure white light the three colors, blue, amber and red, are going to be installed, all separately controlled by dimmers.

Following his talk short addresses were made by Frank Cook, manager of the Princess Theatre, and Otto Meister, of the Vaudette Theatre

At the close of the luncheon a vote of thanks was given to J. R. Freuler for his generosity in arranging this tour and to Mr. Rothapfel.

Those present were:

ROTHAPFEL DRAWS CROWDS IN KANSAS CITY

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Kansas City, Nov. 19.

S. L. ROTHAPFEL, who is touring the country for the Mutual talking to exhibitors of motion pictures, spoke in Kansas City on November 14 to a large crowd of exchange men and exhibitors.

In the course of his talk Mr. Rothapfel advised the exhibitors to use the newspapers and advertise to bring the public to his shows.

"Barnum is dead. So is the theory of 'one born every minute.' You can't fool the people any more. They won't believe anything but the truth."

"Use the newspapers," he continued. "Tear down those poster nightmares. What is the use of an architect planning an artistic front for your show shop if you are going to cover it up with that sort of trash? And it doesn't do you any good. The only place you get value for the money spent in advertising is in the newspapers."

That advice was handed out by Mr. Rothapfel, and there is no doubt but that it went home.

"Music is the greatest creator of atmosphere you have," said Mr. Rothapfel. "But it must be interpreted. Don't use mechanical instruments. One good pianist is better than a poor 30-piece orchestra for your business."

Mr. Duran, manager of the Twelfth Street Theatre in Kansas City, is following the advice of S. L. Rothapfel. Mr. Duran, who is running Universal Features, immediately got busy and is now not using a poster in the front of his theatre. Instead he is using small photographs and small lithographs that in no way detract from the beauty of the entrance.

INDIANA AND KENTUCKY HEAR ROTHAPFEL

Indianapolis, Nov. 20.

Exhibitors from all parts of Indiana and Kentucky attended the banquet given at the Claypool Hotel, Saturday evening, November 20, by M. M. Miller, manager of the Mutual Film Corporation's Indianapolis office, in honor of S. L. Rothapfel, former manager of the Strand Theatre, New York, who is making a tour of the larger cities of the United States.

The exhibitors from Louisville, Ky., came in a special car, and practically all of the exhibitors of Evansville were present.

Mr. Miller says he has made arrangements to take care of one hundred and fifty, and is planning to make this the largest and best banquet of motion picture exhibitors held in Indianapolis for some time.

NOTED BOY ACTOR FOR FIVE-PART METRO, "BLACK FEAR"

"Black Fear," the five-part Metro feature, now in process of production at the Rolfe Photo Plays, Inc., studio, has been delayed for two weeks, because General Manager Max Karger, of the Rolfe forces, and Director John W. Noble, could not find a suitable boy to play one of the most important roles in the production. The problem has not only been solved, but they were fortunate enough to obtain the services of John Tansey, the fourteen-year-old prodigy, who has just finished a course in a private school, and who is counted by many the best boy actor in America.

Tansey made his stage debut when he was two years old, appearing with Nat Goodwin in "Wolfville." He has supported nearly every well known star on the stage, including De Wolf Hopper, Olga Nethersole, Grace George, Annie Russell, Guy Bates Post, Rose Coghlan and many others. He was a member of the New Theatre Company, and after two years with that institution, George Foster Platt, the manager, sent him to a school in Connecticut. Tansey has just been graduated from that school, and hereafter will have a private tutor.

THE TWO "CARMENS" FOR OKLAHOMA FILM PATRONS

Oklahoma City, Nov. 17.

Patrons of the Empress Theatre of Oklahoma City are very much interested in the motion picture productions of "Carmen." Last week Manager T. H. Boland presented the Lasky production of the famous opera with Geraldine Farrar, announcing at the same time that later he will present the William Fox version with Theda Bara.

The result was not that those who admire Theda Bara stayed away from the theatre while the Lasky production was the attraction. The theatre played to capacity houses both days, and hundreds of persons have informed the management they will come again simply for the purpose of comparing the work of the two actresses and the manner of its staging, if for nothing else. The Fox production will be presented this week and two more big days are confidently expected by the management.

"BATTLE CRY OF PEACE" OPENS IN PHILADELPHIA

Philadelphia, Nov. 20.

The Vitagraph feature, "The Battle Cry of Peace," made its bow to the Philadelphia public on Monday, the fifteenth.

The already great interest in this photo play of preparedness was enhanced by the presence at the opening performance of Commodore J. Stuart Blackton, under whose direction the picture was filmed.

Another picturesque figure at the opening performance was Captain Jack Crawford, a scout of Civil War days.

Both these gentlemen made impassioned addresses to the large audience on the subject of the picture which added to its pictorial plea. Speeches, picture and the excellent music of the symphony orchestra were much enjoyed by the auditnce which filled the Metropolitan Opera House at Broad and Poplar, where this photoplay is scheduled for an indefinite run.

Chicago Gives Bushman and Beverly Bayne Ovation

Metro Stars Lead Grand March at Ball Given in First Regiment Armory for Theatrical Hospital Benefit, Held Under Auspices of Screen and Stage Clubs

AN ovation and public demonstration honoring Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, the popular Metro stars, was given for these two artists in Chicago, Saturday, November 20.

After making a flying trip from New York on Friday, where they are at work on Quality-Metro features, Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne were met at the railroad station by a long line of automobiles, and they rode at the head of the procession with one continued ovation until they reached the Blackstone Hotel.

On Saturday night they were the guests of honor at the big ball given in the First Regiment Armory under the auspices of the allied theatrical and screen clubs of Chicago for the Theatrical Hospital benefit. Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne led the grand march at the ball.

The signal honor came to these two screen stars quite unexpectedly, and arrangements were completed by telegraph. For a time Mr. Bushman felt that he could not spare the time away from the Quality-Metro studio, but after he was showered with telegrams of appeal from some of the first citizens of the Windy City he finally gave his consent.

The return to Chicago was a veritable triumph for them, as Chicago claims them both as their own. Both Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne worked for several years in the Essanay studio in Chicago, before they joined forces with the Metro Pictures Corporation.

Only recently they were voted the most popular screen artists in a newspaper contest in Los Angeles and San Diego, and crowned King and Queen, respectively, on Motion Picture Day at the California-Panama Exposition. Mr. Bushman was similarly honored at the San Francisco exposition, with Marguerite Snow, another Metro star, as his Queen.

During their stay in Chicago, brief as it was, Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne were entertained at several functions arranged in their honor at the Blackstone.

They were accompanied on the trip by Helen Dunbar, the screen artist who long has been associated with Mr. Bushman, and Mrs. H. Banks Name, the mother of Miss Bayne. They returned to New York Sunday on the Twentieth Century Limited.

Selig-"Tribune" Enters "Motionpictureland"

The Topical Will Take the Place of Hearst-Selig News Pictorial and Will Be Released Twice Weekly, Every Monday and Thursday

THE Selig-Tribune will soon make its appearance in "motionpictureland." The Selig Polyscope Company and the Chicago Tribune have joined forces and are prepared to release an animated newspaper which for originality and enterprise will have few rivals.

The Selig-Tribune will supplant the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, and will be released twice weekly, every Monday and Thursday. The active co-operation of one of the greatest of film producing concerns and one of the greatest of American newspapers is certain to result in the filming of a most interesting timely news pictorial.

The Chicago Tribune possesses one of the greatest news and pictorial staffs in the world. Correspondents and camera men represent the Tribune in all parts of the world.

The Tribune has exclusive correspondents with all the European armies, in Mexico, in every capital in the world, and these wide awake men and women will be working continually for the advancement of the Selig-Tribune.

A versatile staff of film editors has been organized and the Selig-Tribune will be released under their supervision. Many innovations are being planned, outside the beaten paths, and these new ideas are certain to be greatly appreciated by the picture-play public.

It is being freely predicted that the Selig-Tribune will supply a long felt want and the first releases of this new film are being anticipated with great interest.

Nola Arranges for Release Through Associated Film

Captain Hannon, Who Reorganized the Coquille in New Orleans with This Name, and Is Now in New York, Will Supply One 5-Reeler a Month

CAPTAIN W. J. HANNON, president of the Nola Film Company, New Orleans, La., is in New York and makes an announcement that he has just closed a contract with the Associated Film Sales Corporation whereby he is to make one five-reel feature every month, to be released exclusively on the Associated program in addition to their regular service.

The Nola Film Company has at present three features made, the titles and stars of which will be announced soon.

The company was recently reorganized, Capt. Hannon purchasing all of the stock, and its former name, the Coquille Film Company, was changed to the Nola Film Company, which is a contraction of New Orleans, La. Authorization of an increase of the capital stock from $50,000 to $75,000 has been issued.

The Nola Film Company owns executive offices and a big sunlight studio on picturesque Bayou St. John, La. It is about two years old. Rene Plaisetty, now with the Lubin company, formerly was director. Mr. Hannon is likewise a prominent insurance man of New Orleans.

Importance of Motion Pictures and Demand by Public for News of Industry Impress Dailies in Middle West with Necessity of Catering to the People's Wants—"Post" First Paper to Start Film News Department in Kansas City—Nine Other Newspapers in That Territory Follow Suit

THE first paper in Kansas City to start a motion picture department was the Kansas City Post, whose first page appeared on Saturday, November 13. It went well and was talked about by every exchange man and every exhibitor in the city. It is expected that before long two full pages will be devoted to motion pictures each week.

This page is the answer of the management of the paper to the demand that has been created by motion pictures. It proves that the people want motion picture news and that they are as much interested in stories and articles on moving pictures as they are in other important topics.

Motion pictures have a real grip upon the people of that territory and they want the news of their favorite plays and players and are willing to support the paper that will carry this news for them.

The management of this paper has seen that a motion picture department in their paper would pay a handsome return and so far they have not been disappointed, as the first issue carried a goodly bit of paid advertising.

Paper Realizes Importance of Industry

This, of course, will grow as the film manufacturers learn that the Post is working for the general betterment of the moving picture business and that it is the only paper in Kansas City that is, at the present time, conducting a motion picture department.

This paper has been made to see that this industry is one of the largest in the country today and that it has a following that is not to be denied the news of the motion picture world.

The people of the Kansas City territory want motion picture departments in their papers. Several of the papers in that section have received from their readers requests for such departments, and it is in compliance with these several requests that a number of the larger papers of the territory have started motion picture pages.

The following papers in the Kansas City territory have, within the last sixty days, initiated departments in compliance with the demands of their readers:

Springfield Leader, Springfield, Mo.; Springfield Missouri Republican, Springfield, Mo.; Kansas City Post, Kansas City, Mo.; Pittsburg Daily Sun, Pittsburg, Kansas; Wichita Eagle, Wichita, Kansas; World-Herald, Omaha, Nebraska; Osceola Democrat, Osceola, Iowa; Daily Times, Collinsville, Oklahoma; Sentinel-Post, Shenadoah, Iowa, and the Tulsa Democrat, Tulsa, Oklahoma.

It is only a matter of a short time until other papers, realizing that motion picture departments are money makers, will have a section devoted to motion pictures.

Practically every exchange manager in Kansas City which serves the Kansas City territory, is working on the newspapers in an endeavor to have them establish departments in their papers, so that the picture loving public may be informed as to what is going on in the motion picture land.

SUBMARINE MINE EXPLOSION IN KALEM DRAMA

Power of These Destructive Agents Shown

Submarine mines of the floating and stationary varieties, have played so important a part in the present European struggle that considerable interest is centered upon these destructive agents. For this reason, photoplay patrons are sure to find "The Net of Deceit," a new three-act "Broadway Favorites" feature a subject of decided timeliness.

One of the unusual scenes in this Kalem production, shows the planting and the discharging of a submarine mine. To those people who have wondered how it is possible for a cast iron globe about three feet in diameter and filled with guncotton, to destroy a fifteen-million-dollar battleship, the terrific power enclosed in a mine will come as a revelation.

MARGUERITE COURTOT FEATURED IN NEW SERIES

"The Ventures of Marguerite" to Be Kalem's Star's Vehicle For Indefinite Period

Kalem Company has just completed "When Appearances Deceive," the first episode of the new series in which dainty little Marguerite Courtot, is to be featured. This series is "The Ventures of Marguerite," and the episodes, all of which will be one act in length, will be issued every Friday.

Miss Courtot's popularity has been steadily increasing since she made her bow to the photoplay public in a Kalem drama a few years ago, until today she ranks as one of the foremost stars in filmdom. It is a matter of keen gratification to this little lady that it has not been her personality alone which has brought this to pass, but an appreciation on the part of the "fans," of her protean ability.

KALEM HARD AT WORK ON "THE BLACK CROOK"

Spectacular Production of Famous Extravaganza Necessitates Engaging Army of People

A small army of people is working at top speed over at Kalem's Cliffside (N. J.) studios, these days. In one part of the spacious grounds, a score or more girls are assiduously practising the intricate steps of a chorus number. On one of the big stages, men are busily engaged in constructing fairy grottoes, gnomes' dens and other places which, during our youthful days, we fondly imagined to be the homes of immortal creatures. On still another stage, a company of people dressed in the garb of other days, is working under the eagle eyes of Robert G. Vignola, the Kalem director who is responsible [illegible] most notable

The happy smile on Marguerite Courtot's face these days may be due to the thought of the wonderful gowns which are to be worn by her in the forthcoming episode of the new Kalem series, "The Ventures of Marguerite," in which she is being featured.

Since it was first announced that Kalem Company was using a score or more of chorus girls in "The Black Crook," the four-act production of the famous extravaganza, the Cliffside (N. ILLUSTRATING THE MAKE-UP AND GENERAL APPEARANCE OF THE KALEM PRESS SHEET

AT the top of the Kalem Klip Sheet appears the following note: "To the Editor:—Should the material presented in the Kalem Klip Sheet be unsuited to your requirements, a letter explaining your needs will result in the proper copy being mailed you in future"

This is a commendable policy on the part of the manufacturer. It shows, among other things, the realization that motion picture publicity should be made for the newspaper, not the newspaper for motion picture publicity. In other words, you cannot force down the throat of the newspaper articles it doesn't want, written in a style it doesn't like, and containing sheer nonsense—which it won't print.

It is the business of picture publicity directors to find out what the newspaper will print—and then proceed to supply it.

The only way to do this successfully is to treat the newspaper as an individual, not as a member of a vast army of publications which can be forced, through a sort of conscription, to fight the battles of motion pictures.

Names of Manufacturers Used Too Often

The mere sending out of windy stories, built to carry the name of the manufacturer repeated eight or ten times in the article, is waste of time. It is inefficient publicity, and the newspapers are complaining of this senseless repetition of the manufacturer's name.

It is not difficult to discover the basis for this complaint. Newspaper readers, as a whole, do not care one iota who made a particular picture. What they want to know is: What is the picture about? What are its big scenes? What players appear in it?—and, mark this, they also want to have spread before them little bits of gossip about the players in the picture.

This doesn't mean stories about every Tom, Dick and Harry in the motion picture business; it means stories about the players whom the readers can see at the picture theatres in their town. What is the sense of writing a story containing an elaborate biography of some screen player, unless the biography means something to the person who reads it?

Biographies are not news in the newspaper's eyes, anyway.

The way out is very simple, and here is where, it seems to us, the Kalem people are on the right track. Their Klip Sheet carries "Breezy News Notes from the Field"—short, snappy paragraphs of fifty to eighty words, most of them with a human interest angle; the majority of them do contain some item of news.

We do not say these paragraphs are perfect. But we do say that the idea back of them shows a readiness on the part of the manufacturer to adapt his publicity to actual newspaper needs.

Good Headings Give Gist of News

In other respects, the Kalem Sheet does not differ greatly from other press matter, except that it runs no cuts. Instead, it confines itself to the presentation of fairly brief items about current productions.

The headings guide the editor to the substance of the story, in each case. This Klip Sheet, we believe, was the first in the field, and it still retains its modest but pleasing appearance. It has a newsy look that is absent from some of its contemporaries.

ROBERT EDESON IN "THE CAVE MAN," EDITH STOREY IN "A PRICE FOR FOLLY," AND FRANK DANIELS IN A NEW COMEDY—ALL VITAGRAPH BLUE RIBBONS

And the moral of the whole thing is this:

A newspaper is a medium for the dissemination of news.

It will not print a story unless it believes that story is a news story.

There is plenty of news in the motion picture field.

The name of the manufacturer is not news.

The tiresome repetition of the manufacturer's name will send the story to the waste basket.

Furthermore, a newspaper is an individual with likes and dislikes.

You can't approach every newspaper in the same manner any more than you can approach every individual in the same manner.

But all newspapers are alike in this: you can't give them something they don't want.

Once more, what the newspaper wants is news.

If the gentlemen who write publicity don't know what news is and what news is not, they had better begin to find out.

HUDSON BECOMES ASSISTANT TO PARAMOUNT PRESIDENT

Alfred J. Hudson, for the last two years president's secretary of the Thompson-Starrett Company, 51 Wall street, New York, has joined the Paramount Pictures Corporation in the capacity of assistant to W. W. Hodkinson.

Mr. Hudson was born in New York City, studied law at the New York Law School and practised for seven years. At one time he was with De Lancey Nicoll. Mr. Hudson brings to his new position a great deal of business experience. While he knows nothing of motion pictures except that he likes to see them it is expected that his advice in the many problems which confront the heads of such an organization as the Paramount will be valuable.

NICHOLSON PICTURE COMPLETED FOR UNIVERSAL

Director John Harvey, of the Universal, has just completed the filming of Meredith Nicholson's novel, "The Lords of High Decision," featuring Cyril Scott. For the screen play scenarioized by William H. Lippert, the Universal's new scenario editor, Mr. Harvey took an entire company of Imp-Universal players to Pittsburgh where many scenes were made about the bituminous coal fields and natural gas wells.

Henry Otto Company Back from Filming "Undine"

Players Were on Santa Catalina Island, in the Pacific, for Three Weeks, Getting Scenes for Old German Fantasy, Requiring Pictures of Fairy Caves and Grottos

HENRY OTTO and his company of special feature players have returned from a three weeks' stay in the Santa Catalina Islands where they have been making exterior scenes in the production of a screen version of the old German fantasy, "Undine."

Pictures of caves and deep-creviced caverns whose hundred-foot arches cut through towering walls of malpai rock that rise in silent grandeur from the futile beating of the surf at their base; pictures of sea-nymphs, garlanded with strings of kelp and sea-weed, sliding from half-submerged rocks in the breakers or riding through the surf on dolphins and sporting about in the water among the seals; pictures of wood fairies shifting about from tree to tree and disappearing down the semi-lighted archways of giant pines that grow straight to the water's edge; pictures of under-water swimming and of dives from unbelievable heights; pictures of elves and gnomes and woodland sprites that come and go in a twinkling, coming from nowhere and disappearing into thin air—these and a hundred other effects are seen on the screen form a part, but only a part, of the film he brought back.

Some of all this is explained in the statement that the photography was accomplished by Fred Granville, the man who went with the Steffanssen expedition to the Arctic regions and whose camera work has occasioned such favorable comment with the releasing of those films.

The Otto company comprised some sixty people, including the players, swimmers, sailors, and all. Every member of the party was picked from scores of applicants, from the director and cameraman down to the extra players.

There was Ida Schnall, nationally known swimmer and diver, who plays the role of Undine and is featured in the production; and Eileen Allen with her twenty-five swimming and diving girls, every one of whom possesses a cup or a medal or a title of some sort for skill in aquatic sports; and among the players were Douglas Gerrard, who plays the role of knight, and Edna Maison, who plays the role of the fisherman's daughter.

The most sensational feature of the entire trip was the dive which Miss Schnall made from a height of more than one hundred and seventy-five feet from the top of a wall of rock straight to the sea below.

Lower Censor Fees in Sight for Kansas Exhibitors

Committee from Amusement Association Confer with Attorney General and Managers Are Hopeful of Way Being Worked Out to Reduce Present Rate on Reels

THE executive committee of the Amusement Association of Kansas met in Topeka on Thursday, November 11. After the regular business of the association was attended to, the entire committee, composed of E. R. Pearson, V-L-S-E manager in Kansas City; Chas. W. Harden, Fox manager in Kansas City; Stanley Chambers, an exhibitor from Wichita; Lee Gunnison, an exhibitor from Atchison; and Harry K. Rogers, an exhibitor from Marion, called upon S. M. Brewster, attorney general, and W. D. Ross, state superintendent of public instruction and state moving picture censor.

The committee was received in a friendly fashion and no doubt much good will come from the meeting. Things of general interest were discussed, and, of course, the main talk was about censorship. While nothing definite was decided, it is expected that a way will be worked out for the elimination of the high fee that the exhibitor is now compelled to pay.

New members are coming into the association daily, and when the influence of every exhibitor in the state has been put back of this movement for a better censorship law, there is no doubt but that it will be obtained.

Every exchange manager in the city has on his desk a list of the members in the association and when he writes to an exhibitor who is not a member he puts a postscript on his letter asking him to join in the good cause.

"The Red Circle" to Take Place of "Who's Guilty?"

Latter Series, Intended for Release on December 11, Is Temporarily Withdrawn Because First Episode Falls Below Standards Set by Producer and Releasing Company—Situation Is Squared with Exhibitors by Substitution of the Former, a Balboa, Originally Intended for Release in January

ANNOUNCEMENT comes from the Pathé offices to the effect that Who's Guilty?" the series originally scheduled for release on December 11, has been temporarily withdrawn and "The Red Circle," a strong, romantic serial produced by Balboa, in fourteen two-part episodes, put on the program in its place for release December 18. "The Red Circle" was originally intended for release by Pathé some time during January and is now practically completed.

The temporary withdrawal of "Who's Guilty?" affords excellent proof that both Pathé and the Arrow Company are determined that each episode shall be of unvarying high quality. The first episode, when screened, proved to be disappointing, for causes which have now been removed. At great financial loss, the episode was scrapped and will be entirely made over, with Emmy Wehlen and Howard Estabrook, of course, in the leading parts.

The idea of "The Red Circle" is original with H. M. Horkheimer and Will M. Ritchey, who wrote the scenarios. It represents the cumulative effort of some nine months and is based upon the idea that the instincts of heredity, however strong, can be overcome by environment and proper education.

The working out of the theory has been done scientifically, with each step authenticated by the best authorities. In the story Ruth Roland plays the part of a young girl who inherits criminal tendencies, which, however, are modified by the superior character of the environment in which she is brought up.

"The Red Circle" is a peculiar birth mark which is a characteristic of her family, and which comes and goes according as her thoughts are normal or abnormal. Frank Mayo plays the part of the lover who is trying to discover the identity of the mysterious criminal. With such a story the opportunities afforded the director are many. Sherwood McDonald is producing the picture.

Ruth Roland Successful Ingenue

Ruth Roland has been on the stage for thirteen years and yet is only twenty-two. She made her debut at the age of four as Baby Ruth, on the Pacific Coast, and was regarded as a phenomenon. When she was playing "Little Lord Fauntleroy" at the age of six years in San Francisco, she attracted the attention of David Belasco.

She continued on the stage until she was eleven, when she was sent to a private school, remaining there until she was sixteen. Her success as an ingenue was even greater than as a child. Her versatility was such that she played comedy or drama with equal ease. Four years ago she was "discovered" by a Kalem director, who engaged her to appear in Western and Indian plays. Later she was put into comedies and was highly successful.

Last December she received the offer of a year's contract with Balboa at a flattering salary, to star in the "Who Pays?" series, about to be made for Pathé, and accepted. In this series she found a fitting vehicle for her art.

Frank Mayo, who supports Miss Roland, though not so well known as she is, comes of a famous theatrical family, his grandfather having been Frank Mayo, the celebrated English actor. His work has been uniformly good in Balboa productions, and is constantly getting better. This serial represents his first big chance, and he has made the most of it.

Messrs. Horkheimer and Ritchey, the authors of "The Red Circle," collaborated on the Pathé series, "Who Pays?" which will be remembered as one of the big successes of the current year.

Albert Payson Terhune, who has written the stories for the many newspapers who have arranged for the publication rights, is one of the best known newspaper men in the country, having been connected with the New York World for a number of years.

He was born in Newark, N. J., December 21, 1872, and is the son of Marion Harland, one of the most celebrated women authors in the country. He graduated from Columbia in 1893, and then spent a number of years in travel in Europe, Asia and Africa. He is author of the novels, "The Fighter," "Caleb Conover," and the book of travel, "Syria from the Saddle." He also collaborated with his mother on "Dr. Dale," the first instance in which a son has collaborated with his mother, and novelized the play, "The Return of Peter Grimm," which was a recent Belasco success.

Scrap Heap Gets Film Not Up to Pathé-Arrow Mark

AFTER conferences between representatives of the Pathé Exchange, Inc., and the Arrow Film Corporation, it has been decided to postpone the release of "Who's Guilty?" for several weeks, so that the episode already completed may be reconstructed by the Arrow Film Corporation and new scenarios supplied for the balance of the series.

"Who's Guilty?" is a series of fourteen two-reel episodes concerning the great economic, social and domestic problems of the day. Each episode is complete in itself and deals with a particular phase of the complex existence of modern times.

The series is to be in the nature of the big problem plays that have caused the birth of what may be termed the "personal drama" of today.

The contract between the Arrow Film Corporation and Pathé called for the motion picture production of certain scenarios to be supplied to the Arrow organization. These episodes were to be delivered in the following order: the first three by December 1 and one every ten days thereafter.

Upon screen examination of the first episode it was decided that the stories which were the basis of these two-reelers and their interpretation were not in accord with the quality desired by Pathé and Arrow. It became evident that different scenarios would have to be provided in order to make this new series the effective drama that is the standard of Pathé and Arrow output.

In accordance with this desire Mrs. Wilson Woodrow, one of the foremost of American writers, has been commissioned to write the "Who's Guilty?" series and their production by Arrow will commence immediately upon receipt of new scenarios.

Both Emmy Wehlen and Howard Estabrook will be seen as co-stars in the re-written stories as was arranged for in the original program. These popular stage and screen players will be supported by a cast of unusual excellence in every episode.

Neither time nor money will be spared by the Arrow Film Corporation to make the new "Who's Guilty?" series the finest motion picture portrayal of big ideas, it is said.

In the meantime "The Red Circle," a detective serial of fourteen episodes of two reels each produced by Balboa, and originally intended for release by Pathé about the middle of January, will be substituted for "Who's Guilty?"

OLGA PETROVA, WHO IS SHORTLY TO APPEAR IN A NEW METRO FEATURE ENTITLED, "WHAT WILL PEOPLE SAY?"

PIERCE ON EXTENDED TRIP THROUGH NEW ENGLAND

Carl H. Pierce, special representative of the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company, left last Monday for an extended trip throughout New England, visiting exhibitors and newspapers en route in the interests of his company.

It is the policy of the Morosco Company to get in touch with each exhibitor to ascertain his individual needs and each newspaper to investigate local conditions to the end that both exhibitor and newspaper may be served in the best possible way.

Mr. Pierce expects to be gone until the latter part of the month, during which time he will probably visit practically every Paramount exhibitor in the New England states.

BALBOA OPENS NEW YORK OFFICE AT 1600 BROADWAY

The demand for Balboa feature films has compelled the Balboa Amusement Producing Company to procure an Eastern office.

H. M. Horkheimer, president and general manager of the company, has selected the Mecca Building, 1600 Broadway, as the proper location from which to direct his New York business, and has fitted up a suite of offices and a projection room complete in every detail.

During the time that Mr. Horkheimer's manifold activities require his presence at the Long Beach, California, studios, H. N. Holde, his Eastern representative, will be in charge of the New York offices.

JOHN G. ADOLFI JOINS FOX FORCES

John G. Adolfi, producer of such features as "The Sphinx," with Herbert Kelcey and Effie Shannon; "The Man Inside," with Edwin Stevens, and "Joan o' the Hills," with Violet Mersereau and Harry Benham, all in five reels each, for the Broadway Feature program, resigned, on November 10, from the Universal Company, to enter the employ of the William Fox Feature Films Company, the change to the new associations to take place during the week of November 22. John William Kellette will accompany Mr. Adolfi as his assistant.

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, Nov. 18.

Tom Chatterton, late director for the NYMP organization, and since leading man with the Cleo Madison Company at Universal City, has become affiliated with the American, where he will direct and play leads opposite Anna Little in a series of western photoplays.

KEEPERS NOW WITH UNIVERSAL IN THE EAST

Harry Keepers, formerly with the World Film Corporation as cameraman to Director James Young, is now connected with the Coytesville studio, Universal Film Manufacturing Company, as Jack Harvey's cameraman, completing his first Broadway feature, "Lords of High Decision," November 16.

Jamaica Furnishes Oriental Settings for Fox Films

"Ruling Passion," Featuring Claire Whitney, Gives Actress Chance to Make Wronged Wife Part Important—"Terese Raquin," from Zola, Also with Island Backgrounds

BESIDES the Annette Kellermann picture, two other productions of huge proportions are now in the making in Jamaica for William Fox. These are "The Ruling Passion" and "Terese Raquin." The former is being produced by James MacKay, under the direction of Herbert Brenon, and the latter by Keenan Buel.

WILLIAM E. SHAY — CLAIRE WHITNEY

Claire Whitney and Walter Miller are featured in "The Ruling Passion," which is an oriental play. Miss Whitney plays the part of a wronged wife and Mr. Miller is seen in a character role.

In "Terese Raquin," which is from the famous novel by Zola, Violet Horner, well-known Broadway star, is featured, with Hal DeForrest, popular motion picture actor, in her support.

Miss Horner, who is a pronounced blonde and peculiarly fitted for the role she is playing, has appeared in George Cohan productions, has been leading woman for Charles Frohman and has headed her own company.

Locations in various parts of the island are being used in connection with both productions. The island furnishes many settings, such as churches and ruins, which are peculiarly adapted to the French play, and because of its profusion of flowers and tropical vegetation Jamaica offers most desirable locations for the oriental picture.

Work on both productions is proceeding with despatch. Director MacKay made a special trip to Jamaica several months ago and looked over the topography of the country. All locations which could be of possible use in "The Ruling Passion" were charted out. Hence when the company arrived at the island there was no unnecessary delay in getting down to work.

That Mr. MacKay purposes to use several effects heretofore unemployed in pictures is the statement of those who have visited Jamaica within the last few weeks and have watched him and his company at work.

Mr. Buel and his associates are satisfied with the progress that is being made on "Terese Raquin." The weather has been such that exterior work has not been held up on any of the three Fox productions.

Mr. Buel is making every effort to produce "Terese Raquin" in a manner that will assure its attaining the same success on the screen that it has had on the stage and in book form.

William E. Shay, who supports Annette Kellermann in the picture which is being built about her, has recovered from a slight attack of fever which he suffered shortly after arriving in Jamaica. He is one of the most experienced and most talented screen stars with the William Fox Jamaica companies.

Equitable's 24 Sheet Poster Is Exhibitor Help

Sixteen Sheets Will Have Name of Company's Stars, Authors and Plays and 9 Sheets Will Be Left Blank for Cross-lining Names of Theatres

A NEW type of twenty-four sheet poster will shortly be seen on the billboards throughout the country.

The Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation, of which Arthur H. Spiegel and Lewis J. Selznick are the guiding geniuses, have contracted for the issuance of five thousand stock posters, upon which sixteen sheets are to bear the names of the many Equitable stars, authors and plays, and of which nine sheets will be left blank for crosslining the name of the theatre, and the dates of appearance at the house of all the Equitable features.

The poster will be supplied free of charge to all Equitable exhibitors, with the crosslining and dating all done at the expense of Equitable, providing the exhibitor agrees to post them.

The posters are in red, green and brown and done from a sketch supplied by Arthur J. Dewey, whose cover work on various magazines has attracted more than passing interest.

Sales and division managers at the various World Film branches were instructed, by wire, to offer the posters to exhibitors and encourage them to post them, and if necessary make all arrangements with bill posting and advertising agencies, in order to secure conspicuous locations and the best commercial rates.

It is anticipated that the exhibitor will arrange for thirty and sixty-day showings, as the paper will be "live" material for at least six months. Renewals and fresh crosslinings will be furnished free for the asking.

EIGHT MAKE STRONG CAST FOR "BUZZARD'S SHADOW"

The cast of "The Buzzard's Shadow," a five-part Mutual Masterpicture, besides Harold Lockwood and May Allison, the two popular American (Mutual) leads, presents William Stowell, Harry Von Meter, Alice Ann Rooney, Dick La Reno, Betty Hart and Virginia Fordyce.

Mae Murray, Famous as a Stage Dancer and as the Original Nell Brinkley Girl, in a Series of Striking Poses. Miss Murray Has Recently Been Engaged by Lasky for Appearance as a Star in Photoplay Productions to be Presented on the Paramount Program

HUMPHREY TO DIRECT NEW COMEDY COMPANY FOR AMERICAN

In order to meet the growing demand for American-Mutual pictures a new comedy company has been organized under the direction of Orral Humphrey. This company will produce straight character comedies. Mr. Humphrey is known far and wide as the eccentric Smythe in "The Diamond from the Sky," and his reputation in that picture alone is sufficient to guarantee the high character of the new subject.

Mae Murray Enticed to Screen by Lasky Proposition

Original of Nell Brinkley Girl Drawings, with Ziegfeld's "Follies of 1915" and as Well-Known as a Dancer as Mrs. Castle, Makes Exclusive Contract

MAE MURRAY, until several weeks ago one of the important principals in Ziegfeld's "Follies of 1915," has left the musical comedy stage for an indefinite period to appear exclusively in photoplay productions of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company on the Paramount program.

Miss Murray, who has been called the "original Nell Brinkley girl," as she is said to have been the inspiration for the familiar drawing, left for the Lasky studios at Hollywood, Cal., last Monday. She will begin her work immediately under the personal direction of Cecil B. DeMille.

However famous Miss Murray became by reason of her wide reputation as a "show girl," she won added popularity for herself during the past two years by reason of her dancing.

Probably no woman besides Mrs. Vernon Castle enjoyed so great a vogue as a dancer than Miss Murray since the modern dancing "craze" swept the country.

She toured across the country in vaudeville and on her return to New York last spring she was established as an institution of New York's gay life atop the Forty-fourth Street theatre at Mae Murray's Danse Marigny.

Miss Murray never posed before the motion picture camera until last spring when the new "Follies" was being rehearsed. One of the features of that performance is a burlesque on motion pictures, which shows players on the screen receiving orders from the director, who stands in the aisle among the spectators of the audience.

Miss Murray is the heroine of this burlesque, a role she carries off so well that after the premiere of the "Follies" she received scores of tempting offers to enter motion pictures.

The advent of Miss Murray into the colony of well-known players at the Lasky studios brings another star to the group.

At present among the players who are in Hollywood are Fannie Ward, who has just completed, under Mr. DeMille's direction, her second production, "The Cheat"; Valeska Suratt, who is finishing "The Immigrant"; Charlotte Walker, Theodore Roberts, Blanche Sweet and Cleo Ridgely and Wallace Reid, who are among the new stars.

Bowman, Director for Bushman, Now with Horsley

Latest Addition to Centaur Producing Forces, Formerly with the New York Motion, Will Make Animal Features with Bostock Arena

WILLIAM J. BOWMAN has just been added to David Horsley's staff of directors at the Horsley studios in Los Angeles, to put on Centaur Feature animal pictures with the Bostock animals. He is now at work on his first Centaur picture.

Mr. Bowman is one of the best known and at the same time one of the most capable directors in the business. For a long time he was associated with the New York Motion Picture Company, putting on productions for them at Inceville.

His most recent engagement was with the Quality Films, a Metro release, for whom he produced the Francis X. Bushman features. Among these were "The Second in Command," the first Bushman picture for the Metro, and "The Silent Voice," which followed.

The fact that the Bushman releases are to be made in the East was the reason that Mr. Horsley was enabled to secure Mr Bowman.

When it was decided to remove the Quality players to New York, Mr. Bowman was invited to accompany them in his old capacity, but declined the offer, explaining that he preferred to remain in California. Mr. Horsley then immediately approached him with a proposition which was so tempting that he accepted.

A Doyle Picture and a Cross for Audiences Here

"Brigadier Gerard," Featuring Late Lewis Waller, and "Five Nights" Arranged by J. W. Smith of Barker, London, the Maker, for Exhibition in Theatres Through Paul Cromelin

J. W. SMITH, manager Barker Motion Photography, Ltd., London, after a several week's stay in this country returned to England Monday on the Philadelphia.

Mr. Smith has arranged for the showing in America of two Barker made pictures, Conan Doyle's "Brigadier Gerard," and "Five Nights," by Victoria Cross. The pictures will be handled by Paul Cromelin.

In "Brigadier Gerard," the late Lewis Waller appeared in the lead, supported by Madge Titheradge and Marie George, while Eva Balfour is starred in "Five Nights."

As an indication of the growth of motion picture industry in the British Isles, and of the Barker plant in particular, Mr. Smith pointed out that Barker is now building its third studio, which will be the largest in the United Kingdom.

A new film factory is also in operation, in which new patent machinery makes it virtually unnecessary for film to be touched by the hands. The equipment, which also includes a new printing machine, is automatic throughout.

Miss Clark Meets Herself Coming Back, in a Famous

At Least It Sounds Like That in First Paragraph of This Story from Ben Schulberg's Verbatum Report of Orders from Director Ford to Dainty Actress

"NOW you precede yourself into the room, but when you reach the centre you look back and see that you haven't come in at all. Then you go back to the entrance, beckon to yourself and come in as before. This time you both come in and you turn as before, but engage yourself in conversation."

This is not the jabbering of a hopeless lunatic. It is a strictly business conversation between Marguerite Clark and her director, Hugh Ford, held at the Famous Players Film Company's studio during the filming of an adaptation of Mark Twain's "The Prince and the Pauper," the first work of the great humorist to be filmed.

The peculiar dual identity ascribed to the actress by the phrases is explained by the fact that she is actually playing two parts in the photo play—both the prince and the little pauper—who appear on the screen at the same time. In order to obtain the effect of having two figures on the screen, part of the lens must be hooded in the first instance and the other portion is shaded when the second figure is introduced.

If, as in this case, one player is interpreting two roles, he or she must clearly remember just what action has taken place in the scene which forms the complement of the one under preparation. Any confusion or hesitancy in action on the part of the player during the taking of one of these scenes would spoil, not only the scene in question, but the corresponding scene, which is, of course, photographed on the same film.

The action must be so planned that, when the entire film is developed, the completed scene will show both figures moving in harmonious relation to each other. This is the province of the director, who must guide the player through the intricacies of the two scenes.

Now the complications which looked so foolish in the beginning appear to have some intelligent purpose behind them. Mr. Ford is telling Miss Clark that, as the prince, she preceded the beggar—her second impersonation—into the room; that the bashful beggar reluctantly hangs back, the prince returns to the door and urges him to enter; then the prince and the beggar converse together.

"Now you invite yourself to sit down and have something to eat," continues the director. "You remember that you were too bashful to eat, but that your other self plunges ravenously into the meat pie.

"About this horse scene where you see yourself coming along at the head of the coronation procession—you rush out, stop yourself and haul yourself off the horse.

FLORENCE LA BADIE IN COMEDY FOR THANHOUSER

Florence La Badie, the Thanhouser (Mutual) star, has been so anxious to appear in a comedy, that Mr. Thanhouser recently consented to let her play in one.

Consequently, she is scheduled to appear in "All Aboard," a one-real comedy in which she is supported by Samuel Niblack, Ethyle Cook, Lawrence Swinbourne, in the Mutual Program, November 29.

"All Aboard" tells the tale of a headstrong girl who possesses a great deal of money, and who refuses to let her guardian force her to keep the money in his family by marrying his son.

Eight Films a Month After Jan. 1 Is V-L-S-E Plan

Vitagraph to Supply Four, Essanay Two, Lubin and Selig Each One or More Pictures Expected to Surpass Previous Standard Set by the Company

BEGINNING with the first of the year, the V-L-S-E's program will include at least eight productions a month.

Vitagraph will supply four of these; Essanay two, and Lubin and Selig each one or more.

The program of this organization up to the first of the year was announced a few weeks ago.

Those who have seen some of the releases scheduled for after the first of the year say that they excel in their drawing qualities the standard set by the V-L-S-E's present releases.

They include a production which will equal or surpass the attention that has been given "The Battle Cry of Peace"; a picturization of one of Rex Beach's strongest novels; a beautiful story featuring Fritzi Brunette and dealing with the transformation of a stenographer into a woman of the world, who, lured by the love of gold, ruins two men's lives; a drama with Nance O'Neil under the direction of Edgar Lewis, and the film version of what has for years been one of the premier international dramatic successes, with the original star, whose name is being withheld for the present.

CLIP SHEET ISSUED BY GAUMONT

The publicity department of the Gaumont Company has just issued the first of its series of clip sheets to supplement the work being done on the Mutual Program. This will be sent weekly to newspapers and periodicals and to all exhibitors requesting it.

"Gaumont Gossip," as it is called, will deal with customary data about Gaumont photoplays and actors which will appear of interest to the public.

Neva Gerber is scheduled to be the face in "The Face in the Mirror," a "Beauty" (Mutual) comedy, soon to be released. She is supported by Wallace McDonald and Dick Rosson.

Fox Directors Settle Down to Hard Winter Work

Brenon Is Still in Jamaica with 3 Companies, Powell Is in Chicago and Vicinity—Forthcoming Releases Include "Green-Eyed Monster," "The Final Payment" and "Destruction"

DIRECTORS, principals and other members of the William Fox photoplay forces have settled down to a strenuous winter's work and are now laboring night and day on forthcoming releases.

Herbert Brenon and three companies are still in Jamaica, where satisfactory progress is being made on the photoplay featuring Annette Kellermann. Frank Powell and a company are working in Chicago and vicinity, while various other companies are actively engaged in production at the William Fox studios in Fort Lee, Jersey City, Hoboken and Grantwood, N. J.

Forthcoming Fox offerings include "The Unfaithful Wife," "The Galley Slave," and "Green-Eyed Monster," directed by J. Gordon Edwards; "The Final Payment," and "The Fourth Estate," directed by Frank Powell; "Destruction," directed by W. S. Davis; "A Soldier's Oath," directed by Oscar C. Apfel; and "Her Mother's Secret?" directed by Frederick A. Thomson.

Theda Bara, a Fox favorite, is starred in "Destruction" and "The Galley Slave," while Robert B. Mantell, with Genevieve Hamper, appears in "The Unfaithful Wife" and "Green-Eyed Monster"; Nance O'Neil is featured in "The Final Payment"; William Farnum in "A Soldier's Oath"; Ralph Kellard with Dorothy Green in "Her Mother's Secret?"; and Clifford Bruce and Ruth Blair in "The Fourth Estate."

In magnitude and expense the Kellermann production surpasses anything now in preparation by Mr. Fox. While the Fox people are making elaborate claims for the Kellermann picture, they are not allowing it to command their sole attention. In "The Fourth Estate" they claim to have a picture of equal magnitude though vastly different. "The Fourth Estate," written by Joseph Medill Patterson and being produced under the direction of Frank Powell, is a newspaper play. The Fox forces make the boast that it will be the first newspaper picture in which newspaper life is shown with absolute fidelity to facts. Most of the scenes in "The Fourth Estate" are being made at the plant of the Chicago Herald, through the courtesy of the editor, James Keeley.

Company, Now Only Six Months Old, Makes Rapid Growth and Is Compelled to Enlarge Its Headquarters at 1600 Broadway, New York City

ANNOUNCEMENT is made that beginning December 1 the Big Four will occupy the entire sixth floor of the Mecca Building, in which it now is quartered, at 1600 Broadway.

Although only six months old, this organization has advanced with such leaps and bounds that for a long time past its offices on the seventh floor have been inadequate to accommodate the constantly increasing business.

Some time ago, therefore, negotiations were made looking toward a substantial expansion in office space, and the arrangements have just been completed, whereby the floor which has been occupied by the Kriterion Film Corporation will be taken over by the V-L-S-E.

The total area of this space is 12,500 square feet, or one-third more than that which the Big Four now has.

Expert efficiency engineers and architects are now at work devising proper arrangement for the offices of the various executives of the organization, and the entire floor will be remodeled along lines that will insure the smoothest running operation of the home office.

The quarters of the New York exchange and booking department will be greatly enlarged, as a result of this move, and will be so arranged as to facilitate greatly the conduct of business.

Other principals of the organization will likewise enjoy superior working arrangements.

DAL CLAWSON AND W. F. ADLER, CAMERA EXPERTS, JOIN INCE

Los Angeles, Nov. 18.

Dal Clawson and William F. Alder, two of the best known cameramen of the West Coast colony who have gained enviable reputations because of their remarkable photographic effects, have been engaged by Thomas H. Ince, together with Irving Willat, a laboratory specialist, and are now busy at the Ince Kay-Bee studio.

SECOND CASINO COMEDY WITH HARRY VOKES

Following the Casino Star Comedy, "Beauty in Distress," in which Hary Vokes was featured, Sunday, November 14, the Gaumont Company releases a week later on the Mutual Program his second comedy, "The House Party."

story of heredity, romance and humanity in a capable manner. Fourteen episodes of two reels each compose this production.

It is from the pen of Will M. Ritchey and H. M. Horkheimer, who also conceived and wrote "Who Pays?" Ruth Roland and Frank Mayo will be the featured players.

"THE RUN ON PERCY" MAKES MARATHON TOWARDS SUCCESS

"The Run on Percy," the fifth in "The Chronicles of Bloom Center," is among the most amusing of the Selig rural series. The same characters who appeared in the previous chornicles continue their adventures in this comical story, released in regular service on Monday, December 6.

In the story, Percy is given twenty-four hours to marry by an irate uncle. How he fulfills his uncle's wishes and wins his forgiveness incites a riot of merriment.

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

EDITOR'S NOTE.—It is the desire of "Motion Picture News" to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in the management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything, in fact, done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to write us about any new enterprise he has; also to come to us for advice or information along any line. Address: Editor, "Motion Picture News," 220 West Forty-second Street, New York City

THREE SPECIMENS OF THE THEATRE NEWSPAPER OFFER HINTS TO LIVE EXHIBITORS

IN many sections of the country live exhibitors are finding house organs issued in the form of newspapers effective means of advertising.

The newspaper form has many advantages; it permits large display both of theatre ads. and stories; cuts can be placed in the page without "killing" too much space; individual items about plays and players can be headlined attractively, and a vastly greater amount of material can be presented than in the house organ of the magazine style.

There is also another reason for the theatre newspaper which exhibitors would do well to consider: your patrons are nearly all readers of daily or weekly papers; they are accustomed to newspaper "make-up," and in many cases they would probably prefer their picture information in that form. This is a matter which each exhibitor will determine for himself, of course, but the knowledge of what a few of his fellows are doing in this regard may prove useful.

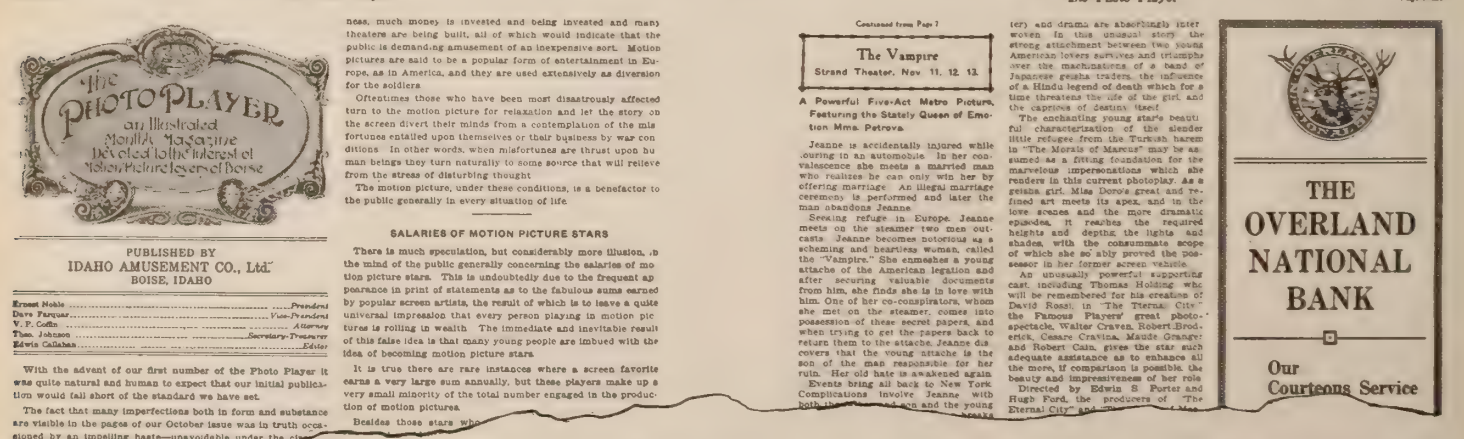
The Movie Fan, published Fridays by the Majestic theatre, Grand Junction, Colo., is a six-column, four-page paper, containing the theatre's weekly program, synopses of pictures, news of players, a chapter of "The Broken Coin," and a few commercial ads. In addition, it has been conducting a fight against closing picture theatres on Sunday, and printing some very telling editorials on that subject. Illustrations (evidently supplied by manufacturers) are used. There is lack of balance in the make-up of the pages, which a little advice from a good printer ought to remedy. The paper is evidently conducted by an enterprising exhibitor. Its circulation is 2,000 weekly and is steadily growing.

We have had occasion before to commend The Duluth Photoplay News, for which Thomas Furniss of the Rex and Lyric theatres is responsible. We repeat: this paper is one of the livest we have seen. It improves with age. The whole paper is built with the "news" idea uppermost. Picture men who are considering issuing a theatre newspaper should send for a copy of it.

Of a different sort is Community News, a weekly published in the interests of the residents of Hamilton, Auburn and Normal Parks, Chicago. It is not strictly a theatre newspaper, but covers the general activities of those suburbs. The Triangle theatre started a small newspaper, The Triangle News, from which the present publication has grown, and the Triangle theatre advertises freely in the new paper, thus linking motion pictures securely to the best interests of the community. This is a phase of motion picture activity that ought to be emphasized on every hand more and more.

ATTRACTIVE ADVERTISING FOR BLUE RIBBON FEATURE

For the current Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature, "The Heights of Hazard," the Vitagraph publicity department has issued an attractive announcement in three parts.



A folder on light cardboard stock shows in color the posters supplied exhibitors for advertising the feature, the 24 sheet, 6 sheet, 3 sheet, 1 sheet, ½ sheet. These posters are representative of typical scenes in the picture and are neatly done. The folder also contains general information about the production, and the list of advertising supplied by the manufacturer.

Inside the folder is a four page circular containing reproductions of electros for use in newspaper ads., well laid out, phrased cleverly and distinctive in appearance.

Finally, there is a special press sheet—one of the best we have seen. It is divided as follows: the story of the picture, biographies of the stars, and two or three human interest tales about the players or incidents that happened in the course of production. The cuts are excellent. Another thing: the pages of the press sheet are arranged so that they may be clipped with ease. About the only criticism we have to offer is this: some of the stories are too long, particularly, the synopses of the plot.

As a whole, this Vitagraph announcement is not only unusual from a typographical standpoint, but its tone is far above that of the "screamers" sometimes sent out by manufacturers.

With the advent of our first number of the Photo Player it was quite natural and human to expect that our initial publication would fall short of the standard we have set.

The fact that many imperfections both in form and substance are visible in the pages of our October issue was in truth occasioned by an impelling haste—unavoidable under the circumstances—in order that ness, much money is invested and being invested and many theaters are being built, all of which would indicate that the public is demanding amusement of an inexpensive sort. Motion pictures are said to be a popular form of entertainment in Europe, as in America, and they are used extensively as diversion for the soldiers.

Oftentimes those who have been most disastrously affected turn to the motion picture for relaxation and let the story on the screen divert their minds from a contemplation of the misfortunes entailed upon themselves or their business by war conditions. In other words, when misfortunes are thrust upon human beings they turn naturally to some source that will relieve from the stress of disturbing thought.

The motion picture, under these conditions, is a benefactor to the public generally in every situation of life.

SALARIES OF MOTION PICTURE STARS

There is much speculation, but considerably more illusion, in the mind of the public generally concerning the salaries of motion picture stars. This is undoubtedly due to the frequent appearance in print of statements as to the fabulous sums earned by popular screen artists, the result of which is to leave a quite universal impression that every person playing in motion pictures is rolling in wealth. The immediate and inevitable result of this false idea is that many young people are imbued with the idea of becoming motion picture stars.

It is true there are rare instances where a screen favorite earns a very large sum annually, but these players make up a very small minority of the total number engaged in the production of motion pictures.

Besides those stars who

The Vampire
Strand Theater, Nov. 11, 12, 13

A Powerful Five-Act Metro Picture, Featuring the Stately Queen of Emotion, Mme. Petrova.

Jeanne is accidentally injured while touring in an automobile. In her convalescence she meets a married man who realizes he can only win her by offering marriage. An illegal marriage ceremony is performed and later the man abandons Jeanne.

Seeking refuge in Europe, Jeanne meets on the steamer two men outcasts. Jeanne becomes notorious as a scheming and heartless woman, called the "Vampire." She enmeshes a young attache of the American legation and after securing valuable documents from him, she finds she is in love with him. One of her co-conspirators, whom she met on the steamer, comes into possession of these secret papers, and when trying to get the papers back to return them to the attache, Jeanne discovers that the young attache is the son of the man responsible for her ruin. Her old hate is awakened again.

Events bring all back to New York. Complications involve Jeanne with both the [illegible] and the young (er) and drama are absorbingly interwoven. In this unusual story the strong attachment between two young American lovers survives and triumphs over the machinations of a band of Japanese geisha traders, the influence of a Hindu legend of death which for a time threatens the life of the girl, and the captives of Destiny itself.

The enchanting young star's beautiful characterization of the slender little refugee from the Turkish harem in "The Morals of Marcus" may be assumed as a fitting foundation for the marvelous impersonations which she renders in this current photoplay. As a geisha girl, Miss Petrova's great and refined art meets its apex, and in the love scenes and the more dramatic episodes. It reaches the required heights and depths, the lights and shades, with the consummate scope of which she so ably proved the possessor in her former screen vehicle.

An unusually powerful supporting cast, including Thomas Holding, who will be remembered for his creation of David Rossi, in "The Eternal City," the Famous Players' great photo-spectacle, Walter Craven, Robert Brodérick, Cesare Cravina, Maude Granger and Robert Cain, gives the star such adequate assistance as to enhance all the more, if comparison is possible, the beauty and impressiveness of her role.

Our Courteous Service

Published By the Idaho Amusement Co., Boise, Idaho, For the Strand, Isis and Comic Theatres, Sixteen Pages, 12 x 9, with Cover. This issue contained the story of Carmen, "Confessions of A Fillum Fiend," by H. H. Van Loan; Review of November Bookings and Miscellaneous Items. The General Idea of the Magazine is Good, but it could be improved by Placing the Schedule of Pictures for the month on the first text page, set in a border and well displayed. More Cuts Should Be Used. We Suggest Also that when Reviews are Quoted from Trade Publications Credit Should Be Given.

AUTO TRAILER, DISPLAYING LITHOS., ADVERTISES THEATRE

L. F. Thomas, a former manager for B. F. Keith theatres in the East, who recently leased the Fairyland theatre at Twenty-fourth and Hoover streets, Los Angeles, has introduced the use of an automobile trailer on which are shown three and six foot lithos.

With his automobile he goes over the entire neighborhood in which his theatre is located. This manner of announcing his program has proven very effective. He has four changes a week, using features six days and regular program one day.

"SAILORS" ADVERTISE "NEAL" FOR NEBRASKA EXHIBITOR

George Atkins, manager of the Besse theatre, South Omaha, Neb., advertised the picture, "Neal of the Navy," recently by hiring men, dressing them in navy costumes and sending them about with hand bills. Then, in the evening, he lined the sailors up along in front of his theatre. It gave several men jobs and made quite a marked profit in the Besse's income from showing the picture.

THE WEEK'S BEST LIVE WIRE STUNT

In conjunction with the publicity department of New Orleans office of Metro, a live wire stunt recently was accomplished by the owners of the new Saenger theatre, Alexandria, La.

Mary Miles Minter, lead in Charles K. Harris' "Always in the Way," the inaugural bill at the Saenger, was born in Mansfield, La., and this fact was used to advantage. For weeks before the showing of the picture, the daily press in Alexandria carried stories about Miss Minter and her birthplace.

As Miss Minter's name off films is Juliet Shelby, and as the Shelby family is well known in Louisiana, particularly in the Alexandria section, the publicity accorded her worked very well indeed. Miss Minter also scored a success in Shreveport, another Louisiana city.

This is a real live wire stunt, and its strength lies in this: Newspapers everywhere are eager for motion picture stories with local angles. Exhibitors ought to watch very carefully for "local ends" in connection with the pictures they are showing or about to show. Ask your exchange to co-operate with you. Any newspaper will print publicity of this kind. It's exactly what the newspaper means when it says it wants "news" about pictures.

The manufacturer's publicity department ought to aid by supplying the exchange with the needed information. For that matter, the manufacturer ought to incorporate it in his publicity. That is, when he knows that such and such a player in a particular release was born in such and such a city or state, he ought to pass the information along to the photoplay editors of the locality in question. They will do the rest, and manufacturer, exhibitor and newspaper will gain thereby.

ALREADY we have pointed out to exhibitors the vital benefits to be gained from co-operation with the newspapers in their city.

If any further argument is needed as to the effectiveness of picture publicity in newspapers, a glance at the reproduction on this page of part of the Philadelphia Evening Ledger's Photoplay Calendar will supply it.

Every Monday The Ledger prints in the form found below the titles of all pictures to be shown for the week at leading theatres. In another column the theatres advertise those features to which they desire to call special attention. But The Ledger's Calendar takes care of every picture, thus furnishing its readers a complete, serviceable guide.

Note also the excellent form used to present this information. The name of the theatre appears in the first column, and straight across the page in a table under each day of the week are shown the titles. Could any arrangement be simpler and more effective?

Take this chart to your newspaper. Point out to the photoplay editor, or the advertising manager, how grateful readers would be for so convenient a guide. You will probably be told that the newspaper, because of the heavy demands upon its columns, cannot afford so much space for a table of this sort. The answer to that is: The table need be printed only once a week, say, Monday morning or Monday afternoon, when the run of news is light. And certainly if a great paper like The Ledger, which covers thoroughly the events of the world, can give the space, other newspapers cannot logically decline to follow in its footsteps.

ST. LOUIS THEATRE PROVIDES DANCE MUSIC FOR PATRONS

The Cinderella theatre, Cherokee and Iowa avenues, St. Louis, provides dance music for its patrons after the show on Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday nights, from 10:30 to 11:30. On Sunday the moving picture performance is continuous from two to ten-thirty p. m.

A. E. Morelock, manager of the Pageant theatre, Delmar and Laurel avenues, St. Louis, has instituted a daily matinee at 3:30 p. m. for the benefit of school children. These special matinees were started when the "Lady MacKenzie's Wild Animal Show" was being run at the Pageant.

NEIGHBORHOOD HOUSE ADVERTISES TIME OF FEATURES

M. S. Kendrick, manager of the Fairmount, Philadelphia, is instituting a departure in the "neighborhood" houses, by advertising the exact time of his main features, something all patrons appreciate.

BRITISH SAILORS AID RED CROSS PROGRAM

Members of the crews of the battleships Newscastle and Rainbow, stationed at Esquimalt, B. C., contributed to the program of a Red Cross entertainment given at the Rex theatre at that place. Moving pictures furnished by Manager Bailey, of the theatre, were shown, and musical selections were given. Proceeds from the four concerts held in October, after deducting expenses, were $173.40.

EXCELLENT SCHEME FOR SECURING EXTENSIVE MAILING LIST

On the occasion of the reopening of the Bijou Theatre at Calgary, which was closed for a short time for alterations, coupons good for admission to the house on opening day were printed in the newspapers.

These coupons, bearing the names and addresses of the parties using them, furnished the house with an extensive mailing list, and made many friends.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

EXCHANGE MANAGERS IN NEW ORLEANS REPORT HEALTHY INCREASE

NEW ORLEANS exchange managers report that there has been a healthy increase in business lately. A cold spell, late in arriving, has struck the city with full force and incidentally it brought business to the motion picture theatres and enlivened other lines of business.

Quite a few local managers are on the road. Howard Gale, manager of the Kleine-Edison office, is visiting Louisiana and Mississippi towns, and reports reaching the city from him indicate he is getting signatures to quite a number of contracts.

Ross Hardenbrook, manager of the Mutual's New Orleans office, has left New Orleans for a visit to Birmingham, Meridian, Montgomery, Mobile and Memphis, in which latter city he will renew old acquaintances. Al Durning, manager of the Greater New York Film Rental Company, is in Jackson, Miss., on a business trip.

Paul L. Ford, president of the Peerless Feature Film Company of New Orleans, is on his way to New York City. He is on a purchasing trip, and will endeavor to secure state rights for features for his offices in New Orleans, Atlanta, Memphis and Tampa.

Returning from a prolonged trip over the Southern territory, J. A. Nicoll, who handles Mutual Masterpictures, declares that conditions have much improved over three months ago, when he last made the rounds.

Mr. Nicoll succeeded in landing Mutual Masterpicture contracts for the following houses: Gem theatre, Little Rock, Ark.; Lyric theatre, Jackson, Tenn.; Bristol theatre, Hot Springs, Ark.; the Opera House, in Jackson, Miss.; the Belvedere, Tuscaloosa, Ala., and a large number of small houses.

Incidentally, Mr. Nicoll is the youngest manager in New Orleans, and despite the fact he has had nine years' experience to his credit, he is still in his twenties.

"Damaged Goods," the special Mutual release, played two weeks at the Columbia theatre in Canal street to big business. The first week men only were admitted, and during the second week women only. The picture cleared $1,400 above expenses.

J. W. Hirsch and A. Newell Boggs, the latter formerly with the Mutual office in Atlanta, Ga., have been added to the staff of the World Film Corporation. They replace S. E. Kiser and Sam Norvell.

Something new in motion picture advertising has been foisted upon the public in New Orleans. In advertising Pathé Gold Rooster plays, Pathé has spared no expense in this city, and has secured one of the most prominent corners in New Orleans, in exclusive St. Charles avenue, at Napoleon, to display the familiar gold rooster by means of an enormous painted billboard, which is electrically lighted at night.

FOX DOMINION OFFICE SIGNS MANY CONTRACTS WITH EXHIBITORS

NUMEROUS Fox contracts are being taken up throughout the Province of Quebec and in the city of Montreal by exhibitors, thus placing the Fox Film Corporation, Limited, immediately on a successful footing. The Imperial, Montreal's leading theatre, starts with "Samson" on November 25, and is followed in turn by several local theatres. The second release is "The Two Orphans," and the fact that this picture was produced in its entirety in Montreal and Quebec has roused the keenest possible interest among exhibitors.

The handsome suite of offices are now in complete running order as is the big exhibition room. Both in size and in number of seats, Mr. Fox's Montreal exhibition room ranks today as one of the largest and most perfectly equipped in the Dominion of Canada. Carey Wilson, Mr. Fox's special foreign agent, has been spending the last week in the city closing up details of business.

Jerome Abrams, special New York representative, who has been scouring the Province, left for New York last week to start for South America, but owing to the postponement of the South American trip, returned to Montreal to put in two more strenuous weeks.

N. H. Spitzer, who spent three or four days in Toronto, has returned to Montreal.

The splendid work done by Mr. Fox's employees in Jamaica on behalf of the Jamaican Aeroplane fund which resulted in a large cash contribution being made solely through the efforts of those employees, created much favorable comment in Montreal and every paper in the city carried a telegraphic account of the affair.

Morris West, formerly manager of the Family Theatre, Montreal, one of the best known film men in the Province, is now on the road for the Fox Film Corporation and reports a great demand for Fox features.

PALS CLUB IN FRISCO TO MOVE

The Pals Club, with which a number of film exchange men and exhibitors of San Francisco are affiliated, is planning to move shortly from the Dunne Building to the Newman-Magnin Building at Stockton and O'Farrell streets, where an entire floor will be taken over.

WASHINGTON (D. C.) FRIENDS OF COL. ANDERSON REGRET HIS DEPARTURE FOR NEW YORK

It was with regret that Washington film circles—in fact the entire territory—saw Col. J. P. Anderson, local manager of the Fox Film Corporation, leave for his position with this same corporation in New York.

Col, Anderson has been a leading spirit in the Washington (D. C.) territory for the past several years, being first associated with Warner's Features, then establishing the New York Film Rental Company exchange, and lastly, being appointed as manager of the Fox Film Corporation when that company decided to establish an exchange in the capital city.

Few exchangemen understand the film conditions in the small towns as Mr. Anderson, and few have taken the trouble to study them.

Col. Anderson is succeeded in the Washington office by one of his own disciples. Carl F. Senning, who has been a roadman for the Fox Corporation since its establishment in that territory, both in connection with the Washington office and the Atlanta.

This has brought Mr. Senning in contact with practically all the southern territory in the East and makes him particularly fitted for the position he holds. He has practically covered the territory from Washington to Key West, and from the Atlantic to Tennessee, western Georgia and the Carolinas.

MILLER TO OPEN EXCHANGE IN PITTSBURGH

H. B. Miller, of Pittsburgh, announces that he will shortly open a new exchange in that city, but the location of the concern and its name have not as yet been decided upon.

Mr. Miller is one of the best-known film men in Pittsburgh and was formerly manager of the Pittsburgh Photoplay Company, and has been out of the managerial business since that company was taken over by the Mutual company several months ago.

He states that the new company will handle big features and single-reel comedies, and that a full service can be supplied all customers after the opening of the exchange.

RUCK JOINS UNIVERSAL FOR CANADA

Gerold Ruck, has severed his connection with the Mutual Film Company in Canada, and is now a special representative of the Canadian Universal Company for Ontario.

The Universal now has two roadmen on the Ontario territory and states that business is very satisfactory.

PARAMOUNT DOUBLES BUSINESS IN FIVE WEEKS IN CRESCENT CITY

Coincident with the arrival of F. F. Creswell, special representative out of the Atlanta (Ga.) office, to assume managership of the Southern Paramount Pictures Corporation's New Orleans office, rumors were heard in film row that the Southern Paramount Pictures Corporation intended to retire from the Crescent City exchange field.

Mr. Creswell, when interviewed by a reporter for Motion Picture News, said the rumors were absurd. He remarked: "Also ridiculous. The New Orleans office of Southern Paramount Pictures Corporation now is doing a splendid business; as a matter of fact, we have more than doubled our business in five weeks."

Announcement at the Southern Paramount's office was to the effect that Mr. Creswell had supplanted E. C. Kirkpatrick as manager. Mr. Kirkpatrick remains, however, as assistant manager.

The latter said: "We have added additional help in the shipping and inspection rooms to take care of increasing business. Geraldine Farrar in 'Carmen,' released through this office, has created a tremendous hit in Louisiana and Mississippi, and all exhibitors are booking the picture to show at a uniform price, twenty-five cents."

SPECIAL SALES TALKS IN "BIG FOUR FAMILY" FOR NOVEMBER 6

The November 6 issue of The Big Four Family, the V-L-S-E house organ, was made into a Special Sales Talk Edition, the prominent feature being specimen sales talks from branch managers who were present at the recent Cincinnati convention.

E. L. Masters, advertising and publicity director, contributed the introductory article, a vigorous, practical discourse on the secret of successful advertising and selling methods as applied to the motion picture business, in general, and V-L-S-E in particular.

With the idea of standardizing the best thoughts and arguments of members of the organization, The Big Four Family will print additional sales talks in subsequent issues.

Motion Picture News is glad to commend this idea as a step toward standardization of the motion picture industry in all its various lines.

FRANK SPURRIER INCREASES CLERICAL FORCE

Frank Spurrier, of the V-L-S-E, Washington, D. C., exchange, has made business so prosperous since his establishment of that office in Washington that his clerical force has been increased. He is also in need of a roadman, but declares he has not time to give this matter the attention of selection.

"Our pictures are advertising themselves so splendidly," he commented, "that I somewhat question the necessity of the expense of a roadman. We are negotiating with one of the large legitimate theatres for the showing of 'The Battle Cry of Peace' at prices that will be about the same as those asked in the same theatre for stage productions."

Mr. Spurrier arranged for the private showing of the Lubin picture, "The Nation's Peril," before the government officials. No adverse criticisms were received and no changes or cuts advised.

HARRY COHEN, METRO, VISITS SAN FRANCISCO

H. J. Cohen, of the Metro interests, and one of the owners of Popular Plays and Players, reached San Francisco this week on business affecting the arrangements there for the distribution of Metro productions.

These productions have been handled in San Francisco in the past by the All Star Features Distributors, but it is understood that a change is impending regarding the booking of future releases.

Mr. Cohen went by way of Portland and Seattle and states that a great increase in the booking of Metro productions has been enjoyed there of late. He plans to spend some time in San Francisco looking over the field, meeting leading exhibitors and visiting the Panama-Pacific International Exposition.

He is greatly impressed with the exposition which honored his company last summer by setting aside a special day in its honor.

PITTSBURGHERS ABLE TO BOOK FEATURES AND PROGRAMS IN SAME OFFICE

With the consolidation of the Quality Film Company of 404 Ferry street, Pittsburgh, Pa., with the United Film Service at 402 Ferry street, there was immediately a rush of business to the new firm, and already the number of clerks has had to be increased.

Max W. Herring and H. A. Lande make a god team, and are both business getters of the highest class, and should make good with the two companies under one head.

The Quality Film Company's office in West Virginia will also come under the control of the consolidation, and will assist exhibitors in that part of the country in getting their films much faster than has been the case in the past.

With the consolidation it is now possible for the exhibitor to book his regular program and his features without having to go to the trouble of going to several exchanges.

AMAZED AT GROWTH OF THE "NEWS"

Nov. 9, 1915.

Motion Picture News,

Gentlemen: The growth of the "News" is amazing. I would just as soon do without booking my show in advance, as to do without the invaluable aid the "News" affords, with its advance news, excellent reviews, schedule release dates and other matters pertinent to an exhibitor's interest.

The "News" is a "whale" of a trade paper.

With wishes for continued success,

WILLIAM BRANDT,

New Albany Theatre, Albany Avenue and St. John's Place, Brooklyn, N. Y.

CITRON PLEASED WITH FOX BOOKINGS IN CALIFORNIA

The rectnt releases of William Fox have been so enthusiastically received in the San Francisco territory that exhibitors have lost no time in completing booking arrangements in towns and districts not already taken. Manager William Citron, of the San Francisco branch, is more than pleased with the manner in which certified checks have come in, and the only source of worry at the present time is to find enough for his traveling staff to do, as there are but few places of importance not represented.

The height of enthusiasm was reached following the release of "Carmen," and in a number of instances exhibitors were not able to care for all who wished to see this production. Crowded houses were the rule at the Empress Theatre during its engagement there, and many regular patrons were disappointed in not being able to gain admission to the house. Manager Sid Grauman planned to show the production for two weeks, and advertised this fact, but was allowed only a week's run.

The Majestic Theatre in the Mission District has been showing Fox features three days a week, but has experienced such a run of business that this has been changed to a four-day run.

Emil Kehrlein, who conducts the Kinema Theatre at Fresno, Cal., one of the finest houses in the San Joaquin Valley, has contracted to show Fox features in the Raisin City.

MULHAUSER SUCCEEDS COHEN

Roadman Mulhauser, formerly with the World Film Corporation, traveling out of Buffalo, N. Y., succeeds Mr. Cohen as manager in Syracuse, N. Y. Mr. Cohen has been promoted to the important position of general sales manager in the western division.

Louis Green, covering the western part of New York State for the Fox Film Corporation, is now covering the same territory for the World Film Corporation.

G. J. German, eastern New York representative for the Fox Film Corporation, has been promoted to manager of the Toronto office.

Mr. George Reifenschneider, of the Exclusive Feature Film Company, has severed his connection and is now covering New York State for the Variety Film.

PHILADELPHIA V-L-S-E EMPLOYES GET SLICES OF BONUS MELON

The force at the V-L-S-E offices is particularly well pleased with the world in general and its own firm in particular just at present, for the profit-sharing checks of the Big Four have but recently been received.

Over eight hundred dollars was distributed as Philadelphia's share of this fund, only four of the employes having been with the firm the required thirteen weeks.

"With not only this splendid arrangement, but all the other valuable cooperation given us," said Mr. Hebrew, "It is a real pleasure to work for the V-L-S-E."

Mr. Hebrew has just written a paper giving hints on salesmanship.

ST. LOUIS BECOMING IMPORTANT EXCHANGE CENTER

St. Louis is again flowering into a motion picture center. At present there are located in this town the branch offices of the following film distributors: Universal, General, Mutual, United, Kriterion, Fox, Paramount, Metro, V-L-S-E, Triangle, Pathé, and Picture Playhouse.

Among the individually owned film distributors are the Swanson-Crawford Film Company, Great Western Film Company, Kellys Features, Yale Features, Interstate Film Company, Clockenbrinck Features, Eagle Film Company, and the Liberty Film Company. Among the equipment concerns, Lears Supply Company, Erker Bros. Equipment Company, and the Amusement Supply Company, are the leaders.

Withal there are about ten other small film exchanges, slide manufacturers, film manufacturers and supply houses. The Exhibitors' League in this town is considered one of the strongest in the country.

TORONTO TO HANDLE WORLD FILMS' CANADIAN BUSINESS

The Canadian rights of all the World Film, Equitable and Paragon features will in the future be handled by the World Features, Ltd., with chief offices at Toronto.

Of World Features, Ltd., H. B. Wright is secretary and treasurer as well as general manager of the corporation. Mr. Wright is an experienced exhibitor and successfully conducted a chain of Canadian motion picture houses called Regent Theatres, Ltd.

He intends instituting a wide advertising campaign on behalf of motion picture exhibitors using World Film features in Canada.

His first release under the new management will be "A Butterfly on the Wheel," with Holbrook Blinn in the lead.

UNION FILM BRANCH IN LOS ANGELES SOLD TO KLOPOT

The Los Angeles branch of the Union Film and Supply Company, owned by O. V. Traggardh, has been sold to Chas. Klopot and Jake Cone, who took possession this week and renamed the establishment the California Comedy and Feature Film Company.

Mr. Klopot has long been identified with various exchanges in Los Angeles, and was formerly manager of the Golden Gate.

He is very well known in this territory as an exhibitor and exchange man. E. H. Emmick, formerly manager of the Golden Gate and All Star Feature Distributers here, it is understood, will be affiliated with this organization, having charge of the feature department which he will own. Mr. Emmick is now in San Francisco.

PURCHASE OF 6 EXCHANGES IN 3 YEARS IS MURPHY'S RECORD

A man named Fred B. Murphy broke into the exchange end of the motion picture business in January, 1912. Now, in a little more than three years' time, he has just bought the Buffalo, Albany and Syracuse exchanges of the United Film Service, adding them to the three he already owned, in Boston, Bangor and Springfield.

Murphy, early in his film career in Boston, was assistant manager of the Mutual exchange. Then he became manager for the Mutual and opened up the Maine territory for that office. After this he became manager of Warner's Features and when the United came into Boston he bought an interest. Recently he bought over the whole exchange.

Murphy, for a while at least, will make his headquarters in Boston. He has recently taken on the Standard service and opened a special feature department for films of four, five and six reels. The first of these is "Oliver Twist," which was produced by the Celebrated Players of England.

The News representative saw the run off of this film, and at the same time had a chat with Sam Moscow, who has been promoted from assistant to Mr. Murphy to the managership of the Boston exchange.

GREAT NORTHERN IN ST. LOUIS HANDLING BIG FEATURES

The Great Western Film Company has opened its new offices at 401 Princess theatre building, St. Louis. It is at present handling state rights on a number of capacity-inducing features, among them being F. O. Nielson's "Guarding Old Glory," in five reels. This concern is at present on the market for some big features.

STOUT MADE VICE-PRESIDENT FRISCO FILM TRADE BOARD

X. K. Stout, who recently succeeded J. R. Crone as manager of the Mutual Film Corporation at San Francisco, has been chosen vice-president of the Film Exchange Board of Trade of San Francisco, an office formerly held by Mr. Crone, who was one of the organizers of this body of film men.

PROHIBITION EXCHANGE FORMED IN PHILADELPHIA

The Prohibition Film Company is the latest exchange to be formed in Philadelphia. P. J. Cropper is president; Steve Talbot, vice-president and general manager; Arthur Graver, secretary, and Jay Emanuel, treasurer.

The offices are at present located at 1734 Ridge avenue. The company has acquired territorial rights to "Prohibition" a six reel melodrama reviewed in Motion Picture News.

The company purposes for the present to confine the showing of "Prohibition" to such churches and institutions that desire to use it as propaganda. As many prominent personages, notably William Jennings Bryan, appear in the film, it was sought for political purposes in the recent local campaign.

All such offers were rejected by the company, who considered it unethical to involve national figures in municipal elections.

TALLY LEAVES GENERAL TO JOIN WORLD FILM FORCES

L. E. Tally, formerly with the General Film Company, has joined the World Film forces, where he will look after the development of new business. Mr. Tally, during the five years he was with the General, held nearly every position in the office, and the experience he gained in that time makes him one of the most thorough film men in St. Louis.

CRONE, MUTUAL MANAGER, GOES TO VOGUE, PRODUCERS

J. R. Crone, in charge of the San Francisco branch of the Mutual Film Corporation for several years, has been made manager of the Vogue Film Company at Los Angeles and left San Francisco a few days ago to assume his new duties.

He has been succeeded as exchange manager by X. K. Stout, a member of the local force for more than a year.

AUTUMN DAYS BRING CHANGES TO KANSAS CITY EXCHANGES

R. C. CROPPER, Universal manager in Kansas City, has opened up for the benefit of his exhibitors, a publicity department that will co-operate in every way with the exhibitor.

H. G. Gill is in active charge of the department. He has working with him on the road Herbert Thatcher, whose duty it is to show the exhibitor how to advertise so as to get the most business. He also works on the newspapers in the towns through which he travels, in an endeavor to have them open moving picture departments.

It is Manager Cropper's idea to have the advertising of the exhibitors changed from the wrong kind to the right kind.

A new face appears in the staff of the V-L-S-E. It is that of A. J. Reed, a former newspaper man who is now working in the publicity department for Manager Pearson.

Roy W. J. Bettis, who has been manager of the Picture Playhouse Film Company in Kansas City for the past few months, has resigned and will handle in that territory, "Silver Threads Among the Gold" and "Neptune's Daughter." He will open an office there in the Ozark Building.

Simon Libros is in Kansas City to appoint a new manager to take the place of Roy W. J. Bettis. Mr. Libros is the district manager for the Picture Playhouse Film Company, and will remain there until such a time as he secures a man for the managership of this office.

The Central Motion Picture Company, controlled by O. D. Rose, has opened in Kansas City at 918 Oak street. The booking is in charge of Max Ward, who formerly was with the Kansas City Feature Film Company. Walter Davdige is on the road.

This new firm handles the old films of the Famous Players in Missouri and the Alco program in Missouri and Kansas.

FILM NEWS FROM FOREIGN PARTS

STAGE SUCCESSES WILL BE PRODUCED IN AUSTRIA BY NATIVE COMPANY

Sydney, N. S. W., Australia, Oct. 23.

MOTION picture manufacturing is in its first stages in Australia, no producing company releasing regularly.

Australian Films, Ltd., which is perhaps the largest firm of this kind in Australia, has produced features, and good ones too, from time to time. The most recent of these is "The Loyal Rebel," in five reels, featuring Reynolds Denniston and several other players known to Australian "legitimate" theatregoers.

The production was in the hands of Alfred Rolfe, who has made somewhat of a reputation in Australia as a director. He is now about to start on another feature for the "A. F., Ltd."

J. C. Williamson, Ltd., the largest theatrical concern in the Southern Hemisphere, was so pleased with the success of its first subject, "Within Our Gates," a war film, that it has equipped a large studio in Melbourne, Vic., to produce stage successes.

The first of these has been completed, "Within the Law," with Muriel Starr as Mary Turner. It has been rumored that Fred Niblo had been starred in one of his famous comedies for the same firm prior to his leaving for America, but no doubt future events will prove the truth of the statement.

Several other firms have put on miscellaneous films lately. John Mathews, an enterprising American, produced a two-reeler featuring the middleweight champion boxer, Les D'Arcy. According to reports, it was a success.

Sydney can boast of a good share of photoplay theatres. In the city proper there are almost thirty, and including suburban areas, about seventy-five.

Some of the features being shown are "Five Nights," "Dancing Girl" (Famous Players); "Gentleman from Mississippi," and "The Marked Woman" (World).

Mutual Masterpictures are very popular, and the same may be said of World Film and Paramount.

The great film, "Birth of a Nation," is being eagerly awaited by followers of the screen dramas, and the formation of the Triangle Corporation points towards the uplifting of the art of motion pictures.

If the Triangle Film Corporation were to secure the rights for one of the large houses in Sydney to show a program similar to that given in the theatres which the companies control in America, I think that it would be successful, both financial and otherwise, as advanced prices were charged on such features as "Quo Vadis," "Cabiria," "Neptune's Daughter" and at present an eight-reel Topical of the Panama Exposition is being shown at the Theatre Royal at prices ranging from two shillings (48 cents) upwards. This is the first time pictures have been exhibited in this theatre, one of the largest in Sydney.

Charlie Chaplin continues to pack the houses.

The Australian Films took films of a number of recruits who are marching from Gilgandra to Sydney, a distance of over 350 miles.

THANHOUSER, LONDON, ISSUING AN ATTRACTIVE HOUSE ORGAN

"Thanhouser Topics," published every four weeks by Thanhouser Films, Ltd., London, is appearing in the form of a twelve page booklet, with covers in brown stock, and filled with a variety of information useful to the English trade.

The new form is much superior to the circular-like advertising formerly issued by the company. In general, the arrangement of material is as follows:

"Battles of a Nation" Makes War for Lasting Peace

American Correspondent Feature, Differing from Films with Scenes Taken at the Front by Story Woven in Its Action, Is Plea Against World Conflict

SCENES FROM "THE BATTLES OF A NATION," LATEST PICTURES FROM EUROPEAN WAR ZONE

A DEPARTURE, it is announced, from the usual method of exhibiting war films will be shown for the first time when "The Battle of a Nation" opens at the Park Theatre on Monday, November 22.

Heretofore innumerable scenes connected with the war have been depicted on the screen, but in a more or less disjointed fashion, there being no attempt at coherence and the orderly arrangement of a sequence of events. The American Correspondent Film Company, Inc., has injected a story into the action of its latest production—not a fictitious story, it is declared, but an actual account of the experiences of one of their camera men, Albert K. Dawson.

The scenario of the new feature is the work of Tom Bret. Mr. Bret has taken various scenes showing Dawson on a tour of inspection in and about Berlin, beginning with Dawson's reception by Ambassador James W. Gerard at the American Embassy, and has then cleverly arranged his selection of scenes from the thousands of feet of film taken by Dawson, so that we follow the armies of the Teutonic powers just as Dawson did on his eventful trip which ultimately landed him in Warsaw on the day the Austro-Hungarian and German forces entered that city.

This feature film bristles with action throughout the entire six reels. It brings one face to face with war as it really is, such as no written account has ever done, and is a picturization of many phases of the gigantic struggle in the East from a vivid presentation of the national and military resources of the Teutonic allies to scenes of actual fighting under fire.

"'The Battles of a Nation,'" said an official of the American Correspondent Film Company a day or two ago, "is something more than an ordinary war picture; it is a gigantic real life photodramatic production, alive with the spirit of conflict, pathetic in its description of the homeless—the women, children and aged victims of the conflict, and powerful in its appeal for peace.

"It is gathered from the war strewn fields of Europe, now bleeding at every pore. It is a tremendous lesson of preparedness for the people of America."

"GUARDING OLD GLORY" TO WAKE UP DEFENSE FEELING IN FRISCO

San Francisco, Nov. 18.

The question of preparedness has been discussed at great length through the medium of the daily press, the Pacific Coast has been overrun a dozen times by hordes of Japanese under arms just as it is now being overrun by the little brown men in a commercial way, and now the moving pictures are to present the matter in a different manner, and possibly in a different light.

The first of the "preparedness" series is "Guarding Old Glory," now being shown at the Arcadia Pavilion, a large structure recently erected on Eddy street.

This production has been made the motif for a great deal of attractive publicity and crowded houses have been the rule since the opening, as it is to be shown for a limited time only. The rights to the film in that territory are controlled by Sol L. Lesser.

Later in the month the Columbia Theatre, one of San Francisco's finest legitimate houses, is to be turned over for a time to moving pictures, the "Battle Cry of Peace" bing the attraction.

The Pacific Coast rights to this have been taken over by the management of the Portola theatre and elaborate plans are being made for its initial presentation there, where it is to be shown for 3 weeks.

MILWAUKEE BALL AFTER YEAR SINCE LAST ONE

After a lapse of a year, Milwaukee is again to have a motion picture ball. This was decided at the last regular meeting of the Milwaukee Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association held at the Plankinton House last week.

A committee consisting of George Fischer, Henry Trinz and Fred Langhenrich have been appointed to handle the arrangements and they have secured the Auditorium for the night of February 12.

Actors' Fighting Spirit Keyed Up by Shot and Drum

Thanhouser Director Pins Faith on Psychological Effect of Stirring Sounds to Get Realistic Action in Hammer-and-Tongs Set-to for "In Name of the Law"

DURING A LULL IN THE FILMING OF "IN THE NAME OF THE LAW" AT THANHOUSER STUDIOS

IMAGINE, if yon can, the Boston road cluttered with automobiles bearing their passengers to the Yale-Princeton football game, and then stretch your imagination and picture a moonshiner's cabin in which two men are furiously fighting, then stretch it a little more and see if you can comprehend hearing soft music, the roll of a kettle drum, the firing of rifles and an occasional toot from a passing machine.

Right here, lest it be taken that the above is the description of a madhouse, it can be mentioned that the Thanhouser studio was back of the moonshiner's cabin. All of which signifies that Thanhouser entertained on Saturday, November 13. The guests were the newspaper folk consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Thornton Fisher, of the New York World; Jim Milligan, of the Billboard; Rose Dugan, of the Motion Picture Mail: Thomas Kennedy, of Motography, Lynde Denig, of the Moving Picture World, and Peter Milne of Motion Picture News.

The cause for that weird conglomeration of above-mentioned events, in particular the combination of the fight and the music, was the result of a new idea of Director Eugene Noland's. Noland believes in the psychological effect of music on the actor, i. e., when the music increases in tempo so does the player.

Consequently Morris Foster and John Lehnberg, the hero and heavy, started to fight to soft music, which grew louder, dragging the action along with it, and finally volleys were fired by the riflemen on the side. The noise grew defeaning, the fight furious.

Noland's belief was realized. He had procured an excellent fight scene with the participants fighting for dear life. Then the music grew soft again and Foster and Gladys Hulette, the feminine lead, embraced after the former had renounced the secret service forever.

This was the climax of the picture "In the Name of the Law," by Clinton H. Stagg, and also the climax of a thoroughly enjoyable party. Leon J. Rubenstein, Thanhouser's energetic publicity representative and scaramouch, entertained the various members of the press when he wasn't on the phone.

In the forenoon, Director Fred Sullivan took a number of scenes in a gorgeous cabaret setting for "Her Last Performance," in which Ethyle Cooke, Hector Dion and Grace de Carleton are playing. Peggy Bourke wasn't starring with the rest, but was noticeably in the foreground.

Director Noland entertained at a pleasant luncheon at the Inn, opposite the studio, after which he staged the thrilling scene. Realism ran rampant, for Lehnberg cut his hand and, as it was discovered afterwards, fractured two ribs; Foster strained a knee tendon, and Miss Hulette put her eye in the way of Foster's fist.

Morgan Thorpe is also in the cast of this picture, which is to be released in three reels, while Otto Brautigan was in charge of the photographic work.

Equitable Establishes Research Bureau for Types

Early and Sterling Picked to Watch Pictures in Theatres to Discover the Right Kind of Talent Likely to Be Available for Casting in Its Own Features

ANOTHER innovation, established this week by the Equitable Motion Picture Corporation, at the suggestion of President Arthur H. Spiegel, was the opening of a research bureau for the purpose of attending motion picture theatres, securing the names of the multitude of types and character portrayers, and listing them for reference and future use in Equitable productions.

Two men are now at work looking at Eastern made pictures, tabulating the names of various players whose work, in some particular part, points to their adaptability to similar roles.

For instance, in Equitable's production of "The Dragon" the cast called for four character women, of four distinct types, yet each of a similar temperament, but with traits and natural characteristics entirely dissimilar.

The work of locating this quartet was a long and arduous one for the casting staff. Had the research bureau been opened two weeks earlier, locating the four women would have been the work of ten minutes on the telephone.

The countenances of various extras with certain individualities are memorized by the two research experts, and when this type is needed, the faces, recalled by the experts, are called from the great crowd of applicants—and thus the work of selecting types is made considerably easier.

Victor Early and Walter H. Sterling are the two men selected to investigate. Mr. Early was for ten years associated with one of the leading dramatic agencies, and Mr. Sterling was, at one time, in charge of stock companies for a prominent New England theatrical manager, and each year cast no less than fourteen companies.

If the research bureau proves of material value, two more men will be put to work within the month. The prospect for this addition is excellent.

UNIVERSAL PICTURES PRESENT

The mightiest, most facinating most remarkable of all
— NATURE PICTURES —

The "NATURE MAN"

or "The Struggle for Existence"

The only picture of its kind ever produced . . .
Without tools, weapons or supplies a man . . .
conquers the forces of Wild Nature . . . . . .

THE biggest novelty of this or many seasons. Only the most daring producer could have originated the idea of a man entering the wild forest and the mountain canyons, without tools, weapons, food or any means of subsistence except his bare hands; there to fight a struggle for existence against hunger, wild animals and the many dangers of the untrod wilds.

Only a genius could have carried out the idea and PRESERVED A RECORD OF THE ACHIEVEMENT FOR POSTERITY through MOVING PICTURES.

The Universal presents this surprising and startling achievement as the greatest of novelties. Not only does the Nature Man win, but how he does it and what he does is all faithfully recorded, including the trapping of wild elk and mountain lion; a hand-to-hand struggle with a bear; the making of a birch canoe and scores of other seemingly impossible feats.

Book this for the crowds it will attract and the profits it will make for you. If released by any other producer it would cost you a prohibitive rental. Released on the Universal Program it can be had at a price that permits you a generous profit. Write or wire your nearest Exchange for booking and release dates. This picture will create a sensation wherever shown.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

MOTHERLY DEVOTION ROLE FOR BETTY NANSEN IN A GREAT NORTHERN FEATURE

BETTY NANSEN plays the leading role in the Great Northern Film Company's latest release entitled "For Her Son." She portrays the part of Mrs. Garvin, the doting mother, who has been shielding her son, Ralph, since his early childhood.

After a short vacation at the parental

SCENE FROM "FOR HER SON" (Great Northern)

home Ralph returns to his studios; in order to liquidate his indebtedness his mother accompanies him to the city so as to raise the necessary amount, but Ralph lavishes both his time and money in the company of Gladys, an actress.

Ralph finally obtains funds from a loan-shark to whom he issues a note, and forges the name of John Grant, his father's friend, as the endorser.

At the expiration of the note, it is presented to Grant, and he honors it, hoping by this means to get Mrs. Garvin, with whom he is enamoured, into his power. She spurns his advances and indignantly leaves him. Soon after her departure Mr. Garvin enters his friend's house, and having learned of his wife's secret visit, he accuses her of infidelity and forbids her his home.

She then supports herself and son. Ralph still continues his relations with Gladys heedless of his mother's pleading to leave her. She finally tells him not to see her until he has made up his mind to reform; that evening when Ralph calls to ask her for more money, she admits him, believing he has reformed.

In an opportune moment Ralph steals some money, but is discovered in the act by his horrified mother, who quickly makes him depart. A maid, thinking burglars have entered, summons the police, but Mrs. Garvin is not prosecuted.

Shortly thereafter the dead body of Ralph is carried in, after the young man had hurled himself in the path of a speeding motor car.

WINNIFRED GREENWOOD IN "STARLIGHT," MUTUAL

"Starlight" and "Across the Sunset Seat" are the titles of two photoplays which are being produced at the American Film Company's studio for release in the Mutual program.

HARD LUCK MEN BREAK DOOR HINGES TO EARN ESSANAY MONEY

Essanay raided Chicago's slum district for five hundred characters for a three-act picture, "The Law's Decree." There were plenty of down-and-outers to be had, but they were not exactly the type.

The story deals with a swindling operation and shows hundreds of poor workmen, who had lost their all in the scheme, storming the offices of the company when its operations were exposed.

Most of the down-and-outers of the regulation type looked like hoboes, and this was not the type wanted. The exact type was finally secured by a visit to the Dawes Hotel, the hostlery established by Charles G. Dawes, the wealthy Chicago banker, in memory of his son.

This is not a charity hotel, but one where men out of employment can get rooms and board for a nominal cost. The ordinary patron is a bona-fide workman, down on his luck. They welcomed the chance to earn a few dollars a day.

The men were perfectly willing to give full service, for they stormed the doors of the swindling office, in the photoplay, which in reality were doors into the studio of Essanay, with such vigor that they were carried off their hinges.

LUBIN'S "RIFT IN THE LUTE" GETS FINISHING TOUCHES

Anthony P. Kelly's four-part feature "The Rift Within the Lute," a story of a country girl's trust for the suave man from the city, which under the direction of Joseph Kaufman, of the Lubin Company, has been in the making for the past three weeks, has received its finishing touches and the stamp of approval have been placed upon it by the directing force.

June Daye plays the leading role of Kate Merry. Inez Buck, formerly of "The Misleading Lady" company, and Craufurd Kent, are in the cast.

VIEWS OF "JANE" AND "THE REFORM CANDIDATE" (Center), MOROSCO AND PALLAS RELEASES FOR DECEMBER ON THE PARAMOUNT PROGRAM

LOOKING AT DRAMATIC MOMENTS IN "THE LABYRINTH," IN WHICH GAIL KANE WILL BE SEEN AS AN EQUITABLE STAR

"THE REFORM CANDIDATE," PALLAS-PARAMOUNT DECEMBER

Closely following its initial release on the Paramount Program "The Gentleman from Indiana," by Booth Tarkington, starring Dustin Farnum, Pallas Pictures announces as its second release "The Reform Candidate," written by Maclyn Arbuckle and Edgar A. Guest, and starring the former. The date is December 16.

"The Reform Candidate" is a screen version of Mr. Arbuckle's former stage success of the same name. As a creator of American types, such as he portrayed in "It's No Laughing Matter," "The Country Chairman," "The Round Up" and other screen and stage plays, Maclyn Arbuckle has become one of this country's popular artists. "The Reform Candidate" he himself wrote in collaboration with Edgar A. Guest, known the country over for his "Breakfast Table Chat" column in the Detroit Free Press.

Supporting the star in this play are Myrtle Stedman, Forrest Stanley, Charles Ruggles, Howard Davies and others, under the direction of Frank Lloyd. The camera work has been entrusted to Fred Dobson, who has taken over 50,000 feet of film up to date for Pallas pictures without a single re-take.

MUSIC IS THEME FOR COMEDY IN DEC. 10 "POKES AND JABBS"

"Pokes and Jabbs," in "Strangled Harmony," the Vim release of December 10, use music as the theme of their comedy. Following their rule that each comedy must have a plot, this release is no exception and, in fact, depends upon its plot for most of its laughs.

The story has to do with Ethel, a young girl who is passionately fond of music. The rich Mr. Jabbs woes her. But she will not have him and his money because he has no music in his soul.

She gives her love to Pokes, a poor violinist. When he sells his violin, he loses her love and she reconciles herself to Jabbs. She improves her mind by reading novels and teaching her ten children music, much to unmusical hubby's disgust.

Pokes yearns for her, but he doesn't know that ofttimes it is better that we do not get what we strive for the most.

In this release Bobbie Burns and Walt Stull appear as Pokes and Jabbs, supported by Ethel Burton and the rest of the Vim funmakers.

SECOND "O'ROURKE" WITH KERRIGAN READY NOV. 29

The second adventure of the J. Warren Kerrigan series, in the new Universal special feature, "The New Adventures of Terrence O'Rourke," will be released the week of November 29, entitled "When a Queen Loved O'Rourke." The story is by Louis Joseph Vance, the scenario by Walter Woods and F. McGrew Willis, and produced under the direction of Otis Turner.

The third and last installment of the "New Adventures of Terrence ORourke" will be followed December 6 with the first installment of "Graft," the new Universal serial, with Hobart Henley and Jane Novak.

"RED CAFE" CLIMAX BASED ON STANFORD WHITE MURDER

Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby are soon to be seen in an emotional drama, "The Red Cafe," written for the Universal stars by Charlotte Wharton Ayers. The punch of this drama consists of a situation in which the heroine gives up her fiance to wed a man whom she pities, only to find that the man she wedded was already married, making her marriage to him illegal.

The denouement of the plot is based upon a situation almost similar to the murder of Stanford White by Harry Thaw.

"JANE," MOROSCO, PARAMOUNT RELEASE FOR DECEMBER 6

As its December 6 release on the Paramount Program, the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company announces a screen adaptation of Charles Frohman's comedy success, "Jane," in which Charlotte Greenwood and Sydney Grant share the stellar honors.

The original play by W. H. Lestocque was produced in the early nineties at the Tremont Theatre, Boston, and was then taken to New York, where it had a record-breaking run at the Madison Square. Charlotte Greenwood portrays in the film, the ludicrous character of Jane originally created by Miss Johnstone Bennett. The play was first produced in London at the Comedy Theatre, December 18, 1890, with Charles Hawtrey as the original Shackelton, Lottie Venne as Jane, and Charles Brookfield as William.

Charlotte Greenwood and her partner, Sydney Grant, have established an enviable reputation among patrons of the big-time vaudeville and musical comedy theatre throughout the country and make their first motion picture appearance in this production.

In the title part of the maid, Miss Greenwood displays her side-splitting antics and is supported by her partner. A supporting cast includes Forrest Stanley, Myrtle Stedman, Howard Davies, Herbert Standing, Syd de Grey and Lydia Yeamans Titus. The play has been staged under the direction of Frank Lloyd.

GLIMPSES OF TWO VITAGRAPH COMEDIES—MR. AND MRS. SIDNEY DREW IN "DIPLOMATIC HENRY"—ANITA STEWART, EARLE WILLIAMS AND ALBERT ROCCARDI IN "THE COUNTS"

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG CAST FOR "CAMILLE," WORLD

World Film, on December 6, will release "Camille" with Clara Kimball Young in the title role. This picture is expected to exceed in beauty and dramatic interest "Trilby."

The story of "Camille" is perhaps not necessary to tell in detail. It is the life history of a beautiful member of the French demi-monde. Miss Young, of course, is the Camille of the picture, which has been directed by Albert Capellani.

It is interesting to tell, that in the picture will be seen as Armand, Paul Capellani, a member of the Comedie Francaise, Paris, who is an officer of the French army.

MISS BRUNETTE, IN SELIG, RELEASED JAN. 10

The Selig Company announces that one of the strongest and most daring photo-dramas of the season will be booked through V-L-S-E, on January 10. Present indications are that the drama will be in five reels. Fritzie Brunette will be the star.

Miss Brunette wears seventeen different gowns during the course of this drama. She enacts the exception role of a drudge who is tempted from the straight and narrow way by the love of finery, and finally becomes a siren and a temptress.

"VALLEY FEUD," MUSTANG DRAMA, SET IN PIONEER DAYS

The private warfare of patriarchal and pioneer days is revived in "The Valley Feud," a Mustang drama, screened by the American company, and offered for release on the regular Mutual Program, November 26.

Anna Little stars as Glory Rogers, the magnanimous heroine of a herdsmen's quarrel in the grazing country. E. Forest Taylor is featured as Joe Boling, the young representative of the opposite faction, and Jack Richardson appears as Gene Galt, Roger's foreman.

MADAME PETROVA IN ANOTHER FEATURE FOR METRO

Mme. Petrova, the Metro star, who has been on tour in the successful play, "The Revolt," is taking advantage of her New York engagement by beginning work on another Metro feature picture, "What will People Say," at the Popular Plays and Players studio, in Fort Lee, N. J. This production will be mounted on an elaborate scale, and Mme. Petrova will be surrounded by a cast including Fritz de Lint, Fraunie Fraunholz, Jean Thomas, John Dudley, William Morse, Geraldine Piers, Willis Enslee, and other stage and screen artists. Miss Thomas is a member of Mme. Petrova's supporting cast in "The Revolt," and Miss Piers has an important role with Ethel Barrymore in the play, "Our Mrs. McChesney," at the Lyceum Theatre.

In order to fill her speaking stage engagement in New York, and answer the call on her services at the Fort Lee studio, Mme. Petrova is having a rather lively time of it.

"What will People Say" is in five parts, and will be produced for the Metro program under the direction of Mme. Blache.

"JOURNAL OF LORD JOHN" EPISODE SHOWN AT "U" CITY

The first episode in the production of the series, "The Journal of Lord John," has been finished and run at the company theatre at Universal City and every one about the plant is congratulating E. J. Le Saint, the producer. In itself, that speaks volumes, for the story is told in four reels and will be followed by other installments, each complete in itself and told in three reels.

An interesting fact in connection with this first episode is the all-star supporting cast that work with Garwood in making it the success it is. The corps of players includes Stella Razeto, Gretchen Lederer, Carmen Phillips, Laura Oakley, Walter and Jay Belasco, Grace Benham, Albert MacQuarrie and Ogden Crane supporting William Garwood.

BARTLETT WRITES DRAMA INSPIRED BY FAMOUS HYMN

Lanier Bartlett, the photoplay author, has written a drama in two reels, "Just As I Am," which was inspired by the famous old hymn of the same name. An all star cast including Wheeler Oakman, Eugenie Besserer, Edith Johnson and Frank Clark add to the impressiveness of this subject.

Colin Campbell, who produced "The Rosary," "The Carpet from Bagdad," "The Sands of Time," etc., directed "Just As I Am."

"A TANGLE IN HEARTS," FROM NOVEMBER 14 TO DECEMBER 5

Owing to an unexpected change in schedule, a "A Tangle in Hearts," which was to be released November 14, was shifted to December 5, in order to allow the two Harry Volkes comedies to be released one after the other. John Daly Murphy has done some of his best light comedy work in this Casino Star Comedy.

THE LATEST PORTRAIT OF EDNA MAYO, THE YOUNG ESSANAY STAR, AND HER POMERANIAN, "FRISKY"

SEVENTH EPISODE OF CENTAUR-STANLEY SERIES READY DEC. 9

The seventh and concluding episode of the Centaur Features, "Stanley in Africa" series, based on the thrilling adventures of the Henry M. Stanley expedition sent by the New York Herald some years ago into Africa to recover Doctor Livingston, the lost missionary, will be released on the Mutual program, December 9.

MARGARET GIBSON AND B. SINGH IN A SCENE FROM "THE ARAB'S VENGEANCE" (Centaur-Mutual)

It is in two reels, as are all of the former releases, and is entitled "Stanley in Darkest Africa."

From exhibitors running the series comes the word that the pictures have proved a big drawing card partly because of the familiarity of motion picture patrons with the stories. At the time of the expedition columns of news matter of the episodes of the trip were related, the effect of which has been reflected to the gain of exhibitors.

Of greatest advantage, however, and of paramount importance in attracting patrons, was the fact that the pictures served to introduce some of the famous Bostock animals in the roles of motion picture players. In this, as well as in all other respects, the series was a rare novelty.

Following this last episode will come Centaur Feature animal pictures of varying nature, each bringing in a full share of the Bostock animals.

HELEN BADGLEY IN THANHOUSER RELEASE ON NOVEMBER 25

"The Baby and the Boss," a two-reel drama produced by the Thanhouser studios for release on the regular Mutual Program, November 23, gives an intimate glimpse into the inside workings of politics in a big city.

The innocent, but determined, little invader of the private office of Dave Hinkey, "the harsh boss," is none other than Helen Badgley, the baby in the double title-role, who seeks influence for Patrolman MacCracklin, Sister Irene's sweetheart.

COURT CHECKS POLICE OPPOSITION TO "NATION" IN NEWARK, N. J.

AN injunction restraining Chief of Police Long or any police official of the city of Newark from interfering with the production of "The Birth of a Nation" in the Newark theatre, Newark, N. J., was signed recently by Vice Chancellor Griffin in Jersey City, N. J., at the request of McCarter and English, of Newark, acting for the Epoch Producing Company, of New York.

Accompanying the injunction is an order directing the city authorities to show cause in Chancery Chambers, Newark, November 23, why it should not be made permanent.

The injunction and order followed Chief Long's announced determination to stop the exhibition of the film in Newark, after a voluntary board of censors, consisting of the president of the police commission and the city attorney, had reported that "showing 'The Birth of a Nation' in Newark would do its citizens no good."

The general indignation and adverse attitude of the local press had its influence on Chief Long. Before the injunction was applied for he announced his willingness to appoint a new board of censors and throw out the report that had already been adopted. Manager Robbins, of the Newark theatre, however, paid no attention to the offer of compromise and lost no time in placing the matter before the courts for adjustment.

The injunction permitted the showing of the film to begin its two weeks' run in Newark as advertised. As the injunction is returnable Tuesday, it is believed that a legal decision by the court will not be given until after the run has been completed. Beginning with the initial performance, Monday afternoon, "The Birth of a Nation" has played to standing room at every show.

But the effort to stop the showing of the film in Newark was not lost on the professional agitators and trouble makers in Elizabeth, where "The Birth of a Nation" is scheduled to begin a three days' run on November 25.

A delegation of colored citizens visited Mayor Victor Mravlag, Thursday, and protested against its exhibition. The mayor dismissed their appeals with scant ceremony and was emphatic in his opinion as to the merits of the picture.

Commenting on the attempts to prevent the showing of "The Birth of a Nation" in Newark and Elizabeth, the Newark News dismisses the subject editorially by characterizing the opposition to the film as "More epidemic than eugenic." Editorially the Elizabeth Evening Journal, under date of November 18, says in part: "The negro who witnesses 'The Birth of a Nation' will find that the condition of his race is fairly portrayed in its relation to that unfortunate time. He should greatly rejoice to remember that out of such conditions of despoilation and demoralization the race emerged as soon as it could be expected and has been climbing steadily since to a place of recognition."

MAY CHANGE VANCOUVER LICENSE LAW

At the regular meeting of the Vancouver City Council last week, Alderman Mahon announced his intention of introducing a motion to amend the present license bylaw so as to enable the city to license the moving picture school now being conducted here by L. D. Macdonald.

If it is found that the city has not the power to exercise supervision over the school, Mr. Mahon intends to seek such such power from the provincial government.

ATTORNEY GENERAL WANTS APPEAL BOARD FROM CENSOR IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

IT was learned for the first time last week that the Hon. W. J. Bowser, Attorney-general for British Columbia, is considering the establishment of an appeal board to pass on the various pictures rejected by the local censor, and that he has already evidenced a desire for a little more sanity in the censor's office.

This welcome news comes as a direct result of the agitation aroused over the rejection of "The Spoilers," under the guidance of George L. Broy and Sam Whitehead, holders of the Canadian rights, and Manager Hector Quagliotti of the Colonial Theatre in Vancouver.

His viewing of "The Spoilers" after its rejection awakened the attorney-general to the fact that the censorship was not being administered in a sensible manner.

In conversation with Mr. Whitehead one day last week, Mr. Bowser asked him his opinion of the wisdom of appointing the appeal board, and Mr. Whitehead enthusiastically favored the idea. Before leaving he was invited by the attorney-general to visit him in Victoria the next week, to discuss the matter.

The importance of this concession to the exhibitors and exchange men of British Columbia cannot be overestimated. Former requests for a board of this source have been entirely fruitless, but it is now generally conceded that the attorney-general was not fully aware of the class of productions which were being condemned by the censor.

Messrs. Broy, Whitehead and Quagliotti are deserving of the thanks of the entire trade in that province.

"The Spoilers" was shown at the Colonial Theatre all last week to packed houses, and all Canadian records for attendance were broken. It was estimated on the last night by those in charge that the attendance for the week would total 23,000, and that receipts would be considerably more than $6,000.

The publicity attendant upon the picture's rejection and its final passing by Attorney-General Bowser, served to create intense interest in it, and it is expected that its second week in Vancouver will be scarcely less brilliant than the present one. After a week at the Variety Theatre in Victoria, the picture returns to the Rex in Vancouver, where W. P. Dewees has booked the feature at the highest rental ever paid for a picture in Canada. The present showing at the Colonial is on a percentage basis.

WILL CARRY SUNDAY CLOSING FIGHT TO TENNESSEE SUPREME COURT

Indicted for operating on Sunday, a verdict of guilty has been returned against the Chattanooga motion picture houses. A nominal fine was imposed in one case.

Using this issue as a test, the litigation will be rushed to the Supreme Court for immediate trial.

The issue in Tennessee is based on a technicality as to the effectiveness of laws restricting such operations on Sunday. The attitude of the state is that Sunday pictures are a nuisance, per se, and that it is not essential to prove that they actually act as such.

The combined picture interests take the attitude that they must be proven as nuisances, and condemn the statute prohibiting the pursuit of regular avocations on Sundays as one of the "blue laws" of the state.

Waiting the action of the Supreme Court the picture houses are closed on Sunday.

GEORGIA TOWN FIXES ADMISSION PRICES

Perhaps one of the most unique incidents of municipal regulation of moving picture interests is that which has been brought to light by W. C. Brandon, Atlanta branch manager of the V-L-S-E at West Point, Ga.

The city government of that community has fixed by statute the maximum admission which an exhibitor of motion pictures may charge.

This maximum is ten cents, and in the event that the exhibitor insists that he cannot show a picture for that price, and he can prove to the city authorities that it has such exceptional merit as to warrant him charging more, he is required to pay the city a sum of fifty dollars for the privilege.

It is said that this ordinance was introduced because up until a short time ago, there had never been any competition in the city.

This caused such a storm of criticism, and so vitally affected the pleasure of the community's inhabitants that the City Council passed an ordinance forbidding such admissions except under the circumstances noted.

KANSAS CENSORS WILL TRY TO STOP SHOWING OF SLIDES

It is expected that the Kansas censors will try to stop the slides that are being shown throughout the state containing arguments against censorship.

These slides have been sent out and are being shown in the theatres of the state in an effort to arouse the candidates for office at the next election to such an extent that the law can be amended.

It is understood the censors will ask S. M. Brewster, attorney-general, to see if the authorities have any right to stop the circulation of the slides.

The censorship law applies only to films and it is hard to see how the attorney-general or any other official can find wherein it can be twisted to apply to slides.

SUNDAY OPENING IN IDAHO TOWN BY TAXPAYERS' PETITION

Idaho Falls has joined the list of progressive Idaho cities, and at a recent meeting of the city council it was decided that the motion picture shows should be allowed to run on Sunday. The action of the council was taken upon a petition presented to the city officials by a majority of the taxpayers.

The matter was discussed both pro and con and when the vote was taken it stood three and three. The mayor cast the deciding vote that the picture shows should operate.

CONNERSVILLE, IND., PICTURELESS ON THE SABBATH

There will be no motion pictures shown on Sunday in Connersville, Ind., according to the order of Mayor Braun.

The mayor says he believes the pictures would do good, but hundreds of church workers oppose him so bitterly that he says he has advised the picture managers not to open their shows on Sunday.

"COUNTRY STORE" MADE TO LOOK LIKE A SHERIFF'S SALE IN MILWAUKEE

"THE COUNTRY STORE," that first aid to a poor theatre manager and outside of souvenirs probably the most frequently used method of reaching the bankruptcy court, has been placed under the ban in Milwaukee by no less a personage than Chief of Police Janssen, and is now a thing of the past.

The abolishment of the country store was brought about under the old raffle and lottery law, and while there is some doubt as to the legality of the chief's application of the law, nevertheless, the motion picture exhibitors, at a special meeting held at the Plankington House recently, voted against the country store and commended the chief for his action.

A committee consisting of George Fischer, William Gross, Jr., Otto Meister, Frank Cook and William Riese, called upon the chief to notify him of the action of the exhibitors and to assure him that the exhibitors will always be back of him in any move for the betterment of the theatre business.

The order abolishing country stores came like a bolt from a clear sky, and many of the exhibitors were caught with an entire stock of goods on hand. Outside of a notification from the patrolman on the beat to inform those exhibitors who were running country stores that they were violating the law, no formal notification was given.

Despite the exhibitors' commendation of the order abolishing country stores, the exhibitors are very much worried over the present puritanical wave that seems to be sweeping Milwaukee, and of which the abolishment of the country store was but another manifestation.

The closing of the country store following close upon the heels of the abolishment of the cabaret and the attempt to close the delicatessen stores on Sunday is, according to those who should know, but a forerunner of a general Sunday closing and the enforcement of many other of the puritanical statutes which are still standing on the books.

BRITISH COLUMBIA CENSOR REPORTS "CUTS" FOR 1914; 631.5 REELS REJECTED

A SYNOPSIS of the British Columbia censor's report for 1914, just made public, is as follows:

"The number of reels of film which passed through the office and secured inspection was approximately 7,500, each reel averaging about 1,000 feet in length. The total number of reels rejected in their entirety as being unsuitable for public exhibition was 631. The percentage of rejections to the total number of reels of film inspected was 8.42 per cent.

"Total rejections of film and reasons therefor as follows: Infidelity, 173 reels; seduction, 65; unnecessary display of United States flags, 50.5; depiction of harlots, 42; generally immoral, 27; unwholesome and evil suggestions, 26; offensive to religious orders, 21.5; white slavery, 21; excessive crime and gun play, 19.5; gruesome and nauseous, 19.5; anti-British, 18; illegitimacy, 14.5; excessive drunkenness, 12; indecent vulgarity, 12.5; excessive gambling, 11; cohabitation and concubinage, 11; burlesqueing of clergy, 9.5; depicting insanity for comedy purposes, 7.5; glorifying criminals, 7; against public policy, 7; featuring adultery, 7; disgusting portrayals of insanity in dramatic productions, 6; bestiality, 5; lewdness of characters, 5; comedies insulting to British race, 5; films slandering Allies in war, 5.5; nauseous snake films, 5; bad example to children, 4; gruesome suicide work, 4; dive scenes, 4; ridicule of temperance movement, 4; general depravity and viciousness, 2.

In addition to rejecting 631.5 reels of film for the foregoing reasons, the censoring staff of the office made several thousands of exclusions of objectionable matter from reels which were approved for use following the removal of the offensive material."

No exact records are kept, it seems, of the number of cuts made, but the tabulation of rejections indicates how trivial must be the objection to a scene to apparently warrant its excision.

DETROIT SUBURBAN MANAGERS ASK FOR SUNDAY OPENING THROUGH REFERENDUM VOTE

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. (really Detroit), theatre managers are circulating petitions that they be allowed to keep open on Sunday. The members of the city council are opposed to it, but the proprietors expect to get enough petitioners to sign to have the question submitted to a referendum vote of the people.

Their plea is that about half of the village's population attends Detroit theatres on Sunday and that these people might just as well be entertained in Highland Park where theatre managers are under just as heavy an expense.

Should the people vote for Sunday shows, a large theatre will be erected in Highland Park, which is a thickly populated part of Detroit, having thousands of beautiful homes as well as many big industries, one of which is the huge plant of the Ford Motor Company.

"DAMAGED GOODS" GETS FAVORABLE DECISION IN INDIANA TOWN

"Damaged Goods" may be shown at the Wells Bijou theatre at Evansville, Ind., according to Mayor Bosse, after he saw the picture at a private showing.

He recommended the excision of one or two scenes in which the idea was only incidental to the plot.

When the drama with Richard Bennett and his company tried to book it for Evansville, Mayor Bosse refused permission to let it be shown.

In and Out of West Coast Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Los Angeles, Nov. 18.

A. W. CALDEWAY has been added to the scenario staff at the Balboa studio. Mr. Caldeway was formerly with the Universal, serving with the Balboa for a time, later in charge of the scenario departments of the Crown City and National Film Corporation.

George A. Smith, in charge of the newspaper serial department of Pathé Exchange, Inc., spent a day at the sudio of the Balboa company at Long Beach while making a trip over the country arranging for the publication of "Who Is Guilty?" series, soon to be released by Pathé, and which is now being made at the Balboa under the direction of Sherwood Macdonald.

W. A. S. Douglass, general publicity director of Pathé Frérès, spent the past week with the Balboa company, aiding the Horkheimer brothers in the production of "Neal of the Navy," which, owing to a series of accidents, has been delayed. The last scenes for the fourteenth and final episode of the serial were made this week

The Balboa company is building a 10 x 18-foot vault, which will be used exclusively for cameras and camera equipment. The supply at the studio is now estimated to be worth five thousand dollars.

Activities of Kalem Companies

Director William Beaudine, of the Kalem Ham Comedy Company, has just finished the filming of the single reel subject which had a working title of "Bud In a Museum." In this, rivalry between two professors whose children have a "case," causes one to steal from a museum a mummy, to be used as a subject for the other's lecture. The children, learning of this, threaten to expose the thief unless consent for their marriage is given. Duncan, as the watchman at the museum, in order to hold his job, takes the place of the stolen mummy. The supporting cast for "Bud" includes Ethel Teare, Charles Inslee, Jack Macdermott, Charles Mulgro, and Gus Leonard.

The Kalem "Stingaree" company, which series is being made under the direction of James Horne, just returned from spending several days at Fresno, where exterior Australian scenes were made.

The Keystone company has added a portrait studio to its plant, which is being installed in the new Keystone office and laboratory building. This department will make all stills for lobby displays and photographs for newspaper cuts. The studio will be located on the top floor of the new five-story building, fitted with electric heat and drying apparatus, all modern equipment, and will be in charge of J. T. Brown, a former Keystone crank turner, who has been identified with several Pacific Coast portrait studios.

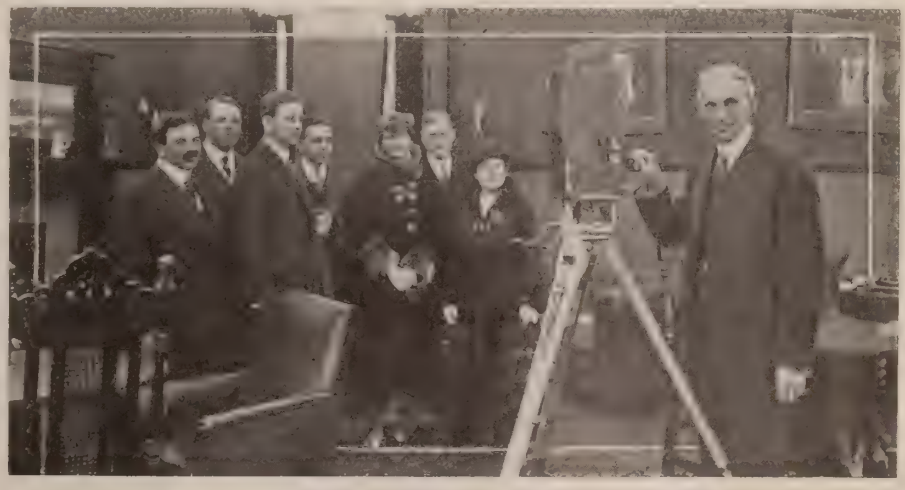
Trial projections of the water scenes made at Santa Cruz Islands by the Universal company, under the direction of Henry Otto, and headed by Ida Schnall, the professional swimmer and diver, show some exceptional stunts performed for the camera. Every member of the company, numbering in all about forty, endured numerous hardships in their efforts to secure exceptional results, and the film shows the success that crowned their efforts. The twenty-five diving beauties figured in many water scenes. For one scene Ida Schnall dived from a high cliff into the ocean, fully one hundred and seventy feet. The filmers came home with sore feet and many blisters as the result of climbing in search for exceptional locations.

De Haven to Direct His Own Subjects

Jay Hunt, employed by the Universal to direct productions in which Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven are featured, has been transferred to the direction of the Big U company, and Mr. De Haven is to direct the subjects in which he appears. This is Mr. De Haven's second experience before the camera. He worked at the Universal several weeks in the summer in the making of "The College Orphan." Harry Weil, late of Pallas studio staff, will be assistant to Mr. De Haven.

"General" Otis Turner, assisted by his technical director, John Coakley, is making preparations for the five-reel subject, entitled "The Pool of Flames," which is an adaptation from another of the Louis Joseph Vance stories in which Terrence O'Rourke is the principal. The scenario is being prepared by F. McGrew Willis.

Director Jacques Jaccard has been presented by members of the Universal Harry Carey Western company, of which Jaccard is director, with a Frontier model Colt revolver of the finest type. It has a pearl handle, blue steel barrel, and is fitted with a hand-carved scabbard and belt. Mr. Jaccard is as proud of this as the little boy with his first red-top boots, and will use it in signaling the players in the making of scenes.



Paris, Babylon, Jerusalem, and several other cities have been reproduced for the screen on two blocks of ground, where hundreds of players are working daily, under the direction of D. W. Griffith, for scenes in his coming big subject, known at the present time as "The Mother and the Law," which is said to be only a working title. In scenes for this, as high as fifteen hundred people will be used at one time. It is understood that famous paintings are being reproduced in life, and will depict the fall of Babylon, the massacre of St. Bartholomew, the crucifixion, and, to take an extra man's word for it, "just about everything in history."

Subway Explosion Is Staged

J. Morley, late of the Western Lubin company, at Coronado, Cal., is now with the Universal.

Director Richard Stanton, during the past week, staged the subway scenes for the third episode of the serial "Graft." A big punch was added to this episode when an explosion occurred which blew up the street over the subway and a seven-passenger automobile and "passengers" dropped through the opening onto the frightened and supposedly injured workmen. Added to this, the subway substructure catches on fire, and as the workmen are escaping, other portions of the support give way. The scenes were made without accidents of any kind, and while the film depicts many being crushed by fallen rocks and debris, not one who took part sustained even so much at a slight hurt.

Special diffusing cloths of a water-proof nature are being placed over all stages at Universal City, which when in position will enable the twenty-four companies to continue work rain or shine during the rainy season. The first rains of the season which fell the early part of this week, practically stopped production work at all studios. The rain was unexpected at this time of the season, and is most frequently referred to as "unusual," a word coined especially for the use of California boosters and native sons.

The Robert Leonard and Ella Hall company of Universal players, who have been at Arrow Head, Cal., for the past several weeks, have completed "The Silent Man of Timber Gulch," which was written and produced by Mr. Leonard. In this, Miss Hall plays the dual role of wife and daughter, the latter presumably about ten or twelve years of age. The atmosphere of this picture is of the nature of an early-day timber camp.

Rawlinson in Story of Philanthropy

Work of a philanthropist forms the basis for a two-reel subject, entitled "What Followed," which features Herbert Rawlinson as a man of wealth, who secures a position in a municipal employment bureau for the purpose of getting in close touch with conditions among the poorer class. There is a pretty romance in this, in which the philanthropist's sweetheart is brought to realize the shallowness of society when her brother is found to be the offender of a poor girl. Agnes Vernon appears as the mistreated stenographer, the leading part opposite Mr. Rawlinson, and the other members of the cast are Dorothy Bebb and Barney Furey.

"The Sword on the Shield" is the title of a cleverly conceived detective story in which the death of a man is proven to be accidental after relatives and friends have been charged with the crime. Rupert Julian is in charge of the direction of this, which is from a scenario by Anthony Caldeway. The entire cast supporting Mr. Julian are Harry D. Southard, Elsie Jane Wilson, J. R. Hope and Hal Cooley.

The Allen Curtis Joker company is filming "Slightly Mistaken," being a series of comedy incidents caused by the maid and the daughter of the household, both being named Susan. Many scenes are taken on the beach and there are two sensational rescues.

Emory Johnson, late of the Liberty Film Company at San Mateo, has been engaged by the Universal company, and is playing the lead to Hobart Bosworth in the filming of the Bret Harte story, "Two Men of Sandy Bar." The cast for this Bosworth subject includes: Frank MacQuarrie, Charles Hickman, William Mong, A. E. Whitting, Jack Curtis, Jean Taylor, Yona Landowska, and Gretchen Lederer. The scenario was prepared by Olga Printzlau, and the direction is in charge of Lloyd B. Carleton. A greater portion of the scenes for this Universal Broadway feature are laid in Western towns.

William F. Russell, leading man for the American Film Company, after spending a day playing the part of a fisher lad hero, recently had the opportunity of proving his ability as a real hero of this character, when the boat in which a company of American players were going home capsized. Charlotte Burton, wearing a heavy fur coat, received aid from Mr. Russell, while other members of the company righted the boat. The additional weight of water-soaked clothing made it dangerous for all to occupy the boat, and Mr. Russell swam to shore, a distance of a quarter of a mile.

Canadian Sets for Sturgeon Feature

Word from the Rollin S. Sturgeon Vitagraph Feature company, at Bear Lake Valley filming "God's Country and The Woman," tells of Canadian sets being built there, including one of a trading post of genuine log houses.

Alva W. Lane has been engaged by the Vitagraph forces as purchasing agent, and is now installing a system to take care of this work.

The Jesse L. Lasky Company has acquired rights on all Mark Twain's works, and are now having a scenario prepared for "Pudd'n Head Wilson," in which Theodore Roberts will appear as star. It is the intention to make up these subjects from time to time, but no definite program has been laid out.

The filming of the Fanny Ward Lasky subject, "The Cheat," has been completed, and also the last scenes for "The Immigrant," the Valeska Suratt subject, directed by George Melford, have been filmed.

In making the court room scenes for "The Cheat," approximately three hundred people were used as an audience, supposed to become enraged at the evidence of a witness whom they attack. Reserves were called to stop the disorder, and it was in this scene that the people were injured.

An overenthusiastic assistant director, in securing people for "The Immigrant," had the aid of the Los Angeles Immigrant Bureau, and secured fifty direct from Russia who could not understand more than six words of English. Director Melford's Russian vocabulary is limited to the pronunciation of Petrograd, and when he took the party on a sea-faring jaunt to San Diego, he had the gay time of his motion picture career. A stoker on the boat was discovered who could speak Russian, and was pressed into service. The paying off scene was one that created a riot, for all the immigrants insisted upon kissing Melford when they received their money, and would have done so had not the crew of the steamer come to his aid.

Kolb and Dill in "Glory"

The K. & D. Company has completed the filming of their first subject, "Glory," from scenario by Aaron Hoffman. This subject features Kolb and Dill, well-known German comedians. It is understood that this organization will not produce further subjects until this is marketed. It is said the plan is that this is to be disposed of by state rights.

Louis J. Cody, who has been playing with Selig companies for the past several weeks, and prior to that time with Thomas H. Ince and Balboa companies, has been placed under contract by Manager Tom Persons as a member of the Selig stock organization.

Bessie Eyton and Thomas Santschi, who in many Salig releases appeared in leading parts, but who have not played in the same subject for almost a year, have been cast to play leads in a three-reel subject, written and to be produced by Colin Campbell. The title of this is "The Supreme Sacrifice." It is a drama of the sea, with Mr. Santschi in the part of a sea captain who returns to his native land to face the humiliation of a wrecked home, his wife having been untrue to him. This causes him to lead a morally degenerate life, and he is finally aided to recover his former position by the aid of a woman of the underworld, played by Miss Eyton.

The Selig Zoo has just received four fully grown ostriches, which have been added to the hundreds of specimens on show here. This is the first flock, covey or herd of ostriches to be purchased by a motion picture company, and if an incubator large enough can be found, Manager Tom Persons expects to have a yard full by spring.

Another Horsley company has taken up the filming of a series of detective stories to be known as "The Adventures of Alan Dare." The stories for these were written by Crane Wilbur, who also plays the name part. The direction is by Robert Bradwell. One of these subjects will be released every other week.

"Stanley" Series Completed

The "Stanley in Darkest Africa" series has been completed, at least for the present, the fifth being "Stanley Among the Voodoo Worshipers," and number six is "Stanley Among the Crocodiles." In the last episode Ena, the trained elephant, performs, giving the story several good punches. In one instance she wraps her trunk around Trainer Teitz and throws him against a tree. Failing to kill him in this method, she tosses him into the fork of a tree, and then when he falls, steps on his head. In number five of this series the two-month-old sons of Helliott and Pluto, the mammoth lions of the Bostock Zoo, make their first appearance before the camera.

The second Horsley comedy company has been organized, with Smythe Addison as director, and Billy Armstrong, late of the Chaplin-Essanay company, leading comedian. Two subjects have been produced by this organization, including "The Defective Detective," and "The Trunk Mystery."

David Horsley is again commuting, having left this week for a few days' stay in New York City. Before departing for New York, Mr. Horsley made all arrangements for the completion of an interior studio to be lighted by electricity. When this is completed it will give the studio twenty thousand square feet of floor space. In addition to this other improvements are being made which include a furniture factory and several large prop rooms. It is the intention of Mr. Horsley to manufacture all furniture needed at the studio, and he has engaged as foreman a furniture factory superintendent who has had considerable experience in making "period" furniture.

Bowman with Horsley as Director

William J. Bowman, who has been director for the Quality company in the making of the four subjects, "The Second in Command," "The Silent Voice," "Pennington's Choice," and "Rosemary," has been engaged by David Horsley to make Centaur features. William Clifford, for three years with the Universal, and playing leading parts in all the above-named subjects, will be leading man for the subjects made under Director Bowman. The company has taken up the filming of "The Terrors of the Fold," a primitive Western subject in which the Bostock trained pumas will appear. The scenario for this is by Theodosia Harris.

U. S. Davis, late of Vitagraph and Universal, is also a new director of the David

WILLIAM GARWOOD

Horsley staff, and is now completing the two-reel subject, "The Arab's Vengeance," with Margaret Gibson and Roy Watson in the principal parts. Scenes for this are laid in Soudan, and the story pertains to an English scientist who penetrates the jungles for specimens, leaving his daughter at an outpost in the care of Arabian servants.

The close to nature subject featuring Joe Knowles, the nature man, made by George W. Lawrence during the summer, has been sold to the Universal company, and will be released at an early date. This subject is of an educational character, and will be very instructive for boy scouts, amateur hunters, and interesting for all classes.

The artificial lighted enclosed studio of the Balboa company at Long Beach, will be completed by the end of the week, and picture making will be taken up in this at once. The lighting devices consist of batteries of twelve overhead, and twelve wall lights of sixty amperes and six thousand watts each, furnished by M. J. Wohl & Co., of Brooklyn.

This is the first coast studio to be equipped with these devices, which are said to give off far less heat and shed a light which is not harmful to the eyes of the players. The installation of the lighting was done under the supervision of E. D. Horkheimer, who prior to engaging in the motion picture industry, was an electrical engineer, a graduate of the technical department of Cornell University.

MEMBER OF LOS ANGELES SMART SET JOINS PALLAS PICTURES

Los Angeles, Nov. 18.

"Duke" Aldis, otherwise known to the Los Angeles smart set as "F. F.," has been engaged as assistant to William D. Taylor, director of Pallas pictures, the new Paramount organization. Aldis was educated at St. Elphin's College, in Kent, England, and then was sent to the continent where he studied at Osnabruck College in Germany and at the College du Cateau in La Cateau, France, a town near Lille and at present held by the Germans.

Before he was nineteen Aldis was on the firing line in the Boer War in South Africa as a member of the South African Constabulary, the crack cavalry regiment of the Cape country. He was presented with the war medals and bars awarded by Queen Victoria and King Edward VII.

FIRST SCENES IN NYMP FILM MADE AT CULVER CITY FINISHED

Los Angeles, Nov. 18.

The first scenes made at the new Culver City studio of the NYMP Corporation were made during the past week under the personal direction of Thomas H. Ince for a coming production in which H. B. Warner will be starred.

More than seven hundred people took part in these scenes, which are laid in the interior of the New York Stock Exchange, which has been built in replica at the studio. The story for this is by C. Gardner Sullivan.

The new studio will not be ready for occupancy until near the first of the year, and it has been found that the cost will be near a quarter million. The buildings are all to be of very substantial construction.

MOUSER RESIGNS AS HEAD OF INDIANAPOLIS LEAGUE

Indianapolis, Nov. 20.

E. M. Mouser, president of the Indianapolis Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, tendered his resignation at a meeting of the association, held Thursday, November 11.

Mr. Mouser, who formerly was proprietor of the Apollo theatre, which he sold recently, resigned as president of the association, as he expects to leave for the West in the near future.

Mr. Mouser has been a most capable and tireless leader, and much credit is due him for the high esteem with which the Indianapolis public views the exhibitors.

A beautiful Masonic charm was presented Mr. Mouser by Dr. J. M. Rhodes, in behalf of the association. J. Huber, formerly vice-president, will fill out the term as president, which expires January 1. R. R. Bair was also elected vice-president to succeed Mr. Huber.

BAGGOT TO BEGIN WORK ON TOLSTOI SUBJECT FOR IMP

King Baggot, the Imp-Universal star, will shortly start work upon a five-reel feature, Tolstoi's "The Living Corpse," the adaptation being made by William H. Lippert.

Eslow Breaks Opposition to "U" Stars at Boston Ball

New England Exchange Manager Shows Officers at Home Office List of Votes in Favor of Presence of Players, and President Laemmle Grants Request

MARY FULLER PAUL PANZER KING BAGGOT VIOLET MERSEREAU

J. E. ESLOW, manager of the New England Universal Film Exchange, Boston, in a recent visit to New York, made representations to President Laemmle in favor of the presence of Universal stars at the annual ball, to be held at the Copley-Plaza Hotel in Boston on December 1, with the result that Mr. Laemmle revoked the recent order forbidding players from the Universal studios to leave their work to attend functions in other cities.

As a result of the efforts made by Mr. Eslow, Mary Fuller, who led the grand march with King Baggot last year, will again head the procession of dancers with her former partner. Other Universal actors and actresses well known to a large following who will also be at the event in Boston are: Paul Panzer, Violet Mersereau, Brinsley Shaw and Betty Gray.

The decision favoring the requests of Manager Eslow was not made until some months had elapsed since his first trip to New York for the special purpose of obtaining the services of the company's players.

So many requests had been made by others for the presence of screen artists at various functions that, if granted, their absence from the studios would interfere seriously with the work of the directors. Hence the edict went out forbidding the junketing of the playerfolk.

Mr. Eslow arrived at the Imp studio just after Julius Stern, the manager, had received orders against "lending" players for social functions.

Refusing the be discouraged by the order, and still believing in the wisdom of the former custom as good business promotion for his company, Mr. Eslow decided to prove to the home office the advantage of allowing its stars to attend film events.

After two months' work, Mr. Eslow was able to present to President Laemmle a tabulated list of votes in favor of the original plan for the Boston ball obtained from every theatre manager taking the Universal service in Mr. Eslow's territory.

Signal Induces Railroad Company to Build Station

Depot, Named After the Producing Concern, Will Be Location for Many Scenes in "The Girl and the Game," the Coming Mutual Railway Serial

Los Angeles, Nov. 18.

THE Signal Film Corporation, which with the Vogue Films, Inc., occupy what is known as the Western Lubin studio at 4560 Pasadena avenue, has induced the Salt Lake Railway Company to place a station on the railroad property at the rear of the studio.

This station is known as Signal, and the building for it from one side represents a regular small town depot, but from the other a motion picture set. It is around this that many scenes of the coming Mutual railroad serial, "The Girl and the Game," by Frank H. Speerman, writer of railroad stories, will be taken.

The station has waiting rooms for men and women, with the station agent and telegraph operators' office in between. At one end is the freight room, and on every side is railroad atmosphere.

Every train that passes will stop at Signal, and thereby is a prop for the filming of the Signal company's serial, which is being made under the direction of J. P. McGowan, who plays the heavy, and features Helen Holmes as the girl, and Leo Maloney as the hero.

Another side of the studio grounds faces Sycamore Grove, a public park of Los Angeles, and along the edge of this has been built a beautiful mansion to be the home of the railroad president. Handsome marble steps from the residence lead out into the park.

The Vogue producing company, under the direction of Charles France, who also appears in the subjects, has completed three subjects, titles of which have not as yet been announced. The stock members of the organization are Russ Powell, late comedian of "The Chocolate Soldier" company; Lillian Brown Leighton, for four years with Selig; William Scott, also late of Selig's, and Priscilla Dean, ingenue. It is the intention to add a second producing company shortly.

George Hutchinson, formerly manager of one of the Chicago Mutual exchanges, has been selected as business manager for the Signal company, and J. R. Crone, formerly manager of the Mutual exchange at San Francisco, is business manager of the Vogue company.

A two-story laboratory building 24 x 40 feet is now in the course of construction. The first floor will be used as a laboratory, and the second for projecting, cutting, assembly and shipping rooms.

A large garage has been built to accommodate the cars of the organization, and the entire studio has been re-equipped with new sets suitable for productions being made. A number of dressing rooms have been built, and a large painting frame and artists' room has been added to the equipment.

KEYSTONE PLAYERS WILL MAKE TOUR FOR PICTURES

Mabel Normand and Roscoe Arbuckle, together with other Keystone players, will shortly leave for an extended tour, during which they will make a series of pictures.

The route includes Salt Lake, Denver, The Garden of the Gods of Colorado, Niagara Falls, Chicago, and other points. In the party will be Ferris Hartman, Al. St. John, cameraman, and others.

MACKENZIE TO START WORK ON "THE PRECIOUS PACKET," PATHE

Donald Mackenzie, the Pathé producer, will soon start work upon "The Precious Packet," adapted from the novel of the same name by Fred Jackson. Lois Meredith, one of the most beautiful of the younger women upon the stage, and Ralph Kellard have already been signed for the picture.

Mr. Mackenzie will have to take his entire company to a Maine lumber camp to spend several weeks there, since many of the scenes are laid amid such surroundings. In the meantime he is anxiously awaiting from correspondents in Maine reports of heavy snowfalls.

JUST TO MAKE TALK

By LONGACRE

AT last the day of specialization is here, or will be as soon as the mechanical changes necessary in the producing end can be accomplished. Within the past two weeks, two of the old established programs have mapped out their plans for the future in a definite way and now know where they are bound and how.

Time was when a releasing company operated its right hand against its left. That is to say, both features and short length dramas were released on the same program. Features and short dramas are necessarily in direct competition with each other. A man who is showing a feature drama does not want to complete his program with a single or two reel feature. He wants a comedy and possibly a news, educational or travel picture for the complement. So the two branches of a company releasing both long and short dramas worked against each other.

The idea of one company releasing both kinds of dramas was very fine—on paper. The idea was to give the exhibitor his choice. The exhibitor, taking his cue from his spectators, chose. Practically without exception, he chose the feature. So the business on the shorter length dramas depreciated materially, for in these days of keen competition no exhibitor is so generous as to take shorter length films out of gratitude for booking a feature. If an exhibitor was so generous he would be untrue to his early training, and besides he wouldn't be an exhibitor for long. He would be on the receiving end of one of those proceedings wherein the sheriff and his little plaster are featured.

Suffice it to say, that the plan of giving both short and long dramas did not work. Now that the fact has been recognized by two big companies it may be taken as a truth.

As soon as possible, the Mutual Film Corporation will distribute a program of features and comedies, retaining, of course, the Mutual Weekly and the "See America First" and "Keeping Up With the Jones" films made by Gaumont. Five reel features will be thrown in the regular service and the Mutual Masterpictures will be retained.

Under the new regime at the General Film Company equally important changes will take place. The output of the manufacturers will be reduced, the standing orders from exchanges will be abolished and the producing companies will specialize, each company producing the kind of pictures for which past records show it to be best fitted.

When the slogan of "fewer pictures and better pictures was first advocated it was the right idea. Now the day of fewer pictures and better pictures is within not more than six weeks of being here. The result will be healthful all around, for this policy can not result but in improvement and, with all the producing companies now making pictures, it is certain that there will be enough to go around and leave some over for the exchange shelves. This move also narrows down competition and may the best man win. May be there's room enough for all anyway.

It now looks pretty certain that two old timers, Edwin S. Porter and William H. Swanson, will be re-united. Years ago Porter, Swanson and Joseph Engel comprised the Rex company with Phillips Smalley and Lois Weber as stars. The Rex later became one of the original companies of the Universal. Then Porter, Engel and Swanson went their ways. Now it is highly probable that Swanson and Porter will get together and make the stereoscopic motion pictures on which Mr. Porter has worked so long, a reality. It is certain that you can't keep a squirrel on the ground, and both Swanson and Porter are too able and ambitious to lie quiescent for long.

Frank Munsey, the publisher, is reported as looking the motion picture field over. The same has been said of William Randolph Hearst for a couple of years.

The fourth annual ball of the Screen Club has come and gone, but the pleasant memories will remain for a long time. Last Saturday night the Gold Room of the Hotel Astor, New York City, housed the real cream of the motion picture art within its four walls. From ten o'clock, or so, until the wee small hours, or more so, the best possible kind of jollity ruled.

The high lights of the ball were many. Naturally the grand march, led by President Billy Quirk and Clara Kimball Young, followed by Harry Meyers and Rosemary Theby, was the main occasion. But the presence of many guests from out of town, and of the executive heads of most of the concerns, large and small, as well as of the players, made the gathering a very significant one.

Three previous balls had been held and, undoubtedly, many more will follow, but the ball of a few days ago was all-sufficient in numbers, atmosphere and jollity.

A vision of Paul Revere making his famous gallop along a road lined with telephone poles has drawn Raymond N. Hyde, formerly art director of the New York Sunday Herald, into motion pictures. It grieved Mr. Hyde's sense of the artistic to see the waste of energy involved in carrying on horseback a message which plainly could be telephoned, and now he has opened offices as a consulting art director, at No. 15 West Thirty-eighth street, New York.

So far as we can learn, Mr. Hyde's profession is unique. He aims to assist directors in creating "atmosphere," in the selection of settings, furniture, pictures and other "props," as well as locations, which will stand the artistic acid test. He expects to be especially valuable in advising on costume and "period" subjects.

Tears, real, sincere, 62-per-cent-salt tears, swept in a freshet through the Fox studios, one day last week, and carried part of the furniture out into the streets of Fort Lee. In a scene for her latest picture, Dorothy Bernard was called upon to weep copiously, and instead of the onion method, Director Apfel kept an orchestra behind the set playing "Silver Threads" and some of Wolfe Gilbert's saddest conceptions. Not only did Miss Bernard succeed in weeping, but soon the director and his assistants, as well as the crowd of extras looking on, were weeping, and for fully half an hour the studio throbbed with sobbing. We are inclined to doubt the report that William Farnum escaped in a canoe, but we know the rest to be absolutely true.

As the result of the fight scenes staged for Thanhouser's coming three reeler, "In the Name of the Law," two of John Lehnberg's stable ribs have seen occasion to float, Morris Foster's knee bends in instead of out and Gladys Hulette wears mourning around one eye. Realism's the thing.

Feminists who find and report that women are discriminated against in business and the professions, certainly have no kick on this motion picture industry, where women have stepped from the ranks of the players to become directors, authors and exhibitors. Among the more conspicuously successful of these is Ouida Bergere, who for a long time has been writing out at the Vitagraph plant. Now she has been selected to make the adaptations of the A. H. Woods stage successes for Pathé; as a greater testimonial to her ability, she will have the selection of the casts for most of the productions. Miss Bergere made her acquaintance with the stage from the wings.

About this time any California producer may be found carrying a large club specially reserved for the persons who think that all is sunshine in California. Any camera man will say that from now until the last of April rain falls two days out of three.

MALCOLM WILLIAMS WEDS FLORENCE REED.

Although visiting stars report that they thoroughly enjoy themselves while being filmed at the Jacksonville, Fla., studio of the Gaumont Company, Malcolm Williams, the popular Broadway star, decided to take no chances.

Hence, he slipped away to Philadelphia a day before he was to start south to do a big picture for Gaumont, and was married to Florence Reed. Their romance developed while they were in pictures together.

Miss Reed is the daughter of the late Roland Reed, America's favorite comedian of a generation ago. She is frequently seen in prominent Broadway productions. Mr. Williams' last appearance on the stage of the Great White Way was in "The Phantom Rival."

BELLE BENNETT SIGNED TO SUPPORT OVEY FOR HORSLEY

Belle Bennett, known for her beauty and her accomplishments as an actress, has been engaged by David Horsley to play important roles in the support of George Ovey in the Cub Comedies, which he is releasing on the Mutual program.

Miss Bennett is the daughter of Billy Bennett, known throughout the country through having traveled at the head of his own theatrical organization for a series of years.

She has been on the stage since childhood, her first public appearance having been made at the age of three in a play put on by her father. Except for school days, Miss Bennett has been on the stage ever since.

Her debut in motion pictures was made with the Lubin company in "The Handicap," which besides being her first appearance came nearly being her last. In a scene taken at the Juarez, Mexico, race track, Miss Bennett was mounted upon a prancing thoroughbred over which she lost control and was heavily thrown. The following month was spent in a hospital.

In 1912 she went with the Universal, remaining there for a year, after which she joined her father's company before going to the Majestic Film Company, with whom she was engaged until recently.

Miss Bennett's first appearance in a Cub Comedy will be noted in one of the early December releases of this brand.

MABEL TALIAFERRO BEFORE CAMERA FOR ROLFE-METRO

Mabel Taliaferro, the star of "Polly of the Circus," and other notable stage productions, who will soon be seen on the screen under the auspices of the Metro Pictures Corporation, will begin work in a few days on the first big feature at the Rolfe Photo Plays, Inc., studio in West Sixty-first street.

The call for Miss Taliaferro's services was first suggested by a scenario that Max Karger, general manager of the Rolfe forces, received. It is an interesting story depicting a phase of life that seemed to breathe Miss Taliaferro in every line of it, a typical Taliaferro role. The feature is yet unnamed.

SCOTT GOES WITH QUALITY AS ASSISTANT DIRECTOR

Virtus R. Scott, who has been a successful director with the Biograph, Famous Players, New York Motion Picture Company, Equitable and other companies, has signed a contract to work under the Metro banner as assistant director to Lionel Belmore, who will direct future Quality-Metro features in which Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne are starred.

Mr. Scott is a former newspaper man, and has had a wide experience in that field. He was born in New York City, and is considered an authority on appropriate and interesting "locations" where exteriors can be photographed.

ELLIS IN CHARGE OF KALEM'S "VENTURES OF MARGUERITE"

Bob Ellis is to assume charge of Kalem's "Ventures of Marguerite" company. In addition to directing this series of single-reel dramas, featuring dainty Marguerite Courtot, Mr. Ellis will enact heavy roles.

HATTIE WILLIAMS WITH MOROSCO FOR SCREEN DEBUT ON PARAMOUNT

Oliver Morosco has obtained the signature of Hattie Williams to appear in motion pictures under the Morosco-Paramount banner.

Hattie Williams has long been a favorite among theatregoers throughout the country. Some of her triumphs, including the characterization of starring roles in such plays as "The Girl From Maxim's," "The Girl From Kay's," "The Rollicking Girl," "Detective Sparkes,' "The Girl From Montmartre" and other metropolitan hits of equal prominence.

As her initial screen subject the producers have secured the rights on Miss Williams' former stage success, "Detective Sparkes," in which she starred at the Garrick theatre, New York City, a few years ago.

It is planned that Miss Williams commence work on her first motion picture at the Morosco studios in Los Angeles on December 18, the subject to be released on the Paramount program at a nearly date following its completion.

KALEM BRINGS OUT BUTTONS FOR "STINGAREE"

"Let your patrons do your advertising," is the idea back of the novel buttons which Kalem company is issuing to aid exhibitors in boosting the $10,000 Hornung series, "Stingaree."

Kalem originated the use of buttons as a publicity aid with "Midnight at Maxim's," the four-reel novelty hit. On that single picture close to two million of the buttons were issued, a figure that Kalem officials never dreamed of reaching when the idea was taken up.

The "Stingaree" button, like its predecessor, the dancing girl of Maxim's is neat and effective. It shows E. W. Hornung's famous character, with the snow-white horse that figures so prominently in the stories. The buttons are being supplied to exhibitors at a price of $4.50 per thousand.

CHAPLIN FILMS FOR SOLDIERS IN THE TRENCHES

Charles Chaplin has been to the front, "somewhere in France," and has served as a target in the British trenches. Of course, he was rapped up in film, but his visit was appreciated much by the troops.

The Essanay Company's London office received an order and sent several reels of Chaplin comedies to France for the entertainment of the entrenched troops. A letter received by the company from an officer in the Sixth Divisional Supply Column of the British Army at the front tells of the reception accorded to the comedian by the British troops. Says the writer:

"I have to thank you for the letter of September 11, forwarded to me today and for the gift of the films.

"It is impossible to make you realize how they were appreciated, and I truly wish you could have heard the cheer that went up when Chaplin appeared on the screen.

"The posters, i. e., cardboard figures of Chaplin, were carried off during the night to the trenches, and have been the subject of great attention by the opposing factions.

"Better Plots" Must Be the Watchword—Horsley

"No Matter How Competent a Company, or What Perfect Facilities a Producer Has, the Story's the Thing," Declares Maker of Centaur Features and Cub Comedies

"THE producer must devote his energies to helping the exhibitor make money; the old proposition where only one side made the money is economically wrong, and cannot last, and the time has come when the producer must not only give the exhibitor a chance to make money, but must give him every possible aid to making it."

This is the creed voiced this week by David Horsley, who is producing the Centaur features and Cub comedies for the Mutual Program. Mr. Horsley is in New York on a flying visit from his Los Angeles studios, to which he will return this week to take up work on his first Mutual masterpicture.

"In the first place, the exhibitor must have features. The solution of his principal troubles is big pictures on the regular program. The public is demanding features, and the exhibitor must supply them; bu the high prices charged by feature exchanges are often prohibitive. These prices are made necessary because the exchanges lack distribution facilities in comparison with the big programs, and the answer seems to be to put the big stuff on the big program.

"The watchword of the producer in the future must be 'better stories.' No matter how competent a company, or what perfect facilities a producer has, the story's the thing. The elements in the production of the good pictures of today, in the order of their relative importance, are: the story; correct casting; competent directing, and photography. Nowadays perfect photography is taken for granted, and the manufacturer can focus his energies on story, casting and direction.

"It is not the big stage star that is making the popularity of the feature. Many an exhibitor wrongly gives the credit for success to some big star, when as a matter of fact, it is the advertising which the booking of the big feature made necessary that filled his house. The lesson the exhibitor must learn from the booking of expensive features is the lesson in advertising.

"Of the big stage stars who have gone into pictures, not more than one in ten has made good; most stage stars are men and women who have fought the new industry for years, are not in sympathy with it and cannot adapt themselves to it, and I am glad to see that the real picture actor and actress are coming into their own.

"The answer to this is the production of the good five-reel picture, with a strong story, and good picture actors. This five-reel policy, through the reduction of proportionate expense, will make better quality possible and a better price more feasible for both exhibitor and manufacturer."

Mr. Horsley's first five-reel feature is now under way, and he is hurrying back to the coast to take charge of the work. Many of the scenes are to be photographed with the new double-exposure camera of his own invention. After the completion of this picture he will begin work on the first masterpicture in which the Bostock animals will be used.

Mary Pickford an Author for McClure at $15,000

Famous Players Star Will Write Series of Articles for His Newspaper Syndicate, and Is Guaranteed a Weekly Circulation of 35,000,000

THE McClure Newspaper Syndicate has obtained the exclusive rights to publish a series of articles by Mary Pickford, the Famous Players Film Company's star, for which she received $15,000. The publishers guarantee the little star a circulation of 35,000,000 a week, which is said to be the widest publicity that has ever been afforded any theatrical or motion picture player.

So singular is the occurrence in the annals of motion picture publicity that the opinion of Clinton T. Brainard, president of the McClure Syndicate, which disseminates news items and stories throughout the entire world, will undoubtedly prove interesting.

At a dinner in Washington the other evening in announcing that he had completed the arrangements with Miss Pickford. Mr. Brainard made the following interesting remarks:

"I know of no other artist in the world to whom I would be willing to pay for articles of this kind.

"In most cases, actresses and musicians pay handsomely for publicity of this kind, but in the case of Mary Pickford it is different."

When asked by a member of the dinner party if the newspapers would be willing to pay for an article of this kind, he replied that on the day he first announced the story, he received sixty-one telegrams asking for an option on it.

"The Pickford story at the present time," he continued, "promises to be a far better seller for the syndicate than those of Roosevelt, Taft, Bryan or President Wilson. And then we wonder and talk of popularity!"

A further tribute to the international popularity of Mary Pickford was received in the notification just received by the star from London of the winning of a popularity contest in England. Pictures and the Picturegoer, one of the British amusement publications, reported that in its recent competition Miss Pickford received 250,245 votes, surpassing her nearest competitor by over 90,000 votes.

GLADYS HULETTE IN A CHARMING POSE FROM "IN THE NAME OF THE LAW," A THREE REEL THANHOUSER DRAMA OF LIFE AMONG THE MOONSHINERS

JOHN JARROTT LEAVES SPEAKING STAGE TO JOIN KLEINE

Among a number of well known members of the theatrical profession in New York City added to the working forces at the George Kleine studios last week was John Jarrott, long and familiarly known to the theatre-going public of two continents. Jarrott has a long list of successes to his credit, among which are the star parts in the "Follies Bergere" and his own production of "Come On," which enjoyed a long run quite recently at the Empire Theatre.

REPORTER JOINS ASSOCIATED PUBLICITY STAFF

The Associated has signed Sammy Goldberg, formerly with one of the theatrical weeklies, to play general utility on their office team.

Sammy, who is very ambitious to become a journalist, is a cub reporter evenings on the Globe and is working under the personal supervision of Irving J. Barsky, the director of publicity for the Associated.

Marie Empress, the continental comedienne, who has been appearing in Metro feature productions, is a boni-fide dog fancier and carried away the first prize at the Toy Dog Club exhibition at the Hotel McAlpin where the best toy dogs in the country were recently shown.

She won the blue ribbon with her entry Baby, a Manchester black and tan, that is no bigger than a rat in a "close-up." She weighs less than two pounds and is said to be the smallest of her breed in America. Last season Miss Empress made a clean sweep with Baby and her beautiful King Charles spaniel, Ashton Shelia.

With the latter named dog she took the blue ribbon and gold cup at the Madison Square Garden show, and again at the Brighton Beach show. The Kennel Club presented her with a five dollar gold piece which she has had engraved on one side, and it now hangs around Baby's neck.

Miss Empress was featured with Edward Bremen in "The Woman Pays," a Rolfe-Metro feature just completed, in which Valli Valli is starred.

"Service Beyond the Films," Is Slogan of Mutual

Company Launches $300,000 Advertising Campaign to Help the Exhibitor, and Trade Papers, Dailies and Billboards Will Constitute Media to Get Results

THE Mutual Film Corporation, in execution of President Freuler's policy of "service beyond the films," has launched a $300,000 advertising campaign to help the exhibitors.

The media of this campaign are the trade papers of the industry, the newspapers and the billboards.

This step is a part of the new Mutual policy which found its expression in Mr. Freuler's announcement of the program. The story of this program, with its Broadway stars and box office features, in the regular program at no extra rental charge to the exhibitor, has been told to the exhibitor. Now an effort is being made to tell it to the whole public.

"The product has been made particularly worth advertising, worth telling the people about. The Mutual Film Corporation has set out to tell them. But the people must see the pictures in the exhibitor's theatre," said President Freuler.

"It remains for the exhibitor to tie up his house with this great campaign, by his own individual advertising, letting the people know that his house has Mutual pictures and that they may be seen there regularly.

"It will be recalled that my earliest announcement was the $8,000,000 Mutual program—a vast expenditure represented by the year's contracts for films on the Mutual program.

"Then along came the Mutual's announcement of extensions of its service to exhibitors requiring an increase in the number of branch offices, with a total today of sixty-eight in the United States and Canada. Along with this development of the 'service beyond the films' came effective reorganization of the Mutual's advertising and publicity departments, readjustments calculated to give the public and the exhibitor more direct attention, more of the news of the Mutual's wares and its business.

"Out of this conception of 'service beyond the films' has grown a system of advertising helps for exhibitors, special press sheets and ad. bulletins carrying suggestions for exploitation by the exhibitor of every reel on the program and every Masterpicture.

"Along with this has come the rehabilitation of Reel Life, the Mutual's magazine, a service publication to the exhibitor, a publication concerned only with the messages of the Mutual Film Corporation and the welfare of Mutual exhibitors throughout the country.

"The whole advertising policy has been shaped about the big words Mutual Program. The Mutual poster department has had a rebirth, with vast improvements in the quality and power of the paper, from one sheet to twenty-four—all to hammer in that sense of quality conveyed by the two words, Mutual Program.

"The development of a new period in exhibitor advertising is now at hand, and the Mutual's new advertising campaign is pointing the way. It used to be sufficient for the exhibitor to get his film, a few one-sheets and price sign. He put up the posters in his lobby, hung up the price sign and turned on the pictures. Anybody who came by might find out what was going to the screen by looking over the lobby or more surely by going inside.

"Now the aggressive, successful exhibitors are reaching out to carry their message beyond the confines of the theatre and its lobby. If a lobby display is worth while, why not add a whole flock of lobbies by means of the billboards? If a house program is worth while, why not let everybody read it just as well as the patrons into whose hands it is casually dropped? The advertising columns of newspapers circulated in the exhibitor's territory make it easy.

"The Mutual Film Corporation is putting in the exhibitor's hands all that is necessary to do this with, except the initiative, which he must supply for himself."

Anna Held in "Madame La Presidente" for Morosco

Play, by Maurice Hennequin and Pierre Veber, an International Success and Later Seen on Broadway with Fanny Ward, Scheduled for Paramount, February

CLOSELY following the arrival of Anna Held in Los Angeles to appear before the motion picture camera at the Oliver Morosco studios, the Eastern offices of this Paramount organization announced its acquisition of the screen rights on the international stage success, "Madame La Presidente," in which production the famous star will make her film debut.

On arriving in Los Angeles, where she was given a royal reception by representatives of the daily papers, trade journals, and the Morosco Company, the French comedienne appeared a bit upset due to an accident which befell her private car a half-hour's ride out of Los Angeles, when a huge hook of a freight derrick caught the back of Miss Held's car and damaged it slightly.

The noise of falling glass "nearly took her heart away," the star confessed and she later told of having advised one of the stage crew to send her heart to the Morosco studio if it was found. According to rumor, however, the heart of Anna Held has already been captured by a Russian Prince who presented her with a magnificent string of pearls just prior to her departure to the West Coast.

"Madame La Presidente," by Maurice Hennequin and Pierre Veber, has proved itself a big international success, having toured the principal Continental cities of Europe, including Paris, Berlin, Vienna, and Milan. In this country it was first produced on Broadway at the Garrick theatre, where it played to record business for over a year, with Fannie Ward in the title role.

For days before Miss Held's arrival at the studios, carpenters, painters and decorators had been busy on fitting out a special dressing room for the noted star. Their efforts were not in vain, for her dressing room proved of chief interest to the petite comedienne on inspecting the studios for the first time.

A bungalow had been leased for Miss Held during her stay in Los Angeles and work on "Madame La Presidente" has already been started. The production is scheduled for release the early part of February on the Paramount Program.

CLEO RIDGELY AND WALLACE REID CO-STARS IN A LASKY

Cleo Ridgely and Wallace Reid, it is announced by the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, will appear as co-stars in the

CLEO RIDGLEY WALLACE REID

Lasky production, "The Golden Chance," to be released through Paramount.

Both Miss Ridgely and Mr. Reid have been members of the Lasky Company for some months. She has played in numerous Lasky productions more recently, "The Puppet Crown," "The Fighting Hope," "The Marriage of Kitty," "The Secret Orchard," and "The Chorus Lady."

PUBLIC SERVICE FILM PUSHES "GERMAN WAR PICTURES"

The Public Service Film Company has decided to fill what it believes to be a long felt want in the exhibiting end of the industry. Headed by Joseph Leblang, it is the intention of the company to accept and exploit important features for owners who are not familiar with the business. The success achieved by the Public Service in its exploitation of the Chicago Tribune's German War Pictures bespeaks for the patrons of this company able representation.

"NATION" TO BE SHOWN IN WINDSOR, ONTARIO

It has been stated on good authority that owing to the condemnation of the "Birth of a Nation" in the State of Michigan that this big feature film will be shown in the town of Windsor, sometime in the early part of December.

It is believed that negotiations have been completed with the proprietor of the Windsor Theatre in the above town. This house seats 800 and the regular scale of prices will be maintained.

TIPPETT, UNIVERSAL ENGLISH HEAD, ARRIVES IN NEW YORK

J. D. Tippett, manager of the Trans-Atlantic Film Company, Ltd., London, handling the output of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company in England, arrives in New York on the Lapland, Tuesday, November 23. Joe Brandt meets him at Quarantine and will escort Mr. Tippett to the Universal headquarters.

Screen Ball Attended by Many Out of Town Visitors

Exchangemen from Pacific Coast and Representatives from Intermediary Points, as Well as Hosts of Players and Film Men from New York and Vicinity at Function

COUCHED in terms slightly more dignified, the Screen Club bade all-comers to shed their cares and forget the morning after at the fourth annual ball of the organization, held Saturday, November 20, in the Gold Room of the Hotel Astor, New York City.

Practically every noted member and many more in less repute of the film profession in New York and Philadelphia, Flatbush and the Bronx, attended the affair. There were gaps here and there in the galaxy of eastern film stars, for such persons as Mary Fuller, Marguerite Clark, Lillian Walker, Dorothy Kelly and Francis X. Bushman were nowhere to be found between 8 p. m. and 8 a. m., but on the whole the Astor Gold Room held a greater array of motion picture talent on November 20 than ever before.

In character, the Fourth Screen Club Ball was marked by the introduction of many new faces since the affair of a year ago. Former stars of the speaking stage gladly grasped the opportunity offered by the ball to rank themselves with the stars of the screen, as witness the presence of Douglas Fairbanks, Hazel Dawn, Billie Reeves, Mary Miles Minter, Percy Helton and Emmy Wehlen.

A year ago these players were yet to prove their ability on the screen, but a single year has accomplished much, swelling the ranks of the picture stars with a dozen or more artists from the legitimate.

The grand march, without which no Screen Club ball would be complete, was participated in by as many as the floor space would allow. It was led by Clara Kimball Young and Billy Quirk, recently elected president of the club, while Rosemary Theby and Harry Myers came next in line. Somewhere down toward the center of the winding line were Anita Stewart and Sam Spedon, who had forgotten the fact that they should have been up with the very first.

Under the guidance of King Baggot, Ben Wilson, Paul Panzer, Harry Spingler, Arthur Ashley and others, the marchers formed many weird patterns on the large floor of the ball room, while those who refrained from trudging this two-mile tramp round and round the room, cluttered the boxes and foyers applauding.

The usual complement to the gay time at the Hotel Astor was furnished in the shape of breakfast at the Screen Club, where members and guests journeyed when the stalwart musicians who furnished the inspiration for the dancing began to weaken after their all-night performance.

Here everybody was entertained by sundry talent of the film profession. Harry Benham honored with a song and Sidney Bracy with an appreciated piano selection.

Besides the many players that swarmed the Gold Room throughout the evening, the executive heads of the various companies were ever in evidence. Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Zukor, Daniel Frohman, David Horsley, Carl Laemmle, Lewis J. Selznick, Siegmund Lubin, W. T. Rock, P. A. Powers, Nicholas Power, Julius Stern, B. A. Bush, Richard A. Rowland, Julius Bernstein, P. D. Cochrane, J. C. Graham, Ed Roskam, Al Kaufman, Hugh Ford, Julian Solomon and Harry Raver were among those present, while of course an army of wide-awake press agents of various concerns was prominent in the festivities.

Most prominent of the players and directors were Mary Pickford, Pauline Frederick, Hazel Dawn, James Kirkwood, Sidney Olcott and James Durkin (Famous Players), Anita Stewart, James Morrison, Leah Baird, Paul Scardon, Wally Van, Nitra Frazer, George Baker, Theodore Marston, Tefft Johnson, Mrs. Nellie Anderson, Alice Lake and Josephine Earle (Vitagraph), Florence La Badie, Louise Bates, Harris Gordon, Mignon Anderson and Morris Foster (Thanhouser), King Baggot, Rosemary Theby, Harry Myers, Harry Spingler, Paul Panzer, Ben Wilson, Violet Mercereau, Brinsley Shaw, Stuart Paton, Betty Gary, Frank Smith, Edna Hunter and Lucille Henderson (Universal), Ormi Hawley, Earl Metcalfe, Billie Reeves and Louise Huff (Lubin), Clara Kimball Young, John Hines, Chester Barnett, Vivian Martin and Holbrook Blinn (World Film), Douglas Fairbanks (Triangle), Edward Earle, Mabel Trunelle, Viola Dana, Augustus Phillips, John Collins (Edison), Mary Miles Minter, Edward Brennan, Edwin Carew, Charles Horan, Edgar Jones, Jack Noble (Metro).

The box holders were Frank Powell, Vitagraph, New York Motion Picture Company, Edwin Carew, Nicholas Power, Tom Terris, Billy Quirk, James Kirkwood, William Farnum, Pathe, Famous Players, King Baggot, Ben Wilson, Harry Raver, Solax, World Film, Equitable, Clara Kimball Young, L. J. Selznick, Metro, Marshall Farnum, Benjamin Goetz, George Terwilliger, Hugh Hofman, Thanhouser, Edison, J. C. Graham, Ed. Roskam, William Fox, Gaumont, Harry Myers, Louis Hall, A. P. Kelly and Thomas G. Wiley.

Dancing and reviving old times were the featured events of the evening, and everyone there played a stellar part in the performances. The ball was also notable for the large number of out-of-town people who attended. Exchange men from the Pacific coast, representatives from other cities, not to forget the Lubin faction from Philadelphia.

Holy Gee! But Ain't Travers Just Born to Hard Luck?

Essanay Lead Got Knee Shot Off in Boer War, Then Has Rheumatism in What's Left of It, and While Playing in "Undertow" Breaks an Arm

RICHARD C. TRAVERS, an Essanay leading man, is now able to appear in pictures again, after completing a cycle of misfortunes. It all started when Mr. Travers, who was playing the part of a tramp, in Essanay's three act drama, "The Undertow," attempted to jump a freight train in a scene in the play.

Hurled to the ground when the engineer's hat blew in his face, he sustained a badly wrenched knee, a long cut on his arm and a broken hand. Barely rallying from this he was threatened with typhoid fever. Then rheumatism set in his knee, part of which had been shot away in the Boer war. This yielded to treatment and now Travers is wondering what next.

Mr. Travers is known for his daring, a man willing to take all kinds of risks and enjoy them. He probably has been in more accidents than any other photoplayer. Born in the Hudson Bay district, at a trading post far from any city, he never even saw a white woman, except his mother, until he was ten years old.

Six feet tall and of rugged physique, his out door life inured him to the hardships of his soldier-of-fortune life of after years. He fought in both the Spanish-American and the Boer war, in the latter losing a section of his knee from shrapnel. This was replaced with silver and apparently is as good as ever.

Mr. Travers studied to become a physician, but gave up practice to go on the stage. He played in stock in Toronto and Montreal, Canada, as well as in the United States. Five years ago he began his work in motion pictures by driving a racing auto in a picture.

Later he came to Essanay and quickly made his way to leading man. He has starred in such pictures as "The White Sister," with Viola Allen, "The Palace of the King," "The Man Trail" and "The Snow Burner."

ETHEL CLAYTON NOT TO LEAVE LUBIN

Some over zealous press agent has caused it to be printed that Ethel Clayton has severed her connection with the Lubin Company and was to begin work immediately with a western production company.

The Lubin Company hasten to deny such unfounded rumors and to assure exhibitors and the many friends of Miss Clayton that not only will she remain with the Lubin Company but that she has begun work on a new five-reel feature V-L-S-E Lubin release "Dollars and Cents," from the story by Albert Payson Terhune, in which she will be starred. The play will be produced under the direction of Joseph Kaufman

EDITH LUCKETT, WITH COHAN AND OLCOTT, JOINS RAVER

The latest addition to the Raver Company is Edith Luckett, who will interpret the role of Estelle, the mysterious girl in the story of "The Other Girl," by Augustus Thomas.

Born in Washington, the new Raver star's history is one of the theatre, even from her early days. In the Capital, the actress and her family lived a few blocks from the Columbia theatre, which she frequented until she knew every member of the house staff personally.

After her education had been provided for, Miss Luckett essayed local roles until she attracted the attention of George M. Cohan, who in 1912 selected her as one of the cast of "Broadway Jones," where she interpreted the leading female character.

EDITH LUCKETT

Chauncey Olcott next selected her for his companies in his two well-known vehicles, "Mother Machree" and "The Heart of Paddy Whack," and invested her with the character of Mona Cairn, the heroine of the play.

Again she starred in the Porter Emerson Browne production of "Wild Oats." During the season of 1913, as well as last year, she filled engagements as leading lady of the Majestic Theatre Stock Company at Pittsfield, Mass.

EDITH STOREY A BALLET DANCER IN "PRICE FOR FOLLY"

In "A Price for Folly," a five-part dramatic screen story, announced as the first Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature release for December, Edith Storey plays the part of a ballet dancer.

As is usual when this Vitagraph star is to appear in an unusual and novel dress, she designs the costume to be worn, and in this instance exercised more than usual care in drawing designs for the creation of the ballet costume and in selecting material for the making.

The ballet costume in which she is seen in "A Price for Folly" is a creation from a composite design elaborated from more than a hundred costumes collected and tabulated by her from those worn by celebrated ballet dancers of the principal musical centers of the world.

In "A Price for Folly" Miss Storey, Antonio Moreno and Harry Morey play the leading roles in a list of characters enacted by such players as Louise Beaudet, Charles Kent, Ethel Corcoran and Arthur Cozine. The scenes of the story are laid in France.

KATHLYN WILLIAMS IN SELIG'S "COQUETTE'S AWAKENING"

Will M. Hough never wrote a better story than "The Coquettes's Awakening," a Selig Special in two reels, released Monday, December 13. Kathlyn Williams takes the leading role and is supported by a carefully selected company of Selig players.

The heartless coquette regards all men as fish in her net. She falls asleep and dreams that an admirer has committed suicide for love of her. Father Time turns back the hours and shows her the loves of past years including prehistoric man, Antony and Cleopatra, and Romeo and Juliet.

When she awakens and finds it all a dream, she has nevertheless been taught a lesson and when her admirer returns she receives him with open arms.

STELLA HAMMERSTEIN IN "ACE OF DEATH," GAUMONT

Stella Hammerstein, daughter of Oscar Hammerstein, the grand opera impresario, has gone to Jacksonville, Fla., to appear in a Gaumont production, "The Ace of Death."

STELLA HAMMERSTEIN

This photodrama is a multiple-reel Rialto Star feature on the Mutual Program, and will be released on the Mutual Program late in December.

ARTIST FISHER PICKS LUCY COTTON AS BEAUTY TYPE

Lucy Cotton, who assumes the ingenue role in "Life Without Soul," the initial release of the Ocean Film Corporation, was chosen by Harrison Fisher, the artist, as the true type of southern beauty.

Miss Coton, who made a hit in the original company of "Polygamy," starred in Louisa Alcott's play "Little Women."

LUCY COTTON

Miss Cotton hails from Houston, Texas, and is popularly known in the south.

While at Jacksonville, Florida, she was the guest of the city officials, and was presented with a silk dress patterned after the period of '65.

"HOW MOLLY MADE GOOD" IS EXPLAINED BY ITS RECEPTION ALL OVER

"How Molly Made Good," the twelve-star feature film which the Kulee Features, Inc., released for New York showing early in November, has started on a record-breaking tour of all the picture houses of the country. For three weeks now the film has been playing in the picture theatres of New York and Brooklyn, and has been meeting with success.

In the meantime the Kulee Features, Inc., is receiving constant calls for showing from picture managers all through the country. The General Feature Film Company of Chicago has taken over the rights for Illinois booking.

Early in November, "How Molly Made Good" played a record week in Philadelphia at the Metropolitan. With this initial Philadelphia showing, the picture started through the State of Pennsylvania, where it is meeting with gratifying recognition.

Meantime the Kulee Features, Inc., is signing the picture for extensive showing through the country. Negotiations are already pending for several states.

BRADBURRY, COMEDIAN WITH SELIG, PLAYED WITH NEARLY ALL BIG STARS

James Bradburry, the comedian, who has joined the Selig Polyscope Company, has a stage experience extending over thirty-four years. During his first three years in the spoken drama, he was employed at the Boston Museum in stock and was surrounded by the best players of the time and was given an opportunity to play with such stars as Edwin Booth, Dion Boucicault, William Warren, John Gilbert, Lester Wallack, the elder Salvini, and others. Later, Mr. Bradburry joined Edwin Arden in "The Eagle's Nest," removing to New York City.

JAMES BRADBURRY

Following that engagement, Mr. Bradburry appeared with many companies and played many parts.

Here is a list of plays in which Mr. Bradburry figured to a great extent: E. E. Rice's productions; with Nellie McHenry in "A Night at the Circus," "Ranch 10," "Gay Coney Island," "The Village Postmaster," "Naughty Anthony," "Captain Barrington," "Hearts Aflame," "Anna Held," "Fifty Miles from Boston," "Aero Club," "Is Matrimony a Failure?" "The Girl at the Helm," "The County Chairman," "After Five," "Along Came Ruth," "Inside the Lines," "Mollie and I," and others.

Mr. Bradburry will appear in a number of forthcoming Selig Red Seal plays. He scored a hit as the manager of the burlesque company in "A Black Sheep," which was his first appearance in the pictures.

GASNIER MAKES DENIAL OF PATHE COMBINATION RUMOR

Regarding the story published in a theatrical magazine stating that Pathé had formed a $50,000,000 combination with several other motion picture concerns, General Manager Louis J. Gasnier at once sent out an emphatic denial that such an alliance had been made or even considered.

Advertisements addressed to the public were placed in the New York papers to this effect as soon as the story was brought to Mr. Gasnier's attention. In a statement issued at his office he stamped the story as a senseless fabrication.

GRACE VALENTINE ENGAGED FOR "BLACK FEAR" CAST

Grace Valentine, who recently made her debut in motion pictures as a star, has been engaged for the stellar role in the Metro feature, "Black Fear," produced by the Rolfe Photo Plays, Inc. Others in the cast include Grace Elliston, who was starred in "The Lion and the Mouse"; Edward Brennan, John Tansey, the boy prodigy, and other prominent players. John W. Noble is directing "Black Fear" at the Rolfe-Metro studio.

Miss Valentine was starred last season in the successful play, "See My Lawyer," and afterwards played a summer engagement at Atlantic City and Philadelphia, in "Brother Masons," with Frank McIntyre. She began her stage career with Oliver Morosco in Los Angeles, playing ingenue leads in stock, and becoming the pet of all Los Angeles. She appeared in "Yosemite" at Daly's Theatre, in a brief engagement, and for a time was understudy to Irene Fenwick, who was then playing "The Song of Songs."

SPECIAL MEETING OF BOARD OF TRADE

The Motion Picture Board of Trade has called a special meeting to be held at the Hotel McAlpin, New York, December 20, at 2 o'clock, for the purpose of revising and amending the by-laws of the organization.

HAINES, STAR IN "SECRET AGENT," GAUMONT, WORKING IN FLORIDA

The Gaumont policy of having a new star in every production has borne its latest fruit in the signing of Robert T. Haines to appear in a multiple reel Rialto Star Feature. Mr. Haines is now at the Gaumont winter quarters, Jacksonville, Fla., where he is working under the direction of William F. Haddock.

ROBERT T. HAINES

To provide him with a suitable vehicle, Gaumont has received a scenario from the novelist Arthur Stringer, called "The Secret Agent." This will be released on the Mutual program December 15.

Robert T. Haines is ideal in a part requiring both diplomatic finesse and courageous activity. He has been before the public for twenty-five years, the greater part of that time as a star. He made his professional debut in 1891 with Robert Downing in Washington.

For the three years following he was with Thomas W. Keane, receiving a thorough training in the classic plays from the eminent tragedian. When James O'Neill revived "The Count of Monte Cristo," Mr. Haines had a prominent part in the cast.

Then came the first American production of "Madame Sans Gene." After this Mr. Haines had an important part in "The Cherry Pickers." From 1898 to 1900 the star of this important Gaumont production was at the head of stock companies in Syracuse and Baltimore.

The following season he was leading man with Viola Allen in "The Palace of the King." Then he played the leads with Minnie Maddern Fiske for two seasons.

PLANT WIZARD NAMES DALIA AFTER BEATRIZ MICHELENA

Richard Lohrman, whose horticultural creations of the past few years rank him with such wizards as Burbank and Purdy, recently developed two new species of dalia at his San Rafael nurseries and named them in honor of the heroines impersonated by Beatriz Michelena in two of her first photoplays.

STARS OF THE STAGE WHO WILL SHINE ANEW FOR TRIANGLE IN PHOTOPLAYS OF MOMENT

SCENES FROM "THE PENITENTES," WITH ORRIN JOHNSON; "PEGGY," WITH BILLIE BURKE; AND "THE EDGE OF THE ABYSS," WITH MARY BOLAND

EIGHTH KNICKERBOCKER TRIANGLE PROGRAM

("The Edge of the Abyss"—Kay-Bee—Five Parts. "The Great Vacuum Robbery"—Keystone—Two Parts. "The Penitentes"—Fine Arts—Five Parts)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

IN "The Edge of the Abyss" C. Gardner Sullivan has handled a familiar and well-worn theme in a skillful and workmanlike manner, with enough of originality in detail and situation to make it fresh; there is no doubt of its ability to hold the interest of the spectator or of its dramatic strength. A careful dignity of action, and settings thoroughly in keeping with the stratum of high life in which the scenes are laid, mark it as an excellent example of what can be done in the way of projecting dramatic action, and even thought, from the silent screen.

The story is that of the wife of a rapidly-rising man, whose determination to reach the top has led him to neglect his wife, and she turns for consolation to the man she rejected when she was free to accept his love. She is saved from the abyss by a burglar, who enters the wife's room, and from a photograph of the husband, realizes he is in the house of the lawyer who saved him from the electric chair, years before, and whom he has been unable to repay. So he cancels the debt by covering the wife and her companion with a pistol, leading the woman away and giving her a lecture which results in her returning penitent to her husband.

The characters are exceptionally well drawn. Mary Boland, as the wife, has developed the ability of expressing emotions pictorially, to a high degree. Her conception of her part is admirable, and her work finished, forceful and dignified. She has adapted herself well to the exacting requirements of the camera, and, what is more, she has made the character one which will draw and hold the sympathy.

Robert McKim plays the rejected suitor with a clean-cut vigor. He is at all times convincing and earnest. As the husband, Frank Mills sometimes shows a slight tendency to resort to theatricals of the "legitimate stage" variety, which makes his work less pleasing than that of his rival. Willard Mack, as a burglar, gives an excellent piece of characterization.

All the way through, this picture does not depart from the rules of straight drama. No mechanical or trick effects have been found necessary, and the three dissolves which are used are mechanically perfect.

Charles Murray is the feature of the Keystone offering. It seems that nowadays a Keystone comedy is always good, and it is unnecessary to dissect its merits. It is in the use of the unexpected that the chief charm lies, and there is something new at almost every turn of the crank.

In this case, Ed Kennedy and Louise Fazenda rob a bank by crawling down a hot-air heating channel, taking off a register, and attaching a bag full of silver certificates by means of a vacuum pipe.

Charles Murray, a great detective, disguises as a woman, and follows the robbers to a summer hotel, where there is a riot of pursuit in and out of rooms, through skylights and across roofs, until the money, which has passed through the hands of everybody, finally lands in the possession of the man to whom it belongs.

Slim Summerville is Murray's partner, and the two make a pair of detectives that nobody could hoodwink, unless he was more than three years old. Dixie Cheme, Harry Booker and Whalen Trask complete a cast, which is well-chosen and seems to have a good composite idea of what it is there for.

The Fine Arts studios have contributed a semi-historical work, called the "Penitentes," in which many feet of film are devoted to titles and scenes instructive of conditions in a certain section of Mexico in the seventeenth century.

The "Penitentes" are introduced as a sect of religious fanatics, which the church long sought to suppress. Their rites provided for the crucifixion every year of the one of their number found most worthy of such a death, and such a crucifixion is shown on the screen. According to this story, which has been picturized by Mary H. O'Connor from the novel by R. Ellis Wales, the chief of the "Penitentes," becomes heir to his brother's vast estate. It is discovered, however, that the brother left a little son, and to make the inheritance sure, the lad is made a member of the sect, and his real identity lost. Years later, as Manuel, he tends the flocks for the sect, and is in love with Dolores—charmingly played by Seena Owen.

The chief, seeing a chance to retain the inheritance forever, selects Manuel to die on the cross, and the young enthusiast is in ecstasies over the "honor." Dolores makes every attempt to save him, and finally sacrifices her own reputation to prove to the fathers that Manuel is defiled, and unworthy of such death.

The thought of the property outweighs all other consideration, however, and an exception is made in Manuel's case; he is fastened to the cross, which is being raised, when the troops arrive and prevent the sacrifice. Through two aged monks, Manuel's real identity is established, and he is returned to the enjoyment of his property.

Orrin Johnson is an excellent type for the role of Manuel. He carries himself with the easy dignity of the out-door bred. Paul Gilmore plays the commandante with considerable dash, and Irene Hunt has drawn a striking picture of a jealous and fiery senorita. Others in the cast whose work is to be commended are Josephine Crowell, F. A. Turner, Charles Clary, A. D. Sears and the Indian, Dark Cloud.

In atmosphere this production is more than usually convincing. Jack Conway, the director, has provided settings which adhere closely to the landscape of life of the Mexican haciendas, and the costuming is artistic, in that it follows the nondescript style generally ascribed to the peons of rural Mexico.

Several real thrills are provided by battle scenes in which the camera has swept great reaches of country; by cavalry dashes which remind one continually that the supervising hand of D. W. Griffith is stretched over the production.

VER HALEN IS WITH RAVER COMPANY AS "NARRATOR-EXTRAORDINARY"

C. J. VER HALEN has been added to the business staff of the Raver Film Corporation, following negotiations by mail and telegram for some weeks. "Charlie," as Ver Halen is familiarly known among his man friends, has been sojourning in Chicago editing the Tribune news weekly, and when the Raver organization was launched hastened to send congratulations and best wishes to Harry Raver.

A man was needed for an important post on the business staff and Mr. Raver made overtures which were accepted. Ver Halen was not engaged as press agent or publicity expert. He is to be a sort of Narrator-extraordinary or intelligencer, said to be a new post in the motion picture business.

"CHIMMIE FADDEN OUT WEST"

(Lasky-Paramount—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM RESSMAN ANDREWS

VICTOR MOORE'S personality is evident in all scenes of this diverting comedy. In some respects his performance in "Chimmie Fadden Out West" is better than many of his stage productions. The audience, too, feels that it becomes more familiar with the mannerism of this well known comedian, especially in the close-ups, where the happy smile of the actor is most prominent.

Chimmie's debut is cleverly made in a close-up which, because of its novelty in introducing the actor, brings from the spectators a ripple of laughter.

First one sees only a number of very broad white stripes standing out horizontally on the screen. For a few seconds the effect is mystifying. There is no clue as to what is coming after. But presently one is conscious of the fact that it is a sweater, Then follows a pair of broad shoulders and the back of a head, surmounted with a derby of the inimitable Bowery style. Slowly the head turns and Chimmie's face greets the audience.

The ludicrous mistakes of Chimmie in the sleeping car afford many hearty laughs, especially when he misunderstands the words of a parrot as coming from its owner, a lady passenger of uncertain age and more uncertain temper.

Another scene pleasing from its novelty and little touch of humor is where, on the desert sands of Death Valley, Chimmie lies down to sleep head to head with his skittish and stubborn burro, kissing the animal in a dream in which he imagines he is with his sweetheart.

The plot is full of vigorous action and is replete with excellent situations for the cast to show its ability.

The president of a railroad decides upon a stupendous advertising stunt which shall bring the name of his road to every person throughout the United States by gratuitous, though not intectionally gratuitous, assistance of the newspapers everywhere.

The plan is to have somebody who is supposed to have discovered a rich gold mine charter a train from the company and ride across the continent, spending money with an open hand. Everything is to be paid for in nuggets supposed to come from mine.

Chimmie Fadden is chosen to act as the lucky child of fortune. On his return to New York the plans for publicity have worked out so well that the president of the road sees an opportunity to make some quick money by forming a fake mining company and selling the stock before the bottom should drop out.

BELL'S BIG BEAR BRAND WELL RECEIVED IN CHICAGO

THE reception of Bel"s Big Bear Brand Popular Features by the Chicago exhibition field, has proven far beyond the expectations of the company.

Mr. Bell, in commenting on the words of praise and congratulatory messages received by him the past week, said that the entire credit was due the pictures.

"NOT GUILTY"

(Triumph—Equitable—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

THIS picture, adapted from Edgar James' play, "Justice," which with Julius Steger as the star enjoyed popularity on the speaking stage, tells a story of a young man unjustly accused of murder and sentenced to death. On the eve of the execution, his sentence is commuted to life imprisonment, and after twenty years in Sing Sing he is pardoned. The main theme is based on an actual occurrence.

The usual characters accessory to such a story are present in the form of the wife whose heart breaks under the strain of her husband's troubles; the mother whose unchanging loyalty through the years is ultimately rewarded; the daughter, whom the unhappy man does not see from the day of her birth until the day of his pardon; the villain, who perjures himself on the witness stand in revenge for defeat in a love affair at the hands of the hero; and a few other personages whose presence in the picture is easily discerned as necessary.

Sets range from views of the exterior of the New York State Capitol and Sing Sing prison to a well staged courtroom and several domestic interiors. There are also a few forest and sea scenes, and if you want further testimony to the variety of settings, a scene of considerable depth showing convicts at work on a rock pile may be mentioned.

Cyril Scott, too well known as an actor to need any elaborate introduction here, is the man whose life is ruined by a miscarriage of justice. He arouses one's sympathy throughout, which is his main business in the picture. In one or two scenes he is given a real chance to show what he can do, and the result is what you would expect from an actor of Mr. Scott's ability. Ada Boshell, as the mother, is good. Other members of the cast are Catherine Proctor, Mark Ellison, and Charles Hutchison. Joseph Golden, the director, performed his work in an acceptable manner.

The action is a little slow until the young man is landed in prison, after which it quickens considerably. Probably the whole story could have been told just as successfully in about three reels.

"A GENTLEMAN'S AGREEMENT"

(Balboa-Pathé—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

A MOTION PICTURE studio has been used for the principal background for this subject. It is said to be Henry King's first offering as a director. If so he has shown rare good sense in starting off with the atmosphere which he knows so well from personal contact, and the view of studio life should be received with absorbed interest by picture fans everywhere. Scenes in the studio show little touches of realism which make them really artistic in a number of instances, and give the picture greater reason for being.

Ruth Nolan resents the advances of her employer and is discharged. She is unable to get work, and is found unconscious by the road by a party of motion picture actors, and is taken to the studio, where the director puts her to work and falls in love with her.

Unfortunately, the leading man also falls in love with her, and this leading man, who has saved the director's life, has a document, signed by the director, telling him that everything the director may ever possess is at his command. When there is a fight over the girl, the actor produces this agreement—and the girl is his.

Edith Reeves, as the girl, is not especially well cast, but does her work conscientiously. Others in the cast as: Ruth Lackaye, William Lampe, Joyce Moore and Thomas Allen Rector.

"THE WHITE SCAR"

(Broadway Universal Feature—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

MANY pictures have come and gone, since there has been seen such a live red-blooded story as is presented in "The White Scar," a feature in which Hobart Bosworth appears to wonderful advantage. It is a tale in which Indians and trappers monopolize the cast, figures that are always responsible for the completion of a strong, virile story of the northwest.

Ulysses Davis has not allowed his reputation for the selection of beautiful and appropriate exteriors to suffer in "The White Scar." His locations are revelations, everyone of them.. Not a vestige of civilization is apparent. The players appear before backgrounds of rivers, lakes, mountains and forests. They move in settings that fit the action down to the last degree of perfected realism.

And these wonderful scenes are not in the least belittled by inferior photographic work. Throughout the five reels the photography maintains an even standard of clarity. Most always it is excellent, never is it anything less than good.

The story, conceived by Bosworth himself, is of a fine character. It catches the attention at its very commencement and keeps it until the very final scene. Bosworth has painted his villain with a very black brush, and consequently, as practically every other character suffers by his evil ways, the sympathetic quality of the production is considerably above the average.

NA-TA-WAN-GAN HEARS THE NEWS

Bosworth is also responsible for the subtitles, the great majority of which are modeled after the style of Longfellow's "Hiawatha." In a few of them the writer has slipped up on his rhythm, but on the whole the titles add to the general effectiveness of the thrilling story.

In the role of the swarthy trapper, Bosworth appears in a part that does justice to his physical appearance and histrionic ability. Jane Novak as his wife has a difficult role, which she handles capably.

Anna Lehr as the Indian girl, who loves the trapper with a hopeless love plays convincingly, while Ronald Bradbury as the heavy and Frank Newburg, Norval McGregor and Seymore Zeliff complete the cast.

"ARMSTRONG'S WIFE"

(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

TREATED at the Lasky studio, any commonplace story is bound ultimately to present an artistic and attractive appearance. Margaret Turnbull, of the Lasky scenario staff, prepared the script for "Armstrong's Wife," and though she has selected a simple and familiar drama as the picture's basis, she has endowed it with a number of strong situations that keep one ever on the alert as to the conclusion, which if one stops to think a little is quite apparent from the start.

The picture serves to introduce Edna Goodrich as a picture star. Her part, the title role, gives her worthy opportunities in which to display her attractive ability. She acts with a skill that is made more enjoyable by her beauty and charming personality.

The direction is of an excellent sort. Of chief note are the beautiful Canadian forest scenes, which besides being well chosen are photographed with a regard for the pleasing effect of soft tones. Never are they glaringly brilliant. In fact tinted in artistic shades, they even rest the eye.

"HOW LONG WILL THIS LAST?"

The scenes other than those that take place in Canada are as fitting as one expects in a Lasky picture. The gambling house, with its secret rooms and mysterious passages, is very good.

In "Armstrong's Wife" the action is carried almost always by three players, Miss Goodrich, James Cruze and Thomas Meighan. Cruze as the heavy does excellent work, while Meighan is as ever the attractive hero.

The story tells how a simple country girl placed her faith in a stranger, disregarding her old lover's warning as to his character. She marries him to discover that he is a gambler, and later that he has another wife.

Her old lover hears of her sorry plight and shelters her with his name and home, for which he demands nothing. The villain enters again, however, for the dramatic purpose of reviving the old love of the heroine and hero. He demands that his wife leave the country with him, but in attempting to escape from the police he is killed.

"THE LOVE OF LOTI SAN"

(Selig—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

IN this picture Bessie Eyton attempts the feat recently essayed by Mary Pickford—the impersonation of a Japanese girl. Miss Eyton's face, metamorphosized by a good make-up, is satisfactorily Oriental, and her acting savors of the Far East, too. The indoor and outdoor scenes are cleverly done, and the fine photography enhances their beauty.

Arnold and Graham are rivals for the hand of Norine Marsden. Through a mistake, Graham is led to believe that Arnold has been accepted, although Norine really loves him. Broken-hearted, he goes to Japan. There he meets Loti San, and the Oriental girl falls in love with him. Seeing this infatuation, Graham believes it his duty to marry her, although he still loves Norine.

Norine is too cowardly to sacrifice her life in nursing him, but Loti San gives her infant to the American woman to bring up, and goes into the death-hut to die for her husband.

Others in the cast are: Edward J. Piel, Al Filson, Virginia Kirtley, Richard Morris and Cecil Holland. Lloyd Carleton produced the drama, which was written by Lyllian Leighton.

VIEWS OF "GRAFT," "THE SUPREME TEST," AND "THE JOURNAL OF LORD JOHN," NEW UNIVERSAL PRODUCTIONS

BRUCE CONFRONTS HIS FATHER'S MURDERER—SEMPLE LEARNS MOLLY'S TRUE IDENTITY—LORD JOHN MAKES HEADWAY IN HIS QUEST

"GRAFT"

(Universal Special Feature—First Episcde)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE first number of this latest Universal serial proves to be a rapidly moving melodrama, absolutely complete in itself. There is no waiting next week for the solution of any deep dyed mystery. "Liquor and the Law" accomplishes in this respect what few opening numbers of serials have done.

The plot was suggested by Irvin S. Cobb, the story composed by Hugh Wier and Joe Brandt, scenarioized by Walter Woods, and produced under the direction of Richard Stanton. Such an extensive combination of talent, leaves it difficult to place the credit for the exciting qualities of the picture.

However, as a melodrama of thrills and sensational situations, the two reels comprising episode one of "Graft" leave little to be desired in the way of melodramatic entertainment.

This being the general character of the first number and in all probability a prediction of the sort of episodes that are to follow, it is safe to assume that serial lovers will discover in "Graft" a continued picture very much to their liking.

Besides, the fact that each instalment bids fair to be complete in itself, insures the pictures a wide field that the average serial in which the entire number of episodes must be seen if the whole is to be appreciated, cannot cover.

The opening scenes introduce the Graft Trust, a group of fifteen corrupt political men, heads of various illegitimate businesses. "Liquor and the Law" deals with Bradford, the head of the Liquor Trust.

Larnigan, the district attorney, is hot on the heels of this trust, and for his energy along these lines meets death by a mysterious hand.

His son Bruce takes up the cudgels, infuriated by his father's death and runs for the attorney's office, taking as his platform, Prohibition.

Bradford tries to do away with his young opponent and finally succeeds in luring him to a den, where he contemplates murdering him if his proposed bribe is refused. But instead in the scuffle which ensues in the dark, Bradford is mistaken for Bruce and meets death from the hands of the members of his own gang.

Added to this exciting tale, there is a strong love interest running through the two reels. Bruce is in love with Dorothy Maxwell, the daughter of the head of the Graft Trust, who desires her to wed Stone, his chief aide. The events derived from this situation can easily be surmised.

Hobart Henley as young Bruce cuts a thoroughly heroic figure at all times, acting with a good show of feeling when occasion permits. Jane Novak as Dorothy is an attractive feminine lead, being competent besides. Glen White does well as Stone, and Mark Fenton and L. M. Wells register well in other prominent roles.

Stanton has produced this number very well. His election scenes are realistic to the extreme, while the less spectacular portions of the film are equally well handled.

The gangsters' den and the offices of the rival candidates for attorney show a careful attention to detail, which counts largely towards the ultimate exciting effect of this, the first instalment.

"THE JOURNAL OF LORD JOHN"

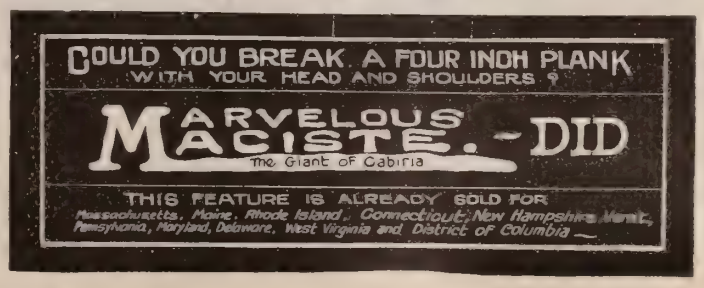
(Gold Seal—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

DECEMBER 14 will see the first release of another Universal serial, "The Journal of Lord John," adapted from the stories by C. N. and A. M. Williamson. Although the first number comprises four reels, those that are to follow will only occupy three thousand feet of film apiece.

Evidently the unusually large number of characters that are introduced during the first two reels of this first number, "A Bargain With Chance," is responsible for its length. This fact entails confusion on the part of the spectator, until the real action gets under way and the characters are all formally presented in the third reel.

It is to be surmised from the clear and compact appearance of the concluding parts, that the instalments to follow will be as defined as one might ask for. It is a difficulty not to be underestimated to start a serial without confusion, and although "The Journal of Lord John" pictures have not been able to overcome this natural handicap, the character of the story finally presented is proof enough of the interesting nature of those to follow.



The featured person in the stories is John Hasle, otherwise known as Lord John, an English amateur detective. This part is nicely carried by William Garwood.

In this instalment he solves a murder mystery in an exciting and interesting manner, and by so doing comes face to face with a young girl, who probably will be prominent in the coming numbers. Stella Razetto has this role, and her prettiness and charm will undoubtedly add much to the attractive aspect of the picture.

The Williamsons have taken a most unusual incident as a center of the action of this tale. The murder suspects are only located after a series of most interesting discoveries on the part of Lord John. The action leading up to their apprehension is truly exciting, while the means employed by them to do away with their enemies is more than novel.

The series is under the direction of Edward Le Saint, who so far has been retarded by a confusing scenario, but his staging of the story proper is entirely adequate, and in the second instalment when there is no large number of characters to introduce, he will undoubtedly make a satisfactory film.

All the foregoing does not gainsay the mystifying powers of the actual story as presented in "A Bargain With Chance." A supporting cast, made up of such favorites as Doc Crane, Albert MacQuarrie, Gretchen Lederer, Walter and Jay Belasco, does much that is worthy of credit.

"THE STRIFE ETERNAL"

(Mutual Masterpicture—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

FOR simple stupendousness of production and immensity of atmosphere this subject takes second rank with no picture ever shown to the American public. In the handling of vast bodies of men across vast sweeps of landscape, hills, vales and seashore, even D. W. Griffith himself has done nothing to surpass it.

It was photographed in England, and the landscape is characteristically English; we have glimpses of mountainsides, with valleys far below, both swarming with countless hordes of medieval warriors, and of sea coast and cliffs with the advance of great armies from boats, and along beaches far below.

The locating, handling and camera work are of the highest type, and in costuming and setting it is faithful to the minutest detail to the period it represents.

This is the first costume picture released as a Mutual masterpicture. It tells the famous story of Jane Shore, favorite of Edward IV of England, and who figured so prominently in the wars between the Yorks and Lancasters. The triumph of the king over the Lancastrian rebels is shown, then the meeting between Edward and Jane, who is betrothed to Matthew Shore, a goldsmith.

JANE WITNESSES THE KING'S TRIUMPH

The wedding occurs, but Shore's cousin, Margaret, in jealousy, conspires to ruin him. Matthew leads a plot against the king, and Margaret reveals it. The conspirators are captured with the exception of Shore, and the king takes Jane away to the palace, obtaining her consent on condition that he spare Matthew.

Matthew returns to lead another revolt, which is crushed in a thrilling battle, and the rebel leader is forced to take refuge abroad. Then the king is poisoned and the despicable Richard III falsely accuses Jane before the church dignitaries, and she is sentenced to walk barefooted through the streets of London; there Matthew finds her on his return, lying in the snow.

Interiors, fully in keeping with the magnitude of the outdoor views, have been provided, and the fifteenth century atmosphere is admirably preserved. Elaborate sets have been built to show city and village streets of the period, and in one case an actual medieval castle has been utilized.

The cast is composed almost entirely of English artists, and is headed by Blanche Forsyth as Jane. Others are Roy Travers, Robert Purdie, Nelson Phillips, Tom MacDonald, Rolfe Leslie, Tom Coventry, and Dora De Winton.

"THE NATION'S PERIL"

(Lubin—V-L-S-E—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

IT is evident from "The Nation's Peril" that Director George Terwilliger knows how to produce a big picture on a big scale. "The Nation's Peril" is a war melodrama, carrying with it a biting denunciation against the "peace at any price" propagandists, which is destined to arouse many slumbering citizens to a realization of their national duty.

It is a picture that by means of its title and theme, will draw the crowds, and that by its contents and treatment will send them away highly and patriotically satisfied.

For dramatic purposes Terwilliger and Harry Chandlee, coauthors of the production, have disregarded the dictates of logic when a good situation seemed otherwise unobtainable, but when the spectacle of a United States lieutenant battling against several villainous agents of a "foreign power" is shown, who is going to stop and cry out against the logic of the events leading up to that point? No one, save the hypercritical, and even those few, will be carried away by the smashing close of the production.

And if ever the close of a picture deserved to be termed smashing, the close of "A Nation's Peril" does. Terwilliger has secured some exciting land battle scenes which nicely fulfill expectations, but more thrilling by far than these are the scenes in which the big guns of various battleships belch forth their deadly contents.

The photographs were made at night. Flames and fragments of shell are easily seen bursting from the guns and flying through the air. Their effect on a specially erected village is completely destructive. Nothing but waste remains.

Then there is the added spectacle of seeing the guns destroy and sink an enemy's fleeing yacht. In all the scenes filmed in the night, the actions of the figures in the foreground are clear and defined.

Earle Metcalfe and Ormi Hawley have the leading roles, which they handle well enough, assisted by a cast, including William H. Turner, Eleanor Barry, Arthur Matthews and Herbert Fortier, in addition to hundreds of sailors and marines.

ILLUSTRATING TYPICAL SCENES IN METRO'S CIVIL WAR DRAMA, "BARBARA FRIETCHIE," WITH MARY MILES MINTER AS THE STAR

"LIFE'S PITFALLS"

(Edison-General—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THIS is a story of a heartless fortune hunter, his accomplices and his prey, full of tense moments and melodramatic situations. The types are all familiar, and will be welcomed by patrons of screen entertainments, but there are several unusual features introduced to awaken and hold the interest.

The action is vivid and rapid, but recourse is had to the old expedient of making trouble through plots overheard by maids at keyholes, and persons listening unobserved at doorways, marking the piece as of the good old melodrama family.

A wealthy girl is estranged from her sweetheart through a misunderstanding, and believing he has deserted her, she marries a worthless rascal who neglects her and spends his evenings over the bar and at the club. Reproached for his conduct, he admits he married the girl for her money. The couple become estranged, and the husband introduces a girl accomplice into the family in the guise of a maid.

The wife, ill from her experiences, is attended by a physician who proves to be her former sweetheart. Meanwhile the maid, in order to get the wife out of the way, in order that she may marry the husband, poisons her medicine.

The husband calls in an intoxicated condition, and swallows the poison. In a fury at the miscarriage of her plans, the maid attempts to kill the wife, but is foiled by the timely arrival of the physician.

Sally Crute, as the maid is winsome, and carries off her villainy with dash and grace; Miriam Nesbitt is a dignified and sincere wife, and Harold Meltzer plays the husband.

George Ridgwell, the director, has handled the more dramatic moments with skill and has brought out the best qualities of his scenario. The settings are appropriate, while not especially elaborate, and there is an air of conviction about the whole product which will commend it to the interest of the average audience.

"THE PRINT OF THE NAILS"

(Selig—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

PRODUCERS of screen dramas have shrewdly exploited popular interest in politics, making elections, impeachments, faction fights, administrative reform movements, and the like the dramatic vertebrae of innumerable reels. This Selig three-reeler has all the conventional political situations, beside a love story and underworld garnishings. This triple alliance of interests should make the picture popular.

Earl Foxe and Vivian Reed are excellent leads, Edwin Wallock and Al Filson make a satisfactory brace of heavies, and barring the elementary work of Helen Wolcott, the acting is very good throughout.

When Tom Mason, the reform candidate for mayor, is elected, Humphries, the opposition candidate, allies himself with Walker, the "boss," in the latter's plan to oust the new mayor. They put some incriminating letters in Tom's pocket, but Margaret Macy, a settlement worker, discovers the plot, and substitutes some innocent matter for them. After several complications, too involved to detail, Tom is impeached on bribery charges, but the case is dismissed when the letters are found to be uncompromising. The conspirators are held for libel just as the papers are announcing the engagement of Tom and Margaret.

George Nicholls produced the story, which was written by Mrs. Owen Bronson.

"THE KEY TO THE PAST"

(American "Flying A"—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

WHILE not in the least pretentious, this drama has unusual interest because of its novel plot. It is impossible to predict the denouement before it actually occurs, and the ending does not have the wild improbability characteristic of so many photoplays. This freshness of theme, and the gilt-edged acting make this picture a high-class program two-reeler.

Norman Stockton, an Alaskan gold miner, lives in a rude cabin with an insane woman, and a girl. Wakefield, a young engineer, asks Stockton for the hand of the girl in marriage.

BESS REGAINS HER MEMORY

Stockton explains that many years before he had been wrongly accused of robbery, and that he had fled, leaving his wife behind.

Two years later, after a shipwreck, he had found his wife and a little girl washed up on the shore. The demented woman is his wife, but the secret of the girl's parentage is locked in the woman's breast.

A short time afterwards, the cabin is struck by a bolt of lightning, and the shock restores the reason of the woman, who explains that the girl is her daughter and Stockton's.

The cast is composed of Winnifred Greenwood, Edward Coxen, George Field, Nan Christy and Walter Spencer. Charles Bartlett was the producer.

"KEEP MOVING"

(Kleine—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM RESSMAN ANDREWS

"KEEP MOVING," features Bickel and Watson, is a laugh producer from first to last. As a comedy it keeps faith with the words on the program issued to the audience at the showing in the Candler theatre, New York City, Sunday evening, November 14. "Adapted from nothing, founded on fancy, produced with one ambition only—to make you smile."

The picture fully lived up to the mark set for it by the producers in this announcement. Bickel and Watson have brought to the screen all the fantastic antics and diverting facial expressions which amused audiences of the speaking stage.

The director has made use of his opportunities at every turn, with the result that a spectator is free from the regret that more might have been obtained from a situation by adroit management. It is an achievement in the making of comedies to keep people continually laughing for five reels.

The plot is a delightful extravaganza, a medley of absurd incidents offering a wealth of opportunity for seasoned funmakers to keep a theatreful of people laughing until their sides ache.

Somewhere in a never-never land is a royal family with a restless youngster dressed in a little Lord Fauntleroy suit, who is anxious to see other domains. As he expresses this wish a "fairy," a tall, cadaverous Weary Willie tramp, with three days' growth and baggy trousers, who wears a ballet skirt and carries a wand with a nuge star at the end, offers to grant the child's desires. The "fairy" makes one stipulation—the son of the royal house must be disguised as a vagabond in seeking adventure.

Then the fun begins. Fast and furious the topsy turvy incidents happen. The scion of royalty not only looks like the most disreputable tramp of our highways, but he has all the traits. Musty Suffer, as the child is known, played by Harry Watson, has a hatred for work that does credit to the ideals of the tramp fraternity, and a thirst most wonderful in its inability to ever be quenched.

In one of Musty Suffer's dreams he is in a bathtub full of beer, with the wall lined with kegs ready to replenish the gallons in the tub on his drinking it all up. On another occasion, with nothing else in sight to satisfy the cravings of his stomach, he steals behind an automobile and fills from the tank in the rear a tomato can with gasoline. It is not the incident, so much as the way Watson acts, that makes it funny.

Scores and scores of scenes exciting the spectator to unchecked merriment make the minutes pass quickly.

George Bickel as Willie Work is always amusing in the scenes in which he appears. Rose Gore, as Dippy Mary, the girl who gives Musty Suffer a mansion, although, as she explains, it is not her own, is a comedienne of the first water. Cissie Fitzgerald added to her laurels as Cissie, while Snitz Edwards as Hypo Jake, the barber who always tied a customer in a chair for fear he would run away upon being cut and sliced by the razor, helped to make the picture a whirlwind of fun.

"THE BROKEN LAW"

(Fox Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

WITH William Farnum and Dorothy Bernard in the leading roles, a complete picture has been devised by Director Oscar C. Apfel. It is really unnecessary to say here that Mr. Apfel is a good director. But if there is anyone still unacquainted with this fact, let him be informed now that Mr. Apfel is one of the very few directors who know how to tell a good story well on the screen.

This picture is proof of that. It takes a literary lion, in the person of William Farnum, from London society to a Romany gypsy camp, on a search for his half-sister; makes him, as the result of a realistic outdoor fight, leader of the gypsies; gives him a chance to rescue a young lady from drowning, after her automobile has plunged off a bridge; and otherwise gives him opportunity to display his gifts of physique and pantomime.

He is ably seconded by Dorothy Bernard, the half-sister, as it turns out. Miss Bernard is a thoroughly capable screen actress. Here, she enacts the part of a gypsy girl who is wronged by a nobleman, the scene preceding this occurrence being shown in detail.

In ignorance of her kinship to him, and in an effort to force his marriage to her, she names the erstwhile literary lion as her betrayer. He refuses to marry her; both are adjudged to have broken the Romany law, and are consequently flogged and banished. Before the complicated situation is finally cleared up, the nobleman is shot to death at a wedding ceremony by a gypsy lover of the girl he wronged.

It is easy to see that the plot is involved enough to permit skill in its working out, and this is one of the distinguishing traits of the production. Another is the employment of splendid night scenes of the gypsy camp. These are fine bits of photography, showing also care on the part of the director. Other sets are up to the Fox standard.

Others of the cast who contribute to the success of the picture are: Bertram Harbaugh, Richard Neill, Mary Martin, Nicholas Dunaeu, Lyster Chambers and Christine Mayo.

Though the main theme of the play is what some timid critics are accustomed to call "unpleasant," it is handled delicately, without offense, and in a convincing manner. The flogging scenes could be abbreviated without real injury to the worth of the production as a whole.

"FILM TEMPO"

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

THIS is perhaps the most interesting picture of the "Buck Parvin" series released so far. The plot follows the story of Van Loan more closely than its predecessors, and the dramatic situations do not detract in the least from its humor. Sharing honors with Art Acord in the leads are George Webb and Nell Franzen. Webb, playing a "small-time" actor, will make a distinct hit, and Miss Franzen makes an appealing ingenue.

As in all the Parvin pictures, many glimpses of studio routine are given, a feature that appeals to most photoplay patrons.

Norman Dean, a ham-fat extra man in the employ of the Titan Moving Picture Company, makes an impression on the romantic imagination of Charlotte Biggs, a susceptible small-town girl.

By borrowing the wardrobes and money of the real actors, he leads her to believe that he is the star of the company. One day Dean takes the girl to the studio, and when she admires the work of Buck Parvin, the supe tells her that he has no sense of "film tempo."

After exhausting the good nature of all the Titan employees, Dean decides to leave the town, taking Charlotte with him. Buck gets wind of this plan and interferes in time to save the girl's honor.

This opportune rescue leads Buck to believe that he is able to time his actions fairly well, even if he does not possess "film tempo."

Others in the cast are: Lawrence Peyton, Ashton Dearholt, Dixie Stratton, Hardy Gibson, Joe Massey and Charles James. The picture was made under the direction of William Bertram.

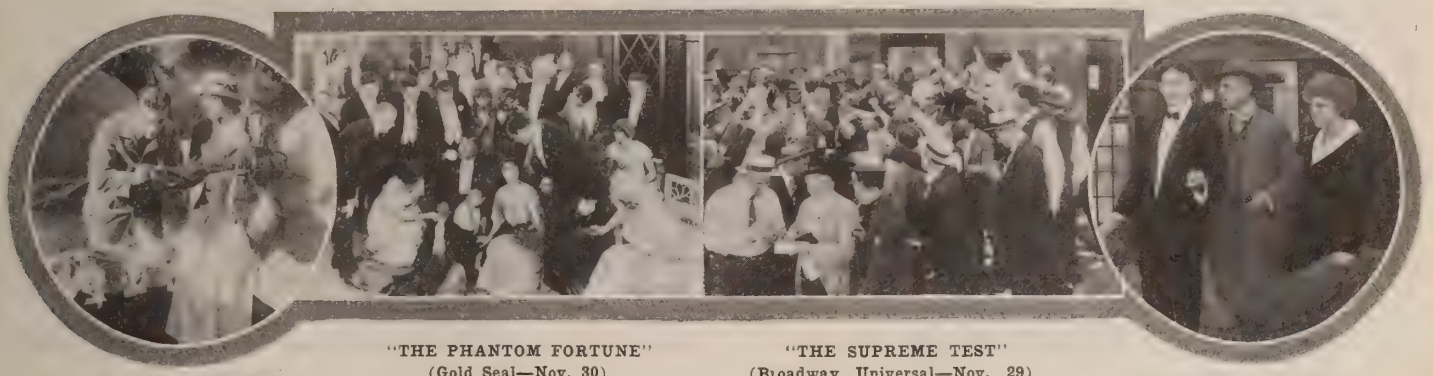
"THE LOSING GAME"

(Essanay—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

IN a story of intrigue and crookedness, Hugh E. Thompson makes an exceptionally effective heavy. His work as villain in this release is never overdone. Darwin Karr's work in heroic roles needs no recommendation. The acting of Anzonetta Moore, a newcomer in the Essanay forces, cannot be praised so highly, however. She photographs well, but she sometimes seems to let the director do the thinking for her.

The plot is an old one, but refurbished with some ingenious variations, it passes very well.



Henry Philips and his half-brother, Norman, both wish to marry Helen Brighton. When Henry is accepted, his father, delighted with the match, makes a will leaving him three-fourths of his fortune.

Norman steals some money from his father's safe, and when it is discovered in Henry's pocket, his father disinherits the innocent son and makes a new will, leaving his money to Norman. Some time later, Helen develops some pictures, and discovers among them a photo of Norman in the act of stealing the money.

This picture was exposed by a book falling on the camera bulb. The father makes a new will, leaving his money to the son he had disinherited, and shortly after, dies. Henry returns home and finds Norman in the act of stealing the last will. The thief is overpowered, and Henry, now cleared of all suspicion, marries Helen.

Thomas Commerford and Frank Weber are also in the cast.

A FEW FLASHES FROM FOUR CAMERA CREATIONS ISSUING AND TO ISSUE FROM THE UNIVERSAL STUDIOS

"GILDED YOUTH" (Laemmle—Dec. 2)

"THE PHANTOM FORTUNE" (Gold Seal—Nov. 30)

"THE SUPREME TEST" (Broadway Universal—Nov. 29)

"THE MAYOR'S DECISION" (Laemmle—Nov. 25)

"THE SUPREME TEST"

(Broadway Universal Feature—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THE SUPREME TEST" is a charming comedy-drama attaining an even level of merit in all its phases. It introduces Henrietta Crosman to the photoplay public in a most suitable vehicle, which besides giving the star a role which she is thoroughly capable of undertaking, presents a delightful story in an unusual way.

Universal exhibitors will have the opportunity of presenting it to their patrons on and after November 29.

While the acting of Miss Crosman is particularly pleasing in its expressiveness and realism, the supporting cast renders work of the most adequate sort. Wyndham Standing as Semple, the woman hater, is polished in every one of his many scenes.

Stella Razetto as Molly, the girl of the slums, who later turns out to be Semple's daughter, makes this part most attractive in characterization and appearance.

Sylvia Ashton as Bridget O'Malley, gets in some most pleasing bits of humorous character work, while Jack Nelson and Adele Farrington complete the well balanced cast.

Edward Le Saint produced the picture from a scenario by Harvey Gates which was based on a story by L. V. Jefferson. It is a story of contrasts between the lives of the rich and the poor, in which an ardent social worker realizes the sincerity of the latter class and the hypocrisy of the former, when she is for a time financially ruined.

Le Saint has instilled realism into both sets of scenes with striking results. Both in the east side scenes and in those settings laid in the homes of the rich, realism is the dominating factor, whether it be responsible for either comic or serious situations.

Besides, he has staged a thriller the like of which has never been seen by the writer. It is the spectacle of the train running down a buckboard carrying two people. But it is not the event but the way in which it is done that makes the thrill..

In addition to the theme related above there is a sub plot that establishes the relationship between Semple and Molly in a most attractive style, and then too there is the romance of Semple and Violet Logan (Miss Crosman) which finally overcomes the former's prejudice against the feminine sex.

"AT BAY"

(Pathé Gold Rooster—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THE best of the story and dramatic action of George Scarborough's play has been extracted and thrown onto the screen in his new Gold Rooster offering. Ouida Bergere has made an excellent adaptation, and with George Fitzmaurice as director, and Florence Reed as star, a dramatic production of high value has been made.

Especially impressive and skilful has been the building up of the "atmosphere" of that slice of city life which is portrayed. The restaurant and gambling-house types are excellent bits of characterization, and another touch of up-to-dateness which starts the story off with a feeling of conviction, is the use of a mechanical battering ram by the police in forcing their way into a gambling house.

The costuming and setting of scenes is lavish, but always in keeping with the strata in which the action is laid; and this action is dramatic, smooth, in fact, just what the movement of a picture story should be to hold its audience.

Florence Reed, as a screen star, registers her emotions strongly and effectively. She is a charming screen figure, and easily carries the burden of the theme with the same poise and ability which she has shown on the speaking stage.

AT THE LAWN PARTY

The climaxes are melodramatic, and call for the use of mechanical aids, which do not in the least detract from the thrill. Chief of these is the camera and flash lamp, carefully placed to photograph the room at the pressure of a button; although it is intended by the gambler to compromise the district attorney's daughter, it really photographs the death of the gambler.

Miss Reed has the part of the district attorney's daughter, who has contracted a secret marriage with the "capper" in a gambling house. He deserts her, and the gambler gets possession of a letter written by her to her husband, which he attempts to use against her father, who is a candidate for governor. In attempting to recover the letter, she kills the gambler, and suspicion is thrown upon a man she loves. She confesses the whole thing to her father and then it develops that the gambler died of heart failure.

GLIMPSES OF "THE MEDDLESOME DARLING" AND "AS THE TWIG IS BENT," CURRENT LUBIN DRAMAS

"AS THE TWIG IS BENT"

(Lubin—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE story of "As the Twig Is Bent" is extremely good and its interpretation and setting admirable. In fact, one is not often permitted to witness such a pleasing three-reel program release as Lubin here offers the trade.

It is a drama of army life, put on in a convincing way. Director Wilbert Melville has procured United States troops for "atmosphere" and to appear in the few battle scenes introduced toward the end of the picture. A note running after the main title tells us that the exteriors of the picture supposedly staged in the Philippines were filmed at the San Diego exposition. The illusion is an excellent one.

The story, built along familiar lines, is made refreshing by the fine acting and the settings. Twin brothers separated in their youth grow to manhood under contrasting influences. George becomes a fine man, Herbert a wasteful profligate. Both go to the Philippines and Herbert succumbs to the terrible effect of the climate. He continually drinks and becomes the slave of a native girl.

George, on the other hand, is well liked by all his brother officers, save one Colonel Vail, who covets his fiancee. So when the girl comes on a visit with her father it is easy for the Colonel to send George away with a letter, and show her Herbert, telling her that he is George, hopelessly degraded.

The two depart for the States to be married, but George learns all, follows them and arrives in time to stop the wedding and expose the guilt of Vail.

L. C. Shumway in the role of the two brothers gives two striking performances, the one realistic in its convincing air of degradation, the other pleasing in its manly qualities. Helen Eddy acts with a rare skill the part of George's fiancee, and Jack Holt is an excellent type for the villain Vail. Melvin Mayo and Velma Whitman are also in the cast.

"THE MEDDLESOME DARLING"

(Lubin—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE interest in this drama is about evenly divided between the development of a story based on the eternal triangle, and a mother's efforts that are at last successful in bringing her daughter and erring husband together again.

Starting with a situation productive of a generous amount of suspense the story runs along, very smoothly and pleasantly carrying the interest with it at all times, finally reaching a climax that performs its intended purpose in a style that leaves little to be desired.

The story is by Shannon Fife, produced by Joseph Smiley in a fitting manner. There is the novelist, who slowly drifts away from his wife, turning his attentions toward his secretary. Then there is the mother of the wife, who has served an unjust prison term, who when released is the cause of the couple's reunion.

On the whole it is a very simple story, but it is as delightful as it is simple. Francis Joyner and Lillie Leslie have the leading roles while Marie Sterling appears as the mother. William Cohall and Rosetta Brice have the other prominent parts.

"BODY AND SOUL"

(Frohman-World Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

A PICTURE containing a character that is afflicted with a dual personality is always welcome and entertaining, providing such a role is carried by an actor or an actress of capability. Such a character presents opportunities for the creation of either comedy or drama. In "Body and Soul," Anthony Kelly has chosen to treat the material in a serious way, with an interesting picture as the result.

Florence Rockwell, as Claire Martin, the girl, who, suffering from amnesia and who is consequently powerless to control her malicious personality, plays with sincerity and a strong show of emotional feeling throughout. While under the influence of her malady she commits disreputable deeds, finally killing the man who took advantage of her while she was not her real self, but reverting to her natural character to bring about a pleasant ending.

The direction, which was in the hands of George Irving, is greatly commendable, both in respect to the treatment of the scenario and the scenes and atmosphere allowed it. The exterior locations, notably those picturing areas of forest lands are well chosen, while the interiors in every respect do justice to the action of the play.

The camera work borders closely on perfection, the tinting of the night scenes, being especially pleasing. The fact that much of the action occurs about and on the water adds greatly to the attractive aspect of the film.

The supporting cast rises adequately to any presented situation. Kenneth Hunter as Kent, lover of Claire, the city editor of the Herald, who very seldom appears at his desk, is a good type and a good actor. Robert Whitworth is the heavy, and Jack Sherrill, Mrs. Cecil Raleigh, Frazer Coulter and Irving himself, complete the cast.

"Body and Soul" is consistently a good picture.

"MARY'S LAMB"

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

IT takes a high order of farce comedy to hold an audience for five reels. Where the music and lines of the stage production are lacking, "business" must be fast and strong, or the film becomes wearisome. In filming Richard Carle's well-known Broadway success, with Richard Carle himself in the leading role, a high decree of success has been obtained.

Mr. Carle was always a master of funny stage "business," Were it not for this the fate of "Mary's Lamb" might be something to weep over, but with the help of Director Donald Mackenzie, he has managed to get a vim and snap into the picture which saves it from ruin. The Carle smile and the Carle professional simplicity screen very well. It is safe to predict success for this subject, and that it will be an acceptable comedy relief on the program of Gold Rooster dramas.

The piece is straight farce comedy; no tricks of camera or printing are resorted to, and it is plain to see that Mr. Carle has been allowed to write his own business into many scenes; nobody else could have done it. Julia Ralph is a stout and jolly Mary, with moments of firmness which stand out well against her ordinarily sunny nature. Marie Wayne is another able addition to the cast.

Professor Lamb, a butterfly hunter, is ensnared by Mary, a spinster of seasonable age, and immediately his life becomes somewhat over-domesticated. A young couple who need his influence in order to get Mary's consent to their marriage, conspire with the widow next door to compromise the professor. This she does effectively not only in the swimming pool, but in the studio, and the professor escapes Mary's wrath only by resorting to his old habit of sleep-walking. He gets a terrible blow when the widow introduces her fiance, and when he finds every couple of his acquaintance billing and cooing, he resolves to return to Mary's arms; so everything ends happily. Mr. Carle, although always active on the stage, has found his film debut strenuous, but he appears to have accepted it in good part and thrown his whole soul into the work.

"THE BATTLES OF A NATION"

(American Correspondent Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

IF war has not been stripped of its false glamor by this time, this picture ought to acomplish the feat. Not that it deliberately sets out to preach a sermon on war's evils. It does nothing of the sort. Instead it unfolds actual scenes which show, better than any picture sermon could, that war is the grimmest business in the world.

As a record of history in the making, this picture is extraordinarily valuable. Most of the views were taken on the Austrian and Polish fronts; the others reveal the continuing mobilization by Germany of her industrial and commercial resources. All of them are authentic, and all of them contain a lesson so striking that every American ought to see them.

He ought to see how Germany cultivates, under martial law, every available inch of ground; how Germany marshals in huge warehouses miles of meat, bread and other necessities of life; and just what efficiency means in the individual worker, for these films will show him an army of workers in the German gun and munition factories, each performing his share gladly, effectively.

He ought to see also what it means to be a soldier in the field, in a conquering army, for this picture reveals a good deal of just what happened with the Austro-German forces on the march to Lemberg, at the occupation of Lemberg, and in the now famous bombardment of Warsaw.

Everybody knows now that Warsaw was subjected to terrific punishment before it fell, but everybody ought to see how that punishment was administered. Here is the chance. This picture shows the Austrian 35-centimeter Skoda mortar being assembled, in action, and the explosions of shells fired by it. Miles away a few men in a sheltered trench get the range, telephone it back to their comrades in charge of the mortar, and their comrades do the rest. The gun is aimed with mathematical precision, a huge shell is lifted mechanicaly and shoved in; then the gunners step back, their hands over their ears, and hell's fury is let loose. An instant later you see a little puff of smoke in the distance; and another instant brings you a close-up of an explosion. The only thing left to show is the crumpled forts of Warsaw, and the camera takes you for a tour over them.

You also have splendid views of marches, parades in conquered cities, camp life, refugees in the wreckage of war, trench fighting, and the Red Cross at work. And, then, the dead, and their little cities that people the plains of Hungary and Poland.

The photography in these films is remarkable. Albert E. Dawson, the photographer, underwent great risks to secure the views. He is shown receiving his credentials from Ambassador Gerard in Berlin.

Save for an overplus of titles and an absence of martial scenes at the beginning of the production, there is nothing which merits serious objection. There are no extensive battle views, but only those unacquainted with the methods of conducting modern warfare would expect to see them on the screen—if the picture was authentic. This picture is not only authentic—it is a page out of history, set down in all the naturalness of events themselves—an achievement in which the motion picture camera stands without a rival.

"A THING OR TWO IN MOVIES"

(Selig—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

BLOOM CENTER, the lively little hamlet that has added a new touch to rural comedy, goes movie-mad in this Chronicle. Audiences that have laughed at the antics of Chubby Green, Postmaster Pash and other Bloom Centerites, will find these

Center and offers to let the villagers act in a drama—for a consideration. Nearly all of the inhabitants pay a fee to act for the films, and the town is agog with excitement.

The scenario calls for a bank scene, and the president of the local bank is asked to take part. He pays a large sum of real money over the counter to the leading man, who promptly decamps and takes a train to parts unknown.

The film taken in Bloom Center finally arrives, and the townspeople flock to Melodeon Hall to see themselves on the screen. Everything is satisfactory until there is a flash of Constable Plum making love to the leading lady. The populace, headed by Plum's wife, give chase to the poor man.

In the cast are John Lancaster, Wm. Hutchinson, Lyllian Leighton, Ralph McComas, Sidney Smith, Irene Wallace, Marthe Mattox and William Scott. Marshall Neilan did the directing.

"THE PAPERED DOOR"

(Essanay—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

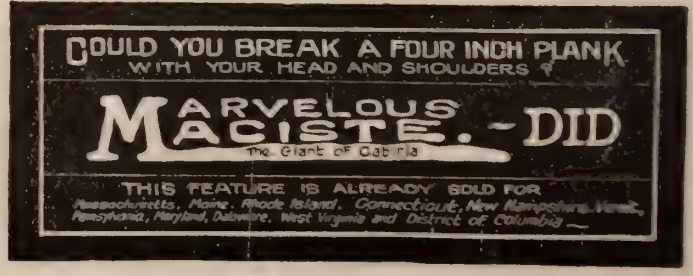
THE title, plus the name of Mary Roberts Rhinehart as authoress, naturally leads one to expect a story of mystery and complexity, but the plot is not at all complicated, and the ending is rather pointless. The presence of Ruth Stonehouse in the cast does much to help the story, and Edmund F. Cobb's attractive personality lends its usual charm. Thurlow Brewer and Peggy Sweeney are also in the cast.

Jim Carter neglects his wife Molly because of his infatuation with a cabaret dancer. In a drunken brawl over the cabaret girl, he kills a man and then flees to his wife for protection. She conceals him in a closet, covering the door with wallpaper to remove suspicion from the hiding place.

A blizzard rages outdoors, so Molly invites the sheriff, who is on watch outside the house, to warm himself at the stove. When he falls asleep in a chair, Molly lets her husband out of the closet, and he spends the remainder of the night in the barn.

When she goes out to the barn early the next morning, the sheriff informs her that Jim tried to catch a freight train and was killed under the wheels.

MRS. MARTHA H. YOUNG BACK FROM NORWAY



MRS. MARTHA HAMILTON YOUNG arrived from Norway after a brief sojourn in her native country, where she is prominent in theatrical and motion picture circles.

She has returned to America, which she visited for a period during the past summer for the purpose of studying motion picture performing as it is being done in the United States.

She is wonderfully accomplished in many ways, being a woman of a distinctly blonde type, an excellent horsewoman, a tennis champion, and actually having held the world's ski championship. She is of statuesque build and possesses a fascinating stage appearance.

Mrs. Young will no doubt be seen shortly in some of the features of prominent American producers, if reports in circulation are true.

TABLOID REVIEWS FOR THE BUSY EXHIBITOR

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"Count Twenty." (Biograph. Two reels. Tues., Nov. 30.)—Not shown for review. The story follows: On the death of her employer, a young girl is taken to the home of her father's employer to live, where efforts are made to overcome her fits of temper. She is taught to count twenty before answering in anger.

When a foreman attempts to force his attentions on her, she writes her formula of "count twenty" on a typewriter, and hands the slip of paper to him. That night the office safe is robbed, and the combination is found marked on the back of this slip of paper.

The girl traces the money to the foreman, who is made to return it, but the girl is suspected by her employer's son, whom she loves. She decides to leave her employer's home, and goes to the deserted house where she formerly lived. There she finds the man she loves, who has been attacked by the foreman and his gang, and bound to a post. Mary Malatesta, Jack Drumeir, Joseph McDermott, Ivan Christy, Gus Pixley, W. C. Robinson and Sidney D'Albrook are in the cast.

"The Hungarian Nabob." (Biograph. Four reels. Wed., Dec. 1.)—Will be reviewed in a later issue.

"His Emergency Wife." (Biograph. Thurs., Dec. 2.)—Not shown for review. The story follows: George has to get married in a hurry, because his rich uncle is coming, and wants to see him "settled down." As he can find no girl he prevails on a young man friend to play the part of a wife, and the two move into a house whose owners are temporarily away.

The uncle brings a pretty ward with him, and she immediately becomes attached to the "wife." When the householders return unexpectedly the plot is exposed, the young man offers to marry the pretty ward, but she prefers "friend wife." In the cast are Alan Hale, Jose Ruben, W. J. Butler, Vola Smith, Charles Bennett and Laura La Varnie.

"The Sufferin' Baby." (Edison. Split reel. Wed., Dec. 1.)—This is an amusing comedy of suffrage and the suffragists. Hubby is left with the baby while its suffrage mother goes to the fair to speak for the cause. A friend calls on father, and induces him to go to the fair also, bringing the baby along in a travelling bag.

The bag is left on an aeroplane, which later flies off with it, and father is in despair. A dip of the aeroplane throws the bag off, and in its fall, it becomes separated from the baby, who falls into hubby's arms. On the same reel is a "Microscopic Study of Pond Life," giving interesting views of the beginnings of animal existence.

"Life's Pitfalls." (Edison. Three reels. Fri., Dec. 3.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"The Losing Game." (Essanay. Three reels. Tues., Nov. 30.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"The Magistrate's Story." (Edison. Sat., Dec. 4.)—A pretty and unusual story, well told. A derelict, brought before a magistrate for stealing a piece of bread, is recognized as an old war comrade. The magistrate tells a story of their boyhood together, and their enlistment in the Civil war, on opposite sides.

For sleeping while on sentry duty, the future magistrate was condemned to death, but the girl he loves gets a pardon from the President. The pardon would have been too late, but his former friend cutting telegraph wires, hears the message being telegraphed to the front, and at the risk of his own life, carries the word through the enemy's lines and saves his friend.

The charge against the derelict is withdrawn, and the magistrate takes him to his own home.

"The Night of Souls." (Essanay. Three reels. Mon., Nov. 29.)—Not shown for review; the story follows: Dr. Allison, a famous surgeon, runs over a little girl, while driving his automobile. While in the midst of the operation which is to save her life, he receives word that his own little girl has been injured, and only an operation by himself can save her.

He feels it his duty to see the girl he has injured out of danger, and when he arrives home, his daughter is dead. His wife cannot forgive his staying away, and leaves him. Several years later he treats an injured factory woman. Allison discovers her to be his wife, and performs an operation that saves her life.

Richard C. Travers and Warda Howard play the leads. Harry Dunkinson is also in the cast.

"The Fable of the Low-Down Expert on the Subject of Babies." (Essanay. Wed., Dec. 1.)—George Ade has furnished a humorous scenario and his inimitable sub-titles for his fable. The acting is far better than that of the recent fables.

Once there was a mean man who became weary of the feverish Chatter of young parents bragging about their offspring. He delved into all the well-known works on the subject of Brats, and when he finished, he was all Loaded and Primed for any Cocky Young Parent.

By his table of Statistics, he knew at what age the tooth should be through the gum, and when Izzy-Wizzy should be able to stand. He soon was In Dutch with all the parents, and never received an invitation to dinner. MORAL: Let on to be Interested and and Pleased.

Ernest Maupain, Charles J. Stine, and Camille D'Arcy are in the cast.

Jack Spratt and the Scales of Love." (Essanay. Thurs., Dec. 2.)—This fairly amusing comedy would be more entertaining if there were less padding. Victor Potel, Margaret Joslin, and Harry Todd, of "Snakeville" fame, are the principals.

Mustang Pete finds great pleasure in playing jokes on Slippery Slim and Sophie, who have been recently married. The newly joined pair go to the drug store, where they see "Fato" for thin people, and "Thino" for fat people advertised. Slim purchases a bottle of "Fato," and Sophie buys a bottle of "Thino."

Mustang Pete switches the bottles, and a few hours later Sophie tips the scales at 290 pounds, while Slim weighs an even eighty-five. They decide that something is wrong, and demand their money back from the druggist.

"The Burglar's Godfather." (Essanay. Fri., Dec. 3.)—Not shown for review.

"On the Private Wire." (Essanay. Two reels. Sat., Dec. 4.)—Not shown for review; the story follows: Ralph Mills, a reporter, goes to the country home of John Lyons, a wealthy speculator, to get a story. There he encounters a crook, posing as Lyons' guest.

Lyons has arranged to call his broker on his private wire at midnight and impart a message that would be of value to a rival speculator. Mills suspects the crook of being there to overhear the message. The thief recognizes the reporter, and realizing that his mission is known, holds Mills and Lyons at the point of his gun, but he is surprised at Theda, Lyons' daughter, who turns the tables, and makes him prisoner.

The cast consists of Joseph B. Totten, Betty Brown, and John Cossar.

"The Luring Lights." (Kalem. Four reels. Mon., Nov. 29.)—The subject features Stella Hoban in an adaptation from "Anna Malleen," a novel by George H. Brennan. The four reels give a detailed picture of life among actors on the road, their successes and weaknesses.

Anna finds life with her aunt disagreeable and joins a traveling troupe at the first opportunity. The girl and the principal playing the "villain" in the company become interested in each other.

Through his love for Anna, he checks a craving for liquor, and finds after a short separation from the girl wielding such good influence over him, that his regeneration and happiness can only be brought about through her. Anna finds she is possessed of unusual histrionic ability and becomes an actress of note before their marriage.

In the cast are: Corinne Malvern, Helen Lindroth, Frank Woods, Bradley Barker, Nat Sachs, Henry Hallom, Francis Cappelano and Stephen Purdee.

"Only a Country Girl." (Kalem. Tues., Nov. 30.)—Rube and Bud are in the country and wander to Farmer Brown's. The two men are attracted to the daughter of the farmer, Ethel, a pretty girl whose winning ways completely turn their heads.

A violent flirtation starts up between her and Bud. Rube overhears the couple plan to elope and tells the farmer. Bud and Ethel drive off and the farmer manages to overtake them and get back his daughter.

Bud eludes the vengeance of Farmer Brown and joins Rube. He discovers his partner's treachery and loses no time in showing his resentment by violent means.

"Key to a Fortune." (Kalem. Fri., Dec. 3.)—Marguerite Courtot plays a double part in this release, the sixth in "The Adventures of Marguerite" with a great deal of energy. The story is full of thrills. A gang of criminals plans to rob the house of a well-to-do family by kidnapping the daughter and substituting a girl who looks just like her.

The chauffeur of the millionaire is a party to the scheme and drives his young mistress to a ramschackle den on the outskirts of the city, where she is left in charge of an old hag with a liking for the bottle.

Through this weakness Marguerite manages to escape and arrives home in time to confront her double, dressed in her own clothes and doing her best to make people believe she is the daughter of the house.

"The Tramp Telegrapher." (Kalem. Sat., Dec. 4.)—In this episode of the "Hazards of Helen" series the heroine has sufficient adventures to furnish several features with excitement. She rides on a breakbeam of a railroad car going at express speed, turns a switch just in time to sidetrack a train about to run over an unconscious man, gallops besides another swiftly moving car at another time, and takes away the breath of the spectator with a continual exhibition of wonderful daring in a woman.

Helen, in the role of a station agent in the west, saves the life of a tramp telegrapher, who in turn is able to help her when bandits planning to rob a passenger train bind and gag her to prevent the girl from raising an alarm with a despatch to the next station.

As a reward for his assistance in preventing the hold-up the girl manages by writing the president of the company to get the tramp telegrapher a responsible position.

THE ROAD TO LAUGHTERLAND
EVERY THURSDAY ON THE GENERAL FILM PROGRAM BOOK THEM

"An Ambassador from the Dead." (Lubin. Mon., Nov. 22.)—This is chiefly a costume drama in which a miserly old man is influenced to mend his way by a vision of his youth. It is a fair number, although its ending is lacking in force. Melvin Mayo, L. C. Shumway, Velma Whitman and George Routh are the principals.

"Limberger's Victory." (Lubin. Tues., Nov. 23.)—A burlesque war picture of an old type, that will amuse lovers of extremes. Cheese is used with deadly effect. David L. Don appears assisted by a capable cast.

"The Meddlesome Darling." (Lubin. Two reels. Wed., Nov. 24.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"As the Twig Is Bent." (Lubin. Three reels. Thurs., Nov. 25.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"Meg o' the Cliffs." (Lubin. Fri., Nov. 26.)—A story of smugglers in which the heroine brings the unruly band to bay. There is a good love interest, that combined with the story of adventure makes the entire drama most enjoyable.

The storm effects are very good, while the photography throughout is fine. L. C. Shumway, Violet McMillan and Melvin Mayo are the leads. Mayo directed from a story by Maude Thomas.

"Blaming the Duck." (Lubin. Sat., Nov. 27.)—Billie Reeves in a very laughable reel produced by Earl Metcalfe. The story is clever, carrying a good situation throughout its whole length. Carrie Reynolds and Jessie Terry are chief in the support.

"My Hero." (Biograph. Fri., Dec. 3.)—A reissue of one of the Griffith subjects with a notable cast including Robert Harron, Dorothy Gish and Henry Walthall. The story is most enjoyable, working up to a good climax. The scenes and photography are very good. Just a few of the old men's makeups are too apparent.

"Just as I Am." (Selig. Two reels. Mon., Nov. 29.)—The sustained pathos of this picture is well maintained and the acting is exceptionally good. Perhaps some audience will not favor the consistent tragedy of the picture.

Wilson is affiliated with two crooks, Hungerford and Ramdell. Hungerford shoots a man, making it appear that Wilson performed the crime and Wilson is given a life sentence. He escapes from prison and goes to his native town where his mother lives.

He discovers Hungerford is living in the same town. He starts to go to the crook's home to kill the man who had wronged him, but passing a church he hears the hymn "Just as I am." Memories of his childhood and of his old mother surge back and he decides not to seek revenge.

As this resolution is made, he sees a child just about to be run down by a runaway horse. He manages to save the infant but is fatally injured in doing so.

The child is Hungerford's, and coming up the father recognizes the man he had wronged, and is left with a guilty conscience as punishment. The story was produced by Colin Campbell from the story of Lanier Bartlett.

"Bad Man Bobbs." (Selig. Tues., Nov. 30.)—Not shown for review; the story follows: Bobbs, a henpecked husband, leaves his militant wife and goes to a small western town. There he sees a bad man shoot up a saloon and gather up a bag of gold. He resolves to do likewise and gains a reputation as a bandit.

His overbearing wife, unknown to him, buys a nearby ranch and when Bobbs is confronted by his wife, she takes away his gun and makes him foreman of the ranch.

Pat Chrisman, Ethylyn Chrisman and Syd Jordan compose the cast. The drama was produced by Tom Mix from the story of Edwin Ray Coffin.

"A Jungle Revenge." (Selig. Sat., Dec. 4.)—Not shown for review; the story follows: Elbert Cary, a trapper of wild animals, is loved by Dais, a native woman. Cary admires Mabel Thorpe, daughter of a coffee planter. Cary invites Mabel to his home to see how wild animals are trapped. Dais, wild with jealousy releases a jaguar, who pursues Mabel to an isolated cabin, where Mabel closes the door just in time.

As Mabel fires through the window on the animal, the bullet strikes Dais, who is hiding in the bushes, and she is killed. Cary hears the shot, and arrives just in time to save Mabel from the animal.

The story was written by Minnie Strehz and produced by Thomas Santschi.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"The Postmaster of Pineapple Plains." (Falstaff. Mon., Nov. 22.)—A lively and well-produced comedy, in which several really funny types are introduced. Zeke, the gossipy postmaster is in love with Nell, the village belle, and when he reads a postcard to her sweetheart, telling him to be under her window that night, he impersonates the sweetheart, and attempts to grab the prize himself.

Nell's uncle has been ordered in a blackhand letter to lower $10,000 out the window, and it happens that Zeke is there and gets the chest of "treasure" which he finds on opening to contain a full-sized bulldog. Frank E. McNish, Janet Henry and Charlie Emerson are in the cast.

"The Baby and the Boss." (Thanhouser. Two reels. Nov. 23.)—Helen Badgeley, Mayor Mitchel, Commissioner Woods, and several other noted people appear in this attractive and unique story. A policeman saves the Baby and her sister in a runaway, and the Baby overhears her father say the policeman cannot get promotion without influence; so she goes to Dave Hinkey, "The Boss" with her plea.

Hinkey is attracted by her appeal, and takes her to the police games, where she sees the Mayor, and gets the promotion, which comes just in time to allow the policeman to marry her big sister. Scenes of the actual police games in New York are attractive and add striking interest to the picture. Dave Keleher, Marion Fairbanks, and Boyd Marshall are also in the cast.

"See America First." (Gaumont. Split reel. Tues., Nov. 23.)—Hartford, New Haven, and the beautiful surrounding country are visited by the Mutual Traveller; there are views of the principal buildings, historic spots, Yale University, and a study of the oyster industry. "Keeping Up with the Joneses" on the same reel, shows Pa McGinnis buying a "flivver."

"Stanley and the Slave Traders." (Centaur. Two reels. Thurs., Nov. 25.)—There are several stirring fights between Stanley's parties, and hordes of savages, in this number of the Centaur animal stories. Ada, as well as the White King, who has captured her, is taken by slave traders, who plan to carry the girl off with them.

Her sweetheart is also taken, but by strategy, he rescues her from a native hut. Stanley's party arrives just too late to prevent their recapture, but they again make their escape, and also rescue the White King, and disappear in the jungle.

"A Deal in Indians." (Cub. Fri., Nov. 26.)—Jerry is at his best as an almost escaped convict. He meets with a band of Indians, who make him one of themselves, and in this way he gets rid of his suit of stripes.

A studious professor takes him as a type, and leaving him in his home, trouble starts when several of the Indian tribe come to reclaim him. The house is in an uproar, which results in the police being called, and Jerry recognized and taken back where he belongs.

"The Widow Wins." (Casino. Sun., Nov. 28.)—A laughable farce, in which Cissy Fitzgerald appears as herself. Her part, for which she is well adapted, is that of the star in "Nobody's Widow." In order to get publicity, her press-agent gets her to register at a hotel under an assumed name, and then lose her mind.

She tells the officials that she is simply "Nobody's Widow," and when they search her belongings they find a slip with a name of a prominent banker. She enjoys the publicity immensely until a doctor gives her medicines, which she rebels at.

Then she gives the whole scheme away, and the angry hotel proprietor seizes the press agent and makes him drink the medicines. Budd Ross, Phil Nares and Helen King are also in the cast.

"Foiling Father's Foes." (Falstaff. Mon., Nov. 29.)—In this swift comedy, a country editor is introduced to bear the brunt of the displeasure of political candidates whom he has "roasted." They horsewhip him, and are about to ship him out of town, when his daughter returns from the architectural school, and assumes charge of the paper.

She first fits up the building with a series of trapdoors and water spouts, with buttons arranged on the desk to operate them. Then she leaves father in the office and rows out in the river in a boat. The politicians again call with their whips, and father presses the buttons, shooting them through the trap doors into the river.

They swim out to daughter's boat, but she keeps them in the water until they sign papers withdrawing as candidates. Colin Campbell, Louise Emerald Bates, Marshal Welch and Robert Whittier compose the cast.

The Silver Lining." (American. Two reels. Mon., Nov. 29.)—Vivian Rich and the American's new leading man, Albert Vosburgh, succeed in creating real interest in this tritest of stories. The sets and action are quite mediocre but the acting is unusually good.

Nell Allen, a stenographer, is supporting her father, who is dying of tuberculosis. When she loses her position because she does not accede to her employer's lust, her father is in danger of dying. She writes a letter to her former employer saying that she will comply with his wishes.

The father discovering his daughter's sacrifice, tears up the letter, and forges a check to support himself and his daughter. Discovered in this crime, he is sent to jail. His daughter goes to a Western town. There she marries a ranch-owner who becomes suspicious of her fidelity when he sees her in the company of her father, who has escaped from prison.

The misunderstanding is cleared up when the daughter explains the relationship, and the three find happiness and love.

"Bill Van Duesen and the Merry Widow." (Beauty. Tues., Nov. 30.)—Those who were amused by the past adventures of Billy Van Duesen will find this latest release satisfactory. The plot is not intricate, but it has some novel situations. John Steppling and Carroll Halloway play the leads, as usual, and make an attractive pair.

The susceptible VanDuesen falls in love with a girl whom he believes to be a young widow. This mistake is caused by the fact that her husband is out of town and she is wearing mourning for her dead father.

Not realizing his intentions, she unconsciously feeds the flames, and VanDuesen decides to propose. He is on bended knee before his fair inamorata, when the irate husband comes upon the comprising tableau. Billy, as usual, is disillusioned about the character of his lady love. Archer McMackin directed the picture.

"Spider Barlow Cuts In." (American. Fri., Dec. 3.)—The plot is so tenuous that it scarcely merits the name, but Winifred Greenwood, Edward Coxen and George Field manage to inject considerable hum by their excellent acting.

Spider Barlow, an expert cracksman, decides to pay a visit to the home of Rita Morey. As he is in the act of lifting the family silver, one of Rita's many suiters calls on the girl, who entertains him in the adjacent room.

Spider has the swag, but no means of making a get-away. The young man proposes to the girl and is accepted, and this operation consumes much time. Meanwhile, Spider is patiently waiting.

To bring the billing and cooing to a close, Spider impersonates the girl's father, stamping around coughing loudly. The young man hastily withdraws and the burglar is enabled to escape. Chas. Bartlett did the directing.

"Broadcloth and Buckskin." (Two reels. Mustang. Fri., Dec. 3.)—The old, old story of a polished Easterner and a rough cowboy pitted against each other for the hand of a girl, is the basis of this drama.

The Easterner in this case is the representative of an oil company trying to get a lease on the land owned by the girl. The young man falls in love with the fair landowner and informs her of the value of her holdings.

When she discovers his altruism her admiration is turned into love and the poor cowboy finds solace at the nearest bar.

The cast is made up of E. Forrest Taylor, Jack Richardson, Anna Little and Louise Lester. Frank Cooley was in charge of the directing.

"Film Tempo." (Mustang. Three reels. Sat., Dec. 4.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"Making Over Father." (Beauty. Sat., Dec. 4.)—Neva Gerber and Frank Borzage have struggled in so many pictures to win over the unwilling father to consent to their marriage that they have become quite proficient. The way they accomplish this difficult task in this Beauty picture is somewhat novel.

Hubert Haynes, impersonated by Borzage, kidnaps the father, taking him into the mountains, a captive, where he is to be held until he consents to the marriage.

Father believes himself an invalid and does not take kindly to the rough mountain life, but after a prolonged sojourn in camp, he regains his health, and elated at his new strength, is perfectly willing to let his daughter marry. William Carroll is also in the cast. The picture was directed by Archer McMackin.

PATHE EXCHANGE INC.

"New Adventures of Wallingford." (Pathé. Two reels.)—"A Transaction in Summer Boarders" shows J. Rufus and Blackie buying out a country hotel and fixing it up as a "classy" establishment, to be sold to Mr. Swivel. For guests, J. Rufus gets hold of a stranded burlesque company, one of which immediately becomes engaged to Mr. Swivel, and tells him the whole Wallingford plot.

At the same time the prospective victim's engineering sense discovers there is oil on the land, and offers Wallingford $5,000. Wallingford finally gets his price of $50,000, and then the victim tells him of the oil discovery. Blackie and the girls are in despair until Rufus notifies them that he had the oil put there himself.

"Neal of the Navy," No. 13. (Panama. Two reels.)—This number, entitled "Backed by the U. S. N.," finds Annette and her party at the Mission, where Annette is captured by the remaining conspirators, and hidden in a shanty. There Joe Welcher repents his part in the plots and turns on Hernandez, and in the fight which follows, the shack is blown up, and Joe is killed. Annette's party boards the boat for Lost Isle, and Hernandez and Inez, who stows away on board, deflect the compass with a piece of steel, and the ship goes off its course and is wrecked.

"Great While It Lasted." (Phunphilms.)—Beanskin and Snub are "up against it" for the wherewithal to pay their rent, when Beanskin inherits $20,000,000, and immediately begins to set the pace for society, with Snub as his butler. Envious villains steal the new millionaire's trousers in broad daylight, and he is obliged to take refuge in the lake, sending Snub for a barrel. When the two arrive home it is to find that there is a mistake in the inheritance, and the money is taken from them.

"A Squabble for a Squab." (Starlight.)—An unusually funny comedy, in which Heinie and Louie are employed by a fond lover to rescue his sweetheart from a girl's school. They get into the school but rescue the wrong girl, finally starting a pillow fight with the entire population of the dormitory. The mistress of the establishment, who was the "rescued" girl, returns and leads her cohorts in vanquishing the intruders with buckets of water.

"The Sultan's Paradise." (Globe. Split reel.)—Interesting and timely views of Constantinople and the shores of the Dardanelles and Bosphorus. All the landmarks, and ruins of ancient monuments are shown, and there is a short journey down the famous waterway. On the same reel is another chapter of the "Intimate Study of Birds."

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

Universal Animated Weekly," No. 194. (Wed., Nov. 24.)—Views of Dr. Haiselden, the Chicago physician who refused to save the life of a defective child; the tour of the famous Liberty Bell; a seventy-one mile gale in New York City; unveiling of a statue to Gen. Beauregard at New Orleans; coast defense guns in action; several war scenes in Canada, England, and France; and cartoons by Hy Mayer, are the features of this Weekly, which contains 15 separate subjects in all.

"When a Queen Loved O'Rourke." (Universal Special. Two reels. Second episode of the "New Adventures of Terrence O'Rourke." Mon., Nov. 29.)—This adventure finds the fighting Irishman in Bombay engaged in another hazardous adventure.

The action, although interesting as a whole, is in places involved to a puzzling extent. Much atention has been paid by Director Otis Turner to the spectacular side of the picture, with the result that a convincing air of realism has been obtained.

In support of J. Warren Kerrigan, Maude George, Harry Carter and Fred Church appear while H. L. Holland assumes Ray Gallagher's place as O'Rourke's servant and incidentally creates a good comedy character.

"The Supreme Test." (Broadway Universal Feature. Five reels. Mon., Nov. 29.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"Operating on Cupid." (Nestor. Mon., Nov. 29.)—Once more has the Nestor company staged a rough-and-tumble comedy in a hospital, and although it follows very conventional lines its laughs are quite thickly distributed. Billie Rhodes, Neal Burns and Ray Gallagher are the leads.

"The Phantom Fortune." (Gold Seal. Three reels. Tues., Nov. 30.)—A novel subject furnishing much enjoyment but not to be taken seriously because of the farfetched character of its situations.

A rich young man marries a motion picture actress and is disinherited but after a series of interesting developments the family are reconciled when they see the young wife. Hobart Henley and Louella Maxim are the principals in this feature.

"Safety First and Last." (Imp. Tues., Nov. 30.)—One of Roy Clements comedies with a cast including Victor Potel, Lillian Hamilton, Jane Bernoudy and Elmer Morrow. It's an extreme burlesque and contains several illuminating comedy features that will not pass without notice.

"He Was Only a Bathing Suit Salesman." (Victor. Three reels. Wed., Dec. 1.)—This is one of Harry Myers' comedies, and although unsettled as to one particular theme, it is laughable all the way through. Myers and Rosemary Theby do some of their best work.

The action is laid in Washington, Philadelphia, Baltimore and New York and scenes laid in each city add greatly to the realism.

"Lizzie's Watery Grave; or, Jimmy's Revenge." (L-Ko. Wed., Dec. 1.)—Once more we have Billy and Olive in a kid comedy. It concerns rivalry and revenge and has a number of laughs. Its appeal to children is large, although it will thoroughly amuse adults in search of a change.

"Gilded Youth." (Laemmle. Three reels. Thurs., Dec. 2.)—Not yet shown for review.

The Powers release for Thurs., Dec. 2 is comprised of two subjects. "The Three Dutch Jeanettes," a vaudeville number of average interest and a Ditmars educational entitled "The Life of the Salamander."

"His Good Name." (Powers. Two reels. Fri., Dec. 3.)—A typical Sydney Ayres subject that contains the usual appealing touch contained in all of his pictures. The story by F. McGrew Willis is well put together and interesting throughout. Doris Pawn and Val Paul furnish the support.

The Devil and Idle Hands." (Rex. Fri., Dec. 3.)—William Dowlan and Gloria Fonda appear in this novel melodrama that will please because, of its easy development and capable interpretation. The photography is average save in those scenes laid in the train where it is dim.

"The Connecting Link." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., Dec. 4.)—A western melodrama with a mining camp as the locale. It has a number of conventional characters that move in an exciting plot that culminates in a climax in which the villain attempts to blow up the powder house containing the heroine. Sherman Bainbridge, Edythe Sterling, Rex de Rosselli and Norbert Myles are the principals.

"Mrs. Prune's Boarding House." (Joker. Sat., Dec. 4.)—A very good comic number by James Dayton, produced by Allen Curtis, in which Max Asher and Gale Henry furnish some of the best comedy bits that they have done for a long time. William Franey is chief of the support in a fool's part of the sort he is fully capable of handling.

"Under a Shadow." (Rex. Two reels. Sun., Dec. 5.)—A fair melodrama that contains as its strong point much exciting action. In fact the action causes one to disregard some of the unconvincing situations.

The story by F. McGrew Willis concerns mistaken identity and an insanely jealous husband. In the end man and wife are brought together through their little child. Grethchen Lederer has the dual role, while others are Arthur Shirely and Lon Chaney. The double exposure scenes are not very well handled.

"Does It End Right?" (Laemmle. Sun., Dec. 5.)—The consensus of opinion will be that it doesn't. We are given a conventional story, well acted, one that works us up to a high pitch of excitement, but then instead of closing with a conventional though powerful climax, it comes to an abrupt halt.

Mayhap some will be pleased with this, but the ordinary mortal likes a complete ending. Richard Stanton directed Myrtle Gonzalez, Jack Nelson and Hayward Mack, all of whom do very good work.

"A Saphead's Revenge." (L-Ko. Sun., Dec. 5.)—A slapstick offering of qualities greatly pleasing to the many admirers of this sort of picture. Most of the action is staged in a cabaret. Ray Griffith in one of the principal parts does very creditable work. Peggy Pearce is also in the cast.

CHICAGO CROWD VOLUNTEERS FOR ESSANAY MOB SCENE WITH STIRRING RESULTS

E. H. Calvert, Essanay director, stirred up a neighborhood in the Chicago Ghetto, to get some exterior sets for "A Daughter of the City," a five-reel production, and procured the services of most of the neighborhood as actors.

Indeed, Mr. Calvert had much trouble in keeping that whole section of the city from appearing in the film.

The party of Essanay actors under the chaperonage of Mr. Calvert, arrived in the Ghetto about three o'clock one afternoon last week. He found his "location," a dingy tenement, and went in search of the owner. That gentleman could not be found. So Mr. Calvert took a chance, with the assistance of a kind policeman, whose beat lay in the quarter.

While taking the scene, a crowd gathered and when the director asked for volunteers, they swept forward. It was with difficulty the policeman kept back the envious who hadn't been chosen. And as the party left after completing the scene, four fights were in progress between the fortunate and unfortunates.

EXHIBITOR PRAISES DON-LUBIN COMEDIES

The popularity of the regular Tuesday Comedy release of the Lubin company, in which D. L. Don is appearing, is attested to by the following letter:

LUBIN FILM COMPANY,
Philadelphia, Pa.

GENTLEMEN: I take great pleasure in complimenting you on the D. L. Don comedies.

If my past ten years' experience as an exhibitor can be taken as a qualification, I most heartily pronounce the Don Comedies the best produced in a long time.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) WILLIAM HILKEMEIR,
811 Myrtle avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

For the past three weeks the Lubin company has been in receipt of almost a constant stream of letters and telegrams in congratulation for these self same pictures and they anticipate the featuring of Don in a series of multiple reel comedies in addition to the regular weekly single reel release.

BURTON GEORGE, ACTOR, SCENARIO WRITER AND DIRECTOR, NOW WITH EDISON

Edison has added a new director to its forces in the person of Burton George, also an actor and scenario writer. For his first Edison film he is working on a three-reel feature in which Pat O'Malley and Leonie Flugrath will appear in the feature roles.

Mr. George was born in Lake Charles, La., and spent fourteen active years in theatrical stock companies in New Orleans and, later, five years in stock in San Antonio and Denver, usually doing heavies. Then he went to New York City where, after playing in a well-known stock company, he experienced motion pictures for the first time in the old Owl Picture Company.

After another dip into stock work, he joined the Biograph forces, where he acted for about six months, before Griffith had yet become a director. From there he went to the Reliance for one year and then went out West with the New York Motion Picture Company, acting for two years under Director Thomas H. Ince.

His first directing opportunity came when he joined the Universal where, after a brief time as an actor, he became a director, writing and putting on an unusually large number of his own scenarios. The next three years were spent with Lubin, first as an actor and later as director. His appointment to the Edison directorship the other day followed this.

RICHARD STANTON, DIRECTOR OF "GRAFT," NEW UNIVERSAL SERIAL, THE FIRST EPISODE OF WHICH IS READY TO FOLLOW "THE BROKEN COIN"

FRANCES THOMPSON, RAVER, POSES FOR ARTIST VAN BUSKIRK

Frances Thompson, cast for the role of Myrtle Morrison, in the forthcoming Augustus Thomas production of "The Other Girl" for the Raver Film Corporation, has been posing at the studio of Carl Van Buskirk, on Fifty-fifth street, New York City, for a series of magazine covers.

Mr. Van Buskirk, at the invitation of Percy Winter, director of productions of the Raver organization, whom he has known for several years, visited the Raver studio during the rehearsals of scenes in "The Other Girl."

He was impressed with the brunette beauty of Miss Thompson, and as she was representative of a certain type he had in mind for his next series of pictures, prevailed upon her to grant him several sittings.

"BONDWOMEN," WITH MAUDE FEALY, FINISHED BY KLEINE

"Bondwomen," written especially for Maude Fealy's film premiere under the George Kleine management, was given its finishing touches at the Bronx Studios last week.

"Bondwomen" was carefully prepared and submitted to Miss Fealy prior to its making so that the scenario might contain the benefit of her suggestions. The result was to greatly increase the dramatic strength of the script as many bits of business were added with which Miss Fealy is familiar and which she does especially well.

"Bondwomen" exploits a theme well known to many housewives whose husbands believe them incapable of managing the family exchequer.

"Bondwomen" will be released through the Kleine-Edison Feature Service December 15.

MOTION is that universal vitality which may be well described as the impulse of life, and to the innermost depths of the mind is this realization conveyed sublimely by the art of animated photography. When a motion picture becomes a masterpiece, therefore, it fascinates one to the very depths of the soul. That is why THE BATTLES OF A NATION, with its wealth of living realities, its stupendous scope, its marvelous visualization of real war, its wealth of interest and endless cyclorama of colorful photography, is a charming refreshment for the eye and the intellect.

Gentlemen:-

The pictures from the War zone on the Austrian and Polish fronts, as shown at the Eighth Coast Defence Armory on the evening of October 22nd, at the meeting of the Officers of the Command were, by the consensus of opinion, the best and most instructive war pictures that any of us have as yet seen. To Military men, as well as to the general public, they are bound to be of great value.

I beg to express my deep appreciation of your courtesy in permitting us to view them.

Very respectfully,

C. F. Austin

"Her Inspiration"

Grace Williams and Curtis Cooksey

In a stirring, human drama

Taking that theme, so often seen, and striking home—an unworthy brother, a failure and a self-outcast, preying upon a sister's devotion and sacrifice—becomes the hunted man for murder. Into this sympathetic tale, Director Frank McGlynn has injected the life of the uncouth, passionate west, the palpitation of a life and love sorely afflicted. Tenseful and impressive. 3000 feet. Friday, December 10.

Margaret Prussing and Carlton King in the pretty drama, "Mary." 1,000 feet. Wednesday, December 8.

"The Lone Game," a drama produced in co-operation with the National Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis. A touching drama. Featuring Bessie Learn and Bob Walker. 1,000 feet. Wednesday, December 11.

BODY AND SOUL

Runs the gamut of human emotions in the vivid tale of a beautiful society girl, who, suffering from temporary loss of memory, wanders from home, into the life of one man, and, fickle in her affections, is branded on the breast as the property of her master. ¶ Recovering memory and returning to her social sphere, she becomes engaged to another man, only to face life's cruelest fate when, confronted by her former lover, he tears open her breast to show the brand of his proprietorship and then— ¶ But see it as produced by The Frohman Amusement Co. with the noted stage star

Gentlemen:

We wonder how the "other fellow" found time to telegraph on the opening night assuring you of success. This is our first breathing spell.

"The Strand" opened to the public Friday Evening at 6:30, the performance beginning promptly at 7:00 P. M. Opening overture by the Strand Symphony Orchestra —11 pieces. Leader Prof. Franz Koehler who, incidentally, has a Symphony Orchestra in the city of 57 pieces.

We opened with "The Lamb" and "My Valet." The house was crowded both performances, and it is estimated that we turned away over 2,000 people (seating capacity of the house 1500). The Triangle Photoplays, the orchestra, and the theatre itself, was a revelation to the people of Erie.

We are proud of the Triangle Service we are giving, which is so far ahead of anything heretofore shown that it is a revelation to the people, and we believe that if we are given an opportunity to entertain any of the representatives of the Triangle people, even of the good city of New York, they will be equally proud of the theatre in which their Photoplays are being presented.

Yours very truly,

STRAND AMUSEMENT COMPANY.

Continuation of answer to question No. 36.

Keeping in mind the description and illustrations, Figs. 26 and 27, it will be noted that the pressure and flow of the current is constant and continuous and in one direction. The system operates smoothly, everything revolving and traveling one way, out through the distribution system and translating devices back to the generator.

One might ask why should any system but the direct current generator and distribution system ever be considered. The answer is that for commercial reasons and for certain classes of work a different system, known as the alternating current generating and distribution system is preferable and more economical.

When it is desired to distribute direct current one has first to determine the voltage or pressure which is to be maintained. For reasons of safety, the voltage to be maintained on a direct current system is limited to about a maximum of 250 volts. Beyond this voltage the handling of the current becomes dangerous.

Considering that 250 volts is the limit, the generator at the power house must be constructed and designed to deliver this voltage over the distribution system throughout the city. 250 volts is too high a potential in many instances for incandescent lamps and for small motors; therefore, what is known as the Edison three-wire system of distribution was invented and applied by Mr. Edison.

With the Edison three-wire system, two electric generators, each one of 125 volt potential, are driven by an engine in the power station, and the armatures of these generators are connected in series which will give twice 125 volts, or 250 volts, on the two outside wires.

In order to make use of this generator installation, a third wire is run from the connection in the centre between the two armatures to the middle or neutral wire of the Edison three-wire system of distribution. It is evident that on account of each generator delivering 125 volts there will be a potential of 125 volts between the middle or neutral wire and either one of the outside wires.

I have stated that the generators were wound for 125 volts. As a matter of fact, when the power reaches the centre of distribution in the town or city, due to line losses, the voltage has by that time been reduced about 10 per cent, or maybe slightly less, giving approximately 110 volts on each side of the neutral wire, or 220 volts across the outside wires.

You know that these are the usual voltages maintained on the Edison three-wire system.

Fig. 28 illustrates in diagrammatic form the Edison three-wire system.

On this system there may be operated 110 volt incandescent lamps or motors or 220 volt incandescent lamps or motors. You may also operate a projector arc on 110 volt service with rheostat in series or you may operate on 220 volt wires a projector arc with a larger rheostat in series with the arc and the line.

In every instance with the direct current system you note that the motor may be wound for the line voltage without a rheostat in series. So may also the incandescent lamps be constructed for either 110 or 220 volts, but there are some of the very small lamps which cannot be constructed to operate on 110 volts and in this respect there is a disadvantage with the direct current system.

With the projector arc, however, which requires only about 50 volts, it is necessary to introduce a rheostat in series to reduce the voltage from the line to the arc voltage. The rheostat is wasteful; it uses up more than half of the energy used, and wastes it unnecessarily.

In simple words, the statement may be made that when it is necessary to reduce the direct current voltage on any direct current system it is necessary to use a rheostat in series with the load, which wastes a great deal of energy, depending upon the amount of voltage reduction required.

If special means are introduced for reducing the voltage, such as the installation of a motor and a generator, the expense of installing these devices for incandescent lamps, for instance, is considerable, and besides there is a certain amount of loss in motors and generators in accomplishing this work and the loss is as a general rule never less than 30 per cent., and in many instances as much as 50 per cent., excepting in cases where specially made electric economizers for D. C. to D. C. are employed for special purposes, such as projector arcs, where it is possible to accomplish the voltage reduction with a loss of only about 10 to 15 per cent.

It will also be observed that all direct current generators and motors must have commutators and brushes. No matter how well made these may be, they require attention and renewal and are in some instances the cause of sparking, which is detrimental in certain classes of manufacture. Therefore, the alternating current system of generation and distribution was invented to do away with the defects of the direct current system for certain purposes and conditions.

Family Theatre, Davenport, Iowa, Has Unique Features

Small "Set Back," Instead of Customary Stage, Makes Front Seats of Actual Value, While Sunken Garden, with Playing Fountain and Window Boxes, Make Interior Unusually Attractive—Lighting and Ventilating Systems Arranged Neatly and Artistically

ONE of the most unique houses which has been brought to our attention for some time is the Family theatre, of Davenport, Ia.

From the accompanying photograph, the following features are worthy of particular attention.

Instead of having a stage, as is customary when the screen is not placed directly upon the rear wall, a small "set-back" has been devised which gives depth and makes the front seats of actual value, which is not the case when they are crowded up close to the screen. In front of this "set-back," a sunken formal garden has been arranged, surrounded by a balustrade, in which are festooned artificial vines and flowers and around the outer edge of which are placed artistically-clipped box trees.

INTERIOR OF FAMILY THEATRE, DAVENPORT, IOWA

In the center is a fountain which is kept playing continuously, around the inner bowl of which there are series of electric bulbs which shine through the water and give a dim but effective light to the immediate stage surroundings.

On the side walls within the painted panel effects are window boxes filled with flowers, plants and vines. Emerging from these boxes and fastened as part of the wall are the lighting fixtures, from which the rays of light are thrown against the side wall and ceiling, all glare being kept from the audience, so that during the actual performance a dim light may be used which will in no way interfere with the picture but which will allow the auditorium to remain partly illuminated.

The ventilating system is arranged very neatly and artistically, there being two vents, one on either side of the "set-back." Beyond this are the fans which keep the house well supplied with fresh air.

This house is a model of neatness and is unique in its many new and novel arrangements. It is this attractive appearance which draws the people and, together with good pictures and proper projection, insures not only continued success for the house itself, but for the industry as a whole.

The house is equipped with a Bartola, an automatic ticker and cash register. Triangle and Metro features are shown, the program being run continuously from one to eleven p. m., at ten and fifteen cents.

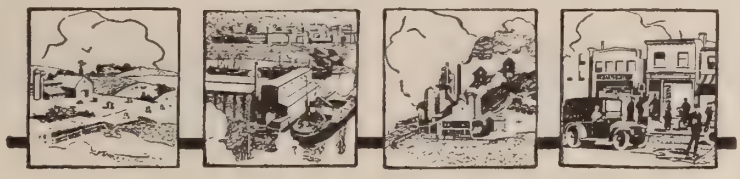
PEARCE ENTERPRISES COMPANY GIVES MINUSA TWENTY-FIFTH ORDER FOR SCREENS IN THE SOUTH

THE Minusa Cine Products Company, at St. Louis is working overtime to make several important installations for large theatrical interests, according to contract.

The company is in receipt of orders from the Saenger Amusement Company for two large screens, one to be shipped to the Hippodrome at Texarkana, and the other to the New Saenger Theatre, Alexandria, La.

Minusa has recently shipped three new screens to the Pearce Amusement Enterprises, New Orleans, La. Gene Pearce has recently given Mr. Anderson, treasurer of the Minusa Company, his twenty-fifth order for his circuit of theatres, and it is quite an important capture for Minusa, as the Pearce Amusement Enterprises are one of the biggest circuits in the South.

The Smith Amusement Company, with headquarters at Alliance, Ohio, has adopted the Minusa as its standard for projection screens and has already placed orders for four of its most important houses.



Likewise the Casino Amusement Company, with headquarters at Davenport, Ia., has equipped three of its principal theatres with Minusa screens and is going to install them in the balance of its chain of theatres as fast as it can make arrangements.

OPENING OF THE NEW CAMBRIDGE THEATRE OCCASION FOR COMMUNITY CELEBRATION

THE new Inman Square theatre in Cambridge, Mass., opened recently. W. Fred Bossner came on from New York to assist at the opening. "Carmen," the Lasky production, featured the first bill.

The beautiful house, well equipped with all modern appliances of the motion picture house, was filled to overflowing. The Governor and Mayor were among those present. Outside the square was decorated with colored lights and the business houses were illuminated especially for the occasion.

It is not often that the opening of a film house is made the occasion for a community celebration. This was. Paramount will be the feature service used at this theatre.

Business is booming!

Dayton, Ohio.

Merchants everywhere tell our 800 salesmen that business is booming.

Farmers have had two record crops, at big prices, with big demand at home and abroad.

Stocks of manufactured material are short, and labor is in great demand.

Exports largely exceed imports.

Factories are busy, many working overtime.

More freight cars are needed, and steamers are taxed to capacity.

People are living better, and spending their money more freely.

This country has the best money in the world, and more of it than ever before.

Such a combination of favorable circumstances never has occurred before, and probably will never occur again.

Billions of dollars are passing over the merchants' counters.

The people who spend this money want the best service.

They demand it in all kinds of stores, from the smallest to the largest.

They get it in stores which use our up-to-date Cash Registers, which quicken service, stop mistakes, satisfy customers, and increase profits.

Over a million merchants have proved our Cash Registers to be a business necessity.

PROPER USE OF RHEOSTATS AND RESISTANCE WITH CONVERTERS

F. J. P., Chelan, Wash.:—There are a dozen things I would like to say but I haven't time. One thing I want to ask Mr. Hallberg, what is the proper size carbons for 30 to 35 Amp. D. C. (Wagner)? Also, why is resistance necessary with D. C.? Why not generate at the proper arc voltage and save juice? I understand, of course, that resistance is necessary at the start to avoid a heavy short in striking the arc. I have a Wagner Converter and pull about 35 amperes off the line at 110 volts, but I use only 35 amperes at 50 volts. I cannot get a smooth light without dissipating about 25 volts in resistance. My outfit gives a perfect light, but the efficiency is very low, it seems to me. I have some good stunts for the operator. When I get the time to draw them out I'll send them in. One is a revolving slide holder and the other is a device to enable the manager to focus the picture while standing down in front close to the screen.

Ans.—For 35 ampere D. C. operation I recommend the smallest carbon combination, ⅝-inch cored top, and ½-inch solid bottom.

A better combination, if you run at 35 amperes full continuously, would be ¾-inch cored top and 9/16-inch solid bottom.

In some instances better results are obtained with a cored carbon in the bottom as well, but the old practice has been to use a solid carbon in the lower holder where the amperage is not over 35.

A complete discussion, or rather list, of the size carbons used for both direct and alternating current for amperages ranging from the lowest to the highest will be found in "Hallberg Helps," on page 148 of Accessory News section, issue October 9, 1915.

A resistance in series with the arc is always required with rotary converters and with all makes of constant potential motor generators.

Motor generators are now, however, made which deliver constant current to the arc, which are so designed that the voltage is automatically regulated by the generator itself, making it unnecessary to use a rheostat in series with the arc when such specially constructed motor generators are installed.

It would not be possible to operate an arc on a Wagner Rotary Converter without the rheostat in series with the arc because the machine is a constant potential device, which will deliver an unlimited amount of amperes up to the capacity of the rotary, if a rheostat or similar regulating device is not connected in series with the arc.

The arc itself is of such nature that it will pass or allow all the amperage which the feed wires can supply to pass over it, and it is a fact that the resistance of the arc decreases with the flow of current. Therefore, you will understand that it is impossible to run an arc on a constant voltage circuit without the rheostat, which is of such nature that the more current you pass through it, the greater its resistance becomes, and this is a happy condition because through this means, as the resistance of the arc decreases, the drop across the rheostat increases, with increased flow of amperes. Therefore, an equilibrium is obtained which gives a balance to the current flow through the arc and prevents a rush of current.

It would be impossible to cut out the resistance even after the arc is started because you would get a practical short circuit through the arc unless the resistance is in between to put a check on the current flow.

The drop of 25 volts in the resistance is plenty to allow for this regulating quality which is required, and if you wish to study this proposition further, there is a book entitled "Motion Picture Electricity," which gives complete information on this particular subject.

You are right in saying that the efficiency is considerably lower in machines where rheostats have to be used in series with the arc. In fact, the loss on your Wagner of 25 volts at 35 amperes represents a waste of 875 watts, in the rheostat, which is absolutely unnecessary with the more modern motor generators which dispense with the rheostat, and still regulate the arc.

The loss of 875 watts per hour on an average run of six hours per day makes a total loss of over 5 K. W. per day, which at the ten-cent rate means to the exhibitor 52 cents per day, or $156 per year.

I am pleased to note that you have a few new stunts for operators. I am much interested in the revolving slide holder, and that scheme of yours for focusing the picture at a distance, making it possible for the manager to focus the picture while observing it at a close range, is very interesting. I will look forward to your description of this device.

MODERN CALCIUM GAS-MAKING EQUIPMENTS

M. H. G., Long Beach, Cal.—Kindly explain how the danger of explosion was eliminated years ago when calcium light was produced with retort for exygen chemicals and dilute sulhpuric acid on zinc for hydrogen, bearing in mind that neither gas bag or tank were used for storing the gas. As I understand it, the gas was used as made. A thorough explanation of this procedure would be appreciated by traveling exhibitors who sometime arrive in a town where electricity is not to be had, and who do not care to be burdened with a cumbersome oxone outfit, the chemicals for which are rather expensive, considering the quality of light obtained. A small retort could be thrown into a trunk and forgotten until such time that it was needed.

Ans.—In the early days of stereopticon exhibits, something over twenty-five years ago, the customary, in fact, the only satisfactory light to be had was the ox-hydrogen. During that period the traveling exhibitor was put to considerable hardship by having to manufacture oxygen and hydrogen gas during the day for use during the evening performance.

As near as I can remember, the exhibitor was equipped with two large gas bags which were constructed on the type of bellows. The air was carefully excluded from these and then each bag was filled, one with oxygen and the other with hydrogen gas.

The hydrogen was produced in the regular way by putting zinc in a solution of water and sulphuric acid.

The making of the hydrogen was usually done in a specially designed glass or earthenware bottle in which the sulphuric acid solution was put with the zinc scraps. The gas was then, if I recollect correctly, run directly into the exhausted gas bag which was slowly filled by the pressure generated.

The oxygen gas was in those days produced by heating chlorate of potassium in a retort. Between the retort and gas bag there was usually introduced a water bottle through which the gas was forced to be washed before entering the oxygen gas bag.

It is hard to realize the difficulties experienced in those days, and it is a remarkable fact that very few if any explosions were heard of. To my knowledge the gas was never stored but always manufactured as required, the day before or during the day of the performance, and as long as one was sure of the absence of all air

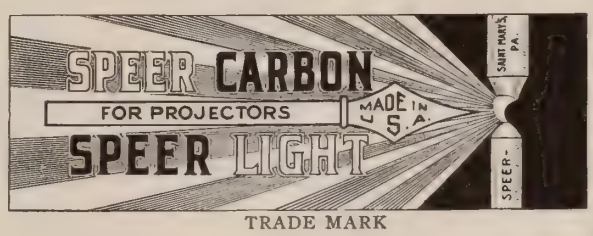
Kane, Penn'a, October 26, 1915.

Dear Sir:—

After having thoroughly tested your Projector Carbons, we are fully convinced that they are superior to anything on the market. They have given better satisfaction as to intensity of light, consumption of current and burn longer than any carbon we have ever used. Also a noticeable fact is that all the carbons are uniform. You can select any one out of a bundle and get the same results, without the annoying difference found in so many different makes of Projector Carbons.



Hoping that Speer Projector Carbons meet with big success in the future and thanking you for your past favors and personal attention to us, we remain Very truly yours,

A "MINUSA" SCREEN OWNER COUNTING ANY DAYS' RECEIPTS

Yes, we admit, this looks too good to be true, but an enthusiastic screen owner in central Ohio wrote us the other day that he could have bought THREE SCREENS out of the profits of the FIRST DAY with a "Minusa Gold Fibre Screen."

If you want to "make a killing" every day, you had better get the screen that will show up in their "true light" the reels you pay good money for.

As time goes on the public are becoming more and more critical, and it is up to you to "stem the tide" of criticism by putting in a screen that "Holds your Patronage."

The "Minusa Gold Fibre Screen" is "BUILT BY BRAINS" to fit your own theatre, so send in your specifications today and start a campaign to "KILL COMPETITION."

from the hydrogen gas bag and fittings, there was really no danger in lighting the hydrogen gas at the jet which would then light like any other gas burner.

A more modern way to make oxygen gas is to apply water to sodium peroxide, but any of the home-made gas-making outfits are expensive, troublesome and risky; therefore, I would recommend the more modern calcium gas-making equipments such as the model "B" which uses specially-prepared cakes of "oxone" with water for making oxygen gas, and ether for producing the hydrogen. With these gas-making outfits there is absolutely no danger, and the gas is made only as required and when required, and while they are expensive to operate, costing as much as 90 cents to $1 per hour for a standard size flame, they are by far the cheaper in the long run. The model "B" gas-making outfit weighs only about 35 pounds, and comes in a carrying case, and the chemicals do not weigh excessively.

I would much rather carry a small gasoline engine driven electric plant for road work which can be had, weighing less than 400 pounds, or one of the model "B" gas-making outfits if the calcium light would be of sufficient strength, than I would consider carrying any form of gas-producing apparatus, for ox-hydrogen lighting.

HOW OPERATORS CAN AVOID EYE "SUNBURN" FROM THE ARC

THE composition of the light of the arc has been investigated by scientists, and stated to be as follows: Taking the intensity of the yellow rays at unity, the red rays are 2:09; green rays, 0.99; blue, 0.87; indigo, 1.03, and violet, 1.21.

Comparing the analysis of the arc light with direct sunlight and giving the red rays a value of unity the green rays are 193, violet 228, and for the arc light with the red rays at unity value, green is 203 and violet 250.

The composition of the light of the arc may be changed by the hardness of the carbon, the material of the core, and by the current and voltage. Hardness usually determines the maximum temperature of the crater, while the current and voltage alter the proportions of the light fluxes coming from the yellow crater and from the violet arc stream. The vapor of the core acts to color the light, as well as to determine the volatilization point of the crater.

The color of the arc light approximates very closely to sunlight and it has the quality of producing a similar sunburn. Extreme care is necessary on this account in avoiding exposure of the eyes to the arc at close range, otherwise a painful sunburn of the eye is apt to result. The eyes should never be used to look directly at the arc light. Some protecting device should be used at all times over the eyes when looking at the arc. Operators should make more use of pinhole projection of the image of the arc on the wall or ceiling and make less use of the colored glass ports.

DIFFERENCES BETWEEN BALTIMORE OWNERS AND OPERATORS ABOUT HEALED

THE differences between the exhibitors and the motion picture operators in Baltimore have been practically straightened out. Following a meeting held last week it looked very much as if a number of the operators would walk out, but by the early part of this week developments caused a decided change in the situation and the skies cleared.

Most all of the leading exhibitors in the city have signed an agreement presented by the operators, which has been somewhat modified from the original program. Others are now holding out and are employing independent operators, but the latter class are a very small minority.

BRIEF REVIEW OF PRINCIPLES INVOLVED IN PROJECTING RAYS OF LIGHT ON THE SCREEN

By Herbert W. Andem.

THE following are the principles involved when projecting rays of light. These will be reviewed briefly for the reader who, having no knowledge of the science of optics, wishes to understand something of the nature of optical projection apparatus.

First, there must be a source of light. It may be an oil lamp, a lime-light, an incandescent lamp filament, an electric arc-light and daylight. The last named source of light—daylight—was the first light used in optical projection. An apparatus for using this course of light was term the port lumiere. This apparatus was invented, early in the eighteenth century, by a Dutch professor of natural philosophy, named Gravesand.

The definition of projection, in the optical sense, is the production of a picture or image—usually a magnified image—upon some kind of a screen or visible plane, by means of light and lenses.

It is manifest that the excellence of the projected picture, that is, the brightness and definition in the picture on the screen, must depend upon many practical conditions. Hence the many confused questions received by manufacturers of optical apparatus from users not being acquainted in the principles involved governing the use of the light, the condensing lenses and the objective lens.

The most startling property to be set forth, is, that the image on the screen is not formed by the objective lens. The popular idea is that this lens does form the image, that is, the magnified image seen on the screen.

A first and cardinal truth to grasp is this fact, that all power of really forming an image resides in those rays of light themselves by which any object is visible to us.

From the self-evident fact, it must be accepted that objects are visible by means of rays of light which they either emit of themselves (as the arc-light) or reflect back from some other luminous source (as the screen). All one need assume is that these rays are sent out in straight lines in all directions and continue to travel in straight lines so long as they travel the same medium, as the air, for instance.

Rays of Light Really Form Images

It is a fact that every ray which thus proceeds from any point of an object, really forms an image of that point of the object upon any surface on which it falls. It should be clearly understood that if the mere bare rays of light, by themselves alone, had not this power of forming images, all the lenses in the world could never do it.

To prove this fact, remove the objective lens. Then cover its place with a piece of tin-foil. In the centre of this tin-foil pierce a hole the size of a pin-point. A projected picture appears on the screen, but it is very poorly illuminated according to the distance of the screen from the tin-foil. This is because only one ray from each point of the object is allowed to pass to form the image on the screen. Pierce another, or several, pin-holes around this centre hole. Each hole allows another image to be formed and it may be seen how they confuse each other from studying the diagram representing a single hole in the tin-foil. Also it will be seen why a slide, or film, has to be placed upside-down and from right to left to have the projected picture on the screen appear in its correct form. Thus will be understood at once how the rays crossing at the pin-hole go from the bottom of the slide to the top of the screen, and from the right to the left, so that the slide must be inverted to make the image come right on the screen. And also, it will be seen, how and why the relative size of the image on the screen depends upon the ratio between the distance of the object, O, from the pin-hole, A, and that of the screen-image I.

Remove the tin-foil. A flood of rays can now proceed from every point of the object alike to any one point on the screen. The screen is now lighted up well enough from the superposed images of all the points in the slide, from which no one stands out particularly, resulting in no one image being formed, but a jumble of many images.

The objective lens is necessary then, not to form the image, but, to control, as it were, the large number of rays forming the projected picture—to bend into one point all the rays from any one point in the slide to a relatively one point in the magnified picture on the screen or other reflecting medium.

The third factor in the projection of light is the condenser. The sole purpose for making this a part of an optical projection apparatus is to bend as many of the rays of light, emanating from whatever source if used as named above, to pass through the slide. In the cheaper toy apparatus a single lens is used, generally of a plano-convex shape. The better class of instruments use two plano-convex lenses mounted with their curved surfaces facing and almost touching each other. This style of mounting has given satisfaction and is hard to be improved upon. Many attempts have been made to use a greater number of single lenses and of different shapes, the object being to collect a great number of the rays coming from the source of light.

17 DETROIT THEATRES REPORTED WITHOUT ADEQUATE FIRE PROTECTION

BECAUSE the department of buildings, Detroit, Mich., of which Henry A. Upont is chief inspector, has granted permits for the erection of moving picture theatre buildings in violation of the building code, directly contrary to the advice of the corporation counsel, there are said to be about 17 such establishments operating illegally in Detroit, having no adequate fire protection, and the building commission has been advised to halt the erection of another theatre at 1499 Michigan avenue, now partially completed.

This advice was contained in a letter to the building commission from Assistant Corporation Counsel James H. Lee, in which he said: "The entire action in this matter has been contrary to the legal opinion given you and C. Howard Crane, the architect."

The permit for the theatre in question was issued to William Burnstein and Jacob Cohn. It seems some of the theatres erected during the past year and seating 400 have been avoiding certain stringent installations for fire protection under the guise of assembly halls.

G. A. METCALFE, SAN FRANCISCO, PREPARES TO BRANCH OUT

G. A. METCALFE, whose supply establishment on Golden Gate avenue, San Francisco, is one of the largest on the Pacific Coast, is branching out and will shortly have the territory well covered. He is now preparing to open a branch at Los Angeles and left recently to look over the field there and secure a suitable location.

Plans are also under way to open at Seattle, Wash., and this branch would have been established before this but for the slide in the Panama Canal, which has interfered with the arrival of stock.

NEED OF SPECIALIZING IN CONSTRUCTION AND ORNAMENTATION OF THEATRES

By A. F. Powers, Designers for Decorators' Supply Co.

NEVER in the history of building construction has there been such necessity for specializing as in the motion picture theatre of today. The rapid development of this industry has been unparalleled, and the necessity of keeping pace with this development has been felt not only by the master producer of the highest type of motion pictures, but equally by the exhibitors in even the smallest towns in the country.

THE ORPHEUM, ST. JOE, MO., AFTER REMODELING

While the producer would not attempt the staging of a picture without an organization of experts in every branch of the work from the scenario writing to the final printing of the film, the exhibitor has had to entrust the designing and building of his theatre in the majority of cases to those inexperienced in this class of buildings.

The success of the moving picture theatre is due not alone to the location and the class of entertainment given, but largely also to the convenience and comfort afforded its patrons by proper arrangement of seating, aisles, stairways and by the atmosphere of refinement in appointments and decorations.

The writer in his many years of experience in this class of building designing has attempted to solve the many problems which confront the exhibitor by careful study and close observation of not only the ornamentation of the front and interior, but in the general arrangement and appointments of the theatre, the proper elevation or slope of the auditorium and balcony floors and the convenient arrangement of stairways, entrances and exits; in fact, a general consideration of the various features necessary to the construction of the modern picture palace.

THE SAME THEATRE BEFORE REMODELING

While space does not permit a thorough consideration of the different angles of this problem in one article, the writer will attempt in following issues to take up one by one different points in theatre construction which he hopes will be of some value to the readers.

In the selection of materials for the different parts of construction of the fronts the exhibitor considers not only the cost and durability of the material to be used, but its power of attraction to the passerby; it must be attractive and the cost must be within his means; the up-to-date exhibitor knows that with the constant changes in the moving picture industry he cannot build in many instances a building which will meet the requirements for years to come, especially in the smaller type of theatres and in buildings in which he has only a leasehold interest.

The use of ornamental plaster composition decorations lends itself especially to this type of building both in view of its attractive appearance and its reasonable cost. In the use of this material again is shown the necessity of specializing as the cost would be increased greatly if it were necessary to make special models for each ornament used in the decoration of each theatre.

To meet this demand The Decorators' Supply Company issue a catalog containing half-tone illustrations of many different styles of theatre decoration and showing the possibilities of the use of this material when artistically designed to suit the requirements.

The above illustrations show how the entire character of the building can be changed without a great expense by properly designing the front so that it still retains the proper relation to the rest of the building.

In a later issue the writer will show the proper method of obtaining the correct pitch of the auditorium floor so that every seat will have the proper elevation in relation to its distance from the screen.

McMAHAN LEASES THE FOREST, CINCINNATI, LOCATED IN EXCLUSIVE RESIDENCE DISTRICT OF CITY

Cincinnati, O., Nov. 20.

I. W. McMAHAN, of McMahan & Jackson, and Charles Schaengold have completed a deal whereby they have leased for a period of eleven years with the privilege of purchase, the Forest theatre on Forest avenue near Reading road, Avondale. The Forest theatre is practically a new house, and was built less than two years ago by the Auditorium Theatre Company at a cost of $60,000. The theatre has very modern equipment, including a Wurlitzer unit organ, is fireproof and one of the prettiest playhouses in Ohio. Its seating capacity if 800, and that of an airdome adjoining it, which was included in the lease, will seat 1,000 persons.

There is a story of poor judgment against expert advice in the operation of a picture house, back of this lease. Owners of the theatre represented some of the wealthiest business men in Cincinnati, including Lee Ach and George W. Harris.

Until several weeks ago the theatre was a big money maker. William K. Howard, formerly connected with the World Film Corporation in this city, had been at the head of its management for about eight months. A program of excellent photoplay features was presented during the period of his management at 10 cents, with a reduction of 5 cents for children. The business was so good, indeed, that the board of directors discussed the advisability of raising this price. The scheme seemed feasible, inasmuch as the theatre is located in the center of the wealthiest and most exclusive residence district of Cincinnati. Howard and Lee Ach, the president, warned against this policy of increased prices.

"It would be all right," said Howard, "if the first-run theatres in Cincinnati would increase their admission prices accordingly. We would then have little trouble. But, it is suicidal for us to increase our prices on second and third-run pictures, when the down-town houses are only charging ten cents. Even if our patrons can well afford to pay the increased charges, they will feel that we are unfair and refuse to come to our theatre."

Against this advice, however, the directors increased the admission price from 10 to 15 cents for adults and from 5 to 10 cents for children. Almost instantly, the patronage dropped until the house was no longer making a profit. Rather than acknowledge themselves beaten by public opinion, the directors of the company decided that it would be better to turn over the control to other parties.

Howard, who is one of the youngest and most popular motion picture men in the city, resigned, as McMahan announced that he will take over the active management of the house himself.

Howard is considering a number of offers, some of which will take him away from Cincinnati, if he accepts.

The first thing that McMahan did in assuming the control of the house was to reduce the admission prices to their former amounts. He also arranged to place a canopy over the sidewalk, place powerful lights in front of the lobby and improve the house in a number of ways. He has announced that he will show big features, having entered into agreements for the V-L-S-E, Fox, Paramount, Triangle, World and other large feature exchanges.

NEW IDEAS CARRIED OUT IN BUILDING OF THE STRAND, BIRMINGHAM

ONE of the largest and prettiest picture houses in the South is the Strand, Birmingham, Ala., seating nearly 1,000 persons. The Strand cost $35,000; but this does not represent all that has been expended, for the amount merely represents the alterations and enlargement of two buildings, from which was evolved the theatre. Absolutely new ideas have been carried out by the owners. For one thing, the arrangement of the opera chairs is such as to give every one an uninterrupted view of the screen, no columns being used for the support of the roof, steel beams being employed instead.

Alabama is on record as being one of the best motion picture states in the South; and so T. S. Abernathy, president and general manager of The Strand, and his associates, inaugurated more than a year ago an idea which was expected to give Birmingham one of the finest theatres in the Gulf states. That they have succeeded far beyond even their expectations is borne out by the public's verdict.

The Strand is absolutely fireproof, constructed almost entirely of concrete. The Italian renaissance style of architecture has been followed throughout. In comforts and conveniences for its patrons, The Strand of Birmingham is said to closely approximate The Strand of New York City.

An immense pipe organ has been installed. Prof. Rienzi Thomas, known as an artist of exceptional ability, has been engaged. An eight-piece orchestra will be maintained permanently in addition to the pipe organ. Triangle, Paramount, D. W. Griffith and other releases will be the principal source of feature productions for The Strand.

VANCOUVER TO READJUST SYSTEM OF TAXING PICTURE THEATRES

AS the result of a complaint made to the finance committee of the city of Vancouver by H. A. Keswick, of the Fairmount theatre, G. Corriveau, Jr., of the Grandview, and W. W. Armstrong of the Fairview (all in the residential districts of the city) Alderman Gale recommended a re-adjustment of the present system of taxing moving picture theatres, with a view to making the burden of the smaller houses somewhat lighter.

The present tax is $150 per year, irrespective of seating capacity, but it is now proposed to have this reduced to $100 for theatres seating 375 or less, and add a tax of twenty cents per seat for all seats over that number. It was pointed out by the complaining managers that with a flat rate their yearly tax per seat figures out at from 40 to 60 cents, while in some of the large downtown houses the average is from 16 to 18 cents per seat.

After some discussion the matter was turned over to City License Inspector Jones for further consideration. Mr. Jones is contending for a retention of the present rate, and cites the fact that the proprietors of downtown houses are under much greater expense in every way than are those doing business further out. He also calls attention to the fact that Vancouver's tax is lower than that of any other Canadian city except Toronto.

CALIFORNIA

MESSRS. Ed. Millard and Barney Cavanaugh have sold the Isis theatre, Los Angeles, to J. C. Quinn, who was formerly an exhibitor in that city and managed the Garrick, Bijou, Banner, Ideal and other houses. The policy of a regular program at five cents admission is to continue. A number of changes has been made at the theatre.

Frederick Miller, owner of Miller's theatre at the junction of Spring, Main and Ninth street, Los Angeles, has leased the Alhambra theatre at 731 South Hill street, and has taken possession.

The Laughlin theatre at Long Beach, owned by Homer Laughlin, real estate broker and capitalist of Los Angeles, was opened recently under the management of Archie Levi. This theatre, which occupies the rear portion of a fire-proof concrete and steel constructed building, has a seating capacity of eight hundred. A feature of the theatre is the decidedly new decorating scheme which consists of eight oil paintings each 8 x 12, which are lighted at all times. The opening program consisted of "In the Palace of the King." The policy will be a feature program with three or four changes weekly. Music is furnished by a five-piece orchestra. The advent of this theatre in the Long Beach field has caused much speculation in that it is the first to be built in the city section of this beach town, all of the other motion picture and legitimate theatres being located on the "Pike" which faces the ocean.

Walker & Son, is the name of the firm building a new suburban theatre at the corner of Washington Boulevard and Fifth avenue in the residential section of Los Angeles.

The old Family theatre at Fruitvale is now being conducted under the management of Charles E. Muns.

The G. & G. theatre at St. Helena, was recently taken over by Hollingsworth.

A. R. Moore, of Porterville, is planning to erect a new moving picture house in that city.

The McCloud River Lumber Company has taken over the opera house at McCloud, and has placed it in charge of D. S. Painter.

The management of the Sequoia theatre at Eureka, has been taken over by R. Kerby.

The Majestic theatre at Tulare is being remodeled and the seating capacity increased from three to six hundred by the new owner, H. Lester.

J. L. Davis has purchased the Angeles theatre at Angels Camp.

The Mosswood theatre, Telegraph avenue and Broadway, Oakland, has been reopened by a Mr. Matthews, after having been closed for some time.

The York theatre at Twenty-fourth and York streets, San Francisco, has been reopened after having been dark for weeks.

The Theatre Richmond has been opened at Richmond. This house was formerly conducted under another name but has been closed for some time.

G. Johnson has taken over the Star theatre at Newman, formerly conducted under the direction of H. Levy.

CANADA

Plans have been perfected for the erection of a motion picture theatre at the corner of St. Catherine street, east of St. Timothy street, Montreal, Quebec.

The Connaught theatre, Montreal, formerly the Colonial, is being redecorated. A new entrance has been put up, a new proscenium built and the theatre will open shortly with a varied program.

The St. Denis theatre, building in one of the best parts of the City of Montreal, is nearing completion. This theatre is expected to open with the arrival of the new year and will be under the direct supervision of H. Conover as managing director of the company. Mr. Conover is also manager of the Imperial theatre.

The Regent theatre, of Montreal, the $100,000 motion picture playhouse, one of the ventures of the Independent Amusement Company, headed by Geo. Nicholas, is slated to be opened the first of the year. The theatre will have a seating capacity of 1,200.

Mr. Browse, general manager for the Mark Brock Enterprises, was a recent visitor to Montreal and closed for an exclusive first and second run in Ottawa of the Fox Film products.

Mr. Applegath, owner and proprietor of a number of varied interests in Toronto, Ontario, has been spending considerable money on the renovation and redecoration of his two moving picture theatres in that city. The Red Mill, completely redesigned, is now running first run Paramount films, while the former Crystal Palace, now known as His Majesty's theatre, is showing features.

The King George theatre is the latest addition to the amusement facilities of St. Catherines, Ontario. This new house opened the 22nd of November.

The Strand theatre, Ottawa, situated in Hintonburg, a residential suburb, is about to be opened, by reputable and well-known business men in Ottawa.

The equipment of the Gem theatre, North Vancouver, B. C., was disposed of recently at a bailiff's sale, and was bought by A. McLaren, the landlord, who had levied a distress warrant for overdue rent. P. A. Allen was formerly in charge of the Gem, but had not been running for some time.

Brown & Guerrard have opened the Empress theatre at Kamloops, B. C., which has recently been dark. A seven-piece orchestra has been installed, and so far good business has been done at ten and fifteen cents.

ILLINOIS

The Hippodrome theatre at Peoria has booked the Triangle program.

The new Castle motion picture theatre, Bloomington, which is to be conducted by Lyons and Schnepp, will be completed shortly and the managers expect to open on December 15. They have secured the exclusive use of Triangle pictures in Bloomington.

A number of citizens of Milford plan to open a motion picture theatre there within a short time.

The motion picture theatre of Diacomo and Donna at Coal City, was recently destroyed by fire.

INDIANA

Mrs. Annie E. Denoe is now sole owner of the Hamilton theatre, at 2116 East Tenth street, Indianapolis. She intends opening an airdome in the coming spring.

The Majestic theatre, at Monticello, which was formerly known as the Arc theatre, is to reopen under the management of H. H. Hornbeck. New red plush opera chairs, and a new curtain have been installed and the ceilings, walls and woodwork has been painted in pleasing colors. A rectifier also has been installed to do away with the flicker, so common when the alternating current is used. Five and ten cents admission will be charged.

An orchestra composed of a pianist, violinist, clarinet, cornet, bass viol and trap drummer has been added to the new Victoria theatre, at Peru.

A Seeburg orchestral has been installed at the Crystal theatre at Madison. A new mirror screen also has been added. The orchestra is being operated by Manager Maurer's wife.

The Palace theatre, at Peru, owned by James Chandler, was destroyed by fire November 15. The loss was estimated at $4,000, with no insurance. The building, owned by John J. Kretuzer, was damaged to the extent of $1,000. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Fire, which originated in the operating booth of the Royal theatre, at Frankfort, November 12, destroyed seven reels of film, "Damaged Goods," and damaged the playhouse and equipment to the extent of $3,000. An audience filled the house to the doors when a spark from an electric wire struck the film. A flash followed and all seven reels of the picture were consumed and the flames leaped from the air vents in the booth into the auditorium. The management of the theatre succeeded in getting the audience out of the theatre without an injury. Ray Thayer, the operator, was seriously burned before he could leap from the booth. James H. Staley operates the theatre. The loss on the building is covered by insurance.

KANSAS

The Steel theatre at Buffalo has a new manager, R. C. Martin, who has managed shows in many parts of the State.

A modern picture show theatre is to be erected in Mankato, by J. P. Fair.

John Wendell is now the manager of the Bonham Opera House, in Clay Center. The name of the theatre will be changed to the Royal. Mr. Wendell has managed shows for a number of years in Holton.

Plans have been completed for the erection of an $8,000 moving picture house in Augusta. G. M. Smith will manage it.

A new house has been opened at Ellis, by Robert Maxwell.

A new theatre has been opened at Armourdale, Kansas City, Kansas, by R. R. Biechle.

George Smith and Frank Yates are erecting a new theatre at Agenta that is to cost $7,000.

The new Beeson theatre at Dodge City is rapidly nearing completion and will be opened within the next thirty days.

W. S. Shively has opened the new Princess theatre at Eureka.

KENTUCKY

After being closed for several days during which time the house had been renovated and redecorated, the Walnut theatre opened November 14 with the first of its offerings to Louisville of Triangle films. One of the attractive innovations at the Walnut is the replacing of boy ushers with girls tastefully gowned and wearing jaunty tri-cornered caps decorated with a tri-colored cockade. An orchestra of eighteen pieces furnished music under the direction of Edward R. Day.

A. B. Arnett, manager of the Majestic theatre, at Midway, has leased a motion picture theatre at Winchester and will take charge of it December 1. Mr. Arnett will continue to operate the Majestic theatre and will reside in Midway for the present.

C. W. Metcalf has bought the Lyric theatre at Pineville, Ky. The purchase price was $16,000. It is understood that Mr. Metcalf made the purchase for Dr. J. H. Hendron of Cary. Alex Tinley who previously had charge of the theatre, will manage the house.

The new Dixie theatre opened November 12 at Glasgow. Shows will be given each afternoon and evening with admission five and ten cents.

Remodeled throughout, the Star theatre, one of Lawrence's most popular playhouses, reopened November 12.

MICHIGAN

M. L. Gay is building another picture theatre in Morenci. It will occupy a lot on Main street, 20 x 120 feet. C. F. Matthes & Son, of Adrian, are the contractors.

A theatre is being erected at Caro for Charles Montague. Work on the foundation is now under way but the theatre itself will not start before spring. Plans call for a structure 48 by 103 feet in size, two stories high, fireproof construction, and costing under $30,000.

Plans are now completed on the new Ferry Field theatre. West Grand River avenue and the Boulevard, Detroit. This theatre will cost about $50,000 and will seat over 1,000. A. Arthur Caille, president of the Majestic theatre company, is also at the head of this new enterprise.

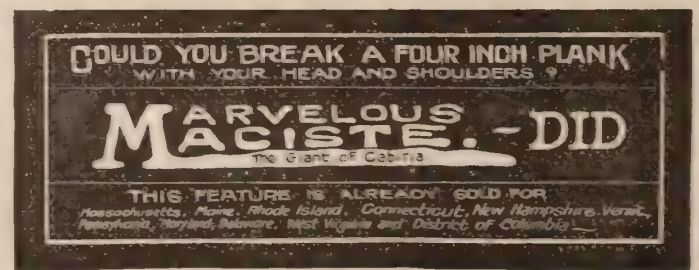
It is reported that a man named Seebalt, who owns considerable property on Grand River avenue, in the neighborhood of the Grand Boulevard, Detroit, also contemplates the erection of a photoplay theatre in that district.

If plans outlined by Elwyn M. Simons, of Adrian, are carried out that city will have a new photoplay house on East Maumee street that will be 45 by 150 feet in size.

Fuller Claflin, architect in the Elks Temple building, Detroit, has under consideration the construction of a chain of moving picture houses throughout the country. It is reported that he is now negotiating with New York capitalists for a mammoth duplex theatre to be erected in that city. Mr. Claflin designed the new Duplex theatre which is nearing completion in Detroit and which will open soon.

E. N. Brown has opened a vaudette at 634 Stocking avenue, Grand Rapids, at a cost of $5,000.

P. F. Marquette and P. C. Schram have purchased the Orpheum theatre, Kalamazoo, from the Kalamazoo Amusement Co. The latter concern will continue to operate the Elite, Lyric and Colonial theatres. The new owners will make extensive alterations and improvements at once.



The Grand Theatre, Menominee, has been sold to A. T. Campbell, formerly of New York, who will make many improvements.

The new $50,000 Majestic theatre and the Marx theatre in Wyandotte have been sold to The Majestic Theatre Co., of Detroit. The new Majestic is now in course of erection and was promoted by the Harris & Warren Amusement Company. Mr. Caille and Mr. Guthard, the receivers, already control the Majestic, Mexine, Fine Arts and the proposed Ferry Field theatre in Detroit.

Music and the Picture

HIGH CLASS PICTURE THEATRE OFFERS GOLDEN OPPORTUNITIES TO MUSICIAN WHO STUDIES HIS ART

FROM every source you hear of the great success of "The Birth of a Nation" on tour. There are quite a few companies on the road all doing well, and it should be interesting to the musician to know that twelve or more musicians tour with each company. How long since a so-called legitimate production has been able to carry as many musicians? This is only a forerunner of what can be expected in the future, for there have been other picture productions during the year that would have met with the same success, had they been handled in the same manner. Musicians of renown are awaiting favorable opportunities for entering the field of picture music. It is no longer a question of time when picture music will rank third.

As musicians, it is our sacred duty to allot positions one and two to "Grand Opera" and "The Symphony Orchestra," where it rightfully belongs.

The gold fields of Alaska never offered better opportunities to the prospector, than the high class picture theatre offers to the musician today. Knowing the above as facts, it is hard to believe that there should be any musicians with an aversion to playing pictures. A few years ago few capable musicians were playing in picture theatres, only because they refused to synchronize their music. The theatre therefore prospered with those musicians who overcame their lack of musical knowledge, by playing their limited repertoire at the proper times, exerting their intelligence more than their musical capabilities. The limited repertoire, made necessary a lot of changes in picture players, for the audience demanded something new. This is entirely changed.

The exhibitor of today is looking for the capable musician, for he has learned that musical results are more surely and easily attained by changing the music and not the player. There are still some who think that a picture cannot be played as well with music than improvisation, but those that I have come in contact with, while active in the picture industry, do not come in frequent contact with the picture theatre audience. Picture music has made great strides in the last two years, still it is only the beginning of what will be in the near future. It behooves every ambitious musician to exert himself and help in the work of picture music perfection, by making a thematic study of the music she or he uses and let brother musicians know what picture results they have been able to illustrate with the numbers they employ.

I should be pleased to reserve a space each week for the giving of my reader's suggestions as to certain musical numbers and what they will musically illustrate in picture playing. Suggestions for musical or other effects will also be welcome. The Music Plots, which appear in each issue are primarily meant to give the reader, as well as the player, the thematic picture value of the number suggested. The ultimate success of picture music depends upon the concentrative thought of many, not the individual.

SUPPLIES ORCHESTRAS AND SOLOISTS

MEN and women orchestras, as well as instrumental soloists, singers, and organists are supplied for motion picture theatres by George W. Smith, 1493 Broadway, New York.

Mr. Smith has had several years' experience as a representative of musical organizations and several of his orchestras are now playing in principal cities.

PHILADELPHIA WILL SEE TRIANGLE FIRST RUNS AT POPULAR PRICES

ALTHOUGH rumors of all sorts had been rife, much surprise was expressed at the announcement that a change of policy would be inaugurated at the Chestnut Street Opera House, Philadelphia, beginning next Monday. As the NEWS prophesied, a conservative Philadelphia with its merely negligible floating population could not support for any length of time, two-dollar photoplays or any other form of two-dollar amusement for that matter.

However, the Triangle corporation felt the experiment lasted long enough to give its new program proper prestige and under the new regime, Triangle first releases will not be lost to Quaker City audiences.

The house will be taken over by the Chestnut Street Opera House Company, which put on last year many successful photoplays, amongst them "Cabiria," "The Eternal City," "The Spoilers" and "The Christian."

Just who will be house manager has not been decided. The present manager, J. S. McSween, will retire and devote his time to his exchange, which operates under the name of McCarthy & McSween.

Triangle features will be retained, two of the week's current releases being shown the first part of the week, the other two occupying the last three days. The present fine symphony orchestra of twenty pieces will be retained. The performance will be continuous from twelve o'clock noon to eleven p. m. The prices will be from fifteen to twenty-five cents.

With the Triangle first runs at popular prices, combined with all the other advantages of the Opera House, a successful season should be now enjoyed by the new management.

The first program announced is "A Winged Idol" with Katherine Kaelred and House Peters, along with Syd Chaplin in "A Submarine Pirate."

BARTOLA SALES FOR THE WEEK IN ILLINOIS AND OHIO

THE Bartola Musical Instrument Company, Chicago, announces that the following sales have been made this week:

A Bartola Grand has been installed in the Rose theatre, 2800 Milwaukee avenue. Another orchestra of the same type was sold to the Casimir theatre, 4750 Milwaukee avenue; a Special to the South Park theatre, Sixty-first street and South Park avenue. All these theatres are in Chicago.

A Style 1 was sold to Carl Durkin, of the Comet theatre, Cleveland, Ohio. Another Style 1 was purchased by the Palm theatre in St. Paul, Minn.

A Bartola Junior has been shipped to James Burr, Tabor theatre, Cleveland, Ohio.

GENERAL SALES OFFICES FOR TRANSVERTER OPENED

GENERAL sales offices for the Transverter arc were opened November 15 in the Citizens' building, Cleveland, Ohio, by the manufacturers, The Hertner Electric and Manufacturing Company.

The sales of the company will be represented in the East by J. H. Chambers, and in the Middle West by H. W. Dickerman, it is announced.

KIMBALLS IN PHILADELPHIA

The Regent Theatre Kimball Organ was the pioneer, and has probably sold more theatre organs than any instrument ever built. It is a two manual organ with Kimball Solo Player, and Echo Organ.

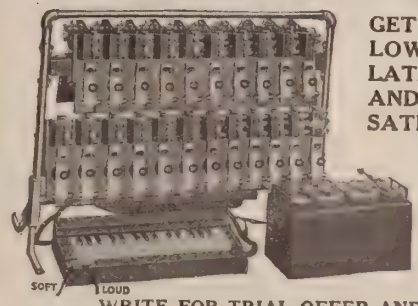
The Arcadia Theatre has the largest of the Philadelphia theatre organs, a divided three manual with distant Echo Organ.

The Locust Theatre has a large divided two manual organ on the main floor, with Echo Organ in the rear.

The Alhambra Theatre has divided organs elevated above the proscenium boxes.

The Leader Theatre's new organ is in two chambers on the stage, with separate Echo Organ.

The Globe Theatre organ (building) will be on the stage, and the Photo-Play Theatre organ (building) elevated and divided on both sides of the screen.



All are Orchestral Organs, with Chimes, Glockenspiel, Harp, and other special musical effects.

Music Plot for Famous Players Feature, "Bella Donna," Five Reels

By Ernst Luz. Projection Time Seventy-Six Minutes

THIS plot is adapted so as to make it possible for the pianist, one man orchestra player, organist or orchestra leader to make some prior preparation for playing the picture. The numbers suggested do not need to be used; similar numbers or numbers suggested by the Notes will do as well. It is intended that no unnecessary expense be added for the exhibitor or musician.

PART 1.

	Description of Music.	Number Suggested.	Cue to Stop Number.
1.	Inter.. (Light Fr.)	"Scattering of Roses" (Remick)	Bella Donna in her room.
2.	Rom. Intro & Waltz	"My Lady Love" (Jos. W. Stern)	"That Night."
3.	Desc. (Rom.)	"Salut D'Amour" by Elgar	"Bella Donna loses no time, etc."
4.	Inter (Light Desc)	"Galant Badinage" (Ricordi & Company)	Connects 1 & 2.

PART 2.

			"Bella Donna in her room dressed in street clothes."
5.	Desc. (Rom.)	"Serenade" by Mowskowski	"An Unpleasant Situation develops, etc."
6.	Desc. (Hy.-Rom.)	"Rose Blushes" (M. Witmark)	"Arriving in the Harbor of Alexandria."
7.	Inter (Light Arab)	"Araby" (M. Witmark)	"The trip has aged me ten years, etc."
8.	Desc.. (Hy.-Rom.-Arab)	"Garden of Allah" (Shapiro-Bernstein)	Connects 2 & 3.

PART 3.

			"Disappointing News."
9.	Waltz Lento (Hy.-Leg)	"Thais" (Jos. W. Stern)	"Baroudi makes his promised call, etc."
10.	Inter. (Light Orient)	"Amina" (Jos. W. Stern)	"The Moonlight excursion."
11.	"Egyptian Ballet"	by Luigini. (G. Schirmer. Inc.)	Connects 3 & 4.

13.	Waltz Lente (Very Hy.-Leg)	"Vision of Salome" (E. Ascher)	"An Unwelcome Guest."
14.	Desc. (Hy.)	"Barcarolle-June"—by Tschaikowski	"Back at the Villa."
15.	Waltz Lento (Hy.-Leg)	"Marsinah" (Jos. W. Stern & Company)	Connects 5 & 6.

PART 6.

			"I told him he lied."
16.	Agitato.	"A. B. C. Dramatic Set No. 4"—A. 1 (Photo Play Music Co.)	"I'm going to Baroudi."
17.	Desc. (Hy.-Path)	"Romance in F." by Tschaikowski
18.	Desc. (Plaintive)	"Berceuse" from Jocelyn	To End.

Note.—This picture affords excellent opportunities for the use of high-class oriental music. The character tone should be obtained in the second reel and maintained throughout. Cheap music with oriental titles should be avoided, for the picture requires serious music. The latter part of the third reel and the greater part of the fourth reel can be excellently adapted to the "Ballet Egyptian" by Luigini, which plays twelve or more minutes according to tempo. The third reel closes with a short dance which should occur while you are playing No. 1 of the Ballet Suite. If the reel is run slow repeat No. 1 until after dance, then play Nos. 2, 3 and 4 as written. This is a beautiful oriental suite and every ambitious picture player should be acquainted with it.

In reels 3, 4, 5 and 6 the minor tone can be held throughout, as the action is very heavy.

Nos. 1 and 4 should be light 2/4 intermezzos, with a French suggestion. No. 2 a concert waltz with a slow romantic introduction. Nos. 3 and 5 should be romantic numbers of moderate tempo. No. 6 should be a slow number, played legato, with a minor and romantic suggestion. Nos. 7 and 10 should be 2/4 intermezzos suggesting the orient.

Nos. 8, 12, 14, 17 and 18 must be slow numbers with minor keys predominant. Your music must be very appealing at end of picture, where you can drop the oriental and obtain an appealing plaintive. Nos. 9, 13 and 15 must be slow lento oriental waltzes. Must be played legato and be in minor key. When the "Egyptian Ballet" is not used for No. 11, other music with oriental color, illustrating passion and intrigue should be used. The music substituted must play twelve minutes.

The theatre organist will find this an excellent picture to play. The oriental effects are easily obtained on the organ by the use of the small reed and wood tones for the solo playing, making the accompaniment as soft as possible.

Mr. Exhibitor.

Gentlemen:

Please accept the following as an unsolicited testimonial, regarding the merits of your instrument recently installed in my theatre. Having been of a "show me" spirit, I called and had your instrument demonstrated, and was entranced, especially with the fine quality of tone. Compared with several other makes of instruments, I found the Seeburg so far superior that I consider your instruments in a class by themselves. My patrons are better pleased with the music I now have than any I have ever had in my theatre.

Yours truly E. W. Haferkamp.

P. S.—Would be glad to demonstrate my Seeburg for any of your prospects.

The Sins of Society
Feelingly depicts the heroic sacrifices of the man who loves with all his soul Beset with a mad passion for gambling and lured by the glitter of high society his sweetheart and her sister are brought to the verge of disgrace There is a terrifying moment of doubt and suspense when the hero seems lost as the gigantic liner is blown up at sea, but—See it yourself It's beyond description

The terrific explosion of the ocean liner in "Sins of Society" is but a sample of the element of suspense and punch and action now being put in each World feature in addition to its natural appeal in strength of story and star.
For instance in "The Gray Mask" an auto leaps from a ferry boat carrying its passengers into the swirling waters.
There's a punch in every reel of "The Siren's Song." At the start a maddened mob destroys a bank. In the second after a reveler is rescued from a raging fire equaled fight a man is thrown off a steamer in midocean while the climax is reached in the meeting of the two men in bedroom at midnight
As for "Camille," it is sufficient to say that it is Clara Kimball Young's best
They all come in December. Did you ever see such a lineup? Have you secured your contract?
This cut is a reproduction of the "Sins of Society" six-sheet a good sample of the marvelous drawing power of World Film advertising

The Exhibitor's Success

Depends upon a large average daily attendance at fair admission prices.

Only a small percent of the people in your town has been attending motion pictures during the past six months. You must bring a greater percent of them into your theatre as regular patrons if your average receipts are to be permanently increased.

Paramount Pictures

Enable exhibitors to do this. Paramount productions possess such quality, distinction and prestige that exclusive people are rapidly becoming patrons of the Paramount Photoplay.

The Paramount franchise secures these superior pictures exclusively for the exhibitor. A patronage once acquired remains with him by reason of his excellent program.

BIG BOX OFFICE ATTRACTION

Read What the Daily Papers of the Country Say:

PITTSBURGH, The Sun: "An Alien" is an intensely appealing play with humor, pathos and real thrills following so closely that there is not a dull moment in the entire production.

MILWAUKEE, Free-Press: "An Alien" is what might be called a "superfeature" in that it is in eight reels and has an exceptionally good story, is splendidly acted, and produced by Thomas H. Ince with more than usual care to details.

MILWAUKEE, Sentinel: No photo drama ever offered has proven its worth as a promoter of sobbing, tears and smiles, as does "An Alien" in which George Beban is starred.

CHICAGO, The Tribune: Alfred Hamberger seems to have hit upon another winner in the production of "An Alien" which is destined for a long time engagement.

TOLEDO, The News: "An Alien" is one of the greatest productions that has been filmed. The picture ran for weeks at the Astor Theatre in New York, and was secured by the Alhambra at considerable expense.

CINCINNATI Times-Star: "An Alien" with the celebrated Italian actor, George Beban in the leading role, has scored a hit throughout the East.

SAN FRANCISCO, The Bulletin: "An Alien" is at the Tivoli where hundreds of theatre-goers are being turned away this week. Many requests have been made for a second week of Beban in his massive film production.

CHICAGO, The Examiner: Together Beban and Ince have given the motion-picture world in "An Alien" a production of human interest, filled with absorbing situations, gripping and eloquently told, which establishes a high standard in motion picture art.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, Vindicator: Owing to the tremendous success of "An Alien" the picture was booked for the entire week at the Park Theatre, as it was considered that the customary three days would be too short to accommodate the crowds wishing to witness this powerful and appealing story of human emotions. Wherever "An Alien" has been shown it has broken all attendance records.

In all parts of the country exhibitors are pleasing their public

"THE DANGER SIGNAL."

Edison-Kleine. Produced by Kleine.
Five Parts. Released December 1.
Cast:

Danny Canavan.....Arthur Hoops
Dennis Canavan, his father.....Arthur Hoops
Beatrice Newnes.....Ruby Hoffman
Rodman Cadbury.....John Davidson
"Boss" Havens.....Frank Belcher
Roscoe Newnes.....Tom Walsh
Henry Cadbury.....Billy Sherwood
Amy Carroll.....Della Connor

"The Danger Signal" opens with something which remains in the memory—a splash of red in a black-and-white picture. After that come scenes where there is no startling color, nothing but plain, honest acting and picture making, which stand out just as boldly in the mind. The Kleine company seems to have nerved itself for a supreme effort in this particular picture. Every slightest trick of acting and production that can add power to the showing of a strong story is used; there are no momentary lapses, no petty carelessnesses, no shirkings of difficult work. It is rarely a picture is produced of which we can honestly say: "This is extraordinary among the pictures of to-day," but of this feature we say it with all the emphasis at our command.

Danny Canavan is the principal figure, and the roles both of him and his father, Dennis, are played by Arthur Hoops.

Canavan the younger is a coward, lazy and without backbone. It is by the merest chance that he is aroused from this state. Working on subway construction, he is given a red flag and the authority to stop traffic, and from the moment he first tastes authority he is a changed man. Opportunities arise for him to show his mettle. Rapidly, by sheer force of character, he rises to be a power in politics. Nothing can stand against the force of his will. By willing it he marries a poor stenographer, in whom he happens to be interested, into a family of the Four Hundred. Everything he desires falls to him, and finally he marries a society lady with whom he falls in love. After marriage his self-made crudities of manner make her despise him, but again, with his invincible character, Canavan wins her back.

That, as nearly as it can be given in a synopsis, is the plot of "The Danger Signal," if a plot it can be called. A more exact description of the picture version would be that it is a study; a study of fascinating kind. The story needed the pen of a Rupert Hughes to tell it in the "Saturday Evening Post." One leaves with a feeling that the man responsible for its excellence as a film must be rather remarkable in his profession, too.

To the actors, of course, must belong much of the honor for those finer touches—the subtleties of effect which have, unnoticed in themselves, more power than many of the broader strokes. Arthur Hoops plays magnificently throughout; so does Ruby Hoffman in the opposite lead. Their work and that, indeed, of the whole cast does more than stereoscopic photography could effect. It does more than make the figures on the screen stand out. It makes them live.

The artist of the camera came through an ordeal of difficult straight work, and still more difficult double exposure, very creditably; the direction is practically faultless.

One idea which is worked out with conspicuous success can be commended to the notice of other directors—the elimination by means of a black drop, of everything save the bare essentials, in flash backs and vision scenes. It is difficult to estimate how much extra force was added by this method to scenes which had an important part in the development of climax in this play.

New effects were sought even in the titles. Everything was used to one single end; and—the effect is gained.

We recommend this picture as a strong feature for any class of show. To very few films can such a recommendation be given; but this, as we have said, is an extraordinary picture.

"THE OTHER GIRL"

PROMISES NOVELTY

WILLIAM MULDOON, ex-champion wrestler of the world, and his famous Health Farm at White Plains are part of "The Other Girl" story.

JAMES J. CORBETT, another ex-champion of the world, is also an important character.

His early life, from the back-yard fights at school and his first bare-knuckle combat at twenty-two is told in the famous Thomas play. How Corbett, as physical instructor to a clergyman, meets the famous characters of Augustus Thomas' grand old play is told in two hundred-odd, interesting scenes.

"REV. BRADFORD," whose sense of humor keeps him in constant hot water.

"REGINALD LUMLEY," social fop and chorus girls' playmate.

"OLD JUDGE BATES," who tries in vain to save Lumley from his fate.

"THE WATERMANS," worth millions, but thoroughly human.

"CATHERINE," roguish and dimpled, who casts off society for an Ex-Champ.

"ESTELLE," quiet, sedate social beauty, who becomes involved in an altercation with the police on crowded Broadway.

"TAYLOR," keen-eyed reporter whose nose for news works havoc with the minister and the peace of his flock.

"MYRTLE," queen of the dance, and typical heart breaker, who comes to the rescue at a critical moment.

"THE OTHER GIRL" is a production for the Great Masses, bubbling with bright, snappy humor and exciting in no small degree. Like all the Great Dramatist's plays its story is thoroughly American, clean and wholesome.

Gentlemen:

We desire to state that we had the pleasure of running your feature "My Madonna" and the writer, who by the way, has been eleven years in the picture show business, considers this feature next to "Destiny", as the greatest picture he has ever had the pleasure of running. The nice part about using Metro service is the fact that an exhibitor can always have positive assurance that on Metro days he is going to more than please his patrons and that, you know, means a whole lot to a manager. We are never afraid to boost Metro because we know that the picture will be as good as all the good things that we may, or can say about it.

THE LITTLE GIRL IN THE BIG MOON

She sat all alone in the big moon and she was very, very lonely.
Her mother had forbidden her to see the only playmate she had.
She looked at the blinking lights of the far away city where her mother promised her some day she would find wealth and position.
But her heart was sad, for it was cold in the moon and she longed for the warmth of love.
Then the rich man her mother was seeking asked her to come and play.
She didn't know he wouldn't play fair, but her playmate did. He was watching and when the rich man hurt her so that she cried out with pain, he came and drove him away.
Then he whispered:
"I love you."
And she was very happy at last.
This beautiful story of a girl's love, so nearly wrecked by a vampire of society, is found in Essanay's five act photoplay —

Masses of Pictures

A NEWSPAPER editor takes a lively exception to the title of last week's editorial: "Pictures and the Masses." Why not, he advises, say: "Masses of Pictures?"

This editor—he has charge of the motion picture department of a daily in a good-sized Middle West city—has evidently been using his pencil and pad to good advantage.

He figures that about 230 reels of pictures were released last week.

Two hundred and thirty reels a week!

RIGHT at this point he stops further calculations and puts himself in the place of the layman, in an effort to gauge the effect upon the picture patron of this weekly "mass" of pictures.

"My wife and I like pictures," he writes. "We like them altogether aside from my dutiful interest in them. We would like to go regularly—almost every evening. They have in fact become our regular means of entertainment; and in this respect, I imagine, we represent some millions of people throughout the country who have only taken up pictures in this way within the past year. Representing these millions, as I know we must, our experience is certainly worth consideration by the producer.

"WELL, what is this experience?

"We approach each new week with open mind and considerable optimism. We pick up the Saturday or Sunday papers and scan the theatre announcements for the coming week.

"A few—a very few—names catch our eye. I mean the names of picture concerns, the people who make or put out the pictures. Stars' names don't mean much to us any more. It's the way they are handled, by the maker, that counts. If poorly handled, stars mean no more than the nameless performer.

"A few of these names of picture concerns mean something definite to us. They have trademark value, like the goods of standard quality we buy in stores. They haven't the same absolute standard. Some productions are much better than others. But they are consistent—of a certain kind. Their makers are, and for some time have been, evidently aiming at something definite, as you said in your recent editorial. They don't wobble all over the map in character and quality.

"SO we go to these pictures—naturally. We select them as unerringly as we used to choose between drama and vaudeville. And after that, we hesitate. The other names mean nothing. The pictures may be very good or very bad. They may be one thing or another. We don't know. So one or two nights suffice for the week's entertainment. Then we are at a loss where to go.

"The other evening we started out to canvass the theatrical district, to look at the lobby displays, and see if we could find something different. Something appealing, which the newspaper did not tell us about.

"Of the dozen and more theatres we stopped before every single one was running features—all features and all about the same kind of features, played up in about the same way. Every theatre seemed to be imitating the other, just as each feature producer seemed to be imitating the other—with stage stars and stage plays, etc., etc.

"WE were hungry for something different. We would have appreciated a theatre that ran only news pictures, or scientific pictures—anything to escape the sameness. We finally did—to our delight—find a regular program; and we came out disgusted because the pictures were just the same old program pictures—just sameness again.

"Then I went home and figured. Two hundred and thirty reels a week! Twelve thousand reels a year! Masses of pictures! Water, water, everywhere and not enough to drink!"

IT hardly seems necessary to moralize over this letter. It seems to put the matter pretty succinctly.

There is this to be said, however, and it cannot be said too pointedly: the exhibitor who is an imitator—and many of them are only that—is just as much to blame as is the producer for the fact that the two hundred and thirty reels of pictures put out each week are too largely duplicative in character.

He is encouraging the producers to imitate each other. If he wants specialization in production it is up to him to encourage it, by the conduct of his own business.

IT is up to him to specialize his own house, make it distinctive, make its name stand for something in the public mind; make it a cheap house or a good house, an educational house, a comedy house, a sensational house—but at least some kind of a house.

The obvious way to do this is to study your own house more and the other fellow's less. Don't imitate his methods; don't imitate his pictures; don't try to wreck him. Concentrate upon your own affairs, your selection of pictures, your advertising, your house comforts.

THE most ruinous exhibitor policy of all is the current one of sewing up a number of feature services simply so the other exhibitor can't get them. With what result?

The cream of the market is hurried through your city so fast that the public can't view it, and imitation features must be produced to fill the void made at the other theatres. Quality is thereby wasted and quantity production is thereby encouraged.

One big reason—and there are more—for "Masses of Pictures."

WILLIAM A. JOHNSTON.

The New Gospel of Exhibiting

"LET the fellow down the street run his show the way he wants to. You run yours your own way without paying any attention to him.

"You are selling entertainment and you have to know what entertainment is, and deliver it without waiting to hear from anybody else.

"Build a reputation for serving up good entertainment, not necessarily feeling your way along in the path of that worn-out phrase, 'Give the people what they want,' but giving them something that you can make them want. Your patrons do not know what they want. They want entertainment and the more original and striking you can make that entertainment when you present it to them, the better the impression you make.

"Raise the business of showing pictures to an art plane. Increase admissions to a price commensurate with the quality of your picture offering."

THIS is the pith and marrow of S. L. Rothapfel's talk to exhibitors, as he has repeated it all across the country. In this particular form he delivered his gospel of exhibiting to the managers of Cleveland. If there is any better or more successful set of policies we do not know what they are.

As usual, most of the exhibitors and film men who came to hear Rothapfel were those who had been intelligent enough to try to conduct their business along some such lines. Many of those who most needed the Rothapfel brand of success stayed away—or couldn't come. Nevertheless, the tour was a pronounced success, and its effects will be visible for a long time to come.

HOW straight from the shoulder "S. L." talked, no matter who was hit, is exemplified by the following pungent remarks, delivered in, and at, Indianapolis, on November 20:

"Four years ago when I was here, Indianapolis ranked as one of the best cities in the United States. But, today, for a city of its size, it ranks last. It depressed me today. Instead of coming here and finding the motion picture industry more advanced and things better, I found mechanical pianos in some of the best five-and-ten-cent theatres in the downtown district.

"Theatres were covered with all kinds of posters, ones, threes, sixes. The exhibitors here are in a rut, and they haven't done a single thing to try and get out of that rut. They have all tried to rush through the same door and at the same time, when there are thousands of doors.

"THE manufacturer and distributor as well as every branch of the industry has progressed but the exhibitor, which is holding back the whole industry. 'Wake up!'

"One reason for the lack of advancement is due to the fact that the exhibitors lack individuality and do not use their heads. If every exhibitor paid half as much attention to his own business as he does to his competitor, he would put a lot more money in the box office at the end of the week.

"The day of the exhibitor is past. You have got to get away from the exhibitor's name. The side-show methods and mechanical junk and store-room methods have got to go.

"THE cashier with fancy combs in her hair, chewing gum in her mouth, books and novels in the booth, and an expression on her face when you buy a ticket like, she hates to be bothered, must go. I visited three theatres in Indianapolis today. One girl had a soda, one had coffee and the other had something else, I won't say what it was.

"The cheapest thing in the world but the hardest thing to get is 'Thank You.' I haven't heard 'thank you' three times in my trip around the country.

"ANOTHER thing, I found no newspaper co-operation. I haven't seen much newspaper picture advertising. You can't expect the newspapers of this city, or any other city, write you up if you don't deserve it. They will meet you half way. You will first have to make good.

"Clean up your theaters. Use your head. God knows you need to do it. You can do the same things with your theatres that I did in New York. You can imagine your lighting system into an indirect lighting effect, doing away with the glare of unprotected lights, and a lighted theatre, which detracts from the picture on the screen."

THIS is matter every exhibitor should paste inside his hat and learn to carry in his head. He can't afford to be without it any longer. He can't hold back the industry any longer. The business has acquired the momentum now which will result in the stand-pat exhibitor being left hopelessly in the rear.

Wake up!

Pennsylvania Institutes Censor "Standards"

State Board Makes Long List of "Dont's" with Such Latitude of Interpretation Permitted That Fate of a Picture Is at Mercy of the Personal Feelings of Members—Because Some Rules Are Specific Their Obnoxiousness Is Not Lessened—Others Utterly Ridiculous

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 28.

THE "Soul Kiss," deep, clinging and prolonged, is barred from motion picture films to be displayed hereafter in the state of Pennsylvania, though short and less amorous osculatory demonstrations, presumably, are to be permitted. This conclusion is drawn from a clause in the new set of "standards" under which the State Board of Censors have begun to operate governing the nature of films that may be thrown on the screen.

"If love scenes are treated truthfully, sympathetically and artistically in plays no objection will be made to their being shown," says the clause referred to, "provided that they be not lengthened or otherwise cheapened to the extent of losing their significance."

This is one of several confusing and not-very-specific regulations containing among the new "standards." It leaves it for the film men to guess just how long a "love scene" or a kiss may be. Whether a kiss, in order not to be "prolonged" must be limited to a mere "peck" on the lips of the yielding maiden or may extend through 20 or 50 or 100 feet of film, is a question upon which film men are no more enlightened now than before the schedule of "standards" was issued.

Breitinger's Standards

Some of the "standards," however' are specific, and taken as a whole the list of far more capable of definite interpretation than the old list which it supercedes. The new standards were prepared by J. Louis Breitinger, chairman of the Board of Censors, and his two assistants, Mrs. E. C. Niver and Ellis P. Oberholtzer. They were passed upon in the office of Attorney General Brown and are understood to have met with the approval of Governor Brumbaugh.

The new list of standards is made in order to conform with provisions of the new censorship law, passed in this year's session of the Legislature, which law repealed the original censorship act passed in 1911, and provided some material changes in the methods of operation of the censors.

In the new set of standards manufacturers and producers are cautioned against showing the following "scenes of a debasing and corrupting character:"

"The rough treatment of persons by kicking, the use of pins, clubs, etc.

"Suggestive rolling on women in slapstick and other farces and comedies.

"Prolonged bedroom scenes in night dress.

"Drunken foolishness as a sustained theme running through a comedy.

"Excessive and suggestive wriggling of the body, whether of a man or a woman.

"Loose clothing not properly fastened or ready to fall.

"Making comedy of a woman's form and her clothing.

"Taking hold of a woman's limbs in a suggestive manner.

"Men looking lustfully at a woman's form in a way to attract attention.

"Spitting in another's face.

"Persons of the opposite sex, though they may be man and wife, lying in bed together.

"Suggestive action, while a woman sits on the lap of a man or vice versa, or similar conduct."

The Board says the general objects of censorship are "to establish standards on progressive lines and to keep motion pictures attuned to public opinion, and not necessarily in harmony with productions of the stage or newspapers, but rather to restrict the motion pictures to such as promise to afford clean, wholesome entertainment or amusement, and to eliminate everything which shall tend to debase morals or inflame the mind to improper adventures or to establish false standards of conduct.

"The feeling of reverence for certain things or forces counted sacred is deep-seated and it should be carefully respected. Death and other depressing scenes unduly emphasized may be objectionable. Grewsome subjects in general should be avoided.

Hitting John Barleycorn

"Bar room scenes, drinking and drunkedness have a legitimate place in the motion picture drama. Objection to them may be found in the large proportion which they may bear to all other scenes. If a photoplay requires such scenes to give it realism and color, and if these scenes are not of undue length and are used with discretion, they may be approved."

In discussion of costuming, fleshings and insufficient clothing, the Board says: "Frank exposure of the person may be less objectionable than partial exposure. To adolescent, as well as adult minds of arrested development, this may awaken the imagination and become suggestive of immorality and indecency. Disrobing and bedroom scenes should be avoided as much as possible. The dress of comedy characters must also comply with existing standards of propriety and must not be used for purposes of suggestion. In such matters the Board will lean toward the conservative side.

"Plays which make light of, or cast discredit on the marriage vow may lead to dangerous results. This is not considered by the Board a legitimate subject for motion pictures. The Board will insist that problems of sex shall be treated with seriousness and reserve. Plays which hold up to ridicule any sect (religious or otherwise), will not be approved. Slap-stick comedies if produced must be free from suggestiveness or vulgarity. Plays which indicate loose morals must be avoided.

"The Board disapproves of showing a good woman doing that which would be considered a bad thing in the society of which she forms a part. The place the incident occupies in the picture and the final total effect will be the determining factors in the judgment of the subject by the Board."

"The Board says it may condemn plays depicting, underworld scenes, opium dens, objectionable dances, flirtations, questionable resorts, etc., "and will require when scenes of this kind are produced that it be in such manner that no one may be stimulated by the example to similar adventure or conduct. When the portrayal of scenes of this type is necessary to the development of a story the Board will require that it be truthful and complete and that it be given no false glamour with the effect of leading anyone to misapprehend their true character, but rather know the essential sordidness and shallowness, discontent and commercialism on which these scenes rest.

Producers are cautioned against attempting such scenes in pictures, which of necessity are shown to both adults and children. If such scenes are introduced they should be made as far as possible unintelligible to children.

"The use and effect of habit forming drugs is not considered by the Board a legitimate subject for motion pictures. When the whole story runs along this line it will be condemned and scenes of a like character in films will be eliminated.

Deeds of Violence

"The Board will require that deeds of violence be not degrading and the constant and undue use of weapons such as guns, revolvers, knives, clubs, etc., tending to a debasement of morals will be discouraged."

Evidently the Board does not approve of policemen being made the butts of comedies of the slap-stick variety, for it says: "The Board will require respect for the law in the action as well as the spirit of pictures, and the work should be approached in a spirit of seriousness more than amusement or entertainment.

"The Board will not object to crime as such, but it will object to the display of crime being objective, instructive and grewsome. It will insist upon a sane balancing of the picture as a whole so that the final effect will be good or in any event harmless.

"Suggestive, instructive and ingenious criminal methods should not be exploited, nor should there be introduced in films attempts at burning or wrecking; or torture scenes or suicide (unless the same is necessary to the logical course of the play); or murder or assassination or hanging or other execution.

"The exhibition of the methods of using poison, drugs 'knock out drops,' sleeping potions, hypodermic needles, etc., is prohibited. Reproductions on films of the names on labels of poisons or drugs used in committing murder, or suicide must not be made. This rule will be strictly enforced.

"Obscenity, immorality or indecency in a picture are prohibited. Actions by the characters of a suggestive nature will be eliminated."

TRIANGLE FURNISHES EXHIBITORS COMPLETE PUBLICITY AIDS

Publicity aids to the exhibitor from the Triangle Film Corporation include The Triangle, a weekly illustrated magazine packed with news (the second number has just appeared); weekly illustrated press sheets, containing notices of all the plays; electros showing the stars and stills of each picture; program copy, including the model theatre programs furnished at cost if the exhibitors wish them; poster and lobby display drawn and executed by Flagg, Sarg, Covey, Falls, Townsend and other poster artists of international note.

Another excellent feature is the furnishing to exhibitors, when desired, of the complete music scores of the plays as prepared by William Furst and published by the corporation.

Metro Boosters Release Weekly Food Feature

Thirty-Five Lively Members of the Family Meet at Healy's and Eat Beefsteak Broiled on Woodfire with Feeling That "Home Was Never Like This"

THE Metro Boosters Club released another weekly food feature at Healy's gustable projecting room Tuesday night, November 23, in which thirty-five of the liveliest members of the Metro family appeared.

The principal interior set used was the Jungle Room, where a practical grill was operated by emotional chefs and waiters, who dispensed real beefsteak and other things.

Richard A. Rowland and Joseph Engel were the directors of the gripping feature production, which teemed with action, and ran for five hours straight, without a cold screen.

Mr. Engel furnished the copy of the spoken inserts and captions introducing the principals as they appeared. With a shout of "Lights!" from Mr. Engel, B. A. Rolfe flashed his ump-teenth carat diamond ring, and the battery of cameras started to click.

If any criticism could be made at all the story of the food feature did not contain suspense. But what it lacked in suspense, it more than offset with continuity and thrilling moments. Every member of the all-star Metro cast was provided with an adequate role, and met the occasion with the proper tempo.

Summed up, the fireside gathering of the happy Metro family, was a unique and notable event in the history of the young giant of the motion picture field. Numbered "among those present" were members of the executive staff, producers, exchange heads, directors, assistant directors, cameramen, and the staff of the publicity and scenario department of Metro. Everyone was invited to "speak right out," and as a result a spade was called some very hard names.

The demand for the high class feature, the need of good stories, the importance of expert photography and direction, the importance of capable players, the value of honest and clean publicity, these, and many kindred subjects were discussed and threshed out at length.

Following is the score card, containing most of the names in the line-up:

METRO BOOSTERS CLUB

"Finishing Touch" Process for Edison Features

Bronx Studios Hum with Activity on Photoplays for Late Winter and Early Spring Release Through the Kleine-Edison Feature Service

THE Bronx Studios of the Edison Company resound to the hum of the husky voices of hard working producers and the hammer of scene crews in the "finishing touch" process now being given the Edison output scheduled for release during the late wnter and early spring through the Kleine-Edison Feature Service.

"The Destroying Angel," a five-part drama featuring Mabel Trunnelle and Marc MacDermott, scheduled for release December 8, was completed last week and is now being shipped to Kleine-Edison branches. Incidentally, this is the first feature in which these popular players appear together.

Work is progressing on a number of other Edisons which will feature Viola Dana, Marc MacDermott, Miriam Nesbit und Mabel Trunnelle. "The Catspaw," founded on William Hamilton Osborne's novel of that name, is almost ready for preliminary screening. The theme of Osborne's "The Catspaw" is too well known to require comment. The leads have been placed in the able hands of Miriam Nesbit and Marc MacDermott.

Viola Dana is busily engaged in the filming of a five-reel story entitled "The Innocence of Ruth," by William Addison Lathrop. Edward Earle, a newcomer in the Edison ranks, will play opposite Miss Dana.

One of the recent scenario acquisitions on which Edison producers place great faith, is a recently purchased script called "The Crucifixion of Philip Strong." It is founded on the well known novel of that name by Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, author of "In His Steps," "His Brother's Keeper," "Born to Save," etc.

"The Crucifixion of Philip Strong" will feature Mabel Trunnelle and Robert Conness.

It is adapted for the screen by Francis M. Neilson.

"Prince and Pauper" and "Homestead" for Holidays

The Adaptation from Mark Twain, with Marguerite Clark, Released November 29, and Denman Thompson Rural Classic Appropriate to the Season

THE Famous Players Film Company pays a tribute to the holiday season by contributing to the Paramount Program two productions—an adaptation of Mark Twain's "The Prince and the Pauper," released November 29, with Marguerite Clark in the dual role, and Denman's Thompson's "The Old Homestead," released December 30.

Last year the company gave the public "Cinderella," featuring Mary Pickford "The Prince and the Pauper," the first of the humorist's works to become a photoplay, has been one of the most popular "children's stories" ever since it was penned.

The popularity of Miss Clark and the reputation of the author make the selection a happy one for the holiday time, particularly as it is a story of good, old-fashioned generosity, full of the spirit of the season, with two irrepressible boys as the center of the story.

"The Old Homestead," which reaches the public just before New Year's Day, centers about the joys and sorrows of a New England homestead.

JOHNNY POWERS AND EDNA PENDLETON MARRIED

Johnny Powers, assistant director to Stewart Paton, of the Imp-Universal studio, and who accompanied the company on the Nassau trip last summer, was introduced to Edna Pendleton, a member of the company, by Jack Cohn, and it resulted in a case of "love at first sight" culminating in a little trip to the church around the corner.

It's about three weeks now since Johnny and Miss Pendleton, starting out looking for locations for Director Paton, quietly got the location they wanted at the parson's and were there joined in the holy bonds of wedlock.

LUND IN CATSKILL WITH TEN PEOPLE FOR AN IMP

Director Oscar Lund has taken an Imp-Universal company of ten people to the Catskill mountains, making his headquarters at Kingston, N. Y., from where he will produce a five or six reel feature of the Northwestern mounted police with Violet Mersereau and Paul Panzer in the leading roles.

American Exports Not Affected by War Tax Abroad

John D. Tippett, Managing Director of Trans-Atlantic Film, the Representative of Universal in England, Now on a Visit in New York After a Three Years' Stay on the Other Side, Declares Very Few Will Have Occasion to Complain of the Tariff

JOHN D. TIPPETT, managing director of the Trans-Atlantic Film Company, Ltd., the representative of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company in London, England, arrived in New York, November 22, after a three years' stay on the other side.

Mr. Tippett is a showman of wide experience and became connected with the motion picture industry over three years ago when he accepted the position of general manager of the Eclair Union Features, a concern that then released pictures on the Universal program. His success with this position led to his assignment as manager of Universal House in London.

Three years intimately active in the business in Europe has given Mr. Tippett extensive knowledge of trade conditions, from which he is able to speak with authority on existing conditions of the English and European trade.

When asked as to the probable effect of the war import tax, which was made a national law in England on September 29 last, but which is only just now going into effect, Mr. Tippett replied optimistically.

"I do not believe that the tax will have a detrimental effect on the American export business," he replied; "the tax is sixteen cents a foot on negative, two cents a foot on positive and one cent a foot on raw stock. As the various distributing concerns of the British Isles only import one negative of each picture, this tax is not going to harm us much, as the duty imposed on positive and raw stock is negligible in comparison.

Few Objections to Tax

"Besides," continued Mr. Tippett, "there are very few who will object to the tax. They realize the need of it and so are agreeable. With the Trans-Atlantic company, the difference imposed by the tax is small. At first we import a positive to determine whether we can use the negative.

"On a thousand-foot picture the tax will entail an additional expense of twenty dollars. If the picture is suitable for English use, we procure a negative, on which the tax amounts to $160. The number of prints that we see occasion to make from the negative determines the raw film tax. Say we were to make ten prints.

"Ten thousand feet of raw film at one cent per foot comes to $100. Thus the total additional cost of one sample print, one negative and material for manufacturing ten more prints is $280. Divided by ten this comes to $28, a comparatively small additional price for a thousand-foot picture. Rest assured," said Mr. Tippett, "that the war tax will not materially harm the American trade across the water."

Mr. Tippett was asked as to the general run of picture shows in England.

JOHN D. TIPPETT

"In this respect," he said, "England much resembles this country. A four or five-reel feature with a comic, scenic and topical comprising a program of six or seven reels is much in favor. The regular program runs very strong as well.

Serials Popular in England

"When I left England," he continued, "'The Birth of a Nation,' 'Cabiria,' and the Williamson submarine pictures were playing at prices that correspond to the top prices of this country. They are doing big business in the best theatres of London."

Asked as to the popularity of serial pictures, Mr. Tippett replied that they were exceedingly good money getters. "The Trans-Atlantic Film Company sold fifty prints of 'The Broken Coin' and forty of The Black Box.' The English audiences have taken to the serials with enthusiasm."

"The serials are popular every place in Europe in which pictures are now being shown," continued Mr. Tippett, "contrary to the anticipations of many European film men, they appealed to the public largely."

Mr. Tippett was asked whether he thought the English audience was more critical than the American. "I believe it is," he replied, "they insist on logical stories, good acting and the best of setting. If they don't get all these combined in one picture, they'll get up and walk out.

"To safeguard against any such proceeding, every exhibitor in England sees his pictures at the trade showings before booking. Salesmen and reviews, though they help to advertise, seldom, if ever, sell a picture.

"As for the effect of the war upon the British trade," concluded Mr. Tippett, "at present things are running along at an even though not normal rate. In the London houses we still handle 1,300,000 feet of film each week. The continental trade is, as expected, cut off considerably, but in the British Isles the theatres are still well patronized despite the Zeps."

Bullock Defiance Too Much for Censor Tranquillity

Williams Promises Himself Pleasure of Getting After Sam for Showing That Naughty Caption, as Soon as Board Chairman's Appendix Lets Him Out of Hospital

Cleveland, Nov. 28.

THE Ohio Board of Censorship is not going to let Samuel Bullock, Cleveland motion picture manager, get away with his defiance of their orders. Cleveland exhibitors have disregarded the censors and persisted in running sub-titles and other material under the ban. As soon as Chairman Charles G. Williams gets out of a local hospital, where he now is confined after an operation for appendicitis, the board will begin to prosecute Mr. Bullock, it is now expected.

At the first trial, before an East Cleveland squire, the jury disagreed and Mr. Bullock, who wants to be arrested for refusing to listen to the censors, was allowed to go scot free. The censors are determined that the man who kept on showing the famous phrase, "Censorship was born in sin, con ceived in iniquify and is dying in disgrace," after it was ordered discontinued, must be punished for violation of the censorship law. It is expected that action will be taker before January 1 and that Mr. Bullock again will be the center of a court trial.

Governor Willis has failed to heed the protests of Ohio exhibitors against the foolish rulings of the Ohio censors, but he will get a chance to get some first-hand information regarding the film views of the board. Announcement has been made that Governor Willis will accompany the "Corn Boys" on their trip to New York, Philadelphia and Washington. The male winners of these contests compete on corn growing, while the girls are judged on their ability to bake bread. The trip is arranged by Thomas P. Riddle, manager of the junior contests that are held under the auspices of the State Agricultural Board, and while they are in Philadelphia the "Corn Boys" will be taken to see "The Birth of a Nation." This play has been barred in Ohio and was booked for fifteen weeks in Cleveland next spring. It is expected that Governor Willis, after seeing the film, will take some action in having it given the "O. K." by the Ohio censors.

Exhibitors all over the state have been wishing that Governor Willis could see the picture, as they feel that he will be fair-minded enough to allow it to be shown.

EDNA MAYO, THE CHARMING ESSANAY STAR, IN A FEW STRIKING POSES. SHE WILL BE SEEN IN "THE MISLEADING LADY," PRODUCTION OF WHICH IS NOW UNDER WAY

The attitude of the state officials in voiced by Mr. Riddle, who said to your correspondent:

"I have seen 'The Birth of a Nation' twice. No one who has ever seen that play will vote for war. That's the great lesson it teaches."

The fact that the Ohio censors have approved "The Battle Cry of Peace," which is being shown in Cleveland to big crowds at the present time, leads some exhibitors to believe that the censors will, of their own accord and without any prodding from Governor Willis, come out with a reversal of their original decision regarding "The Birth of a Nation."

Frank Confession from Star of "Misleading Lady"

Edna Mayo, on a Flying Trip to New York for Gowns and Fluffy Frivolities, Admits That This Picture Is the Best She Has Appeared In

IN preparation for her forthcoming feature, "The Misleading Lady," in which she is to appear with Henry Walthall, Edna Mayo of the Essanay studios has just made a flying visit to New York for gowns and other accessories. She has spent several days in selecting and trying on, and is determined that everything one person can do to make the new picture perfect in every detail shall be done.

Incidentally she found time to pose for some new "stills" at the Hill studios, and to tell MOTION PICTURE NEWS how she is being treated out in Chicago.

Miss Mayo expects "The Misleading Lady" to be the best picture she has been concerned in up to date. She left for Chicago last Wednesday, and by this time is busy on the first scenes. When it is finished, she will take up work on the new Essanay serial, "The Strange Case of Mary Page," in which she is also to be featured with Mr. Walthall.

"I have found just the parts which suit me best, and which I like best to play," she said. "These parts are portrayals of girls between twenty-two and twenty-four—just healthy, natural girls who are alive and like to see other folks alive around them. No baby or ingenue parts for me, if I can help it.

"This does not mean that my age is between twenty-two and twenty-four; if a motion picture actress is wise, she will stay under twenty-two, and I do not propose to cross that line for some time, although you needn't say that I said so."

Miss Mayo was assured that the matter would not be mentioned, and continued: "I believe the best work I have done so far was in 'The Scapegoat.' At least, I liked my part in that the best; I felt sort of at home in it, and the work seemed best fitted to me. I am looking forward with eagerness to these new pictures, however, as I believe I shall have great opportunities in them.

"As a matter of fact, there are greater opportunities in any branch of picture work than there are in the legitimate drama. That's why I shall stick to pictures—for a long while, anyway.

"Chicago is an excellent place in which to make pictures, but I feel like I have to get East once in a while for clothes, and to find out what is going on outside pictures. This last doesn't make so much difference, at that, for I am surprised to find that I am interested in very little outside of pictures."

Glen White Picked for 32-Reeler by Universal

Actor Who Until 3 Years Ago Appeared Only on Speaking Stage, with Stars Like Frank Daniels, Lew Fields and Lillian Russell, Was Chosen from 100 Players

TO be chosen from among over one hundred actors to play the leading character role throughout a thirty-two reel production is somewhat of an honor and one seldom bestowed upon a player either of the legitimate or of the photoplays.

That, however, was the way in which Glen White was chosen from among the scores of Universal players.

Until three years ago, White had appeared exclusively in productions of the speaking and singing stage. Vaughan Glaser stock in Cleveland and Columbus knew him for two seasons. Then there was a season as lead in Augustine Daly's road show, "The Country Girl."

Following this came an engagement with Lew Fields in "It Happened in Nordland." Frank Daniels engaged him for a lead in "Hook o' Holland," after which he successfully played the role of the gambler in Joseph Hart's London production of "Everywife."

Tiring of the legitimate about this time, he "took a flier in vaudeville" and for two years covered the Keith and Proctor circuit as lead in George B. Hobart's sketch, "Bill's Wife." Then came a season as lead opposite Lillian Russell in "Wildfire" and another opposite Jane Grey in "The Flaming Sword."

Then about three years ago, while resting in the East between seasons, the notion struck him to try pictures to see what they were like. He found out and has been in them ever since.

His first picture was a Pathé film, "The Greed for Gold," produced by Leo Wharton.

Upon the conclusion of that picture, he left Pathé with Farrel Macdonald to join the Universal company at their Eastern studios. He remained there for a year-and-a-half and then signed with Biograph.

In August of this year he returned to the Universal company and again worked at their Eastern studios as lead opposite Mary Fuller in "The Heart of the Mermaid," and played heavy with her in "Little Nor'-wester, being two of the best known of the pictures in which he worked during that time.

What Must Be Done to Produce a Perfect Picture?

Joseph W. Engel, Treasurer of Metro Company, Declares That Ideal Should Have "Good Clean Story, Real Stars, Both Well Adapted to Each Other; Continuity in Plot Development: a Punch Wherever a Natural Opportunity Occurs for One; Suspense, Good Photography and Novel Effects"

"WHEN all the world is talking about the feature motion pictures it seems futile to add a word to the din," declares Joseph W. Engel, treasurer of Metro. "The feature has already suffered so much from glittering generalities and verbose claptrap about its future, its possibilities, its strength, its weakness, its power over the public from an educational as well as a box office viewpoint, that more along this line would be worse than superfluous.

"Yet there is so much to be said that ought to be said about the feature just at this time, that I am loath to remain silent, even at the risk of repeating some of the trite commonplaces, which we daily hear around us.

"First of all then, what is to be the future of the feature motion picture?

"I preface my remarks with this question—which we hear discussed in a hundred ways every day of our lives—because it will bring home the points I want to make later and also, in a measure, make clear the opportunities many manufacturers today are overlooking. Nor in saying this, do I wish to make any objectionable comparisons. In some degree the mistakes of one manufacturer are the errors of all, the only difference being that some profit by their blunders while others do not.

Feature Growth Not Rapid

"We all know the history of the feature pictures, its wonderful development and the rapid strides with which it has improved, until the present. That improvement, however, save in a few isolated instances, has not continued and is not continuing.

"Today, while there are many good features being put on the market, their proportion to the inferior ones is not greater, in fact, it is rather less, than it was a few months ago. As a matter of fact, some producers, who six months or less ago were manufacturing high class multiple reel subjects, today are offering very inferior productions.

"All this cannot but have its ultimate effect on the industry. It has been said many times that the public has been educated to demand better and still better films. This is one of those beautiful thoughts which originate in the brain of every man, when he first acquires a few facts about the motion picture business.

"Yet while each manufacturer undoubtedly realizes this fact, the wonder of it is that he doesn't rise to meet it. The day is at hand, if it hasn't already arrived, when the feature picture must be up to a certain standard if it is to receive the public's approval. We have all heard this before too, but I do not mean to mention this point merely with this trite generality.

"What I want to bring home is that any manufacturer may find out just what this standard is without too great difficulty. Speaking for my own company, I do not hesitate to say that Metro has determined definitely what is demanded and is shaping its policy and the policies of its producing companies, Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., Popular Plays and Players, Quality and Columbia Pictures Corporations and the rest, accordingly. And if Metro has been able to do this, why not every other manufacturer?

"In saying this, I do not claim that we have the exclusive control of this information at the present time. Quite the contrary. But it is remarkable how very few there are among the feature manufacturing concerns, both large and small, who have grasped the main facts, which ultimately will mean success or downfall for their productions. Of course, it may be that they have done so, but are unable to adapt their organization to the requirements of the standard demanded, yet if this is so, it speaks poorly for the concern's future activities.

What Is a Good Feature?

"Few will gainsay that there will always be a large and legitimate demand for the feature picture among the amusement loving public, but it will ask for such features as measure up to the standard now rapidly being established. Naturally, this suggests a question.

"What constitutes a good feature motion picture?

"The answer is both hard and easy, just as practice is less simple than preachment. First of all, of course, 'the play's the thing.' That goes without saying. But every day it gets harder to find desirable material for high class pictures. The number of novels, plays and stories available for motion picture adaptation grows constantly fewer. Before long it will have reached the vanishing point. The classics have already been practically exhausted, doubtless to be re-born on the screen again under the direction of future film producers, but for present purposes at least, unavailable.

"Soon the feature producer will have to rely almost solely upon original scripts for his subjects. But whether the feature photoplay is based upon a stage production, a novel or an original plot, its value must be measured, in the last analysis, by the story it tells.

"If the sequence of events is not made clear or if parts of the story have little or no connection with what has gone before, then the picture, even if it has what we term a 'punch' in every scene certainly does not deserve to rank as a feature picture.

"Right here let me say that this is one of the most serious mistakes which directors, or shall I say producers, of feature pictures are making every day. They are constantly sacrificing essentials in the development of an artistic plot for the sake of a sensational scene—to get the requisite 'punch.'

Right Kind of Thrills

"A greater mistake never was made. The public want thrilling effects, of course, but not at the sacrifice of continuity and they are making this plainer every day. Not long ago I saw a picture by one of the big companies, which was filled with really thrilling and I might add, quite expensive situations, designed to cause those who viewed it to lean forward in their chairs in sheer excitement.

"Yet the whole thing failed utterly to convince or satisfy those who had paid to see it. It was as if you had come to see 'Hamlet' and instead of the grave-digging scene and the soliloquy the management had interpolated some hair-raising vaudeville stunts.

"The trouble is that the average director regards the 'punches' he puts in a film as more important than the story. Sometimes he has to put them in because the story, not having originally been written for the screen, lacks the necessary situations. Also, it may be that he is trying to make a five or six-reel feature out of material which is only worth one or two.

"This is a phase of the entire situation, however, which I have not space to touch on here. 'Padding' is so obvious and common a fault, also, that it is hardly necessary to refer to it. Ultimately, in my opinion, there will be one and two-reel features, just as there are longer ones, but this will only come when scenario writing has reached a point in the art, which it has not reached today save in a most limited degree.

"Then there will be gems of the screen of every length, just as there are masterpieces in one act plays and short stories, as well as those of more elaborate character. As yet, however, the screen has not developed a Moliere or a De Maupassant.

"Another blunder which many producers are making nowadays is in finding a suitable vehicle for the stars for whom they are paying fabulous prices. They seem to think that just because they have a good star, and have engaged a fairly competent director the result is assured, especially if the play or novel to be picturized is of proved value.

"What often happens is that a star's drawing power is nullified and a good story spoiled in spite of all an able director can do, and all because neither one was suited to the other.

Star Fits Play

"Such a situation would never arise in the spoken drama. It is too ludicrous almost to conceive as happening, if for no other reason than that such a play would be foredoomed to failure. Yet it is done every day in motion pictures. In the stage production, the star is carefully selected to fit the piece or the play especially written or adapted to fit the star. For the screen the rules should be the same and though without doubt they often are applied, in scores of instances they are disregarded utterly.

"The fact that in some cases features like this have paid a profit should be no encouragement that they will always do so. The instances where a famous star's name or a great play or novel will win considerable for a feature picture at the box office, without other merit, will soon be as scarce as fleas on a hard boiled egg.

"The public want clean drama. Problem and sex plays are surfeiting and disgusting them. Six months or a year from now companies who have gained a name for producing this type of feature will find that the public will not pay for seeing them. By this, of course, I do not mean that the legitimate sex appeal in a play, the romantic or well balanced heart interest, will have lost its power. Quite the contrary. But the morbid and abnormal will have to go.

"Awhile back I mentioned the importance of continuity as contrasted with 'punch,' while maintaining that the latter was also highly important if occurring naturally. The element of suspense is also absolutely essential. Without it, even if a picture has every other attribute in the highest degree, it is bound to be a failure as far as being a real feature.

"It goes without saying also, that photography of unusual quality and novel conception should lend its aid.

"The public like new and different photographic effects as well as a worthy and well told story for their screen delectation. Metro directors and cameramen are urged to keep this in mind.

"In touching on a few of the mistakes that others are making, I do not hesitate to say that Metro has made a few of them too. But take any recent Metro play you please and you will find that it comes close to those requirements."

Two More Seasoned Scenario Men Join Edison Staff

Everett McNeil, Who Has Broken Many Shafts in Magazine Free Lance Tilts, and Edward H. Griffith, with Nine Books to His Credit, to Make Scripts for the Company

ALMOST coincident with the enlargement of the Edison scenario department by the addition of two more writers is the election of Arthur Leeds, editor of that company, to the presidency of the Ed-Au Club. Mr. Leeds has been vice-president and, during the summer, was acting president during the absence of George L. Sargent, who had gone to the coast to produce a big feature picture.

Editor Leeds, who has ascended from model scene maker up all the rounds—actor, director, exhibitor—and who has to his credit a book on the writing of the photoplay, used a great deal as a text book, has now organized the Edison scenario department so that plays are handled with much greater dispatch and sureness as to getting all worth while material.

Everett McNeil, who made a name as a literary free lance before he became interested in pictures, is one of the new members, while Edward H. Griffith, a well-known newspaper man, and Paul Sloan are the other additions.

Mr. McNeil recently came from the Vitagraph, where he re-constructed and picturized many successes. He has just finished the scenarioization of "In His Steps," the story, which will likely be called "The Crucifixion of Philip Strong."

It will be a Kleine-Edison, five-reel feature, and Mabel Trunnelle and Robert Conness will be featured. Director Richard Ridgley is enthusiastic about Mr. McNeil's picturization. Mr. McNeil has had nine books to his credit, and had sold many scripts before he was engaged by Vitagraph.

Mr. Griffith, who is doing original and re-construction work, comes from the Cleveland Leader, where he did the feature stories, and found time meanwhile for magazine writing and scenarioization. Mr. Griffith did commented-upon work on such occasions as Taft's and Roosevelt's tour about Ohio and similar important national events.

Mr. Sloan, who is doing the sub-title work, is also a newspaper man. Many of the Edison directors are also doing unusual scenarios.

Mr. Leeds, who is now a member of the Society of American Dramatists and Composers, will, within the next two weeks, address that body on the needs and scope of photoplay writing. Mr. Leeds believes that the keen interest of these dramatists, who have given the American stage their biggest successes, speaks highly for the vast improvement of the screen, once looked at askance.

Mr. Static Fails to Preserve Film Statu Quo in a "U"

Eighteen Scenes, Taken at Bear Lake Valley for "John o' the Mountains" by Sydney Ayres, Were Found Defective When Developed at Studio and Ordered Retaken

Los Angeles, Nov. 25.

H. G. STAFFORD, formerly a member of the Universal scenario staff, who later served in the capacity of director, and has since been with the Lubin company at San Diego, is again with the Universal as a writer, and temporarily installed as scenario editor, succeeding Chester B. Clapp, who resigned to accept a position as writer at the Lasky studio.

Harvey Gates, who has written and adapted a number of the Universal's recent successes, appearing both on the regular and the Broadway Feature program, has been assigned to adapting for the screen, "The Journal of Lord John" series, from the stories by C. N. and A. M. Williamson.

The first episode was prepared by Norbert Lust, but producers at Universal City found it more convenient and satisfactory to have the scripts prepared at the West Coast studio.

Mr. Gates has now adapted the second, third and fourth episode and is working on the fifth, all of which will be produced by Director E. J. LeSaint, with William Garwood and Stella Razet. The company is now working on the second episode.

Considerable expense was saved in the making of scenes for "John o' the Mountains," exteriors of which were taken at Bear Lake Valley. The company, under the direction of Sydney Ayres, sent the undeveloped film to the studio, where it was developed at once, and it was found that eighteen scenes were defective because of static.

By telephone the producing company, just ready to leave for the studio, a distance of seventy miles, was notified of this, and information was given so that the scenes could be retaken. Many contain snow, and it is possible that these effects could not have been secured had they returned to the studio.

Francis Ford is home from a vacation spent in the East and during the coming week will take up the production of two and three reel subjects. It has been decided by Director General McRae and other officers that Grace Cunard will not play in the Ford productions of the immediate future, but instead will have her own company.

The personnel of this organization has not been definitely settled, but it is known that her first subject will be entitled "Her Better Self," and will consist of two reels.

"THE KING'S GAME" TO BE PRODUCED BY DALY FOR PATHE

Arnold Daly will produce for Pathé's Gold Rooster program George Bracket Setiz's Broadway success "The King's Game," in which William A. Brady presented James K. Hackett for a couple of seasons. Mr. Daly has secured for his cast Pearl White, George Probert, Sheldon Lewis, Stanley Dark and Martin Sabine.

This picture marks Miss White's return to pictures after a long vacation, which began with the ending of "The Romance of Elaine."

"To Keep Solvent Avoid 'Bankrupt Films,'"---Freuler

President of Mutual Company Says That "Too Many Exhibitors Are Being Led Astray by Bookings That Break Down All Prestige They Can Build Up by Using Pictures Made by Weakling, Wobbling Concerns of Fly-by-Night Character"—Wise Buyer Takes Standardized Goods

"BANKRUPT" and "fire sale" films are the greatest detriment to the progress and prosperity of the exhibitor today, according to President John R. Freuler of the Mutual Film Corporation.

Mr. Freuler has given out an interview on the subject, taking a parallel from the general merchandising field and applying it to the exhibitor's side of the film business.

"Every exhibitor worthy of consideration is trying to build up a reputation for having the best film entertainment in the locality he serves," observed Mr. Freuler. "He wants his place to be known as always having 'a good show.'

"But too many exhibitors are being led astray and into bookings that break down all the prestige they can build up, simply because they are being offered so much 'bankrupt stock.' By that I mean the films that are being offered for rental from weakling, wabbling concerns of the 'fly-by-night' character.

1,000,000 Feet of Dead Film

"I am very reliably informed that there are more than one million feet of negatives in New York alone that will never see the light of day.

"But still somebody will be trying to sell these worthless films and some of them will be forcing their way into some of the theatres, to the ultimate loss and disappointment of the exhibitors unwise enough to book them.

"It is a state of affairs that might be expected in so strong and prosperous an industry as the making of motion pictures. Of course there are people who always rush in to fatten the lists of failures by ill-advised investments and attempts.

"These people are always weeded out finally, as the history of every great industry shows—but in the meantime they produce a lot of worthless junk products which are so often worked off to the loss and the disadvantage of the consumer.

"That is the situation I want to call to the attention of the exhibitors and against which I want particularly to warn them.

"No wise buyer is tempted when he passes down a street and sees flaming signs that announce 'receiver's sale' or 'fire sale' or 'closing out on account of bad health.' He knows that the man behind the signs has a line of junk to sell with nothing but failure back of it. The public has grown wise and has no use for it.

Goods with a Name, Safe

"Yet just that sort of labels ought to be put on every reel of the kind of film I am talking about.

"The wise buyer and the prosperous, successful dealers are those who buy and handle trade-marked goods—goods with a name behind them, a reputation built on sincere, consistent performace, a reputation to maintain.

"The exhibitor who deals with the Mutual Film Corporation knows that he is getting his film from a concern that has been in the business for years, a concern with an established reputation, supplying a clean, certain product of high standards, films that are standardized in character, that have passed the rigid inspections of a big staff of experts, men qualified by all the experience that there has been in the history of film production—and above all the film of a concern that the public knows and approves.

"Marshall Field, Altman, United Cigars, Tiffany, and all the rest of the successful retailers do not sell any 'bankrupt stock,' they have no 'fire sale' goods. Rather they handle trade-marked, reliable, well known products, time tried and worthy of the public confidence they enjoy.

"The motion picture exhibitor, as a retailer of entertainment, will do well to take a lesson from them. It is the plainest kind of common sense, which ought to be made a lot commoner."

Edna May in a Vitagraph at $100,000 for Charity

"Belle of New York" Star, Who Married Metropolitan Banker and Retired from Stage, Will Give Money Received for Posing to Red Cross Work

EDNA MAY, former comic opera favorite of two continents, the wife of a New York multi-millionaire, and one of the most beautiful women in the world, is to appear in motion pictures. She has made a contract with the Vitagraph Company, calling for her appearance in a single feature film, for which she is said to receive the record-breaking amount of $100,000.

EDNA MAY

Financial gain was not the motive that lured Miss May from the privacy of her married life. The entire $100,000 will be turned over to the Red Cross and other worthy charities in which she is interested. Well remembered and loved as "The Belle of New York," at the Casino theatre, New York, several years ago, Miss May, since her marriage to the rich banker, has been out of the limelight's glare.

It was due to the efforts of Albert E. Smith, treasurer of the Vitagraph, that she agreed to pose in motion pictures. Both he and Commodore J. Stuart Blackton had met Miss May socially, and her rare type of beauty woke them to an immediate realization of the possibilities of using her in scenes for their company.

It was no easy task to lure her from the quiet of her home and bring her to the point of signing a contract. They pleaded along charitable lines, and only upon the stipulation that the money she received would go to Red Cross and other charities, would she agree.

Mr. Smith is equally enthusiastic over the test film that has been taken and is certain that the Edna May film will be a photoplay classic. The picture in which she is to appear has not as yet been announced.

Few actresses reached the heights of popularity, both in America and abroad, that Miss May attained as Violet Gray in the comic opera "The Belle of New York." She was cast in the role by George W. Lederer and on the opening night of the production at the Casino theatre, New York, her remarkable beauty, her grace, charm and ability, made her a star overnight. Because of Miss May's personality the play enjoyed a long engagement in London at the Shaftsbury theatre.

Following "The Belle of New York," she starred in "The Casino Girl," "An American Beauty," "The School Girl," "The Catch of the Season," and other operatic successes both here and in London. In a revival of "The Belle," Miss May's reappearance was greeted with the same expression of popularity that made her loved in the role several years previous.

In January, 1907, Miss May created the title role in a new comic opera, "Nellie Neil," at the Aldwych theatre, London, and won new honors. In June of the same year she was induced to forsake the stage for the privacy of married life, and wedded a New York banker, one of the wealthiest men in America. Since that time the theatrical public has had no glimpse of her, and her reappearance through the medium of the screen will be anxiously awaited by those who knew her and loved her as "The Belle of New York."

Board of Trade Shows Wilson Injustice of Film Tax

Executive Secretary Binder, After Conferring with Treasury Officials, Places Matter Before the President, Who, Impressed with Industry's Claims, Causes Question Brought to McAdoo

SUBSTANTIAL progress is being made by the Motion Picture Board of Trade in its campaign to have the war tax on motion picture theatres modified. The Board, through its executive secretary, J. W. Binder, has laid the matter before President Wilson and the Treasury Department.

After conferring with Treasury officials, Mr. Binder sent a letter to the President, pointing out the manifest injustice of the way in which the tax is levied. The President replied through his secretary that he had caused the question to be brought to the attention of Secretary McAdoo.

The present war tax bill expires by limitation December 31. It is believed, however, that owing to the pressure of other matters at the "short session" of Congress, which convenes December 5, a resolution will be passed extending the tenure of the war tax measure sixty days.

The movement for the righting of the war tax was largely due to the initiative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, which was responsible for bringing to the attention of the Board of Trade the following letter from an exhibitor at Hardin, Mo., to THE NEWS:

"I am not presuming to dictate as to whether the United States Government is right or wrong in establishing a war tax, and do not propose in this article to go into the question with arguments pro or con. But being an exhibitor in a rural town of 800 people, I personally know that the present law is one of the most unjust enactments ever placed on record.

"In fact, the United States Government would prosecute any individual or corporation that practiced the discrimination which this particular enactment entails upon the moving picture exhibitor.

"It, as you know, places a tax not on the business done, but on the equipment, irrespective of whether the equipment is used once a month, several times a day or not at all. A theatre seating 500 people in the congested part of any large city pays the same tax that one in the suburban district, or the house in the country town.

"Any one considering this feature for a moment will see the inequality of the tax upon the various houses simply because some are located where the opportunities for admission are in the thousands where others would not reach beyond the numeral of ten.

"Again, why should the government say to the manufacturer of tobacco, or any of the other lines of business upon which a tax is imposed, you must pay a certain tax per cent on the goods you sell (not make), but of the theatre demand a tax upon every chair in the house regardless of whether it is ever used or not?

"We, as exhibitors know, even if the members of Congress do not, that theatres are compelled to carry a burden in equipment in order to accommodate the public on special or unusual occasions, and it seems manifestly unfair that an extra burden should be rammed down our throats simply because we are unfortunate enough to be a victim of such circumstances.

"I am persuaded that these points were not presented to either house of Congress, else they certainly are too intelligent a body of men to enact such a flagrant class legislation law. On our business, this tax including our other taxes, will run close to ten per cent of the gross income.

"I trust the proper effort will be made by those placed so they can give the matter the attention it deserves, to the end that in the future the discrimination will be eliminated even if we do have to pay the tax. In this the columns of THE NEWS would be very valuable.

"Very truly,

"SECRET AGENT," GAUMONT, READY DECEMBER 15

Robert T. Haines has completed his work in "The Secret Agent," an Arthur Stringer photodrama, filmed at Jacksonville, Fla., by the Gaumont Company for release on the Mutual Program. Mr. Haines has returned to New York.

A private showing of "The Secret Agent" recently had Mr. Haines as an interested spectator. He expressed himself as highly delighted with the record the camera had made of his work. It is planned to release "The Secret Agent" December 15.

BARTLETT, SCENARIO MAN, GOES TO INCE

Lanier Bartlett, former scenario writer for Selig, who adapted "The Spoilers," "The Rosary," "The Ne'er Do Well" and several other big subjects, together with writing a number of very successful original scenarios, has been added to the Thomas H. Ince Kay-Bee scenario staff.

Original Scenarios for Equitable from Now On

Company Will No Longer Purchase Rights to Stage Plays or Short Stories with Supposedly Dramatic Possibilities, but Expects to Use Scripts Specially Written for Screen

"IF the purchasing of dramatic stories and former stage successes at fictitious prices is the only way Equitable can succeed, Equitable is doomed to dismal failure."

Arthur H. Spiegel, president of the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation, is the author of the above terse paragraph.

"We are going after original, unconventional, different stories with exceptional plots, unpictured situations, clean but powerful documents. We are willing to go a long, long way to procure an original story—but to buy in a dramatic piece, with a conventional plot and nothing novel, at a great big price, just because some well-known writer authored it, and it played a few months on Broadway—we will not do it!"

"We bought 'The Chain Invisible,'" said Mr. Spiegel, "only after our two scenario experts and one of the best directors we have, read and approved it. We were aware all the time that Richard Le Gallienne was a wonderful conceiver of plots and situations, but we cannot visualize reputations. We can only put the material on the screen."

In answer to a question, Mr. Spiegel said:

"We have contracted with Roy McCardell, who has written no less than two hundred successful film stories, to write a scenario for us, and Mr. McCardell will bear me out in the statement that before we treated with him at all he was asked to submit his plot, ideas and scene plots.

"Mr. McCardell was broad. He left our office on Monday and returned a few days later with his story entirely outlined. His work was thorough, he had met our request with a finished and detailed statement as to what could be done with the two thousand word synopsis he submitted. The result was that a deal was consummated and Mr. McCardell is now at work completing his scenario.

"Rachael Crothers, who is responsible for half a dozen big Broadway plays, is under contract with us to write scenarios—but before we concluded arrangements with her, we were satisfied in every respect that she was equipped and able to concoct stories that could be visualized.

"Our great trouble in the past," continued Mr. Spiegel, "was that producers have been buying stories written at the stage, and in which dialogue played the principal role. We must have stories written directly at the screen, and in which the dialogue is but a minor feature."

"What about stars fitting the plays?"

"I am glad you spoke of that, for I would not have thought of it," replied Mr. Spiegel. "Well, we have all been wrong on that, too. It is a fallacy to say that such and such a play does not fit a star.

"An actor of merit is an actor of merit. He or she is being paid big money on the strength of his or her ability to portray various parts. If he or she must have a tailor-made manuscript, constructed around the contour of his or her histrionic self—then he or she is a falsely made star, and sooner or later will disappear from the theatrical horizon."

MALCOLM DUNCAN ENGAGED FOR KLEINE PLAY

Malcolm Duncan, Harrison Grey Fiske's leading man, is an addition to the list of stage and film stars now engaged at the Kleine studios. Mr. Duncan was engaged last week to play the leading juvenile role in "Wild Oats," a feature now in process of filming.

Duncan has been given support in the persons of Alma Hanlon, Ruby Hoffman, Frank Belcher, William Anker and Herbert Hayes. Aside from his stage experience Mr. Duncan has frequently been seen in film, notably in George Kleine's "The Money Master" and "The Spendthrift," with Irene Fenwick.

Film "Atmosphere" No Subject for Mild Dismissal

Producers Consider It Vital Element in Pictures and, Says Zukor, Seek Best Regions for Local Color, As in Case of "Still Waters," Whose Plot Motives, Instead of Running Deep, Play Gracefully on Surface of the Story—New York Better Than Los Angeles As Filming Centre

"THE importance of obtaining the proper atmosphere for every production has never failed to impress me since the days when a sombrero and 'chaps' were considered sufficient to transfer a grocery clerk into a perfect cowboy," declared Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players Film Company, apropos of the departure of Marguerite Clark and J. Searle Dawley for Savannah, Ga., where the film adaptation of the celebrated play, "Mice and Men," will be staged.

"At that time the Jersey woods served for every setting in the category, from darkest Africa to 'India's sunny climes'—not to mention the Arctic regions.

"That was what might be termed the Stone Age of motion pictures, and I have no doubt that many discriminating persons who had the misfortune to attend those early shows might have never entered a photoplay house again. If they did, however, they would find that vastly different conditions obtain today.

"The development of the longer films and then the formation of film producing companies for the express purpose of adapting successful plays to the screens, marked the introduction of new methods of production, of a beginning of the minute attention to detail, which is absolutely essential to the success of a photoplay today, and which had resulted in its present high status in the amusement world, which finds its ultimate expression in the great photoplays which one now sees in the leading theatres all over the country.

"Firmly convinced that the proper atmosphere was positively essential to the success of the adaptation of well-known plays to the screen, I have always insisted that the directors go to any means within their power and ingenuity to obtain the right setting.

Miss Clark in South

"In the case of 'Mice and Men,' Madeline Lucette Ryley placed the story in the South. It is practically impossible to find really Southern atmosphere in the North. One may discover a single house with the familiar Georgian pillars, but the illusion ends right there. That is why Miss Clark and the company have just gone to Savannah. For there one cannot take a picture which is not brimful of the spirit and tradition of the South as we know it of old.

"'Atmosphere' is frequently an expensive luxury, if one reckons first cost, but in the long run it is a most profitable investment. For instance, in producing 'The Eternal City,' we sent Pauline Frederick and her company to England and Italy for several weeks.

"The expense bills might have been considered high—but the realism which resulted from that journey made the picture a masterpiece and added greatly to the popular interest in the production.

"When the war prevented the carrying out of our original intention of sending Miss Frederick to Egypt to photograph our adaptation of Robert Hichens' 'Bella Donna,' we spent many weeks in search of a proper substitute.

"Finally we decided upon Florida as the only available place. The singularly strong tributes which were paid to the atmosphere of the production by the reviewers show that our efforts and expense were amply repaid.

"Again, in the case of 'Still Waters,' it would have been simple to have gotten an old canal boat in the Hudson River, and by using very restricted space for the scenes, to have given a fair semblance of reality to the canal life portion of the play.

Picks Right Kind of Localities

"But, with the Delaware River flowing through the Pocono hills in the neighborhood of Easton, Pa., and with a real canal paralleling the river through that exquisite valley, it seemed almost criminally negligent not to send the players to that point. So the picture was given the setting which called forth so much approbation from those who saw it.

"In 'Madame Butterfly' and 'The White Pearl' we had to obtain Japanese atmosphere, but distinctly different, for the latter was a sea story. Hence Marie Doro and her company went to one of the rockiest portions of the coast of Maine and Miss Pickford was dispatched to 'somewhere in Jersey' where there are the most beautiful Japanese gardens in this country.

"I am not at liberty to disclose the name of the place because it is a private residence and the owner does not wish his name to be used.

"At the present time there is one of our companies at the old Thompson home in Swanzey, N. H., where we are producing the rural portions of our adaptation of Denman Thompson's delightful play, 'The Old Homestead.' This is indeed the acme of realism, as the author-actor used his old farm as the setting of his original play, and the characters depicted in it were actually his neighbors.

"Through the courtesy of Frank Thompson, son and heir of Denman, we are accorded the privilege of presenting to the public the actual scenes which even the great genius of Thompson himself could only represent in painted canvas upon the stage.

"The same holds true of Grace Church, which formed the familiar background of Act III. Thompson was again forced to resort to canvas and paint, while Frank Losee, his successor, in the role of Josh Whitcomb, actually plays the scenes before the old church itself.

Agreement of Paramount Associates

"These are the touches which differentiate the mediocre feature film from the really worthwhile photoplay—an opinion in which I am glad to say that my associates on the Paramount program heartily concur. It was the conviction that such is the case which determined the Famous Players to make New York their center of production. With all due respect to those whose enterprise led them to boom California as the mecca of motion picture men, we believe that New York is the logical place for the location of the main plant of the photoplay producer.

"In the first place, it has unequaled facilities for communication with every portion of the globe. It is the center of American commerce and therefore the center of transportation. From it one can reach any given variety of scenes and locations in the shortest possible time. That is the vital point—the variety of settings.

"And though nobody appreciates more than I the beauties of California and the wide range of climate and scenery which it enjoys, it does not compare in accessibility and in variety with the opportunities afforded by New York," said Mr. Zukor in conclusion.

Fairbanks in Realistic Ring Battle for Triangle

Sharkey's, New York, Scene of Prize Fight Scenes, Staged Cleverly by John Emerson, with Star of "The Lamb" as Champion Pugilist

D. W. GRIFFITH'S eastern producing force inaugurated its debut among the studios in the vicinity of New York City, Wednesday evening, November 24, when it invited Lambs, Friars, Screen Clubians, newspaper men and a goodly number of the city's populace to witness the filming of some prize fight scenes at Sharkey's A. C., Columbus avenue and Sixty-fifth street.

The scenes are to go in a Fine Arts-Triangle picture, "His Picture In the Papers," starring Douglas Fairbanks, under the direction of John Emerson. In this story Fairbanks, as the son of a millionaire, attempts in divers manners to get his picture in the papers and after knocking out the champion in Sharkey's place he proudly poses for the reporters, but alas! the officers of the law break into the place, break several heads and also the precious cameras, containing exact reproductions of Fairbanks' smiling countenance.

Several real, live, healthy fighters took part in the bouts preceding Fairbanks' debut into the ring. One of them took punishment bravely in order that he might score success as an actor in the picture and unless all things point in the wrong direction, the knockout blow delivered to the jaw by his opponent will startle with its realism. And then Fairbanks came and proceeded to pummel the champion in a style that will doubtless appear convincing on the screen.

Emerson is a director who can make a mere mob act when there is nothing to act at. He took one division of the ringsiders, most of them all untrained before the eye of the lens, and made them register the various emotions that they would naturally go through of a fight were raging before them. But the clever part of it is that there was no fight. Emerson was merely telling them how to act and then catching them with the camera.

"His Picture in the Papers" will contain a series of very realistic fight and ringside scenes judging from those bits that Emerson took at Sharkey's.

Herrington Predicts Banner Convention for 1916

Four Cities in Spirited Fight for Next National Exhibitors' Meeting, Which League President Declares Will Be Record Breaker in Point of Attendance

FRED J. HERRINGTON, national president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, stopped in New York last week long enough to announce that the race for the 1916 convention city had narrowed down to four contestants—New York, Pittsburgh, Chicago and Detroit.

All four were fighting spiritedly for the honor, declared Mr. Herrington, and there promised to be some interesting campaigning before the contest was closed.

The League head would not commit himself on the subject, but from other quarters it was learned that Pittsburgh and Chicago are at present favorites, with New York and Detroit strong "runners-up." The decision, however, is still in the middle distance.

Mr. Herrington was all enthusiasm and optimism. The 1916 national convention, he said, will be held on the first Monday following July 4. If the state conventions he has attended so far, he went on, are reliable bases for forecast, he was ready to predict the biggest attendance that a national convention has recorded.

"The signs of a stronger and more numerous organization," said the president of the League to MOTION PICTURE NEWS, "are plentiful and encouraging. Ohio produced the best state convention at Cleveland this fall, the Buckeye exhibitors have ever known. The first session saw 140 exhibitors in their seats, and 300 were counted before it was over. I was particularly gratified, for the Ohio situation was a delicate one, since, through no fault of its own, the state organization there had automatically put itself out of the national body.

"I am sorry there have been so many misunderstandings of the conditions in Ohio, for really they were very clear. The state league failed to pay its share of the per capita tax to the national organization. When that tax became overdue, it was the duty of the national secretary to bring the matter to the attention of the state secretary. Was this a difficult matter when they were one and the same person?

"Whose fault, then, was it that Ohio found herself outside the League bounds? Obviously, that of the man who failed to do his duty as a national officer and as a state officer. I am not blaming the exhibitors of Ohio—the fault is with individuals.

"But why rake up these past matters? The Cleveland convention was called by me, acting within my legitimate powers, at the request of Ohio exhibitors, for the purpose of reinstating the state organization. It was the convention of the state body. The officers then and there elected are the rightful officers of the state league. Any exhibitor who was a member, by resuming payment of his dues, becomes a member again in full standing. That is all; no red tape, no disagreeable features or 'prodigal son' stuff while I am president. We need Ohio. Ohio needs us. Why not take the shortest and best means of getting together?"

"Across the Sunset Sea" Washed by the Blue Pacific

Director Macdonald, with His Company on Santa Cruz Island for Scenes in American Company Picture, Is Endeavoring to Catch Haunting Beauty of Locality

WORD comes from the studios of the American Film Company, which releases five weekly, one tri-weekly and Masterpictures through the Mutual, that two companies of players are at present out on picture-taking tours, and that the remaining companies are busily engaged in picture making.

Director Donald Macdonald and his company are on Santa Cruz Island this week taking scenes for a picture entitled "Across the Sunset Sea." This, a three part drama of the blue Pacific, is a tale of the romantic southwest, and the haunting beauty of the Santa Barbara Island.

This Clipper star feature will be an inovation, since its story of sea life will, it is said, include settings never obtained before of these islands, off the beaten track followed by Californian sight-seers.

Director Bertram's company has just completed the fifth picture of the series, "Author! Author!" One of the most sensational incidents of the entire series will be the exhibition of steer-throwing which Mr. Acord accomplished at the Santa Barbara studios for this picture. The steer had been teased into madness by the cowboys, and nearly caught the actor between his horns and the fence.

Three Beauty comedies are nearing completion. "Billy Van Deusen's Last Fling," featuring John Steppling, supported by Carol Holloway and John Sheehan; "Ella Wanted to Elope," and "Walk This Way," a comedy from the pen of Roy McCardell and featuring Neva Gerber; Walter Spencer, Lucille Ward and Robert Klein.

"In the Sunset Country," a two reel Western drama of the modern type is being directed by Frank Cooley, who himself is playing a prominent part. In the cast are E. Forest Taylor, Lisette Thorne, Nell Franzen and Warren Ellsworth.

Anna Little and Frank Borzage, supported by "Big Tree," an Indian, Dick La Reno and others are busy at work on a future Mustang release entitled "The Cactus Blossom," written by Kenneth B. Clarke, the well known Saturday Evening Post contributor.

Vivian Rich and George Periolat, under the direction of Director Reaves Eason are engaged in the production of "Vivian," a two reel drama. Miss Rich and Mr. Periolat are being supported by Leslie Reed and Sylvia Ashton.

TREE TO WINTER IN CALIFORNIA FOR GRIFFITH PICTURES

Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, who has become a Triangle star, spent three days in New York on his way from London to Griffithville.

Sir Herbert will spend the winter in Southern California, but speaks of making his re-entry to the legitimate stage in New York next spring. He is not a novice in the pictures, as he did "Cardinal Wolsey" in "Henry VIII" in England. The actor-knight, according to interviews he gave during his New York visit, believes in the co-equal spheres of legitimate and picture drama.

The human voice can never be superseded, he says. The drama of dialogue and of emotions best expressed by words will always prevail, but the spectacular drama of the pictures will have enormous importance.

The distinguished visitor expects to do some elaborate film spectacles under Mr. Griffith at Los Angeles.

PLYMPTON SCENARIO OF WILLIAMSON STORY FOR VITAGRAPH

The Vitagraph Company has begun production on a new serial story by C. N. and A. M. Williamson, which was picturized for the screen by George Plympton.

Earle Williams, Charles Kent, Nellie Anderson, Garry McGarry, Thomas Mills and L. Rogers Lytton will figure prominently in its enactment. It is being directed by W. P. S. Earle.

DIRECTOR CAREWE, METRO, BREAKS ARM, BUT WILL COMPLETE SCENES

Edwin Carewe, who is directing the elaborate five-part feature, "The House of Tears," in which Emily Stevens, the gifted emotional actress is starred, broke his arm in two places while cranking his automobile in front of the Rolfe studio.

Despite the painful injury, Mr. Carewe did not miss a single working day, appearing the next morning with his arm in a splint. He will continue until "The House of Tears" is completed, then Mr. Carewe will take a brief vacation.

"SCALES OF JUSTICE" TIP IN RIGHT DIRECTION FOR RAWLINSON

"The Scales of Justice" is the title of a three-reel subject made at U City, which features Herbert Rawlinson as an unfortunate young man convicted on circumstantial evidence, and railroaded to prison.

He seeks revenge upon the commonwealth, but is prevented from carrying out his plans by a girl he rescues from a Chinese joint. Agnes Vernon plays the opposite lead, and the direction is in charge of William Worthington.

PAT ROONEY A "BELL HOPPER" FOR UNIVERSAL

Pat Rooney, late Orpheum circuit headliner, has been engaged by the Universal and will play in Joker comedies. He is now appearing in a two-reel subject entitled "The Bell Hopper," being made by Roy Clements with Victor Potel and Lillian Hamilton as the other principals.

Babson Joins Paramount to Help Edit Newspictures

Statistician, Whose Books, Based on Dry Figures, Have Proved Sources of Instruction and Entertainment, Will Prepare Some of His Works for Screen

ROGER W. BABSON, the noted statistician, has allied himself with the Paramount Pictures Corporation in the capacity of associate editor of the Paramount Newspictures, and his works are now being filmed for presentation at Paramount theatres.

It may seem at first glance that statistics do not provide a very fertile field for the cameraman, but this, it developed in a talk with Mr. Babson, is not the case. "Probably there is nothing so uninteresting to the average man as dry statistics," Mr. Babson said.

"He cannot get very excited when he reads on the printed page that five hundred and sixty-six million cans of beans are sold in the United States and Canada, or that in New Jersey there are 50.4 per cent. more mosquitos to the square mile than in any other state in the Union, but by the free use of illustrations I have been able to circulate my books quite largely, and I am informed by public libraries that they are in considerable demand.

"Let us take the European war as an example. There are few in this country who are not deeply interested in the question and there are few who after thinking about the matter will deny that statistics are absolutely necessary in a study of the conditions which have brought on the conflict. The problem is to present them in a way that will attract and hold the attention and interest of the great public. We think that motion pictures will solve this problem.

"This all can be shown by means of animated charts, cartoons and trick photography in a way that the average man will remember. The causes that have brought on the war as well as its progress and its inevitable results can be carried to a larger number of people in a week than would read of them in years in books or magazines.

"The high cost of living is a sore problem. The prices of almost all commodities have, it is true, increased, but statistics will show that some communities are successfully coping with the situation, and the first of my films to be released through the Paramount Pictures Corporation shows this.

"Questions of such a vital interest as those which I have outlined can be asked and answered by means of our animated magazine which embraces many other features of interest to the great public.

"I first became deeply interested in the motion picture when on a visit to South America I encountered at several points the cameramen of the Paramount expedition, and it was then that I conceived the idea of adapting statistics to the screen. Investigations proved to me the advisability of allowing Paramount to handle these pictures, and when Paramount Newspictures were issued a place was found in them for me."

Roger Ward Babson was born at Gloucester, Mass., July 6, 1875. He received his A. B. from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1898 and on March 29, 1900, he was married to Grace Margaret Knight, of St. Paul, Minn. He is president of the Babson Statistical Organization with branch offices in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and London.

He is lecturer on statistics at his old college, special writer for the Curtis publications, Saturday Evening Post, New York Times and other periodicals, and he is a member of the American Economics Association. Some of his most famous and widely read books are "Business Barometers," "The Future of the Working Classes," "The Elements of Successful Investing," "Prosperity, How It Must Come," "The Future of the Railroad" and "The Future of Us Boys."

Pathe Gets Rights to Screen First Kipling Novel

"Light That Failed," Illuminating Dark Corners of Life in India, to Feature Edeson—Parker's "Weaver's" to Spin Gold Rooster Threads of Popularity for Company

PATHÉ has acquired the picture rights to Kipling's "The Light that Failed," and Edward Jose will start work on its production of it within the next two or three days. This is the first Kipling book to be put into pictures and is filled with excellent dramatic material. Mr. Jose has secured an excellent cast headed by Robert

JOSE COLLINS (Pathe)

Edeson, Jose Collins, Lillian Tucker and Claude Fleming. "The Light that Failed" will be put upon the Gold Rooster Program.

Simultaneously with the making of this picture Mr. Jose will put on Sir Gilbert Parker's famous novel "The Weavers," using the same cast in both. This is probably the first time in the business that such doubling has been done, and it is made possible in this instance by the fact that each novel has many scenes laid in the Soudan.

The Feature Film Corporation, of which Mr. Jose is the managing director, has made arrangements with Pathé for the production of a twelve chapter serial picture. Carroll Fleming, formerly stage director for the Shuberts at the Hippodrome, and a master at obtaining big effects, has been engaged to direct this serial which will be under the personal supervision of Mr. Jose.

The Feature Film Corporation is now conducting negotiations for the building of its own studio, and plans a considerable extension of its activities.

FORTY-TWO METRO MEMBERS AT DINNER THANKSGIVING EVE

Chaperoned by "Kid" Hogan, former prize fighter and now chief property man at the Rolfe-Metro studios, forty-two members of the scenic and property working staff under the Metro banner, celebrated Thanksgiving Eve with a dinner and dance at Reisenweber's restaurant, near Columbus Circle. After the dansant, which preceded the dinner, the group of atmosphere creators marched in a body down Broadway, and were entertained at the Columbia theatre with a box party.

"You see stars when you see Metro," Kid Hogan said, in a brief after-dinner speech at Reisenweber's, "but take it from me, I've been seeing stars nearly all my life. I saw stars aplenty when I fought Joe Gans, Packy McFarland, Kid Griffo, Abe Attell, and that bunch of sluggers. Seems to me like I am stuck for this star game."

NORTHERN OHIO LEAGUE OPENS CLEVELAND HEADQUARTERS

Special to Motion Picture News

Cleveland, Nov. 30.

The Northern Ohio Motion Picture Association has opened its new headquarters on the fourth floor of the Republic building.

A housewarming featured the opening November 23 of the new quarters, which sumptuously furnished, will meet the needs of exhibitors for a long time to come.

In the largest of the three rooms, which will be used for league meetings, there will be seats for more than one hundred persons. The other rooms are used for an office and a reading parlor. Many new members, some from down the state, have been enrolled.

"SOULS OF BONDAGE" FIRST LUBIN FOR NANCE O'NEIL

The management of the Lubin Company announces that the first of the series of photoplays in which Nance O'Neil is to appear under the Lubin banner will be an original five act photoplay, "Souls in Bondage," from the pen of Daniel Carson Goodman, author of "Hagar Revelly," and other literary successes, now writing exclusively for the Lubin Company.

"Souls in Bondage" has been written especially for Miss O'Neil by Mr. Goodman. Edgar Lewis will direct. It will be released during January or February through the V-L-S-E offices.

HOUSMAN NOW WITH LUBIN IN "FATE"

Arthur A. Housman, formerly of the Edison Company, has joined the staff of Lubin players, and will make his first appearance under the Lubin banner with Director Jack Pratt in a prominent role in Daniel Carson Goodman's railroad story, "Fate," which will have its release through V-L-S-E early in 1916.

WILLIAMSON STORY FOR MUTUAL-AMERICAN

"Lord Loveland Discovers America," the story of G. M. and A. M. Williamson, the popular authors, is being produced at the American (Mutual) studios. The setting called for a most elaborate and expensive preparation.

Arrow Goes Straight for "Bigger Production" Mark

Shallenberger's Company Increases Capitalization from $30,000 to $350,000 and Makes Contract with Pathe for 10 Five-Reel Gold Rooster Features a Year

IN order to have the proper facilities for its increased output under contracts recently entered into with Pathé, the Arrow Film Corporation, of 71 West Twenty-third street, New York, has been reorganized and enlarged. The new contracts call for the production of not less than ten five-reel Gold Rooster features a year, and the production of the new "Who's Guilty?" series and other Pathé pictures.

The Arrow Film Corporation originally was a New York corporation with a capitalization of $30,000. It now has been reincorporated under the laws of Virginia, and its capital stock increased to $350,000. Practically all of this stock was subscribed for and is held by the investors in the original Arrow Company.

The first meeting of the new company was held last week and the following officers were elected: President, W. E. Shallenberger; vice-president, Gaston Van Werveke; treasurer, Norman Conniers; assistant treasurer, Frank W. Lynch; secretary, Albert S. LeVino. These officers also are directors, and Howell Hansel and J. F. Shallenberger constitute the remaining members of the board. The executive committee consists of Messrs. Shallenberger, Hansel and LeVino.

W. E. Shallenberger is a heavy investor and an active participant in all the collateral branches of the film industry. He has large holdings in the Thanhouser, Mutual, American, Reliance, Majestic and other motion picture organizations. He has owned several theatres in the central West, has operated his own exchanges, and is thoroughly familiar with the distributing and producing ends of the business.

Mr. Van Werveke formerly was secretary to Louis J. Gasnier, general manager of Pathé. Mr. Conniers is a man of broad sympathies and high artistic attainments, added to which he is an executive of the first rank. Mr. Lynch was auditor of the Thanhouser Syndicate Corporation and is rated highly expert in matters of finance and motion picture accounting.

In order to start work immediately on its Gold Rooster releases, and at the same time resume work on the new scenarios of the "Who's Guilty?" series, the directors instructed the executive committee to relieve Mr. Hansel of all details of actual production at the present time and make him the director-general of Arrow productions.

The executive committee was told to cooperate with Mr. Hansel toward the selection of additional players, directors, assistant directors and cameramen, who are to engage in the manufacture of the Arrow's Gold Rooster features and other products.

Over all these artists Mr. Hansel will exercise supervision, and on his own account, will direct only the largest of Arrow productions.

The present quarters of the Arrow Company in Yonkers are not believed large enough for the increased output, and Mr. Hansel now is on a search for new studios.

The rights to a number of book and play successes have been acquired by Mr. Shallenberger for the Arrow Company. In every case they are literary products that give considerably more than their title or their author's names toward adaptation for screen purposes.

In addition to these, the Arrow Company is in the market for original five-reel scenarios, written by photoplay authors of established reputation. Mr. LeVino will have charge of this department in cooperation with Mr. Hansel.

BUSHMAN AND PAULINE FREDERICK TO LEAD MARCH AT QUAKER BALL

Francis X. Bushman, the famous star of the Metro Pictures Corporation, will lead the grand march at the fourth annual ball of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, at Philadelphia, on Wednesday night, December 8.

Pauline Frederick will be his partner on this occasion, and the "Who's Who" of the motion picture world in the East will attend the ball, which is one of the biggest events of its kind given for exhibitors and motion picture artists.

The Press, Press Representative and the Picture---IX

Motion Picture Editor of Omaha World-Herald Tells Press Agent Why His Publicity Matter for the Newspaper Is Unavailable—Chamberlen Wanted Real News, Was Just Hungry for Right Kind, But Gave the Visitor to Understand That a Mere Collection of Congratulatory Adjectives Would Not Do

THE press agent for one of the largest motion picture theatres in Omaha, Neb., stormed into the office of Ross Chamberlen, motion picture editor of the World-Herald. He had a "kick" on the review of the picture show at his house the day previous.

"Here I go to work and send you five hundred words, a complete review, of the picture, and you cut it down to a mere brevity," he stormed. "We advertise with you, and I voluntarily write up these reviews. Why don't you use them?"

And Chamberlen's answer may well apply to the interests of motion picture theatre press agents all over the country.

"Let's see, that was 'Madame Butterfly,' with Mary Pickford, queen of the screen playing the leading role, wasn't it?" he asked. The press agent admitted it was, and threw in a suggestion that this was a bigger reason why it should have been given full space.

"Well, in the first place," began Chamberlen, "you dwelt upon Mary Pickford, her beauty and all that, for one hundred words. Then you described the Paramount company and its buildings, equipment, and so forth for another hundred or two.

"You mentioned the other stars in the play, frequently dwelling upon the name and merits of the manufacturers, their buildings, the additions to the buildings and the like, to make up nearly all the rest of it, with a few scant words about the play itself.

Want Facts About Picture

"Everyone interested in movies knows Mary Pickford is the queen of the screen, without us mentioning it ten times, right after each other, in a review. They also know, or they would know after being told once, not six times in the same story, that she is the highest paid artist in the game. They are not interested in the additions to the plant, in the merits of the producing or manufacturing company.

"But they are interested in the stars, not enough to bear repetition over and over, but they are interested. And they are interested in the review. I could complain because you, in writing the review, didn't give me more personal stuff, and more review. Watch my page and see how the names of the manufacturing companies and all that indirect stuff is cut out. Then write your reviews accordingly."

Chamberlen added, as the correspondent left, "I don't see why they don't hire newspaper men and not dictionaries as press agents for these theatres. You ought to read these voluntary reviews. The beautiful this, the enormous that, the brilliant the other, the clever, grand, gigantic and a few other circus words.

"Oh, for a review that has more nouns and verbs than it has adjectives! I'd give my hat to see one."

Tht World-Herald, Omaha, Neb., which recently gained wide applause in the central west for starting a motion picture page on Sundays, has now started the feature in its daily paper. Several columns, generally two, are given over to the feature three or four times a week, and the response from the motion picture exhibitors has been most generous.

Department with Live Screen News

"The Reel Life" is the name of the column. It embraces stories of stars, with promises by the press agents and advertisements from the local houses.

Mr. Chamberlen is a wide-awake young man with a thorough understanding of news, having worked in all departments of his paper, and has already many friends among the exhibitors and exchanges of the city. The World-Herald has stepped into the lead in this work in its field and is making a great success of it. Other papers are expected to follow suit in a short time.

Rufus Gillmore's Thrilling Detective Story Made Into an Intensely Dramatic Screeo Production

LOOKING AT PART OF THE FIRST PAGE OF THE ESSANAY PRESS SHEET

WE pointed out last week that to the photoplay editor the name of the picture manufacturer is not news.

It is, of course, necessary very often to include in each press story the manufacturer's name once, for purposes of identification. Once is enough. If the story is not virile, if it doesn't stand on its own feet, no amount of repetition of brand names or company names will keep it out of the wastebasket.

One publicity department, at least, is in a fair way to blaze the trail for this needed reform. We refer to Essanay. Its press sheet, which goes to exhibitors as well as newspapers, is to a large degree free from this evil of which discriminating newspapers everywhere are complaining.

In the Essanay News for November 20 there were 20 items intended for newspaper use, long items, short items, medium items. Two do not mention the name of the producer at all; the two longest mention it once or twice; ten others once or twice each; and the other six from two to three times.

In no case is the manufacturer's name made the mere excuse for the article, as too often happens in publicity of this kind.

The two stories from which the manufacturer's name is absent feature the appearance of well-known screen stars in current productions. The names of the stars are sufficient. Adding the name of the manufacturer would not have strengthened the story in the slightest.

This policy on the part of the Essanay people ought to be emulated by other manufacturers.

In general make-up, the Essanay sheet follows newspaper style. The synopses of plots are well written, the page is broken by a generous number of cuts, and the whole appearance is newsy.

One page only is given to general publicity. Pages 2 and 3 carry big display ads. of Essanay productions, and page 4 contains synopses and casts for the week. This last feature is of more service to exhibitors than to newspapers, but it is a good feature. To newspapers the sheet would be more valuable, we believe, if it contained a larger quantity of short items about plays and players.

IRENE HOWLEY IN "YELLOW STREAK", METRO PROGRAM

Irene Howley, the charming little stage and screen actress, will be featured with Lionel Barrymore in "A Yellow Streak," a five-part feature picture produced by the Columbia Pictures Corporation, which will be an early release on the Metro program.

William Nigh, who directed the Columbia-Metro production, "Emmy of Stork's Nest," with Mary Miles Minter in the stellar role, is directing "A Yellow Streak." Miss Howley was born in Brooklyn, and for several years was a headliner in vaudeville, and known throughout the country as "The Manhattan Girl." She made her debut in motion pictures with the Reliance company, and afterward was engaged by D. W. Griffith, for the Biograph, where she remained two years.

Miss Howley was in the all-star cast of "The Moth and the Flame," produced by the Famous Players. She supported Hazel Dawn in "The Heart of Jennifer," and has appeared in other notable productions.

TOTTEN GETS ATMOSPHERE BY TOUR WITH REPORTER

Joseph Byron Totten, an Essanay leading man, who takes the role of a reporter in "The Private Wire," spent a week on one of the big Chicago dailies getting atmosphere for his characterization.

Every night, Totten, through the courtesy of the city editor and the star reporter, accompanied the latter individual on his assignments. There was one murder, two big fires, an elopement, a burglar's reform, the rescue of a tiny waif from the lake, an interview with a national politician and the covering of a stormy meeting of the school board.

More Billie Burke Films? You Never Can Tell, Sir

Her Recent Flying Trip West Makes Sharps Predict Permanent Entrance Into Pictures of Actress Whose Posing in "Peggy" Was Supposed to Be Her Last Screen Appearance

BILLIE BURKE'S recent flying visit to the Ince studios in southern California indicates to theatrical sharps that she contemplates becoming a regular Ince star. This will surprise a good many persons who thought that the picture play "Peggy" was to be her first and only film play.

A recent letter from the coast said: "You cannot exploit 'Peggy' too strongly. It is really one of the most attractive film comedies ever made, and Miss Burke has proven herself a perfect screen subject."

Billie Burke is said to be the most expensive stage star ever engaged for the pictures, not excepting Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, who passed through New York last week on his way to the Griffith studio. Her probable future re-employment at Inceville means that Triangle directors realize she is able to "deliver the goods" in proportion to her enormous salary.

Instead of surrounding Miss Burke with an insignificant cast, as is too often done in the case of eminent stage stars, Thomas H. Ince provided William H. Thompson, of "Miracle Man" fame; Charles Ray and Gertrude Claire, who made big hits in "The Coward," and William Desmond, the sterling lead of "The Bird of Paradise," who is presented as Miss Burke's leading man in this new production.

"Peggy" is a story of the eternal conflict between the old and the new, the spirit of conservatism in the Scottish Highland community and the social and moral revolution effected by the entrance of the New York girl, Peggy Cameron, on the scene.

It will be disclosed at the Triangle Film Corporation's model theatre, the Knickerbocker, New York, within the next three or four weeks, and will be released to exhibitors generally in January.

William C. De Mille to Direct Own Plays for Lasky

Playwright, with "Classmates" and "Strongheart" to His Credit on Speaking Stage, and Screen Version of "Carmen," Will Remain at Head of Photodramatic Department

WILLIAM C. DeMILLE, American dramatist and one of the best-known persons in the English speaking theatre, has added motion picture directing to his varied accomplishments. For more than a year Mr. DeMille, who is a brother of Cecil B. DeMille, director general of the Lasky studios, has been at the head of the Lasky photodramatic department.

He is the author of many photoplays, including the "Carmen" version, in which Geraldine Farrar appeared, but from this time forward he will direct his own pieces.

He already is at work on the first of these, a photoplay in which Blanche Sweet appears as the star. Ever since Mr. DeMille has been with the Lasky company he has expressed a desire to direct productions, but the heads of the firm felt that his services were more needed as the director of the scenario department.

Before entering the photodramatic field, Mr. DeMille was considered one of the foremost American dramatists. To his credit as author are such successes as "Strongheart," "Classmates," "The Warrens of Virginia," "The Woman" and other plays. He has also lectured on dramatic construction and technique before dramatic classes of foremost universities.

Since his connection with the Lasky company he has contributed considerably towards its success. In addition to making adaptations for the screen of some of his own plays, he has written several original feature photoplays.

Despite his assumption of the work of directing his productions, Mr. DeMille will remain at the head of the photodramatic department.

"PASSERSBY," A CHAMBERS DRAMA FOR EQUITABLE

The Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation, this week, entered into an agreement with C. Haddon Chambers, the noted English author, whereby his famous dramatic document, "Passersby," which has been played in almost every known language, becomes the property of the Equitable Corporation, and will be produced early in the new year with an all star cast of players.

"Passersby," a dramatic production, was offered at the Criterion theatre, New York, for eight months, and was one of the hits of the 1910-11 season.

It has been played for long seasons in London, Berlin, Vienna, Paris and Petrograd. It is one of the few English plays to reach South America.

The announcement of the entire cast will be made within a few days.

KALEM STORIES IN MAGAZINES OF GENERAL CIRCULATION

Three magazines of national circulation are at present publishing in their columns stories taken from Kalem productions. The American Woman, The People's Monthly, and Good Stories form the trio of publications that is giving exhibitors this valuable publicity on Kalem releases.

"Stingaree," the series adapted from the E. W. Hornung stories, is getting even wider publicity through the fact that it is syndicated by the American Press Association in twelve hundred newspapers throughout this country and Canada. Kalem stories, are, of course, also used in the motion picture magazines that fictionize scenarios.

MARYLAND EXHIBITORS TO MEET AT BALTIMORE, NOV. 30

The Exhibitors' League of Maryland will hold a general "get together" meeting November 30, at the Hotel Raleigh, Baltimore.

Fred J. Herrington, national president, will address the meeting, and all Maryland exhibitors, exchange and accessory men have been invited to be present at the luncheon. Several vaudeville acts have been arranged for.

Big Turn-Out Expected at Quaker City Ball Dec. 8

Novel Entertainment Is Promised Visitors by Jay Emanuel, Chairman of Committee, Who Sees Large Attendance from Tickets Already Sold for Fourth Affair

Special to Motion Picture News

Philadelphia, Nov. 30.

MYSTERIOUS whisperings and secret conclaves amongst the committee of the local Exhibitors' League are keeping the many film fans on the qui vive about the big ball scheduled for December 8. A novel scheme of entertainment will ensure much enjoyment to all attending. Jay Emanuel, the chairman, is working hard, and is being well aided by his efficient committee who have determined to leave no stone unturned to make this fourth annual dance one of brilliance. The financial success is assured by the great demand for tickets and the generous response to the program advertisements. It has leaked out that Billie Reeves and Harry Watson are going to give one of their inimitable sketches; further deponent sayeth not. The grand march will be led by Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne. This feature will be under the professional care of Professor Henry Clyde of the Cortissoz School of Dancing.

There will be an orchestra of twenty-five trained musicians led by Professor Adolf Hirshberg, president of the Musical Union and member of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra.

Boxes are already being spoken for by prominent picture people.

It is expected that Theda Bara, Annette Kellermann, Gail Kane, Gertrude McCoy, Muriel Ostriche, Virginia Pearson, Duncan McRae, Sam Speedon, Tom Wiley, Julian M. Solomon, Jr., and many other well-known shining lights will be on hand.

Amongst the Lubin contingent already promised are Octavia Handworth, Rosetta Brice, Clara Lambert, Billie Reeves, Peter Lang and James Daly.

Santschi to Welter in Trouble for Selig Sea Feature

Star to Run 150 Feet on Rolling Deck, Fight 12 Husky Sailormen, Get Knocked on Head with Belaying Pin and Be Thrown 40 Feet to Water

Los Angeles, Nov. 27.

THOMAS SANTSCHI, Selig star, has laid aside his producing for the present in order to devote his entire attention to playing the leading role in a sea feature soon to be completed by Colin Campbell.

His first scene required him to run about 150 feet along a rolling deck, to engage twelve sailors in a rough and tumble fight, then to receive a knockout blow from a belaying pin and be thrown over the ship's side forty feet to the water below.

To Colin Campbell, dean of Selig directors, has been assigned the duty of closing the famous Edendale studio. Campbell moved his company to the Selig Jungle-Zoo recently. His is the oldest Pacific Coast Selig Company and it was agreed that this company should be the last to bid farewell to the first permanent studio on the Pacific Coast.

Director T. N. Heffron and his company, headed by Grace Darmond, arrived from Chicago last Thursday. The Selig Jungle Zoo studio will be their future headquarters. All the members of this studio stood by and gave the newcomers a good, old-fashioned welcome.

Mr. Heffron, it will be remembered, staged some of the big features produced by the Klaw and Erlanger-Biograph concern.

Princess Olga, of the Selig Jungle-Zoo, appeared at a benefit performance for charity, given by a Los Angeles newspaper last Friday. The proceeds went to make a more cheerful Christmas for the deserving needy.

BANQUET FOR ROTHAPFEL IN ST. LOUIS

S. L. Rothapfel visited St. Louis on Nov. 19, and was entertained at a banquet under the auspices of the Mutual Exchange, at Lippe's Cafe. Fred A. Keller, manager of the Mutual, was master of ceremonies.

Mr. Rothapfel made a very telling speech in regard to the moving picture industry, and was in turn entertained by short after dinner speeches by others of the guests. Many exhibitors, exchange managers and newspaper men, as well as several motion picture men from out of town, attended the banquet.

Fox Kinetic Expert Unhampered by Jamaica Climate

Several Thousand Feet of Annette Kellermann Subject Developed Without Risk from Tropical Conditions Usually Affecting Preparation of Film

SEVERAL thousand feet of the photo-drama starring Annette Kellermann, supported by three thousand people, including principals sent from New York to Jamaica, British West Indies, have been completed and the results are said to fully justify William Fox's decision to install an elaborate photographic laboratory and printing plant, in charge of a corps of kinetic experts, on the ground itself, instead of having the film shipped to New York for development with consequent risk of its being spoiled in tropical transit.

As a result of the careful testing of atmospheric conditions in Kingston, the capital of the island, where the headquarters of the companies are located, and the erection of a complete ice plant at a cost of $5,000, to secure the proper temperature of the water used in the development of the film, the results so far obtained have even exceeded Mr. Fox's most sanguine expectations, being sharper and more "contrasty" than could be obtained in a northern clime or in other localities favored by motion picture producers.

As an example of the elaborate nature of the precautions taken by Mr. Fox to secure perfect development and prints, it may be said that each week a steamer of the United States Fruit Company carries huge quantities of chemicals and apparatus to the tropics consigned to Director-General Herbert Brenon, of the William Fox Jamaican companies and George Schneidermann, photographic director.

The Oriental city, at Fort Augusta, with its cloud-topping minarets, its vast slave market, its massive mosques and picturesque streets swarming with colorful humanity in quaint and rich garb, its dungeons, torture chambers and other aspects of Arabian life, is now complete under the untiring efforts of John D. Braddon, scenic chief of construction, George Fitch and J. Alan Turner, technical directors, to hasten it to its finishing touches. On account of the hurricanes which from time to time sweep Jamaica with tempestuous fury an unusually strong construction has been utilized in building the city which covers an area about twice the size of Luna Park and contains more structures than that famed amusement resort. Mr. Brenon's most recent report to Mr. Fox informs the latter that the city is in fact almost in readiness to be "stormed" by the vast army of native supernumeraries who, in leopard skins and barbaric ornaments and armed with spears, shields and bows and arrows, have drilled for weeks under the supervision of Drill-Master George Schultz, formerly of the United States army.

As has been the case since the companies arrived on the island, everybody connected with the government of the possession has been more than kind in his treatment of Mr. Fox's enterprise. Mrs. Irene Lee, mistress of wardrobes, with two hundred native assistants, has about completed the strenuous work of building upwards of six thousand costumes, many of them elaborate Oriental designs.

The companies engaged in the making of "Terese Raquin" and "The Ruling Passion," two of the numerous supplementary pictures under the respective directorship of Keenan Buel and James MacKay, are also nearing the completion of their work.

Kriterions Up to Boston Police Sunday Standard

New England Branch, in Addition to Its Regular Program of 18 Reels a Week, Makes Specialty of Furnishing Subjects Adapted to this Need

AMONG the recent accessions to the moving picture business in Massachusetts is the New England Kriterion Film Exchange at 205 Pleasant street, Boston, operated by the Kriterion Company of Boston. The plant is one of the best equipped in the city, located in the heart of the film district, convenient to the theatres and transportation companies, and furnished with new and up-to-date equipment of the most modern type.

The entire plant is strictly fireproof throughout and has two large vaults capable of storing several thousand reels. The exhibition room is one of the largest in Boston and is equipped with a fireproof, tile booth and the most approved system of ventilation. The company was organized to handle the Kriterion program, releasing eighteen reels per week.

One of the greatest difficulties of Massachusetts exhibitors has been to get satisfactory reels which would be approved by the Massachusetts District Police for exhibition on Sunday. The Kriterion Company has made a specialty of meeting this need, and in addition to its regular program it has secured a considerable number of special reels adapted to this purpose. It is also contemplated to add a certain number of features to the service in the near future.

The financial interests behind the exchange are represented by Thomas H. Mullen of Lynn, the president and treasurer of the Kriterion Company of Boston. Mr. Mullen is new in the moving picture world, but brings to the company a varied experience in general commercial lines of business.

The manager of the exchange is R. Frank McKay. During the past fifteen years Mr. McKay was associated first with the General Film Company, and then with the R. D. Marson Film Exchange.

He has also managed a syndicate of suburban theatres and during the past summer has managed the moving picture exhibitions in the Massachusetts Metropolitan Park system in and about Boston.

Detroit's Turn to Do the Honors for S. L. Rothapfel

Banquet Held at Hotel Tuller, Monday, November 22, and Chief Exhibitor of the Country on Tour Under Auspices of Mutual, Delivers His Talk on Management

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 28.

EVERY person who attended the dinner given in honor of S. L. Rothapfel at the Hotel Tuller, Monday evening, November 22, was more than glad to be there, and all are indebted to the Mutual Film Corporation under whose auspices he was brought to Detroit.

Preceding Mr. Rothapfel's address there was an elaborate chicken dinner served, accompanied by a splendid array of musical and cabaret entertainment.

It was just about ten o'clock when Mr. Trask rose from his chair, tapped his plate and eulogized the speaker. Mr. Trask is Detroit manager for the Mutual Film Corporation, and had charge of the Rothapfel tour in Detroit.

Mr. Rothapfel's talk was a brilliant one. It contained something of direct benefit to every exhibitor.

Mr. Rothapfel is a firm believer in advertising, and says that he uses newspaper advertising almost exclusively. His advice to the exhibitors was "spend all you can on newspaper advertising and then—spend a little more."

Enthusiastic applause from the hundred or more exhibitors and exchange men greeted Mr. Rothapfel upon the conclusion of his talk. Mr. Trask, as chairman of the evening, called upon A. J. Gillingham, manager of the General Film Company, for a few remarks, who very briefly said he fully agreed with everything Mr. Rothapfel talked about. Others who spoke before adjournment were John H. Kunsky, Harry I. Garson, Thomas D. Moule, M. Harlann Starr and Frederick Ingersoll.

HOTALING IN LOS ANGELES COLONY FOR LUBIN

Los Angeles, Nov. 25.

The Los Angeles film colony was increased this week by the arrival of Arthur D. Hotaling, who for twenty years has been affiliated with the Lubin producing staff.

In the past Mr. Hotaling and company has spent the winters in Florida producing comedies, and this is his first trip to the Coast. He was accompanied by his brother Gary and little daughter Leola.

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

EDITOR'S NOTE.—It is the desire of "Motion Picture News" to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in the management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything, in fact, done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to write us about any new enterprise he has; also to come to us for advice or information along any line. BATTLE TO WIN NEWSPAPERS GAINING GROUND IN CITIES THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY

THE battle to win the newspapers to the cause of the motion picture continues throughout the country.

Exhibitors, awakening to their opportunities, are going in increasing numbers to their newspapers, laying the case of the picture before them, and receiving, so far as we are able to discover, few rebuffs. Exchangemen are aiding. And what is still more encouraging, some newspapers are of their own accord establishing motion picture departments.

The Kansas City Post is publishing the first motion picture page in that city. The Post's page will receive detailed notice in this column next week.

The New Orleans Item, after having run a Sunday department for some months, began November 15 the publication of a daily department.

The Buffalo Express devotes a couple of columns of the Sunday paper to "The Silent Drama," as its department is called.

The Fort Worth (Texas) Star-Telegram gives a page Sundays to scenes and players in the week's photoplay productions.

The Davenport (Iowa) Democrat and Leader finds space for a half page of news and cuts illustrative of photoplays at Davenport theatres.

The Waterloo (Iowa) Times-Tribune prints a page of photoplay news on Sunday.

The Philadelphia Evening Ledger, not content with running one of the best motion picture departments in the country, issues with its Saturday edition a separate twelve-page amusement section, with pictures receiving the lion's shares of space every week.

And so the story goes. Exhibitors who have not yet awakened should awake to a realization of the benefits their fellows in many cities are gaining by co-operation with the newspapers. If you have gone to your newspaper once, and have been turned down, go again. Tell the newspaper what other newspapers are doing. And advertise—advertise—advertise. When you have a big feature to announce to your town do as W. L. Myers, of the Palace theatre, Waterloo, Iowa, did. He used a whole page in the Waterloo Times-Tribune for his announcement of the Fox "Carmen."

Above everything, impress upon your newspaper that you don't want it merely to print press notices of your theatre. Make your argument more comprehensive than that. Tell the newspaper that you want it to establish a regular motion picture department, with an editor, who will devote his ability to giving in an attractive form news of the picture field as a whole, always with the local field uppermost, of course.

WEIRD FIGURE OF "SCANDAL" IS STRIKING LOBBY SCHEME

An original idea in lobby advertising is shown in a picture on this page. It was employed by Manager James J. Jackson, of the Savoy theatre, Atlanta. The weird figure of "Scandal," moss-draped, was made mansize and was rendered more than usually striking by blinking red and green eyes. This scheme was supplemented by the use of a large cloth sign on the front of the house, posters and pennants in the lobby, and the use of an automobile decorated with streamers.

In the two days that Mr. Jackson exhibited "Scandal," his receipts were only a few dollars less than those for an entire week when another Atlanta theatre, now closed, showed "Scandal" without having conducted such a vigorous advertising campaign.

WASHINGTON THEATRE IN ARTISTIC DRESS FOR TRIANGLE INAUGURAL

For the reception of the Triangle program, Moore's Garden Theatre, Washington, D. C., appeared in a new gown of artistic coloring and design. The scheme of blending is brilliant but not gaudy, the predominating color being old rose. Draperies and mural decorations harmonize with this, as does also the stage set surrounding the screen. A flower garden has also been created behind the foot lights. Announcing the program installed, are Triangle pennants in the foyer. These are done in colors after the trade mark of the Triangle Corporation and make an attractive decoration. The walls of the theatre are hung with screen favorites, while, in an inconspicuous place between the entrance doors is a large picture of Tom Moore himself, who is ciefly responsible for the unusual things in Washington film circles.

A remarkable instance in the decoration of the Garden is that all this work has been done without interruption to performances. Nor have patrons been annoyed with the odor of paint or scaffolding. The reason for this condition is that by special arrangements all the work has been accomplished at night, between the hours of 11 p. m. and 5 a. m., thus giving the paint opportunity to dry and the debris cleared away before the opening hour of 10 a. m. As an additional precaution, a special ventilating plant was installed for aeration.

In this setting Washington was introduced to the Triangle features at the Garden with Dustin Farnum in "The Iron Strain," Douglas Fairbanks in "The Lamb" and Raymond Hitchcock and Mabel Noramnd in "My Valet."

"NEWSPAPER" HOUSE ORGANS PROVE REMARKABLY SUCCESSFUL

The recent experiments made by the managements of the Franklin theatre, at Oakland, Cal., the Sequoia at Sacramento, and the Liberty at San Jose, with house organs in the shape of newspapers for advertising purposes have been very gratifying, and the publication of these will be continued as long as results continue to be anywhere as near satisfactory as they are at present.

In speaking of the success of this venture, C. W. Midgley, of the Franklin theatre, said: "Our experience with the Franklin News has been more than satisfactory, and this is the best advertising medium we have found since engaging in business. Dodgers are glanced at and thrown away, while the paper is retained, owing to the fact that it contains film news of interest to the general public. We are now distributing five thousand a week, and it is rare when we find more than half a dozen left in the theatre at the end of an evening's performance. Much of the credit for the success of the idea must be given, however, to the Fox Film Corporation, for without the splendid co-operation given us in supplying advance material it would be almost impossible for such a paper to be published. It is strange that other concerns have not adopted a similar policy of putting out publicity material, for what assists the exhibitor most certainly is of value to the producer."

The success of the Franklin theatre has been marveled at by exhibitors in general, as the house is off the main street.

GUESSING CONTEST DRAWS CROWDS TO BARDSTOWN, KY., HOUSE

A guessing contest which elicited much interest from patrons was put on recently at the Crystal theatre, Bardstown, Ky. The holder of each admission ticket was entitled to guess the identity of a local man whose picture was flashed on the screen.

Starting with a view of the back of the head, the picture was turned a little each night until Saturday night, when the contest closed. The management gave a barrel of flour to the lucky guesser, provided he was in the house the following Tuesday night. The contest drew large crowds.

One Hundred Dollars Quick For a Name

THE UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY desires to secure immediately, the very best name for a new brand of feature film plays, these plays to be the very finest of their kind ever filmed, and to the person who sends in the most appropriate name on or before MIDNIGHT OF DECEMBER 10th, the UNIVERSAL will PAY ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS ($100) IN SPOT CASH. The UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY will release this new brand of features under the brand name that is chosen from the names sent in.

In sending in your name suggestion for this new brand, bear in mind these several important points: first, this new brand will be of a class and character which will be adequately described as distinctive moving picture achievements. The name MUST BE SHORT and names composed of a single syllable will be given preference over names containing more than the one syllable. The name must lend itself to several things, i. e., the adaptability in trade mark designing, to psychological advertising possibilities, and most of all, IT MUST BE SIMPLE AND EASILY PRONOUNCED so as to be EASILY REMEMBERED.

The name must carry a certain punch to it—must personify CLASS AND QUALITY in its very highest form and must have something about it that will clearly distinguish this new brand from the ordinary brand names. The title, after it has been chosen by the Officials of the UNIVERSAL, will be announced in all the leading Moving picture trade-papers, together with the name of the person who suggested it. You may send in one name or a hundred names. The number of names you suggest makes no difference—but, KEEP IN MIND, WHAT IS WANTED, from the above description. Your suggestions for brand names MUST REACH THIS OFFICE NO LATER THAN MIDNIGHT OF DECEMBER 10th.

Of all the great triumphant and successful Universal serials none have had greater punch; wider advertising and publicity possibilities; more popular stars; or a more intricate or interesting plot.

Added to this is the supreme and heretofore unequalled drawing quality—the EIGHTEEN AUTHOR POWER of this superb series-serial. Each episode of this thrilling modern picture is a complete story in itself, so that your patrons may start with any episode and enjoy the remaining installments without loss of interest.

Never in your life have you seen on the screen such scenes, settings or situations as are revealed in the succeeding episodes of "GRAFT." Never have the inside workings of modern politics in American cities, towns, villages and hamlets been disclosed in moving pictures as they are shown in all the hideousness of corruption in this wonderful collaboration of EIGHTEEN of America's best known, best read and most popular authors.

Take advantage of the prestige and popularity of these famous writers and BOOK "GRAFT." Book it for the coin and the crowds. Book it for the 16 weeks of capacity business that is sure to follow. This picture is a sure fire hit and will do more to popularize your house than any series-serial you ever played. Write, or better still, WIRE your nearest Universal Exchange today. Tomorrow may be too late. You can't afford to let your competitor grab "GRAFT" ahead of you. Book now.

The Universal Film Mfg. Co.,
1600 Broadway, New York, N.Y.

Gentlemen:

Having the largest seating capacity of any Theatre in Cleveland, it has been a difficult matter to determine definitely what policy would produce the largest net income, and as an experiment we have tried Vaudeville, Feature pictures, regular programs and after experimenting for several months, sparing no expense, we have now found the regular Universal Program and Broadway Features produce a greater net profit than any other policy we have tried - and net profit is one of the important items in connection with a Theatre.

Yours very truly,

THE CENTRAL AMUSEMENT COMPANY,

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

NEW ORLEANS EXCHANGES MAKE QUICK RECOVERY FROM STORM EFFECTS

FOLLOWING Pathé's progressive lead, the new headquarters of the Mutual Film Corporation, at 816 Perdido street, New Orleans, is to contain a projection booth for the convenience of visiting exhibitors.

This is one of Manager Ross Hardenbrook's ideas, and he will supervise the erection of the booth, which will seat thirty or forty exhibitors very comfortably.

Workmen are at present busy at Mutual's new home. Inside of a week everything will be shipshape, and the Mutual's new headquarters will make their formal bow.

The exchanges have about recovered from the heavy blow dealt them by the recent storm. Contracts are coming in with a gratifying frequency and the exchange field is weekly widening. Two interesting announcements are expected before long. One is that the V-L-S-E will invade the New Orleans territory. The other is the opening of the Triangle program.

Ernest Boehringer, owner of the Columbia theatre in Canal street, is the newest entrant into the exchange field. He has opened an office in the Audubon building, and will handle feature films.

The Rex Photoplay Service Company, in the Nola building, reports a heavy export demand from Central America and Cuba. The company is the only one in the New Orleans field at present exporting films.

C. Henriques, an exhibitor of Colon, Panama, is the manager of the company. Mr. Henriques recently was in New York, from which city he sailed for Havana. His son, Werner, assists him in the management of the company.

Paul L. Ford, president of the Peerless Feature Film Company, is back in New Orleans from a two weeks' sojourn in Texas. He reports that the Triangle program scored heavily at the Old Mill theatre in Dallas. "The people packed the house," Mr. Ford said, "and clapped enthusiastically when the pictures were being shown. I confidently predict that just as enthusiastic a reception will be accorded the Triangle program in New Orleans."

Manager S. T. Stephens of the Fox Film Corporation celebrated Anniversary Week by securing ten new Fox contracts for his company. Fox productions now are being shown in thirty-eight suburban houses, exclusive of Pearce's theatres.

Incidentally, Mr. Stephens is one of the biggest boosters MOTION PICTURE NEWS has in this territory. He preaches Fox films first, but incidentally MOTION PICTURE NEWS second. If an exhibitor is served by neither, he is usually served by both when Mr. Stephens gets through with him.

Exchange managers in New Orleans say that the new rotogravure section issued by the New Orleans Daily States on Sunday is a big boost to their business. The section was inaugurated on October 24, and carried pictures of Clara Kimball Young and Wilton Lackaye, besides several scenes from "Trilby"; also these prominent film members:

Holbrook Blinn, World; Vivian Martin, World; Florence Reed, Equitable; Alice Brady, World; Lillian Cook, World; Robert Warwick, World; Clara Whipple, Wizard Films; Muriel Ostriche, Equitable; Lenore Ulrich, Triumph, and Molly McIntyre.

MANY MANAGERS VISIT UNITED IN WASHINGTON, D. C.

The United Film Exchange, of Washington, D. C., with Sidney B. Lust as manager, has had many visitors recently. Among these may be included J. D. Hofheim, manager of the Strand, Arcade and Palace theatres of Norfolk, Va.; Den Levy, of Danville, Va.; L. G. Scheofield, of the Piedmont Amusement Company of Greensburg, N. C.; J. Varner, of Lexington, N. C., and J. Elvine, formerly of the Empire of this city, now of the Victoria of Charlotte, N. C.

This exchange is supplying the program for the Sunday performances of the Casino theatre. This is a family drama playhouse which is offering pictures on Sunday, which gives Manager Lust an excellent opening for the features of the United, K. & R. and Kriterion.

M. J. Sonneborn, formerly of Baltimore, is now associated with Mr. Lust in the distribution of the Kriterion program.

NATIONAL EXCHANGEMEN'S LEAGUE, ORGANIZED AT THE CAPITAL, TO WORK FOR TRADE BETTERMENT

THE latest movement in film circles in the National Capital is the organization of the exchangemen under the title of the National Exchangemen's League. Frank Spurrier, local manager of the V-L-S-E exchange is chiefly responsible for the "get-together" meeting which resulted in the present organization.

Temporary officers were elected as follows: President, Frank Spurrier; secretary-treasurer, Clarence Lenz. At the next meeting permanent officers will be elected and the work of the organization divided among various committees.

In calling together the exchangemen, Mr. Spurrier had this to say: "There are many things in common which we exchangemen should discuss, many problems which we should thrash out among ourselves for the good of the industry and amusement and for the good of the exhibitor, irespective of whose output we are handling.

"Not one of us is losing a single chance with an exhibitor by binding ourselves together for a common cause; in fact we are fortifying ourselves and at the same time assisting the exhibitor."

Sidney B. Lust, manager of the United Film Exchange, was most enthusiastic at the meeting. He is one of the most broad-minded film men in the industry and just such an organization as this is what he has been advocating for some time. "There are points about the exhibitors that should be common knowledge among exchangemen," remarked Mr. Lust. "This applied chiefly to their financial standing and their manner of doing business. We exist through the exhibitor and it is not our purpose to impose a price for a program upon him by which he can not make a living. The Exchangemen's League will give us an opportunity of discussing such a condition to the advantage of the exhibitor.

"On the other hand, if an exhibitor is not square in his dealings, it is only fair that the word should be passed to other exchanges for their benefit. The present organization has for its main object the betterment and progress of the motion picture amusement and trade.

"It will be to this territory what the motion picture board of trade is for the manufacturers."

In Washington especially the National Exchangemen's League will have a strength in any legal matters which may arise with local or Congressional authorities. It promises to give to this section a dignity and fortification which is manifestly very necessary.

The present members of the league are Frank Spurrier, V-L-S-E Exchange; A. S. Heyman, General Film Company; Sidney B. Lust, United Film Service; C. W. Bunn, World Film Corporation; Lawrence Day and J. Brown, Metro Pictures Corporation; C. F. Senning, Fox Film Corporation; B. C. Cunningham, Mutual Film Corporation; J. L. Yates, Universal Company; H. Osborn, Pathé Exchange; Geo. Smiley, Exhibitors' Co-operative Exchange; and Geo. Mann, Famous Players Exchange, handling the Paramount program.

SIMMONDS TO REPRESENT THREE COMPANIES IN PANAMA

During the first week in December, Meyer Simmonds, assistant manager of the Peerless Feature Film Company of New Orleans, and one of the best known film men in that city, resigns from that position and will go to Panama to represent three New York film companies.

His film friends will see him safely aboard, and their best wishes go with this "youngster." For, despite Mr. Simmonds' long experience in the business, he is yet in his twenties.

From the first his activities have been confined to New Orleans. Here he represented several companies at different times. Recently he was with the United Program Film Service of Louisiana. When Paul L. Ford organized the Peerless Feature Film Company of New Orleans, he recognized in Mr. Simmonds sterling business qualities and a head for business, and so made him his right hand man.

Mr. Simmonds goes to Panama to handle the World and Equitable programs in that country, through the Winik and Brock International Film Company; and in addition will represent the Life Photoplay productions and those of the Apex Film Company, both of New York. Morris Winik, brother of Hyman Winik, is now in the Panama territory, and is lining up a schedule for Mr. Simmonds.

Mr. Simmonds will have as his territory Panama, Havana, Jamaica and Porto Rico.

EXCHANGES IN NORTHWEST SEE SHIFTS IN MANAGEMENT

Grant Reed, who has been manager of the Seattle Mutual for the past year and a half, has been transferred to Portland, Ore., where he will be in the same capacity. Jack Woody, overseeing manager of the Northwest Mutual, who has made his headquarters in Portland, will take charge of the Seattle office.

C. H. Code, who has been special representative for the "Diamond from the Sky," in the Northwest, has resigned. Mr. Code has not announced his plans for the future.

H. A. Johnson has been appointed salesman out of Seattle for the Metro. Mr. Johnson was formerly connected with the Johnson Seating Company of Seattle.

Sumner Peck has left the Mutual to join the Triangle forces.

ETRIS FINDS DEMAND FOR DON AND REEVES COMEDIES

Bob Etris, the travelling special representative of the Lubin company, has returned to Philadelphia after a trip extending over the past three months, during which time he has visited every General film exchange in the country and Canada, and has addressed many gatherings of exhibitors.

Mr. Etris reports a remarkable growth of the popularity of the newer Lubin product, and the almost general acceptance of the D. L. Don and Billie Reeves comedies as among the best now being offered by any producing company.

Within the week Mr. Etris will again leave Philadelphia for an extended tour.

UNIVERSAL OFFERS PRIZE FOR EXCHANGE SHOWING BIGGEST GAIN IN PROFITS EACH MONTH

MORRIS H. HOFFMAN, manager of Universal exchanges, announces that, beginning with the week of November 22, prizes would be offered by the Universal for the exchange manager whose office showed the biggest gain in profits over the four preceding weeks, same to be a gold watch, and in case the same manager wins the second time, a hundred dollars in gold. When this announcement was made, a representative of this paper called on him to get complete details of the offer, which is said to exceed anything of the kind ever made by any concern in the motion picture business.

"A handsome gold watch, not a bric-a-brac, but a timepiece any man can wear with pride," said Mr. Hoffman, "is going to be offered every four weeks to the exchange manager who can show the biggest increase in his profits over the last four weeks, and this is a proposition that is on to stay. We have not bought out a watch factory, but we will 'watch' the managers and then give it to them. Then, in order to avoid pinning too many watches on a manager's clothes, I have arranged so that if a manager wins a second time his prize will be $100 in gold, which stands for every other time he wins. Now if a man wins five times in any twelve months, his salary is increased $1,000 per year, in addition to the gold watch and the gold prizes.

"We have so arranged this contest that the man in the little territory has an equal opportunity with the man in the big field, and the latter has no possible advantage over his smaller competitor. I have specified that it is the 'biggest gain in profits' that counts. Gains in profits will have to be represented by a proportionate gain in cash collections and cash remittances to the home office; mere paper profits will not do. Profits through merchandise sales will count just as well as profits on film rentals. There will be absolutely no partiality shown and the winner will win on merit—nothing else. The name of the winner will be published in our pink sheet, which we send to every Universal exchange each week, at the end of each four-week period, so that each manager and his staff of employees can keep in close touch with what his other Universal brothers are doing."

President Carl Laemmle of the Universal, who proposed the plan, was most enthusiastic over it after he saw it in the shape Mr. Hoffman put it, and said: "We've got the reputation of having the livest bunch of exchange managers in the business. For that reason the man who wins has got to hustle, because he is going up against exchange managers who are just as alive as he is. That ought to make the fun all the merrier," concluded Mr. Laemmle.

DEMAND FOR SYNOPSES OF FILMS BY CENSORS IRRITATES PHILADELPHIA FILM MEN

IT is claimed by Philadelphia exchange men that two recent rulings of the state board of censors are working new hardships on them.

One rule that has met with objections is that a complete synopsis of each picture must accompany every film sent up for examination. With the hard work that the censorship already entails, it is felt this might be omitted.

One man thought it gave the censors a fine chance to reject a picture whose story was not to their taste without much of an examination.

The other rule at which the exchanges are grumbling is the numbers that now have to be placed on each film in connection with the official censor seal.

This has to be paid for by the exchange. When this seal gets dim or blurred by time, a new one has to be paid for. Sometimes a number either through accident or design is torn off by the careless or unscrupulous exhibitor. Back goes the film to its moral guardians, who affix a new number at the expense of the exchange, which of course was entirely blameless in the matter.

Apropos of censors, the Triangle release of "The Lily and the Rose," now on at the Chestnut Street opera house, got such a boost through the fact that it was first turned down by the censors and then passed on second review, that it is running the second week along with the rest of last week's program. The management used the reversal of judgment in its newspaper advertisements.

STERN REPORTS GOOD BUSINESS IN AROOSTOOK SECTION OF MAINE

IT is reported among the exchange men in Bangor, Me., that William Green, in charge of the Mutual office in Portland, Ore., is to move that branch to Bangor.

Charles Stern, manager of the Universal Film Company's Bangor office, has just returned from Aroostock county, the great potato producing section of northern New England, where he says he found things booming and the motion picture business looking good. A new house is about to open at Oakfield under the management of N. C. Morton, and this is but one of the activities that Mr. Stern tells about.

Through his activity the Knights of Pythias lodges of Presque Isle and Fort Fairfield run the Universal feature "Damon and Pythias" last week, and the Caribou High School, one of the few schools in Maine owning its own projection set, is to put on the same feature next week.

The biggest demand at present in Maine is for good comedies and society dramas in multiple reel features, says Mr. Stern.

PHILADELPHIA EXCHANGES CENTRE OF ACTIVITY; AUTUMN BUSINESS ON INCREASE

GEORGE BEIHOFF, manager of the World Film exchange, Philadelphia, finds business increasing so rapidly, the exchange has outgrown its present quarters, which are so crowded, it is hard to get in to speak to Mr. Beihoff.

Negotiations are now pending for the acquisition of two large buildings in a prominent part of Vine street.

As soon as the deal is consummated and alterations are completed, the World will move into these two-story, spacious quarters in which there will be elevators and two large film vaults.

By the arrangement with Warner's the World office here will have an outlet for its older films and in the future handle only its own finest releases, thus increasing their prestige.

Warner Bros., Inc., have decided to again establish a Philadelphia office under the name of the New Film Corporation.

The large building at 1335 Vine street has been secured, and under the supervision of Abe Warner, president of the New York office, is fast being fitted up for the use of the new exchange.

Robert Lynch, at present assistant manager of the Electric Theatre Supply Company, will be the local manager.

The New Film exchange will handle the World Film's older and smaller releases, and thus be in a way a branch office of the World, though running under its own management in a separate building.

H. G. Atwood, of the Pathé exchange, announces that Pathé has engaged the services of an expert camera man, to have exclusive charge of local news happenings in that vicinity for the Pathé News Weekly.

The appointing of a man just returned from filming "Nedra," in the Bahamas, and lately working in the battlefields of France, insures the best results from Philadelphia's territory, in the opinion of Mr. Atwood.

The latest acquisition of the Pathé forces is the capture of the Regent theatre for first showing of Gold Rooster plays there.

These will be featured in this attractive Market Street theatre two days each week. Exhibitors are responding readily to the Pathé newspaper advertising campaign by increased bookings.

Harry Scott, manager of the Kleine-Edison exchange reports that the George Kleine release, the "Danger Signal," after a private showing on Sunday, November 14, at the Candler theatre in New York, will make its appearance in Philadelphia on December 1. It has not been decided yet which theatre will have the first showing.

Mr. Scott, who went to New York for the private view, says he anticipates big popularity for this release, and feels sure the board of censors will not find one cut necessary in the whole film.

The comedy film of "Keep Moving," which was shown at the same time and place, will also soon appear in this city.

Harry Bryan, manager of the Metropolitan Booking Office, is pleased with his move to 1309 Vine street, where he is located in the same quarters as the Kriterion.

Philip S. Greenberg, of the Electric Theatre Supply Company, has resigned to take a position with the Forty-fifth street New York branch of Warner Bros., Inc, where he will be assistant manager.

Mr. Greenberg is well known in Philadelphia through his more than two years residence, during which time he was associated with the General Film Company, the Greater New York Film Company, as well as the Electric.

New York being his home town, however, he is glad to be returning thither.

A change has been effected in the Chadlee Supply Company, whereby D. Starkman has retired, leaving J. S. Paleton as proprietor.

The firm occupies quarters at 1208 Vine street.

BRIMMER RESIGNS FROM UNIVERSAL IN MILWAUKEE

W. C. Brimmer, for the past three years manager of the Milwaukee branch of the Universal Film Company, will resign next week. Just who his successor will be is not known.

The announcement of Mr. Brimmer's resignation will come as a distinct surprise to his many friends in this territory. Mr. Brimmer has had a most successful career as head of the Milwaukee branch. When he went there, the Universal program was in but four or five houses and was not considered a factor in the local field. Not a downtown house ran the program, and but few of the outskirt theatres.

Thanks to Mr. Brimmer's ability the exchange is now said to have in excess of one hundred houses playing the Universal program exclusively, among them being one house in the heart of the city that shows Universal productions exclusively.

Considering the fact that the territory booked by the Milwaukee office is very restricted and includes but a part of the state, Mr. Brimmer's record there is remarkable.

Just what his plans are for the future, Mr. Brimmer would not say, contenting himself with an announcement that he was going to spend the Christmas holidays in the East and would probably enter the employ of some New York company.

METRO'S OWN OFFICES IN FRISCO

Within a short time Metro productions will be offered to exhibitors in the California territory through offices maintained directly by the Metro Pictures Corporation. These have been handled in the past by Sol L. Lesser, but the rights to both new and old released have been turned over by him to the producing concern.

Large quarters have been secured for an exchange at 51 Jones street, near Golden Gate avenue, and before the end of November business will be transacted here under the direction of E. D. Selden.

DAVIES BRINGS "AD" CAMPAIGN IN MILWAUKEE FOR METRO

O. N. Davies, of the Minneapolis branch of the Metro Film service, was in Milwaukee recently, arranging for a campaign of advertising for the Metro program which was inaugurated Saturday and Sunday, November 27 and 28. This campaign, the first of its kind to be run in that city, will be handled as a straight amusement proposition, the Metro program being advertised on the photoplay pages with the regular theatre ads. Press stories and cuts will be run in all the motion picture sections on these days.

Though the amusement rate is slightly higher than the regular commercial rate, Mr. Davies figures that an advertisement on the amusement page, with reader, is worth four times a straight commercial advertisement. This is the first time in Milwaukee newspaper history that a distributing company has utilized the local amusement pages for advertising.

To help along the screen page question in Milwaukee, Mr. Davies arranged that only those papers that had film columns were to be given copy. J. W. Martin, of that city, is handling the campaign for the Metro people.

PARAMOUNT PUBLICITY BUREAU OPENED BY ROUSE

The Progressive Motion Picture Company, 219-224 Central building, Seattle, the Paramount exchange for Washington, Oregon and Alaska, has opened a publicity department, placing M. M. Rouse, who for the past month or so has been one of its traveling representatives, in charge of the new department.

Mr. Rouse has had considerable experience in both the exchange and exhibiting ends of the business and until recently was manager of the National theatre in Portland.

He is an adept at theatrical advertising and it is expected that he will be able to render valuable assistance to Paramount exhibitors in his territory.

In opening a special publicity department, the Progressive Motion Picture Company is following in the footsteps of a large number of other Paramount exchanges, including the Notable Feature Film Company, of Salt Lake and Denver; the Famous Players Film Company, of Philadelphia and Washington; the William L. Sherry Film Company, of New York; and the Famous Players exchange, of Boston.

LARGER OFFICES FOR UNIVERSAL IN VANCOUVER

James E. Finch, Vancouver manager for the Universal, is contemplating a change of location for the local branch, and last week practically completed arrangements for a large ground floor room in the centre of the theatre district.

This will give the Universal the only downstairs exchange in the city, as well as the largest. A fifth room was added a short time ago to the present quarters in the Holden Building, but it is now felt that still more room is needed. Mr. Finch says business is good.

FILM NEWS FROM FOREIGN PARTS

FOUR AMERICAN FIRMS GIVE $2,500 EACH TO RED CROSS FUND IN ENGLAND

Special to Motion Picture News

London, Nov. 16.

THE event of the week in the British cinematograph trade is a great national effort to raise £30,000 or over $120,000 with which to purchase a complete ambulance convoy, consisting of fifty motor ambulances, four motor cars, a repair wagon, stores wagon, and ten motorcycles for the British Red Cross Society. The proposition, when it was first made, was taken up with electric enthusiasm, and at once eleven of the leading firms each gave $2,500, the cost of one motor ambulance.

Among the American firms who made this contribution were Edison, Lubin, Famous Players, and the Vitagraph companies. Since then the whole of the trade—producers, renters and exhibitors—has come into line, and this week, on a uniform day, they will make a colossal effort, quite unprecedented in the history of British cinematography, to raise this stupendous sum. Every branch of the trade has its own special committee, and for organization purposes the United Kingdom has been split up into 31 districts, into one of which each of the 5,000 cinemas will come. Some theatres have promised to give their whole takings, and others part-takings on that day to the fund. Some of the leading artistes, both in the studio and on the stage, are giving every support to the fund.

Revenue from Film Duty

The British Treasury has issued a return, which shows that the total amount of duty received on imported films from September 29 to October 23 was £32,572. Worked out pro rata, this is equivalent to almost £500,000, against which the Government estimated £400,000. No doubt, towards the expiration of the year there will be a diminution in the revenue of film duty. American firms who are exporters to the Channel Islands will be interested in the announcement of the Chancellor of the Exchequer that "British films and foreign films which have paid the import duty will be allowed to be sent for short periods to the Channel Islands under bond, and will be exempted from payment on re-importation."

For sterling quality and power of appeal. "Metro" films, which are being handled in this country by Ruffells, Ltd., figure in the front rank. They have caused a wave of enthusiasm right through the film trade, and their outstanding merit, both in photography and conception, is freely admitted. "Destiny," or "The Soul of a Woman," one of the latest arrivals, has every augury of success with the masses. Another film, "The Bigger Man," which typifies the struggle between employers and employed, is a theme whose appeal is inevitable. The trade-union is a potent factor in the industrial life of the British, and no play can have greater power of appeal to the man in the street than that which has as its basis the labor problem.

The success of "The Middleman," the London Film Company's production, exemplifies this. One has every hope that "The Bigger Man" will be a unique success, and after its excellent reception at the trade show, that is very likely. Ben Tillett, the well-known labor leader, who has written a brief introduction for the film, attended the trade show, and expressed the hope that this startling production would be the forerunner of many other films of a similar kind. The Metro films which have been in greatest demand are: "Shooting of Dan McGrew," "Heart of Painted Woman," and "Second in Command."

Horsley Films Invade England

A new series of American films has been introduced to the British public by D. W. Russell, who is now the London agent for the David Horsley productions. At a critical period such as this, to embark on such an enterprise is particularly commendable to all concerned. A good and encouraging start was made with two comedies entitled "A Mix-Up in Males," and "The Thrilling Adventures of Count Verace."

Two big film serials are making a great bid for public favor—"The Broken Coin," with which the Trans-Atlantic Company are offering some novel and pulling advertising stunts, and "The Exploits of Elaine," the Pathé film. Pathé's competition in connection with this film is the most gigantic in the history of the British film trade. In the first place they offered £100 for the best advertising idea, and received the outline of a large number of useful schemes, of which the following was selected as a basis for their £1,000 competition for cinema patrons. The first prize is £250, with £50 to the manager of the cinema where the winner regularly attends, and £50 to be divided amongst the staff of the theatre. The second prize is of £100; third, £50; fourth, £25, and 475 prizes of £1 for the next best solutions of the competition.

The scheme is as follows: One or more letters of the alphabet will be shown on the screen at each performance where "Elaine" is being, or will be, shown. This will continue for 20 weeks until in all 29 letters have been shown. These form a mystery phrase. Leaflets are being distributed at all cinemas, and on the back of these are twenty spaces in which the letters of the mystery phrase can be written as they are announced. Some weeks two letters will be announced. By taking any number of these letters, words and phrases can be formed. These words or phrases must be descriptive of the serial film "Elaine." Choosing at random from these 29 letters Pathé Frérès have easily made the following: "Fine Plot," "Intense." "Elaine" has been advertised more extensively than any other film of its kind, and I am told that the bookings number nearly a thousand.

Mr. J. Evans, author and producer of the famous "Pimple" comedies, has joined the staff of the British Film Company, and will shortly commence a new series of films.

Sir Herbert Tree Coming to America

Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, the premier Shakespearean actor, is leaving London for a short time, and during his visit to the United States will act, I understand, in some Shakespearean picture plays. He believes the picture play has come to stay, and will have an important influence in national life. Before returning to this country he will produce some of his leading dramatic successes in the States.

Almost simultaneously to the announcement that the British Admiralty has arranged for a cinemagraph of the Grand Fleet, by C. Urban, comes the news that the War Office is permitting two camera men—Messrs. Tongs and Malins (appointed by the seven firms making topicals), to visit the western battle front to take films. The fleet pictures are to be executed in black and white and color, and no doubt both series of film will find their way to the American market in due course. The British authorities have up to recently been reluctant to allow any camera men to visit the battle zone, despite the fact that the French authorities have for some time allowed the privilege; however, it is a step in the right direction.

The Ideal Film Co. will release in January a film based on a play which has been produced thousands of times during the last few decades in both America and England. The title is "Caste," and the leading role is taken by Sir John Hare. There now seems to be a great demand for film adaptations of plays and novels, and with the more intelligent class of patrons they are keenly appreciated. It is rumored that some of George Bernard Shaw's plays may be produced shortly.

The popular taste at the moment is for light drama, in which there is plenty of incident, not necessarily of the sensational order.

"The Lass o' Lowries," the forthcoming

Broadway Universal Feature, is being awaited with interest by the trade, probably on account of the success of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," the famous play by the same author. The Trans-Atlantic Company, who will handle this film, announce that they have completed their third all-British production, "The Woman Who Dared," which is a worthy successor to "Hard Times," and "Royal Love." The latest production is a melodrama and has been produced by T. Bentley.

Essanay Uses Novel Advertising

The Essanay Company, always up-to-date in their advertising methods, are taking the opportunity whenever entertainments are given at central military hospitals, of bringing Chaplin into the limelight. The other day L. Reed, their publicity manager, visited one of the London hospitals and distributed cigars, cigarettes and a packet of Chaplin postcards to each of the 300 soldiers present. All sorts of questions were asked about Chaplin, and so great was the interest created that many of the bedridden troops begged through their friends for a packet of these cards. Mr. Reed has undertaken to distribute similar packets at other entertainments that may be got up for the wounded, and right through has been an excellent advertisment for Essanay Chaplin films.

The Hepworth Manufacturing Company, film producers of the first water, are noted for their distinctive and pulling advertising schemes, and have now created quite a pleasant sensation by their appeal to men in positions of responsibility, and to every renter and exhibitor in Great Britain, to unite in making definite continual use for present national purposes of the greatest social force in existence—the picture play.

The High Court have upheld the decision of the St. Helen's magistrates who prohibited the exhibition of "Five Nights." The judge said that the censor of the film had no statutory right in the matter and had reported that "there was nothing of a prohibitive or indecent nature in the film."

Paris, Nov. 13.

NEPTUNE'S DAUGHTER, a film greatly advertised all over Paris, to be seen exclusively at the Theatre Rejane, has not obtained the success the managers expected and had to be taken off the program after a few days' run only.

Last week a film called "La Douleure" was shown at the general show rooms and made a big impression. The scenario of this film is very different from what we are used to seeing. It is a Russian film; the artists are perfect in their rather difficult roles, the photography is remarkable. This film is sure to go well everywhere it is shown.

When "Montmartre" was first produced at the Vaudeville theatre in Paris, over two years ago, it actually took the Parisians by storm. It is one of the best realistic productions, showing "Une Parisienne de Montmartre," who is born in Montmartre and can live nowhere else but at Montmartre. This great romance, by Pierre Frondaie, has been filmed, and the film will be shown at Mr. Lordier's new kinema exclusively for many weeks, commencing next week.

It follows "La Fille du Boche," which was shown at the same theatre for the last four weeks.

"Le Flambeau," another great film, has been seen for the first time this week. It is undoubtedly a nice film, but not sure to go well with the public.

We are soon to have a series of films with Mistinguette. Of course, this great artist has already appeared in many of Pathé's films, but now she is to be filmed in scenarios specially written for her.

A Lubin film called "L'Insurrection" has made a very big hit. This is the film the public like to see just now.

A film released by the Eclipse Company called "Maude Professeur d'Anglais," with Miss Compton as principal, is a grand success just now. It is certainly one of the best comedies this firm has shown for a long time.

The very day Pathé's showed their serial picture "Les Mystères de New York" to the exhibitors. It was booked for over 200 establishments. This serial picture is to run for 14 weeks.

Two films, "Kurial le Bossu" and "Quand Meme," presented this week at the general show rooms, obtained a well deserved success.

I am informed that the celebrated drama "L'Homme qui Assassina," by the well-known authors MM. Pierre Frondaie and Claude Farrère, which was produced with a tremendous success two years ago at the Theatre Antoine, has been bought by an American manager, to be produced in the States.

The Government of Italy has at last given the permission for two operators to leave for the front with a view of filming topicals. The manager of the well-known Ambrosio firm has left himself for the front, and we are soon to see the long expected topicals from the Italian theatre of war.

The Etna Company has closed its doors. It is a great pity that this firm, who has produced many very good pictures, should have to close.

Mme. Lina Cavalieri, with her husband, Mr. Muratore, from the Paris opera, is still filming at the Tiber in Rome.

Cinés has engaged the beautiful Lida Borelli to be filmed in a series of pictures by this firm. She was offered an enormous salary to go to Canada for the same firm to be filmed in some scenes over there, but she refused to go. Following are some films to be released soon by different Italian firms: Alba Film, "Silvio Pellico"; Ambrosio, "Caino e Romanticismo"; Cæsar, "Odette and Saint Francisco"; Cinés, "Carmen and Divette del Regimento"; Gloria, "Sul limite del Nirvana"; Tiber, "La Signora delle Camelie and Oberdan"; Bonnard Film, "Serpe contro Serpe." HENRY LEHRMANN OFF FOR COAST AGAIN

Henry "Pathe" Lehrmann, head producing director and president of the L-KO Motion Picture Company, of Hollywood, Cal., who has been in New York arranging details in his contract with the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, has taken a flying trip back to the studios.

Mr. Lehrmann, in addition to being president of one of the most active comedy producing companies in existence, is in direct supervision of the making and marketing of all L-Ko Komedies as well.

NO LACK OF ENERGY FOR THE VIM COMEDY PLAYERS

Louis Burstein, director-general of the Vim Comedies, paid a business visit to New York last week. He declared that the Vim players are now comfortably situated in Jacksonville, Fla., and hard at work turning out a comedy a week.

"It is only natural," says Burstein, "that I should be enthusiastic over Vim prospects, but never in my experience in the film business have I come across a more willing or competent aggregation than those composing the Vim players. We have got off to a fine start and I am more than satisfied that we can keep up the pace."

HARRY E. AITKEN IN LOS ANGELES

Los Angeles, Nov. 25.

President Harry E. Aitken, of the Triangle Film Corporation, accompanied by his brother Roy, also an executive of this organization, have arrived in Los Angeles for a stay of several days, during which time they will visit the three producing studios, and confer with D. W. Griffith, of the Fine Art Films studio; Mack Sennett, of the Keystone Comedies; and Thomas H. Ince, of the Kay-Bee plant.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

"HER LAST FLIRTATION" IS FIRST SUBJECT FOR ONE OF VITAGRAPH'S FOREMOST WEEKS

THREE CURRENT VITAGRAPHS: "HER LAST FLIRTATION"—"WASTED LIVES—"ROONEY'S SAD CASE"

FOR the six days beginning Monday, December 6, the work of Eastern and Western Vitagraph players and directors are included in a representative list of subjects.

"Her Last Flirtation," a comedy by A. Laroque, produced by the Western players with Myrtle Gonzalez, Alfred Vosburgh, George Kunkel, Carleton Weatherby and Otto Lederer in the portrayal of the principal characters, is the first release for the week.

Tuesday, December 7, is a Broadway Star Feature Day, on which one of Ouida Bergere's stories, entitled "Wasted Lives," will be the release. The evil influence of an operatic songbird is the dominating theme, and the story runs through two generations, involving the children of the principals. The scenes are all laid in England and admit of many beautiful exteriors. Theodore Marston directed. Robert Whitworth, Julia Swayne Gordon, Arline Pretty, Leo Delaney, and Arthur Cozine and Edward Elkas were the prominent figures in its enactment.

Wednesday, December 8, has been selected to present Bobby Connelly in "Sonny Jim's First Love Affair," a story by Bessie Boneil. Director Tefft Johnson and a cast of players registered the story on the film; Bobby Connelly appearing as Sonny Jim, Mr. Johnson as Daddy Jim, Mabel Kelly as Mother Dear, with Helen Connelly, Edwina Robbins, Jay Dwiggins and Johnny Cahill assisting.

A dramatic story entitled "Sam's Sweetheart," is announced as the release for Thursday, December 9.

It was written by Elizabeth R. Carpenter, produced by William Humphrey, and features Carolyn Birch, Anders Randolf, Rose Tapley, Templer Saxe and Mary Maurice as principals.

The versatility of Miss Carpenter as a story writer is exemplified in the release for Friday, December 10, when she furnished Sidney Drew with his regular Drew Day release, in one of the most uproariously funny comedies seen in some time, entitled "Rooney's Sad Case." Florence Natol and Harry Fisher assist Mr. and Mrs. Drew in the production.

An old-time one-ring circus, with all its paraphernalia, its troupe of trapeze performers, clowns, bare-back riders, jugglers, sellers of peanuts and red lemonade, and side-show freaks, to say nothing of a grand street parade, figure in a story entitled "Hughie of the Circus," by Mrs. Tom Coleman, in which a prominent member of "Earth's Greatest" becomes involved in a love affair that ends disastrously. Wally Van directed the production of "Hughie of the Circus," employing a cast including Hughie Mack, Flora Finch, Nitra Frazer, Donald McBride, and Harry Fisher. It will be released as a two-part comedy feature on Saturday, December 11.

"PRINCE," A COLORED GAUMONT FOR HOLIDAY RELEASE

The Gaumont Company plans to release on the Mutual program during the Christmas holidays, a colored photodrama called "A Prince of Yesterday." This film has been hand-colored.

"A Prince of Yesterday," although unusual in character and an expensive colored film, will be released as a regular Rialto Star Feature without extra charge.

MARSTON AT WORK ON BUCHANAN'S STORY FOR VITAGRAPH

Vitagraph Director Theodore Marston has commenced work on a five-part Blue Ribbon Feature, written by Donald I. Buchanan.

It will employ in its enactment such prominent Vitagraph players as Joseph Kilgour, Robert Whitworth, Ned Finley, Eleanor Woodruff, Julia Swayne Gordon, and Arthur Cozine.

LOU-TELLEGEN FOUND MUCH IN "THE EXPLORER" AND WILL REVEAL GREAT DEAL IN "UNKNOWN"

Lou-Tellegen, who for several years was leading man for Mme. Sarah Bernhardt, having appeared with the famous French actress on two of her American tours, will make his second appearance in a Lasky production on the Paramount program in

LOU-TELLEGEN IN A SCENE FROM "THE UNKNOWN"

"The Unknown," the first public showing of which has been set for December 9.

Lou-Tellegen scored a brilliant success in the Paramount picture, "The Explorer," also a Lasky production which has been favorably received all over the country. In "The Unknown," however, Lou-Tellegen is seen in a character entirely different from anything he has played heretofore, either on the speaking stage or on the screen. There are many exhibitors who remember his work when he appeared in support of Mme. Bernhardt in the Famous Players' production of "Queen Elizabeth."

The scenes of "The Unknown" are laid in Algiers and on the great Sahara desert.

The romantic features of "The Unknown" are concerned with the adventures of the young Englishman, his love affair with an American girl, and trouble with his captain. George Melford is the director and the cast includes Theodore Roberts, Dorothy Davenport, Hal Clements, Horace B. Carpenter, Tom Forman, Raymond Hatton and other members of the Lasky stock company.

FORDE COMES NORTH AFTER "LESSONS IN LOVE" FILMING

Hal Forde has returned from Jacksonville, Fla., where he starred in "Lessons in Love," a Rialto Star Feature, which is to be released December 1 on the Mutual Program.

The photoplay was written by Paul M. Bryan and directed by Richard Garrick.

KALEM'S "HAZARDS OF HELEN" SERIES IS IN SECOND YEAR; CELEBRATES ANNIVERSARY

(Insert) HELEN GIBSON, AND A SCENE FROM "CROSSED WIRES," DEC. 11 EPISODE OF THE KALEM "HAZARDS OF HELEN" SERIES

THIS is anniversary month for the "Hazards of Helen." A year ago the Kalem Company, noticing the popularity of their occasional railroad pictures, originated the "Hazards of Helen" series, which soon proved to be among the most popular of Kalem subjects. Last month the announcement was made in the trade publications that, in response to the requests of many exhibitors, the series would be continued indefinitely.

At the same time Kalem officials began to lay plans for an unusual group of releases to mark the celebration of the anniversary month. E. W. Matlack, the Pittsburgh railroad official who has been responsible for most of the Helen stories, got into the spirit of the anniversary, and the players and directors were also worked up to an enthusiastic point.

Whether or not anniversary month would be a success was finally up to Helen Gibson, however, for it is that petite player who must bear the brunt of the perils and dangers that beset Helen. But Helen merely smiled and promised to contribute her share toward the celebration by doing any feat the scenario would call for. The result is a quartette of pictures which the Kalem officials believe the most interesting yet issued in the series.

"The Tramp Telegrapher," released December 4, inaugurates anniversary month. It starts in slam-bang fashion when Trent, a tramp telegrapher, beaten unconscious by a pair of crooks, is rescued by Helen just in time to save him from death under the wheels of a train.

But the big thrill comes later when Helen and Trent, in pursuit of the thieves who had burgled the station safe, reach the train on which the yeggs are escaping just in time to land on the rods of the last car. Determined to catch their quarry before they can escape at the next station, Trent braces his legs on the rods so that his body is at right angles to the car, and using his body as a perch, Helen climbs to the window and inside the car.

"Crossed Wires," scheduled for release on December 11, is equally abounding in sensations, one of the most tense of which occurs when Helen pursues a train by automobile and then leaps to the car, where a struggle with an escaped convict ensues.

For several moments Helen, in the automobile, and the convict on the freight car engage in a struggle, before the convict climbs to the top and Helen makes her leap. "The Wrong Train Order," which is issued December 18, puts Helen in a perilous position alone on a runaway train. Open switches, an open drawbridge, and an oncoming train on the same track are among the breathtaking dangers which Helen narrowly escapes before she is able to stop the train. On December 25, the fourth of the anniversary month specials will be released. It is "A Boy at the Throttle," in which Helen drops ten feet from the top girder of a suspension bridge to a speeding train.

CIRCUS MAN SCENARIO WRITER FOR SELIG

John G. Robinson, Jr., of the Selig Zoo, Los Angeles, has blossomed forth as a scenario writer. His wide and varied experience in circus life with "Robinson's Ten Big Shows Combined," before he joined the Selig Company, should furnish local color for his stories.

"ARAB'S VENGEANCE," RELEASED DEC. 16, FIRST DAVIS PICTURE FOR HORSLEY

A great deal of expectancy in the Centaur Feature release on the Mutual program for December 16 entitled "The Arab's Vengeance" has been aroused by the fact that in this subject Margaret Gibson makes her debut as a featured Centaur Feature player and also because this is the first production directed for David Horsley, the producer, by Ulysses Davis, a newcomer to Mr. Horsley's directorial staff.

The little star has proved her courage by enacting several scenes in which the Bostock animals also take part. The action of the story takes place, in part, at a deserted hut where Carol, the title of Miss Gibsons' character, is imprisoned by an Arab who hopes to avenge a fancied wrong done him by the girl's guardian.

The country surrounding this hut is infested by wild animals, particularly lions. On a hunt for food one lion enters the hut and seeing the captive girl is about to spring upon her when a searching party, aroused by her disappearance, arrives in time to prevent the completion of the act. Miss Gibson played the scene without regard for danger of close contact with the animal, though she was in constant peril.

MARGARET GIBSON

The efforts of Mr. Davis are said to come up to the standard of productions set for him.

Theodosia Harris, of Mr. Horsley's scenario staff, is responsible for the story.

LUBIN FORD FLIVVER COMEDY READY IN JANUARY

The Lubin Company, producing "The Wonderful Wager," George V. Hobart's Ford Flivver comedy with Raymond Hitchcock in the leading role, and with Marion Sunshine and others supporting him, has returned from Lakewood, N. J., where for the past two weeks they have been working toward the completion of the picture.

Under the direction of Rene Plaisetty a few more interior scenes are to be taken at the Philadelphia studios, and then the picture will be ready for release early in January through V-L-S-E offices.

GLIMPSES OF "THE NATION'S PERIL," LUBIN'S FIVE PART WARNING AGAINST THE CONSEQUENCES OF MILITARY UNPREPAREDNESS

"HOUR OF THREE," "FATE," "DOLLARS AND CENTS" COMING FROM LUBIN

HAVING completed the four reel story, "The Hour of Three," the original story by Anthony P. Kelly, Director Joe Kaufman of the Lubin Company, has begun his preparation for the making of a five reel Lubin V-L-S-E feature of Albert Payson Terhune's popular story "Dollars and Cents," in which Ethel Clayton, the Lubin star, will be seen in the leading role.

Director Kaufman has as yet not definitely decided as to who will complete his cast.

Under the supervision of Art Director Allen Farnham, the sets and scenes necessary for the presentation of "Dollars and Cents," has been in the course of construction for more than the past four weeks at the Lubin Manufacturing Company's No. 3 plant at Glenwood avenue and Sixteenth street, Philadelphia.

The first set to be used by Director Kaufman at this studio is that of a French mansion ballroom.

The depth of the set is more than three hundred feet and more than seven hundred and fifty dancers will be on the floor in the number.

"Dollars and Cents" is scheduled for release through the V-L-S-E offices early in January of the new year.

Daniel Carson Goodman's original five act play, "Fate," a tense and powerful story of railroad life, is the vehicle selected by the Lubin management for the next appearance of their star, Richard Buhler.

"A Man's Making," the play by Jack Pratt, also directed by him, and which was adapted for the screen by Anthony P. Kelly, has been completed and the production of "Fate" will begin at once. Mr. Goodman in writing this new feature has built a character for the lead around Dick Buhler, which will offer him the opportunity to appear at his best, with the same opportunities for his leading lady Rosetta Brice.

Others of the cast are William H. Turner, Arthur Housman, Francis Joyner and Inez Puck.

The picture will be taken at the Philadelphia studios and at the Lubin Betzwood plant. It is scheduled for release through the V-L-S-E offices early in the year.

Director Jack Pratt will be in charge of the making, with "Ever Ready Teefy" as the assistant, and Fred Chaston, camera.

"HER MOTHER'S SECRET?" FOX, STARS RALPH KELLARD IN STRONG DRAMA

THE photoplay entitled "Her Mother's Secret?" written by Martha Woodrow and produced by Frederick A. Thomson for William Fox, in which Ralph Kellard is starred, is said to be one of the most powerful and most human dramas that has ever emerged from the Fox studios.

Mr. Kellard appears first as Seth Cartwright, Sr., and later as Seth Cartwright, Jr. Cartwright, Sr., and his law partner, Schwab (Edward Davies), love Bernice Archer (Jule Power). Cartwright, who is already married, is the father of a child born to Bernice.

The latter, after she is cast off, becomes deranged and deserts her child, but the baby is adopted by Mrs. Cartwright (Jane Meredith), who has learned about its parentage. Upon the death of Mr. and Mrs. Cartwright the baby is miraculously restored to its mother, who regains her reason.

After a lapse of many years, young Cartwright returns from school. Dissipation has ruined his health and his doctor sends him to the seashore where he meets Bernice and her daughter, Lorna (Dorothy Green). Ignorant of his relationship to Lorna, he falls violently in love with her. During the course of the courtship they are marooned over night on a cliff far from shore. Upon their return to the mainland in the morning Lorna is rigorously questioned by her mother. Cartwright openly declares his love and insists on an immediate marriage.

He wires his guardian, Schwab (his father's former partner), to come and meet the future Mrs. Seth Cartwright, Jr. Schwab arrives, recognizes Bernice, turns to Cartwright, and then pointing to Lorna says:

"She is your sister."

In the next few scenes the drama hurtles to what advance reports say will be a terrific climax.

"IVORY BOX" CHANGED TO "WRONG DOOR"

The title of the coming Carter DeHaven Universal subject, first entitled "The Ivory Box," has been changed to "The Wrong Door."

The cast selected for this supporting Mr. and Mrs. Carter DeHaven are Ernie Shields, Helen Hayward, C. A. Williams, Harry Schumm, and Fred Church.

TYRONE POWER GOES TO UNIVERSAL FOR BROADWAY FEATURES

Tyrone Power, who has completed his engagement with the Selig company, has been contracted for by the Universal, and will appear in a number of Broadway features, the titles of which have not been announced.

Ohio Film Hackers Get in Their Work on 23 Pictures

OHIO censors have cut many scenes from "Bella Donna." It is said that they object to the morals of the film. They are of the opinion that ladies should not poison their husbands, and that is what she did. For that matter should nephews stab their uncles? Yet Hamlet did it. Should ladies murder their guests? That happens in "Macbeth." Should politicians murder their friends? That happens in "Julius Caesar." Should friends make husbands so jealous that they strangle their wives? This is part of the action of "Othello." Should children drive their old fathers to insanity by their ingratitude? Refer to "King Lear." Has any one suggested that the plays of the "Bard of Avon" be suppressed because these dramas contain action like that outlined? Big drama in many cases teaches morality in a negative manner. This is a fact that the Ohio censors and a lot of other unthinking persons seem to have overlooked.

Cuts ordered from "Bella Donna" include woman smoking cigarette; passionate love scenes to three feet; the subtitle, "The fate of every man and woman is as man wills it"; woman putting powder in coffee; sub-title, "Don't forget the cup nearest the spoon"; scene where man drinks poisoned coffee; sub-titles, "Will the end never come?" "I am going to Baroudi" and "Get the Fecula ready; I am going aboard the Louilie."

Ohio censors have ordered that these scenes be cut from the Theda Bara "Carmen":

Girls smoking cigarettes, fight where girls roll on floor, drunken man hugging a post, bull with javelins in shoulders and horse falling over a cliff.

Other orders are as follows:

"A Western Governor's Humanity"—Cut scene where robbers divide loot and the gallows awaiting the condemned man. (This was shown in Cleveland without the cuts being made.)

"When War Threatened"—Cut out girl smoking cigarette.

"The Reward"—Cut out gambling scene.

"Sweet Alyssum"—Cut scene where man steals money from cashier's cage.

"The Lighthouse by the Sea"—Cut scene where man chokes another.

"When Avarice Rules"—Cut out scene where girl is taken through den of lions, where she is imprisoned in hut surrounded by lions, and fight shortened to five feet. (This picture was shown in Cleveland with all these scenes two weeks after the order was issued.)

"The Mummy and the Humming Bird"—Cut out sub-title, "I have vowed never to rest until I have killed the man who desecrated my home."

"The Markswoman"—Cut out shooting by man and woman.

"Not Guilty"—Cut out sub-title, "My mother won't let me play with Mabel because her father is in jail."

"The Politicians"—Cut out sub-title, "Curses! That proud and haughty gal shall yet be mine."

"Heart of a Tigress"—Cut out all scenes of woman shooting.

"Blood Heritage"—Cut out all scenes of crooks robbing man and escaping and murder.

"Mystery of the Locked Room"—Cut out murder.

"The Gypsy Trail"—Cut out woman smoking.

"The Porter"—Cut out scene where man fires explosive under balky mule.

"The Cowardly Way"—Cut out scene where man is bound, gagged and threatened with pistol, and where insane man throws man down stairs.

"Stanley in Starvation Camp"—Cut out sub-title, "Tomorrow I'll feed you to the lions."

"Madame Butterfly"—Cut out sub-title about choking a man with a cocktail.

"Girl and the Special"—Cut out girl smoking cigarette.

"The Menace of the Mute"—Cut out close-up scene where men choke each other and the murder.

"Weaver of Claybank"—Cut out "You and me are going to be married."

"The Battle Cry of Peace" has been passed by the censors. At the private exhibition of the picture of the film at the Metropolitan, Cleveland, the only fault found with the picture was voiced by a coterie of military men. The equipment is not up to date with the standard of the United States Army. Belts are put on wrong and the uniforms are not in use by the regular army and militia, they said.

CENSORSHIP IN BRITISH COLUMBIA RELAXES FROM SEVERE STAND

THE censorship situation in British Columbia has finally assumed what may develop into a permanent trend toward sanity, and within the past few weeks there has been a perceptible broadening of viewpoint, with a slight lowering of the number of silly rejections. After "The Spoilers" had been viewed and passed by Attorney-General W. J. Bowser, the censor was instructed to be a little more lenient with productions submitted for his inspection.

"Just Jim," the five reel Universal feature, which was condemned in the same week that witnessed the original rejection of "The Spoilers," was sent to the censor for reconsideration, and was passed, but pending developments Manager James E. Finch of the Universal office in Vancouver did not allow this fact to become generally known, and the information was withheld by the NEWS correspondent at his request.

This picture, which the Alberta censor hailed as one of the finest he had ever seen, will soon be shown in Vancouver at the Colonial theatre, where Manager Hector Quagliotti is running the entire series of Universal Broadway Features.

The partial relaxing of the stringent regulations of the censor's office will undoubtedly have the effect of bringing into the province many productions which under the former conditions would never have been even submitted for inspection, but it is not expected that all, or even a large part of them will be passed, and some submissions will undoubtedly be in the nature of experiments.

INDIANA MAYOR REFUSES TO STOP "HYPOCRITES"

Mayor Smalley, of Hammond, Ind., declined to stop a showing of "Hypocrites" in the De Luxe theatre.

Two priests, representatives of the Lake County Humane Society, the Settlement House, the Knights of Columbus, and several Protestant churches visited the mayor to protest against the showing of the picture. Three women who saw the picture at the private showing said they "saw no truth in the picture" and "it depends on what you make out of the picture," and "a lesson and a strong one. There is nothing offensive."

ILLINOIS SUPREME COURT MAY GET NEGRO SEGREGATION CASE

The Illinois Supreme Court, it is expected will be asked to decide if a motion picture theatre owner has the right to set aside a section of seats in his theatre for negroes and compel them to occupy those seats and no others.

The case will likely be appealed from the circuit court at Jacksonville, Ill., where G. M. Luttrell, motion picture theatre owner, has just won his case.

Some time ago two negro girls went to Luttrell's theatre and took two seats on the east side of the room. An usher soon asked them to move to the west side of the room where a section of seats was reserved for colored patrons. The girls refused.

Mr. Luttrell then asked them to move, and when they refused to do so he compelled them to leave the theatre and refunded their money to them.

Rev. E. L. Scruggs, pastor of the Mt. Emory Baptist Church, became interested in the case on behalf of the girls. Action was brought against Luttrell in the court of Justice J. M. Coons, Both sides practically agreed on the facts in the case and the issue centered on whether the owner of a picture show has a right to divide his house and say which section shall be used by whites and which shall be used by negroes.

The justice court trial ended in a victory for Luttrell. The case was then appealed to the circuit court by the plaintiff. A jury in the circuit court, after being out two hours, returned a verdict sustaining the justice court decision.

Some points in the case never have been brought up for decision, and John M. Butler, attorney for the negro girls, plans an appeal to the Supreme Court.

CALIFORNIA SUPREME COURT TO DECIDE ON "CLANSMAN"

Father D. R. Wallace and other negroes of Alameda County recently asked the Superior Court of that county to prohibit the exhibition of the "Clansman" in the Macdonough Theatre at Oakland, making the claim that the picture is "injurious, degrading and humiliating to the African race."

The court thought otherwise and dismissed the action that had been brought, but an appeal has been filed and the Supreme Court will now have to pass upon the question. In the meantime the production continues to draw large crowds to the Savoy Theatre at San Francisco and is ready to start upon its thirtieth week there.

SOLONS UPHOLD SUNDAY OPENING AGAINST MINISTERS

Birmingham, Ala., at last is to have Sunday pictures. Following a pronounced agitation, in which the newspapers played a stellar part, the city commission announced that it would not interfere with proprietors of motion picture shows if they offered entertainment between certain hours on Sunday.

After a lengthy discussion and conferences with Birmingham exhibitors, it was agreed that the theatres could show pictures from 1 to 7 p. m., and from 8 to 10:30 p. m.

Prominent ministers protested when they heard that the city intended to enact an ordinance giving picture shows Sunday rights, and suggested that the entire matter be left to a referendum.

The city fathers said in answer that motion picture shows had Sunday rights if drug stores and other business institutions had Sunday rights, and that to close one would mean closing the other.

NEW SPOKANE CENSOR TO FOLLOW NATIONAL BOARD RULINGS

Edward W. Stutes is Spokane's new city censor of things theatrical. He was this month elected commissioner of public affairs for a short term, the office carrying with it the censorial responsibilities.

Mr. Stutes succeeds Samuel A. Glasgow, who was not re-elected to the city commission. He has announced that, like Mr. Glasgow, he will follow the rulings of the National Board of Censorship in all disputes over the propriety of picture plays.

Colored people of Spokane claim that this practice of depending upon the national board caused Mr. Glasgow's defeat at the polls. When "The Birth of a Nation" was booked here last summer, a negroes' committee asked the censor to keep it out of Spokane.

Mr. Glasgow answered that the national board having passed the picture, he would do likewise. The picture was shown and the negro vote was polled solidly against Mr. Glasgow.

LYNN, MASS., WILL SEE "NATION," DESPITE MAYOR'S OBJECTION

The city of Lynn will see "The Birth of a Nation," despite the objections of Mayor Newhall. These objections have been overruled by Commissioners Bergengren, Campbell and Cornet, at a meeting of the Municipal Council, and the necessary permit will be granted for the showing of the film in that city November 1.

On this date the same picture ends its record run in Boston, giving way at the Majestic theatre to the Vitagraph's "The Battle Cry of Peace."

ALLEGED FILM MEN ARE CHARGED WITH CONSPIRACY

On the complaint of Martha F. Johnson, warrants have been issued for the arrest of Eli Harter and F. J. Griffin, film producers of San Francisco, on the charge of conspiracy. Rosa A. Davis was arrested on the same charge.

It was alleged in the complaint that the Davis woman advertised for a partner to buy a moving picture film known as "The Heart of California." Mrs. Johnson answered the notice and was introduced to Harter and Griffin, later paying $500 for a half interest in the production. She found out later, she declares, that the film was valueless.

CENSORS SHOULD COMMEND GOOD FILMS, SAYS COMMISSIONER

The commission appointed to look into vice conditions in Ontario, Canada, made a very unusual suggestion to the municipal government regarding the censorship of plays, films, etc. They stated that in addition to condemming the bad and immoral films, the good and worthy plays should be upheld and receive the endorsement of the censors.

They argued that this would be an added incentive to the manufacturers to better their films and at the same time act as an automatic guide to thhe public. The idea is being considered in Toronto.

FORT WAYNE, IND., MEN ACCUSED OF EMPLOYING CHILDREN UNDER AGE

Affidavits have been filed against Oscar E. Wobrock, George Killen, Herman C. Hisler and J. E. Mallett, exhibitors of Fort Wayne, Ind., on a charge of employing children under age, by Nelson A. Kyser, a state factory inspector.

All of the men claim that the boys represented that they were of legal age.

"ETERNAL CITY" PASSED BY BRITISH COLUMBIA CENSOR

The Famous Players production of "Zaza" has been rejected by the British Columbia censor. "The Eternal City" passed, and will be shown in the near future at the Dominion theatre in Vancouver, where a private showing of the film was recently given.

NO ACTION BY PRESENT GRAND NEW JERSEY JURY ON SUNDAY OPENING

THERE will be no action by the present grand jury on the moving picture situation in Hudson County, New Jersey. Five motion picture proprietors and operators arrested in the police crusade in this city during the last month have been held for the grand jury.

The present grand jury term will expire December 14, and a new term will be sworn in on that date.

J. Francis Swayze, Supreme Court justice, is engaged in the Court of Errors and Appeals, and had no opportunity to charge the present grand jury on the matter of the Sunday openings.

The local organization of exhibitors and their counsel, Frederick C. Henn, announce their willingness to have the present grand jury or any other take up the complaints against them. They even go so far as to declare the complaints will never reach the grand jury.

Exhibitors of Jersey City continue to defy the police authorities and open their playhouses every Sunday. Four or five theatre managers are brought before the police justice every Sunday. Isador M. Schlesinger, manager of the Orpheum theatre, and his operator, John Fellis, have been arrested on five different Sundays.

No bail has been required, and all have been released after being told their cases were referred to the consideration of the grand jury.

In and Out of West Coast Studios

By J. C. Jessen
Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Nov. 25.

THERE was a pleasant little celebration at the Balboa studio this week over the completion of the "Neal of the Navy" serial. The last few scenes were made in the presence of W. A. S. Douglas, of Pathé Frérès, and six hours later the entire film was shown at the studio projection rooms and forwarded East to the Pathé laboratories. In the entire serial there were fifteen hundred and thirty-nine scenes, and the filming required five months. The players took part in a jubilee which was made of a sensational character by the bombardment with blanks by the "extra sailors." All of the leading players, together with Director Harry Harvey are off on a month's vacation.

Jack Dillon, who has been directing one of the American Beauty companies at the Santa Barbara American Film Company's studio, has been engaged as director for Vogue Films, Inc., and came to Los Angeles this week to take up production work at the Pasadena avenue studio. Mr. Dillon was accompanied by Chance Ward, who will continue as his assistant. The other members of the Vogue producing staff will remain the same.

"The Girl in the Game" serial company is now filming the last of the third episode, and hope to be far ahead of their release by the date the first subject is given a public showing on December 13. This week some sensational scenes were made when Director J. P. McGowan chartered a Salt Lake freight train of flat cars, had them converted into box cars, and then burned the entire train.

Changes at Universal City

Several changes weer made necessary at Universal City this week because of an automobile accident which befell the "Graft" serial company, while returning from San Pedro after making water scenes late Monday night. In order to prevent colliding with an automobile driven by a thirteen year old girl who turned directly in front of the Universal car, the driven turned into the ditch striking a telephone pole. All were thrown out, and Hobart Henley, featured in the serial, sustained a broken ankle. He was rushed to Universal City hospital, where it is stated he will be unable to work for three months.

Because of this accident, it was necessary to rewrite the third episode of this serial wherein the story will be changed, and Henley, in the part of the young prosecuting attorney, is killed by the grafters. Following this his brother, taken by Harry Carey, late of the Universal Special Western company, will become leading man, appearing in the part of the young politician who fights the political ring. Carey had just begun work in a three reel subject entitled, "Across the Rio Grande," being produced by Jacques Jaccard, and Billie Gettinger, a cowboy trouper, has been cast for this role.

The E. & R. Jungle studio lot was this week converted into a veritable circus grounds with scores of side show banners, and a mammoth circus tent, making the background for scenes in the one reel comedy entitled, "Larry's Double," which features Napoleon, the educated chimpanzee. Jimmie Gibson appears in the part of Larry, and Napoleon as the double, with a supporting cast of Louis Morrison, Florence Gibson and Sallie, the chimpanzee. Practically all of the rare animals of the jungle zoo took part in this, together with the wild man, snake charmer, tattoed man, and the belles of the red top tent. The direction is in charge of Jack Nelson, who filmed the "Shorty" series for the New York Motion Picture Corporation, and the camera work is in charge of Arthur Powelson, who served five years with Pathé in America and Europe, made three subjects for the California Motion Picture Corporation, was in charge of the photography of the first six "O'Rourke" series episodes, and all in all has had twelve years' experience with the camera. Louis Morrison, who has been added to the E. & R. stock company, is a well known photoplayer who has just left the Inceville studio, after serving three years.

Second E. & R. Company Formed

The second E. & R. company is being formed this week with Louis Chaudet, late director of animal pictures for the Selig company, as director. Grace Bouynge, who has appeared in American, New York and Universal subjects, has been selected as leading woman. Other members of the cast have not been named. The first story to be filmed will be "Jungle to Trouble via Stage." This comedy of one reel have a number of scenes laid in a big theatre where Napoleon, the chimpanzee, gets in bad by flirting with the chorus girls, and one jealous cat phones to his home and tells Sallie.

Charlie Chaplin as José, and Edna Purviance, the blond leading woman of the Essanay company, as Carmen, are the principals of the coming Essanay release, a burlesque on "Carmen." How many reels has not been stated. The cost of this mammoth production is not given out, nor will Miss Purviance have her hair dyed to appear as a brunette, and Charlie has won his point that José should have a mustache, and there should be no decrease in the size of his feet. The Essanay studio lot is dotted with Spanish settings, and the comedians are wearing the garb of matadores.

Thomas Heffron, who has been directing at the Chicago studios, accompanied by Grace Darmond and James Bradbury of the Chicago producing staff, have arrived at Los Angeles, and in the future will play at the Selig Jungle Zoo studios. Mr. Heffron will soon take up the filming of a five reel adaptation of "The Valiants of Virginia," the cast of which has not been given out.

Director Robert Daly has just made the finishing scenes for the five reel detective story, "False Alarm," which features Fritzi Brunette and Earl Fox.

GLIMPSES OF THE INDIANS AT INCEVILLE, SHOWING FRANK KEENAN, BESSIE BARRISCALE, THOMAS H. INCE, W. S. HART, CLARA WILLIAMS AND MARGARET THOMPSON POSING WITH THE REDSKINS FOR THE CAMERA

Activities at Lasky Studios

With the completion of the new laboratory buildings at the Lasky studio, the garage film producing plant, which has been the offices of the Jesse L. Lasky company since its organization, is to be replaced by a larger and more adequate building.

Theodore Roberts, of the Lasky staff, is taking a short vacation, which he is spending at San Francisco, giving the "Expo" the O. O., and upon his return, work will be taken up on the first Mark Twain story,

EDNA PURVIANCE AND CHARLES CHAPLIN IN THE ESSANAY BURLESQUE OF "CARMEN"

"Puddin'head Wilson," in which Theodore Roberts will be featured as the Missouri lawyer.

Director George H. Melford will take up the filming of a subject featuring Fanny Ward in the near future.

Long term contracts have been made by the Lasky company, with Tom Forman and Sessue Hayakawa.

Director Hal E. Roach of the Rolin company, failed to give specific instructions to a bevy of ten Oriental vaudeville dancers engaged for a scene to be made for a Phunphilm comedy in front of one of the fashionable mansions of the Wilshire district, Los Angeles, this week, and the owner of the property, director, and all others were horrified, when the girls appeared with scarcely more than smiles. The director was quick to correct the misunderstanding, and the scene was shortly made after the girls had donned bloomers and waists.

9th Episode Disastrous for "Stingaree" Cast

The Rolin company has been trying for two months to secure an insurance policy on Harold Lloyd, leading comedian appearing in the part of Luke of the "Lonesome Luke" comedies, but owing to the many hazards this comedian takes, no company will issue a policy. A number of agents have been taken to the studio, but none have been successful in inducing their company to take a chance on Lloyd.

The ninth episode of the Kalem "Stingaree" series being made by Director James Horne, has been disastrous for the players. Edward Clisbee is suffering with a broken ankle, Marin Sais, the leading woman of the company, has one arm in a plaster paris cast as the result of stopping a runaway horse, and True Boardman and Tom Lingham had the fright of their motion picture careers when they rode to the top of a hill with the instruction to ride on over, and were confronted by a cut made by a railway which would give them a nice little drop of about three hundred feet if they went on over. Their horses scented the danger and turned at right angles at the top, and both are congratuling themselves that they did not go on and mess up the railroad tracks.

James Horne, director, has been made temporary manager of the Kalem Glendale studio, succeeding Anthony Gage, who resigned.

At the Kalem Hollywood studio, Lloyd Hamilton has resurrected his mustache and make-up from the safe where it was stored in June, when he was injured in a fall down a mountain, and will take up work in the Ham comedies within the next two weeks. This company is now making two single reel subjects weekly, and during the past few days finished the detective story made under the working title of "Snoop Hounds," which features Bud Duncan and Guy Leonard, late Orpheum circuit star, as rival detectives employed by man and wife to get evidence for a divorce suit.

During the last few days of the week, "A Tale of a Coat" was made, the story of which is laid around a pair of crooks in their attempt to baffle amateur detectives. Both stories were directed by William Beaudine, who is co-author with M. E. M. Gibsone. During the coming week the company will spend several days at Catalina Islands filming a cannibal isle comedy.

Wind Destroys Big Set

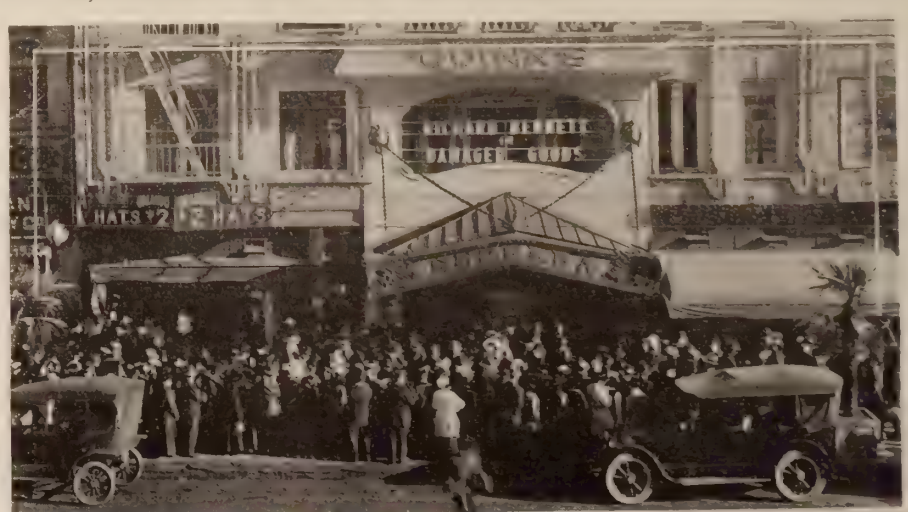
A portion of one of the big sets built at the Fine Art Films studio measuring one hundred feet in length, and fully fifty feet in width, was destroyed during the past week, when it was blown down by an "unusual" wind. No figures as to the cost of this are given, but it is estimated it will cause the loss of several thousand dollars.

During the filming of scenes for "The Cheat," one location used was that of a rustic bridge over a small stream at Venice, California, and while a scene was being made at this, Fanny Ward, gowned in her magnificent array of diamonds and ten thousand dollar ermine coat, leaned against a railing which gave way, and she plunged into the water ten feet below. The cameraman caught the entire scene. Miss Ward was aided ashore and scarcely any damage was done to her gowns.

The first L-KO subject in which Harry Coleman, comedian, who recently came to the coast from New York, has been completed, and titled "Trapped for Her Dog." This was produced under the direction of J. G. Blystone, and besides Mr. Coleman it features Alice Howell. It is a two reel subject. In the making of this Mr. Coleman had the misfortune to break his wrist.

The San Diego Fair picture featuring Billie Ritchie, entitled "Twenty Minutes at the Fair," made under the direction of Harry Edwards, has been completed and shipped to New York. Peggie Pierce played the opposite lead in this one reel subject.

Director Victor Herman and company, composed of Gertrude Selby, Reggie and Dave Morris and Fatty Voss, are home from spending a week at San Francisco making a one reel L-KO subject.



The new interior studio of sufficient size to accommodate sixteen sets, has been completed at the L-KO studio, and the company is now fully prepared to continue work without loss of time during the California rainy season. Another improvement added to this studio is that of a conservatory for the growing of trees and flowers needed for pictures.

Gates Picture Under Way

The Cleo Madison company has taken up the filming of "The Defiance," a two reel subject, scenario of which was written by Harvey Gates.

The five reel story adapted from the German fairy tale, "Undine," has been completed under the direction of Henry Otto, and a private showing was given at Woodley's theatre Monday evening.

Director Cecil B. de Mille has taken up the filming of "The Golden Chance," from an original scenario by Gene McPherson. This will feature Cleo Ridgley. A particularly attractive set representing the drawing room of a modern city mansion, and showing several rooms adjoining, has been specially built for this subject.

WAITING IN LINE FOR "DAMAGED GOODS" AT SUPERBA THEATRE, LOS ANGELES

By a contract consummated this week between M. E. Spero and officers of Vogue Films, Inc., the comedy subjects featuring Sammy Burns will be released on the Mutual program under the Vogue Films trademark. The Spero company is now completing the third subject which will be entitled, "The Baker," and supporting Mr. Burns in this will be Ben Horning, Ray Zell, Will Pendelton and Lillian Hamilton, late of the Universal company. The direction is in charge of Lee Hill. The subjects previously made are entitled "Sammy's Scandalous Scheme," and "The Innocent Crooks." Each consist of two reels.

According to rumors which are numerous, there is to be quite a little change in the very near future at Universal City. The producing staff will be reduced slightly during the rainy season. It is more than probable that two or three companies will be laid off. No announcement has been made as to which directors will leave.

Myrtle Gonzalez as Extravagant Wife

Myrtle Gonzalez is being featured as an extravagant wife in "The Windward Anchor," a two reel subject written and being produced by Lynn Reynolds. The male leading part is that of the husband which is taken by Frank Newberg.

A decidedly interesting plot is that of the two reel subject, "Her Wayward Parents," being produced at the Universal studio by Norval McGregor. In this Babe Otto appears as the girl just home from college, who attempts to induce her aged parents to live a purely sanitary and theoretically perfect life, with the result that they run away to escape her rulings, following a short period of submission. The aged parents, taken by "Daddy" Manley and "Mother" Benson, rent a bungalow and proceed to live in their simple way. The kindness of the landlord brings about a romance between himself and the daughter, and the last scene fades with the girl forgetting her antagonism toward kissing, even though it is unsanitary.

How a girl who has decided that her mission in life is to teach the heathen is induced to change her mind, is portrayed in "Love and a Savage," made by the Al. E. Christie Nestor company. The girl is Betty Compson, and Lee Moran is induced to disguise as the savage whom she practices on. Eddie Lyons is the lad who induces his friend to be the subject of his sweetheart's teaching in order to keep her away from the wilds of Africa. Others in the cast are Stella Adams, Harry Rattenberry, Gus Alexander, Jane Waller, Harry Lyons and Ethel Lynn.

The Rex Robert Leonard and Ella Hall company, has arrived home from Arrowhead, after making exteriors for a number of subjects. The first to be finished is "The Boob's Victory," wherein Leonard as the Boob of a small town with ambitions of becoming a detective, succeeds in showing up a number of city officers who have been delegated to investigate a robbery. Marc appears as the detective, Ella Hall, the detectress, and Kinsley Benedict as the farmer.

Blood-Curdling Animal Subject

An animal subject entitled "The Trail of the Tigers," is being made by Paul Bourgeois, and a company composed of Betty Schade, Madame Bourgeois and T. D. Crittenden. This is of a highly melodramatic nature wherein the heroine is kidnapped by the jealous feminine heavy, and kept in seclusion in the basement of the heavy's French chateau, where she is found by detectives just as the tigers and lions are liberated that they may leap upon her. (Truly, it is bloodcurdling.)

As stated in MOTION PICTURE NEWS, the next Balboa-Pathé serial will be entitled "The Red Circle." This is a detective story consisting of fourteen reel installments, the result of the joint authorship of Will M. Ritchey and H. M. Horkheimer. The direction of this is in charge of Sherwood Macdonald, and already practically half of the serial has been completed. Ruth Roland and Frank Mayo are the featured players, with a supporting cast composed of Molly McConnell, Daniel Gilfether, Andrew Arbuckle, Corrine Grant, Lillian West, Gordon Sackville and others.

The seventh marriage in four months occurred among the Balboa players this week, when Richard Johnson, character actor, and Lulu Bower, ingenue, were wedded. The Balboa company has been nick-named "The Matrimonial."

Guy Harding, a young English actor with extensive picture experience, and Elsie Randolph have been added to the Balboa stock.

Believing that the Indian photo drama so popular a few years ago will win favor with the American public again, Thomas H. Ince has engaged sixty-five supposedly full blooded Indians, who have arrived at the studio and erected their village of tepees. They all wear their native costumes or those furnished by the government, and the many colors give to this decided cosmopolitan settlement in the canyon, added attractiveness. A number of big productions in which the Indians will appear have been planned and the filming of these will be taken up shortly. The tribe contains red skins of all ages from the three months' old papoose to Chief Two Lance, who says he is ninety-two.

William S. Hart has become somewhat of a statistician of late, in that he has been keeping account of the number of cartridges fired in each production. So far in the present subject he has destroyed one hundred and fifty three. (Next.)

Innovation in Ince Subtitles

An innovation in titles and subtitles is to be introduced shortly in Ince-Triangle subjects, Mr. Ince having engaged artists to design subtitles that will be in harmony with every episode of the photoplay.

The Cub Comedy company at the Horsley studio is making the final scenes for "A Shotgun Romance," written and being produced by Milton Farney, which features George Ovey.

"Capital Punishment" is a five-reel Mutual Masterpicture being made under the direction of Robert Broadwell, with a cast

GRACE CUNARD, FRANCIS FORD AND MEMBERS OF "THE BROKEN COIN" COMPANY JUST AFTER THE COMPLETION OF THE LAST SCENE IN THAT FORTY-FOUR REEL SERIAL, WHICH WAS SIX MONTHS IN THE MAKING

composed of Crane Wilbur, Gipsy Abbott, Carl Von Schiller, A. B. Ellis and others, for Centaur brand release. This is a preachment for the abolishment of the legal murder. The principal character is the governor, whose brother, a black sheep of the family, is sentenced to death when convicted of murder on circumstantial evidence. The governor, realizing fully his oath of office, feels forced to, and does permit the fulfillment of justice according to present laws.

A two-reel story, entitled "The Winning of Jess," is being made by Director U. S. Davis at the Bostock Arena studio. In this Marguerite Gibson appears as the heroine, with Roy Watson in the leading role, and Jack Bonavita in the character part of a hermit, who, when his home life is broken up, takes his daughter to the West and there leaves her on the doorstep of a rancher. The father builds a hut in the mountains near by and watches over the daughter until she grows to womanhood, many times being in position to prevent injuries to her by animals, and in accidents. The trained bears and pumas of the Bostock Zoo play in many scenes of this subject.

Brooklyn Keller, who has had five years' stage experience and four years in pictures, three years of which was spent with the New York Motion Picture Corporation at their Santa Monica studio, has been added to the stock company at the David Horsley studio.

Gipsy Abbott, late of the Balboa company, has been specially engaged to play opposite Crane Wilbur in the five-reel production of "Capital Punishment."

"The Avenging Shot," being filmed in two reels at the Biograph studio, with Vera Sisson, G. Raymond Nye, Charles Mailes and Jack Mulhall as principals, has a refreshing plot which brings about a comparison of styles of 1855 and 1915. The subject is being made under the direction of J. F. MacDonald.

Clara McDowell in Comedy Role

Clara McDowell is making her first appearance in comedy, playing an important part in "How to Keep a Husband." Vola Smith is the young bride, Alan Hale the groom, and the difficulties which arise between the two creates an excellent plot for a farce. Walter Coyle is producing this one-reel subject.

A drama by Adolph Blot has been adapted for the screen, and is being filmed by Travis Vale, under the title of "A Life Chase." The locale of this is Paris, and has many intensely dramatic scenes and surprising situations. The principals are Louise Vale, Franklin Ritchie, and Jose Reuben.

The fourth Biograph company is making "The Angel of Piety Flat," with Mary Malatesta and Ivan Christie in the principal parts. The direction is by W. Ray Physioc.

Tom Walsh, formerly assistant to Henry McRae, and later with the Quality Pictures Corporation in an executive capacity, has been added to the Biograph organization in charge of the employment department.

Another Universal company at San Francisco is that under the direction of Joseph De Grasse, which is filming "Love Thine Enemy," in five reels. The cast for this includes Louise Carbasse, Grace Thompson, J. and Walter Balesco, Hayward Mack, Colin Chase, Harry Ham, Lon Chaney, Marcia Moore and Dixie Carr.

Universal Leases Theatre

The Majestic theatre, the largest in Los Angeles, with a fully equipped stage, not in use at the present time, has been leased by the Universal for the coming week, when scenes will be made for the five-reel story, "The Wrong Door," in which Carter and Flora De Haven play the principal parts. The story is by Olga Printzlau.

"The Man Who Forgot" is the title of a Western story, laid in the mining days of California, being filmed at U City by Director Leon D. Kent, with a cast composed of Jack Livingstone, Mina Jeffries, Bud Osborne. Malcolm Blevins, Hart Hoxie and the director.

Two Pacific Ocean boats have been converted into those of the type used during the Louis XV period, for the Fine Art-Triangle subject "Daphne." One is a reproduction of a French merchant ship and two hundred people will be used in scenes on this. The other is an early fourteen-gun French corvette, used as a pirate ship, with seventy-five men. The subject is being filmed by Director Cabanne.

Wilfred Lucas is to be featured in a coming Fine Art Films-Triangle subject, entitled "Acquitted," adapted from the story by Mary Roberts Rinehart. In this Mr. Lucas will be under the direction of Paul Powell, with a cast composed of Bessie Love, Mary Alden, Sam De Grasse, F. A. Turner, Elmer Clifton and W. E. Fremont. Mr. Lucas recently supported Lillian Gish in "The Lily and the Rose."

"Martha's Vindication" has been selected as the title for the subject being filmed by C. M. and S. A. Franklin, featuring Norma Talmadge in the name part, with Tully Marshall and Seena Owen. The other members of the cast are Ralph Lewis, Charles West, and the three Fine Art kiddies, George Stone, Carmen De Rue, and Violet Radcliffe.

"Don Quixote" Scenes Completed

Scenes have been completed for the first De Wolf Hopper subject, "Don Quixote," and work has now been taken up on the filming of a comedy in which Mr. Hopper will appear, with Fay Tincher playing the opposite lead.

Mae Marsh is to be featured in the name part of "Hoodoo Ann," from an original scenario. In this Miss Marsh is the victim of misfortunes in the early part of the play, but is successful in shaking off the hoodoo before the climax. There will be a thrilling fire in this. Robert Harron plays the male lead, and the principals of the entire cast are Wilbur Higby, Anne Hernandez, William H. Brown, Elinor Stone, Elmo Lincoln, Leola O'Connor, and Pearl Elmore.

Tully Marshall has signed a contract to remain with the Fine Art Films Company for a period of one year.

NEWS OF THE WEEK IN AND ABOUT SAN DIEGO

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

San Diego, Cal., Nov. 25.

The Lubin company has been busy the past week at the Coronado studio filming a three-reeler, "The Law's Injustice," by Julian Lamothe, with B. C. Hayward at the camera, and Edward Sloman directing. The story is an exposition of the application of the law in various cases, sometimes seemingly awry. The character of Nina, an Italian factory girl, is taken by Helen Wolcott. Ashton Morris, the owner of the factory, and Stanley, his son, are portrayed by George Routh and L. C. Shumway. Adelaide Bronti is seen as the mother, Mrs. Morris. Mercedes Diaz appears as Satie, a wise chorus girl.

Capt. Wilbert Melville has been on another trip to Los Angeles on his yacht, the Vergana, looking up some new people for his company here and also going over some new plays.

Moving pictures of local society women have been made by the Lubin camera men and will be shown at the Charity ball at Hotel del Coronado, November 30. The pictures depict the evolution of dress and dance in America from the landing of the Pilgrims down to the present day.

JUST TO MAKE TALK

By LONGACRE

BACK again to the national advertising campaign. The Mutual Film Corporation comes to the front with an appropriation of $300,000 for trade paper, newspaper and billboard advertising. Paramount and Triangle are already conducting what amounting what amounts to national advertising campaigns and real ones. Now it is understood that Metro, World and Equitable are coming in.

About two years ago the national advertising campaign was tried out and found wanting. The Mutual, the General Film and the Universal all announced national campaigns which gradually sputtered and went out like a wet firecracker.

But that is no sign that a national advertising campaign will not be a good thing now. Two years ago so much missionary work was still needed that the advertising campaigns fell flat. But now times have changed. The majority of persons, the country over, recognize the amusement and educational value of the motion picture. So a national advertising campaign at the present day may "go over big."

The trouble with the first campaign was that the advertisers thought they would reach the ultimate consumer with their general advertising and would neglect the exhibitor and the trade paper. But the exhibitor was too important a link in the chain to be overlooked with impunity. As the coming campaigns will undoubtedly stress the direct appeal to the exhibitor, the lessons learned in the first campaign will not go for naught.

For the traditions of the motion picture business are so young as to be easily upset. Remember that the first feature pictures did not do any great business. Some time ago Itala sent to this country "The Fall of Troy." Then one H. A. Spanuth made "Oliver Twist," a feature, with Nat Goodwin playing Fagin, and Spanuth died a horrible death, financially. If that example had scared others from making feature pictures the business might still be in the one and two-reel stage. But others took a lesson from his mistakes and today features are undeniably the thing. Just so the national advertising campaign, a flivver of the past, may be a success of the future.

All aboard for the Boston Exhibitors' Ball, one of the best times of the season, if it lives up to last year, and considerably the biggest.

In line with the reorganization policy of the General Film Co., its component concerns are cutting down their producing forces. The Vitagraph let out more than twenty-five players and directors last week. Thus is the day of fewer and better pictures drawing closer and closer.

John D., not Rockefeller, but Tippett, is back from London, where he has been managing-director of the Transatlantic Film Company, the foreign branch of the Universal, for more than two years Now he is getting his first little vacation. John was seen wearing English clothes, an English accent and accompanied by H. Woods, head of the London Gaumont, and G. Mason from Australia. John D. will stay here a few weeks and feed up on purely American delicacies, such as mince pie and blue points.

The idea that war pictures are a dead issue gets an awful kick when one looks around Longacre Square this week. The French war pictures, fathered by the New York American, are turning them away at every performance at the Fulton, while the French war pictures, under the auspices of the New York World, are doing good business at the Fulton. Then the German pictures at the Park, further uptown, are going strong. Three sets of war pictures and all cleaning up. Well, well.

S. L. Rothapfel, rightly billed as "America's leading exhibitor," is back in town, after a whirlwind tour of the country, under the auspices of the Mutual Film Corporation, teaching the young idea how to exhibit.

As the real war pictures come to Broadway, the war dramas are closing. "The Birth of a Nation" was scheduled to close November 27, but now, it is said, its run has been extended six weeks. Be that as it may, "The Battle Cry of Peace" will close at the Vitagraph December 5.

One reason for the energy and vigor of the Metro people (it is suggested) is found in the fact that they keep well fed. Last week President Rowland got the crowd together for the second time, and fed them about $115 worth of beefsteak, up at Healy's popular New York restaurant and cafe. Notes were compared and every department of the big organization was found in flourishing condition. President Rowland, Arthur James, Maxwell Karger, Edfrid Bingham, Herbert Rubin and Merritt Crawford made short speeches, and as a testimonial to their efforts, the others simply sat tight and ate beefsteak with unimpaired digestions.

A new projection room has been fitted up in the Mutual offices at No. 71 West Twenty-third street, New York. The new one is just across the corridor from the offices of Terry Ramsaye, director of publicity, and will be run in conjunction with the old projection room on the floor below. The increasing activity around Mutual headquarters will keep both projection rooms busy the week through, and more comfortable quarters will be provided for the small army of officials, reviewers and censors who must see the new releases.

Edna Mayo has just returned to the Essanay studios from a short trip to New York. "Chicago," she says, "is all right as a place to make good pictures in, but when one wants to buy clothes, New York's the place. That's all I came east for."

Of rumors of mergers and combinations between the big people the air has been full for the last ten days. The gossips in the places where picture men gather between releases, have entirely reorganized the field, and two of the biggest programs have been combined by them to fight a third concern whose output is now an immense factor in the market. It is noticeable, however, that the men at the helms of the concerns mentioned, are devoting their time almost entirely to the absorbing pursuit of turning out the best pictures they can.

Speaking of social affairs don't overlook the Boston ball. On December 1 the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of Massachusetts holds its third annual ball in the Boston Arena. Last year this was probably the biggest ball of the season. This year should surpass last. For the benefit of metropolitan folk an office has been opened in the Columbia theatre building, with S. Grant in the swivel chair.

Emily Stevens is the "nothing-to-do-till-tomorrow" actress of the business. In addition to playing in "The Unchastened Woman," eight times a week, at a New York theatre, she jumped in and is playing the part originally intended for Martha Hedman in the coming Rolfe-Metro production of Frank T. Dazey's, "The House of Tears." What with Ed Carewe playing Simon Legree, Miss Stevens has little time for tangos and modistes.

CHANGES OF THE WEEK

Ed August will make pictures for the World Film.

C. J. VerHalen, of Chicago and points East, is now narrator extraordinary for the Raver Film Corporation.

Leander Richardson, publicity promoter, leaves the World Film.

Arthur Houseman, formerly of Edison, has joined Lubin.

William J. Baumann, director, goes from Quality to David Horsley's Centaur studios in Los Angeles.

NEW TITLE FOR CENTAUR STAR FEATURE CHOSEN

Due to the fact that another work of the same name has been issued, and in order to avoid that confusion which similarity of titles occasion, David Horsley has changed the name of the Centaur Star Feature release on the Mutual program for December 22 from "The Phantom of the Road" to "The Mystery of Carter Breene." The subject is a detective drama featuring Crane Wilbur, who is also the author of the story.

While it is not the dominant forte of the play by any means, an element of the spectacular has been introduced in "The Mystery of Carter Breene" that is sure to have its interesting side and will add to the general attractiveness of the offering. For instance there is one scene in which an automobile, carrying a group of officers and an imprisoned girl, dashing over a hillside road, is swerved over a high cliff to the road below.

BALLANCE PLACES BIG CONTRACTS FOR GRIFFITH PICTURES

H. G. Ballance, who for the past seven months has been in charge of states right sales for the D. W. Griffith productions, "The Escape" and "The Avenging Conscience," in New Mexico, Colorado and Utah, has completely covered the territory, and is in Los Angeles for a short vacation. During this period he has shown the pictures in more than two hundred towns, and owing to the many feature productions on the market, has found booking on this plan far more difficult than in the past.

The California Comedy and Feature Film Company has purchased copies of all the Fox productions of one, two, three and four reels which will be added to their stock in Los Angeles.

J. Roberts has been engaged by the Los Angeles Fox branch as salesman for the Southern California territory.

"KEY TO THE PAST" UNLOCKS FUTURE HAPPINESS

An American drama, deeply tinged with pathos, but bringing joy at last out of an avalanche of misfortunes, is "The Key to the Past," scheduled for release on the regular Mutual Program, November 22. Winifred Greenwood appears in the psychological role of Boss Stockton, the wife, whose loss of memory casts a shadow over her family for sixteen years.

A shipwreck and the rescue of Bess by her husband, whom she fails to recognize, are incidents of dramatic power. The real story of the film is laid in the gold fields of the Northwest.

FORM CORPORATION TO BUY STATE-RIGHTS PICTURES

Special to Motion Picture News

Detroit, Nov. 29.

A. Arthur Caille and Henry J. Guthard have formed the Majestic Features Corporation, with offices in the Majestic theatre building, Detroit. They will buy state-rights pictures.

Robert S. Bendell, for sometime associated with Harry I. Garson in the Broadway Feature Film Company, has been placed in active charge of the Majestic Features Corporation. His first purchase for the company was "The Whirl of Life," which played to record-breaking business at the Majestic theatre week Nov. 21.

Mr. Caille and Mr. Guthard are owners of the Majestic and Fine Arts theatres in Detroit, and the Majestic and Marx theatres in Wyandotte.

THE "LEADING LADY" IN THE KERRIGAN HOUSEHOLD

Virginia Richdale Kerrigan is the name of the first baby girl born at Universal City. The little lady, who is the daughter of Wallace Kerrigan, superintendent of the Universal ranch, made her appearance on the morning of November 4.

Her uncle is J. Warren Kerrigan, star of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, and he is almost as proud of the little one as is his brother Wallace.

J. Warren thinks that Miss Virginia Richdale Kerrigan is the prettiest infant he has ever seen, and he believes that some day she will make a "leading lady."

HELEN ROSSON RECOVERS FROM INJURY IN FILMING A MUTUAL

Helen Rosson, the American (Mutual) actress appearing in Mustang films, is recovering from the severe shock she received in a rain storm while the five part Masterpicture, "The End of the Road" was being filmed.

MADELINE LEVEY LEAVES "EXTRA" RANKS AT 15 FOR IMPORTANT ROLES

Madeline Levey is a newcomer to the screen, a girl who at the age of fifteen has shown considerable promise as a motion picture actress.

She stepped from a single day's engagement as an extra into a permanent unit of one of the biggest studios of the country. She is of a markedly Oriental type, with luxuriant dark hair of unusual length, and her appearance will be greeted with pleasure by the followers of the film world, in a number of pictures which will shortly be released.

"SEMI-CARTOONIC" POSTERS HELP M-IN-A COMEDIES

The innovation of semi-cartoonic posters by M-in-A Comedies has proven successful, judging from the large number of complimentary letters which the company has received from exhibitors throughout the country.

Not satisfied with the regular style one-sheet and believing that a comedy film deserved something unique in the line of advertising, M-in-A Comedies hit upon the plan of a semi-cartoonic one-sheet. Every week this one-sheet caricatures some particularly ludicrous scene of the current release.

Although the company finds these posters considerably more expensive and troublesome to make, the result seems to justify the added effort, as it enables the exhibitor to display something new and novel in advertising, as well as putting a distinguishing character upon M-in-A Comedies.

INGRAHAM PRODUCING FIRST MAE MARSH FOR FINE ART

The first Mae Marsh Fine Art Films Triangle subject is now in the making, and will be produced by Lloyd Ingraham. This will be of the nature of a comedy drama with modern settings.

Owing to the illness of Mary Alden, Cora Drew has been cast to appear in one of the principal parts for "The Wood Nymph," which stars Marie Doro.

"DIAMOND" COMPANY CAST FOR CLIPPER FEATURE

Lottie Pickford, William Russell and others who appeared in "The Diamond from the Sky," are now appearing in a series of three-reel productions, released by the American Film Company, under the brand name Clipper.

The first of the Clipper features in which the "Diamond" folk appear is "Curly." Immediately after the completion of "The Diamond from the Sky," Miss Pickford, Russell, Eugenie Forde, Charlotte Burton, George Periolat and others of the "Diamond" company, began work on "Curly" under the direction of Donald MacDonald. The picture is to be released on the Mutual program December 11.

Bret Gets Unique Welcome to Ranks of Script Writers

Publicity Manager for American Correspondent Film Co., Successful Author in Other Fields, Called Before Curtain at Showing of War Pictures

TOM BRET, publicity manager for the American Correspondent Film Co., of No. 220 West 42nd street, New York, claims the unique welcome to the ranks of scenario writers. On the occasion of the first showing of "The Battles of a Nation," for which he wrote the scenario, at the Park theatre, New York, he was called before the curtain by the audience. This is the first time a scenario writer has been so honored, so far as the records show, and Mr. Bret has taken it as a good omen for his future work along this line.

Mr. Bret has a varied career behind him. From laborer in a steel mill, he rose to the position of reporter, then city editor of a newspaper, and writer of short stories, and finally entered the publicity field, where he was unusually successful. He became associated with the American Correspondent Company, last year, as advertising and publicity manager, and while still directing the publicity work of that organization, has added scenario work to his other duties. "The Battles of a Nation," and "The Warring Millions" have already been produced, and he has two more feature scenarios, one of ten and another of eight reels, contracted for.

"Scenario writing was really 'wished on me,'" said Mr. Bret, in talking of his work, "but now that I have seen its possibilities and the immense field which lies before the scenario writer, I am strongly drawn toward it. I can foresee the time when the motion picture will entirely supplant the newspaper in the transmission of news events of the world to the public. This tendency is already shown in the newspapers today, which devote a large proportion of their space to giving the news pictorially. Several of the biggest papers of the country have become interested in the motion picture business, and are working with some of the big companies in producing news weeklies. The war pictures of the American Correspondent Company have presented the war conditions much more vividly than pages of print could ever do; these things show the tendency, and I believe it will lead to the elimination of the newspaper as we know it now.

Mr. Bret is the author of a glowing tribute to the motion picture, which reads: "Motion is that universal vitality which may be well described as the impulse of life, and to the innermost depths of the mind is this realization conveyed sublimely by the art of animated photography. When a motion picture becomes a masterpiece, therefore, it fascinates one to the very depths of the soul."

In his record as a writer, Mr. Bret also includes the librettos of several musical vaudeville sketches, and the comic opera "The American Millionaires," which made a sensational run in Berlin in 1905.

Gertrude Robinson a Player with Many Stage Stars

Actress Cast for Principal Role in "Concealed Truth," Ivan Film, Is Also Well Known on Screen, Alternating as Lead with Mary Pickford at Biograph

NOT so many years ago, out at the Biograph studios, Mary Pickford and Gertrude Robinson, who plays the lead in the Ivan Film, "Concealed Truth," were alternating as leading lady in the production made by that company. As a matter of fact, the star of the latest Ivan Film Production feature, "Concealed Truth," has been long associated with noted headliners of the screen and stage.

Making her debut with Edith Taliaferro in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," she later made an appearance with H. J. Stoddard in "The Bonnie Briar Bush." From this she then played with Edith Wynne Matthison in "A Midsummer Night's Dream," continuing through a long repertoire of plays, including "Ben Hur" and culminating in "Rip Van Winkle" with Thomas Jefferson.

Her first appearance in moving pictures was made with the Biograph Company, where she also played opposite H. B. Walthall.

Just about this time an offer was made by the Reliance Film Corporation and she joined that company at the head of their stock players. With the Famous Players, she starred as May Blossom in the production of that name.

"Concealed Truth" is making a wonderful showing in state rights selling. Practically all of the country has already been asked for and most of it sold.

The Ivan Film Productions, Inc., located at 126 West Forty-sixth street, New York, is already at work on its next picture, "Forbidden Fruit." No information can be obtained as to the name of the stars or the synopsis of the story, but it is expected that it will be completed within the next two weeks.

ESSANAY PLANS ADIRONDACK SCENES FOR "MISLEADING LADY"

Essanay is making extensive preparations for the taking of its coming five act feature, "The Misleading Lady," adapted from the stage success written by Charles W. Goddard and Paul Dickey.

In order to make the play as realistic as possible, A. Berthelet, the director, accompanied by Henry B. Walthall, Edna Mayo and other leading characters will make a trip to the Adirondacks to take scenes.

The scene in which the heroine is kidnapped by the soldier-of-fortune and taken to his mountain lodge, takes place in the Adirondacks, and will be staged there in the exact setting as in the play.

The homes of several of Chicago's wealthiest citizens will be employed in taking the house party scenes, and other scenes which take place in the homes and on the estates of the rich.

The play has a stirring theme, with a cave man in evening clothes, a woman, primitive as the first mother and the crashing, merciless battle of the sexes.

Lois Wilson Became Picture Player by Accident; Appears in "Dumb Girl of Portici"

LOIS WILSON, selected as the most beautiful girl in Alabama in the beauty contest conducted some time ago by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, came to participate in "The Dumb Girl of Portici" in a rather interesting way.

When it came time to turn homeward for the sixty-five beauties, who had been guests of the Universal at Universal City, Miss Wilson was one of the first to turn the key to look her neatly packed trunk and valises. She was one of the very first to hop into the waiting taxi heading for the depot, and was pleased beyond description when the trained pulled out and started for Chicago.

Not that Miss Wilson had not had a perfectly lovely time, for she admitted she had the time of her life, but she was longing to be back in Alabama with her father and mother and sisters.

In a word it was homesickness, and she had it in a very virulent form.

Once arrived in Chicago, the party went to Sans Souci Park, where Phillips Smalley and Lois Weber were rehearsing the cast and filling in a few parts in the cast, which was to support Anna Pavlowa in her wonderful Universal feature, "The Dumb Girl of Portici."

Miss Weber had direct charge of rehearsing and supplying the girls who were to take part in this massive production, and found that she was short one character. It was the role of "The Lady in Waiting," and was second only to that of Pavlowa.

In casting about for the ideal person she laid eyes on Miss Wilson, and asked her to fill in.

Miss Wilson had not the least conception of stagecraft, and declined to accept. However, after a little persuasion by both Miss Weber and Mr. Smalley she consented to take the part. To the surprise of all connected with the production of "The Dumb Girl of Portici," she played so well that an experienced person could hardly have improved materially on her work.

This success in her first photoplay attempt encouraged Miss Wilson, and she returned to Universal City. After taking a few minor parts in different pictures, J. Warren Kerrigan chose her to become leading lady in his company.

Miss Wilson is playing opposite Mr. Kerrigan in the new Terrence O'Rourke series.

ANITA KING TALKS IN CALIFORNIA THEATRES

Anita King for the past week has been touring in the northern part of California, giving talks at theatres showing Paramount pictures, relative to the making of motion pictures and experiences of her automobile trip across the continent.

In practically all cities she has visited, she has been greeted by municipal officers, boards of education and chambers of commerce officials. The trip bears out the change that has come over the public in the past year with respect to motion pictures, for in all cities visited, the leading citizens have shown marked respect and entertained her in every way possible, believing her to be one of the foremost motion picture actresses.

Comprehensive Lists of Vitagraph Subjects for November and December

THE merging of November into December has been signalized by the Vitagraph Company in assembling a weekly program of comprehensive releases. Commencing Monday, November 9, the week will be equally divided between comedy and drama.

One of Elaine Sterne's Sonny Jim Stories, "One Plus One Equals One," featuring the six-year-old Vitagraph star, Bobby Connelly, heads the week's program. The story starts with a rush when Sonny is sent to school and given a seat with the girls. His appeal to Uncle Billy, for help to subdue the school bullies that make fun of him, starts a romance with the teacher, that carries a laughing story on to a happy marriage. Tefft Johnson, who produced the picture; Mae Greene, Mabel Kelly, and Arthur Cozine assist Bobby.

Two new Vitagraph stars, Ethel Corcoran and William Dangman, ably assisted by Florence Natol, are responsible for the enactment of the principal characters in the Tuesday release, "The Mystery of the Empty Room," produced by Courtlandt Van Deusen.

The Vitagraph Company will usher in December with a comedy from the Western company, entitled "A Scandal in Hickville." An all-star cast, including William Duncan, George Stanley, Anne Schaefer, Otto Lederer, Alfred Vosburg, Marguerite Reid and Carlton Weatherby, one of the latest players to join the company at Los Angeles.

A cast of Eastern players, including Flora Finch, Kate Price, Rose Tapley and Florence Natol, appear in the release for Thursday, December 2, "The Conquest of Constantia." The story starts as a comedy, that develops into a human interest drama of more than usual appeal.

"The Home Cure," the "Sidney Drew Day" release announced for Friday, December 3, is the most representative Drew comedy ever released by the Vitagraph Company, as it was not only written and produced by Mr. Drew, but enacted by the Vitagraph comedian and his wife.

A thrilling Broadway Star Feature is announced for Saturday in "Cal Marvin's Wife," that will be of special interest because of the initial appearance of Mary Anderson in a Western feature. It was written by Lulu Case Russell. A cast, whose principal members comprised Mary Anderson, Anne Schaefer, William Duncan, Otto Lederer, Carlton Weatherby and George Kunkel, will be seen in the story's enactment.

"Silas Marner," Eliot, for Warde, Classic Actor, with Thanhouser

IN the Thanhouser feature "Silas Marner," Frederick Warde, the Shakespearian actor, is being introduced to the pictures under the direction of his son, Ernest Warde, a regular member of Mr. Thanhouser's producing staff.

A second personage playing in this picture is Mlle Valkyrien (the Baroness De Witz) who has just completed a Than-o-Play picture, "The Valkyrie," for Mutual release.

George Foster Platt has gone up into Connecticut with a company headed by Florence LaBadie, the pretty Thanhouser star, to take the exteriors of the Thanhouser Mutual Masterpicture, "The Five Faults of Flo," which will be released later. Harris Gordon is playing opposite Miss Labadie in this picture, which pictures the five faults of a beautiful girl—one in each reel, being pride, envy, fickleness, extravagance and jealousy.

Director Eugene Nolan is producing another forthcoming Mutual Thanhouser release in the drama "In the Name of the Law," in which Gladys Hulette, Morris Foster and John Lendberg are being featured, with a supporting cast said to be of unusual strength.

There are several comedies under way at the Thanhouser studios, Arthur Cunningham, Barbara Gilroy, Ethel Jewett and Carey L. Hastings are appearing in one picture, at present being produced by Arthur Ellery. The title of it is "Reforming Rubbering Rosie."

MOTION PICTURE PERSONAGES AT CHICAGO CHARITY BALL

Motion picture personages were conspicuous at the charity ball given in the First Regiment Armory, Chicago, November 20, by the American Theatrical Association.

Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, Metro stars, were given an ovation when they led the grand march. Dancing and cabaret entertainment amused the crowd until the arrival of Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne, after which the Metro favorites received the crowd's admiring attention.

Mr. Bushman was accompanied by Helen Dunbar, of the Metro company. Miss Bayne, accompanied by her mother and Mrs. Alfred Hamburger, president of the ladies' auxiliary, and an escort of association members, was almost carried off her feet by the enthusiastic crowd of picture fans.

The Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation was also in evidence. Arthur H. Spiegel, president of the company, flooded the ballroom at midnight with newspapers hurriedly printed, and sold at large prices to swell the charity fund.

A specially dressed doll was sold at auction, Mr. Bushman and M. J. Spiegel, in competitive bids, bringing the price up to $130. It was sold to Equitable at that figure.

The Equitable cup, donated by the Equitable Chicago branch, was won, after a keen contest, by Mildred Brown and Barbara King. Frank Powell, Equitable director, made a pleasant speech when he presented the cup.

ROTHAPFEL VISIT WINS MILWAUKEE PAPER TO PICTURES

Special to Motion Picture News

Milwaukee, November 28.

One of the net results of the Rothapfel-Mutual visit in Milwaukee, will be a four-page photoplay section in one of the local papers. This paper was very much interested in Mr. Rothapfel's talk, and though it had long been considering such a section it needed the final push, which Mr. Rothapfel gave it to put the proposition over.

The talk, together with the work of Newton Levi, who accompanied Mr. Rothapfel, and J. W. Martin, who was in charge of the local press work on the Rothapfel visit, cinched the page, it is said.

To use the words of one of the heads of the paper in question, when he was commenting on the Rothapfel talk: "We never really knew you picture men were of such importance until today. Why didn't somebody think of a stunt like this long ago?"

"STINGAREE" DEMAND IS LARGE

An indication of the reception that "Stingaree," the latest Kalem series, received may be gathered from the fact that although the first episode was released last Wednesday, Kalem received a telegram from the A. B. C. Company, of Cincinnati, on Monday morning saying that the initial allotment of posters had already been exhausted.

Kalem had anticipated a greater demand than usual for the posters, in view of the widespread publicity given the Hornung series, and the original order was already in excess of that usually made for motion picture films.

An equally large second printing was ordered immediately, as the picture had not yet been released and there was the ordinary demand to expect. "An Enemy of Mankind" is the title of the first episode.

Every General Film Company branch in the country is now supplied with at least one print of the opening "Stingaree" episodes; many have two and in the larger cities more.

EDISON COMPANY IN THE CATSKILL MOUNTAINS FOR "HER INSPIRATION"

Director Frank McGlynn and company of some twenty players have returned from a week in the Catskill mountains whither they had gone to get the mountain scenes in his next release, "Her Inspiration," in which Grace Williams and Curtis Cookney are featured.

Part of the story is set in a Western atmosphere, the kind that Director McGlynn, himself from the West, is particularly at home in. Edison has been doing very few Western plays lately, though Director McGlynn has put several which have gone well. The party encountered snow in the mountains, but came back with some beautiful scenery filmed. Some of the other players on the trip were Yale Benner, James Harris, Jessie Stevens, Mabel Dwight, Harry Linson, Grace Morrisey, Rolina Bainbridge and Louis Foley.

BESSIE EYTON AS JAPANESE GIRL IN SELIG DIAMOND SPECIAL

"The Love of Loti San," released in three reels as a Selig Diamond Special on Thursday, December 2, is noteworthy because of the fact that Bessie Eyton enacts for the first time in her versatile career the role of a Japanese girl.

"The Love of Loti San" is a story from the pen of Lyllian Brown Leighton, another Selig star.

WORK ON SELIG "CRISIS" IN TWO WEEKS

The actual production of "The Crisis" will be commenced under the direction of Colin Campbell at the Selig Zoo within the next two or three weeks. This production, it is understood, is to be made in twelve reels.

The cast calls for almost thirty, and there are ten big parts.

SCARDON WORKING ON BLUE RIBBON WITH ARLINE PRETTY

Director Paul Scardon is busily engaged in the filming of a six-part Blue Ribbon Feature of a patriotic nature. William Hurlbut is the author of the story, which will be enacted by Charles Richman, Arline Pretty, Anders Randolf, Audrey Berry, Evart Overton, and Robert Whitworth.

FRANK BELCHER WITH DE WOLF HOPPER, A KLEINE RECRUIT

Of the many stage and film stars appearing in recent George Kleine productions, none have attracted more favorable comment from critics and fans, through sheer and absolute merit, than Frank Belcher. This genial, heavy set gentleman has been seen in "The Green Cloak," and "The Sentimental Lady," suporting Irene Fenwick in both subjects, and "The Danger Signal."

Frank Belcher is a San Francisco product. He received his education in the public schools there and at Oakland, and counts among his schoolmates many of the prominent, solid citizens of the California metropolis. He was an expert accountant in San Francisco, connected with the California Insurance Company. He gave up his commercial career and took a "flyer" into theatricals, joining Tony Pastor's troupe, and afterwards Hallen and Hart.

It was about this time that Belcher realized the possibilities of his voice. He went to Italy and spent several years cultivating it, then joined the Carl Rosa Opera Company, touring the continent.

Returning to the United States, Belcher associated himself with Henry Savage's Castle Square Opera Company. He was associated with Jefferson de Angelis, De-Wolf Hopper and Lillian Blauvelt.

About this time he became a member of Richard Carle's "Mary's Lamb" company, then joined Henry B. Harris' "Skylark" and later accepted an offer with "The Chocolate Soldier." Then Belcher entered the picture field, appearing in George Kleine's "The Green Cloak."

He will be seen in various roles in a number of forthcoming Kleine features.

GAIL KANE SIGNS LONG CONTRACT WITH EQUITABLE

Gail Kane, who made her debut in pictures in the Playgoer's production of "The Great Diamond Robbery" and later in "Via Wireless," has been engaged by the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation for a long term of years to appear exclusively in film productions of that concern.

Miss Kane, who was last seen on Broadway in George M. Cohan's production of "Seven Keys to Baldpate" and "The Miracle Man," is one of the best known of the younger set of dramatic actresses and for the past five years succeeded in holding down the most important parts in those attractions, and has been out of New York on tour but three months during that period.

She will make her Equitable debut in the E. Mason Hopper production of "The Labyrinth," which is now in its final stages.

The Equitable concern hold out great hopes of establishing Miss Kane as "The Equitable Girl."

"CABIRIA" WITHIN REACH OF EVERY EXHIBITOR, SAYS McGOWAN

The line, "Now within the reach of every exhibitor," which headed an advertisement of "Cabiria" in a recent issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, has led D. J. McGowan, who is handling the big feature for New York and New Jersey, to remark again on its tremendous drawing power.

"It seems only a short time ago," said Mr. McGowan, "that exhibitors were falling all over themselves clamoring to pay as high as three hundred dollars a day for the privilege of showing this picture. Now, however, an exhibitor can have 'Cabiria' at a normal rental, which in consideration of its remarkable drawing power and the high class of people it attracts to the picture theatre, makes it a lucrative investment for anyone."

ALMA HANLON IN "LAW OF BLOOD" FOR KLEINE

"The Law of Blood," Max Marcin's story, written as a starring vehicle for Alma Hanlon, was given its finishing touches at the Kleine Studios last week. In it Miss Hanlon will be seen in three distinct roles —a youthful mother, a child of fourteen, and a young woman of twenty-two.

Arthur Hoops, recently seen in "The Danger Signal," is co-star with Miss Hanlon in "The Law of Blood." The subject is scheduled for release through the Kleine-Edison Feature Service.

NAVAL OFFICER SEES "NATION'S PERIL" AT NEWPORT

Lieut Commander Frank Taylor Evans, of the Newport, R. I., Naval Training Station, was the guest of Director George Terwilliger last week at a private showing of Terwilliger's latest feature, "The Nation's Peril."

With him came a number of his fellow members of the Training School, all of who made the trip from Newport especially to view the picture, being interested both in the subject matter of the picture, depicting as it does the U. S. Atlantic Fleet in action, the men of the Training School and the War College at Newport.

The officers were especially impressed with the marvelous record of gunnery of the fleet demonstrated in the sinking of the ship which the Lubin company brought for the purpose of being sunk by the fire of the battleships, and also by the innovations shown in night photography in the burning of "Lubin Village" after the artillery bombardment.

HAMILTON SMITH TO MAKE LOS ANGELES HEADQUARTERS FOR KALEM

Hamilton Smith, whose appointment as Pacific Coast representative of the Kalem Company was announced in last week's NEWS, has arrived in Los Angeles and, after a preliminary look over the studio of the company, will immediately start his tour of the principal Western cities, making Los Angeles his headquarters.

His territory will include the Coast and Rocky Mountain states, and besides meeting the exchange men he will also endeavor to get in personal touch with the representative exhibitors of that section.

HAMILTON SMITH

From author to director, then film editor, and now the responsible executive post is the story of Hamilton Smith's film career. Though young, the experience he has gained in all branches of picture work in the Kalem school makes him one of the most valued members of that company's staff.

As an author, "The Mysteries of the Grand Hotel" will be remembered as his most recent success, though his stories cover a wide range from "Ham and Bud" comedies to occasional "Hazards of Helen" stories.

Among the screen productions which he has directed are "The Rogue's Syndicate," "The Kidnapped Heiress," "The Veiled Priestess," episodes in the "Ventures of Marguerite."

KLEINE GIVES "THE SCARLET PATH" ELABORATE PRODUCTION

"The Scarlet Path" is the title of a new Kleine Feature under way. It is a story of New York's great white way, and will be told by a cast with Guy Coombs in the lead. He will be supported by Anna Q. Nilsson, Della Connor and others.

"The Scarlet Path" contains a cabaret scene for which the entire floor of the Bronx studio was used.

NINTH KNICKERBOCKER TRIANGLE PROGRAM

("Cross Currents"—Fine Arts—Five Parts. "Crooked to the End"—Keystone—Two Parts. "Between Men"—Kay-Bee—Five Parts)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE Kay-Bee production of this week, supervised by Thomas H. Ince and produced and largely enacted by William S. Hart, is the dominating picture of the ninth program. Griffith's feature is based on a theme that grips one with an iron grip once its introduction is accomplished. It is produced quite effectively and contains acting that is always realistic. Sennett's comedy number winds up with another one of those breath-taking chases that make one marvel at the endurance of the Keystone forces.

"Cross Currents" features Helen Ware in a picture produced by Francis Grandon from a story by Mary H. O'Connor. Unusual situations are abundant in the production, while Miss Ware makes the best of a difficult and sympathetic part. The direction is adequate but not of the pronounced Griffith variety. The setting, while averagely fitting are merely that and nothing more. The photography is never brilliant, it is subdued and dimmed, perhaps purposely.

The story is constructed logically and concerns ultimately the great self sacrifice of a loving woman. She is cast up on an island with her foster sister's husband, a man who was once engaged to her and whom she still loves. The husband believing his wife drowned, lives intimately with the woman he once more discovers he loves. The climax is brought about by the arrival of the wife who has had a premonition that her sister is still alive. Instead she finds her husband for the other woman has sought oblivion, that her sister may never suspect the truth.

Miss Ware in the role of the loving sister is most attractive and her support is of the best. Teddy Sampson as the wife is a lively and pretty little figure, and Courtenay Foote as the man, plays with pleasing consistency throughout. His makeup after a long stay on the island is convincingly realistic.

"Cross Currents" has snatches of comedy here and there, and on the whole is a worthy feature. For spectacular effects the fire on the yacht, followed by its destruction and sinking creates a series of tense scenes.

"Crooked to the End," featuring Fred Mace is a true Keystone comedy, that has a melodramatic plot which holds all the time, while the chase that monopolizes much of the last reel is startlingly thrilling. Anna Luther, Earl Rodney, Charles Arling and Hugh Fay are others that contribute to the excellence of the comedy, Miss Luther being another one of those exasperating beauties hat Mack Sennett is fond of gathering into his studios.

The chase is marvelous to say the least. It ends when a trolley car dashes over a high wall of rock, but previous events have worked the spectator up to an unusually high pitch of excitement.

Previous to the chase there is the customary funny business perpetrated by all the members of the cast, especially by Mace, who is a very clever comedian under the Keystone banner. "Crooked to the End" set the Knickerbocker audience in uproarious humor. The action takes place about a railroad, and to our mind its like has never been produced.

"Between Men" is one of the best offerings from the Ince studio. William S. Hart knows how to win his audience's admiration, by his acting and his direction. It makes one feel happy to watch him. His performance here is of the sort that brings a dim moisture to the eyes time and again, and while you are very certain as to the story's ending you never are tired of it.

C. Gardner Sullivan and Thomas H. Ince prepared the scenario. It is a story with a familiar plot, but endowed with a number of intense situations that minimize this fact. Briefly it concerns Bob White, Westerner and man of honor who comes east to save an old friend from financial ruin by breaking his enemy, first in the market and then with his fists. The love story is subordinated to this theme, but the few love scenes carried on between Hart and Enid Markey, who appears as the daughter of the westerner's friend, are as delightful as the rest of the picture is powerful.

House Peters as Lewiston the heavy, J. Barney Sherry as Hampdon, the man who calls upon the westerner's aid, and Bert Wesner and Robert McKim complete a most competent cast of principals.

The picture has been produced in a manner that leaves no loophole for criticism of a condemning sort. The settings are magnificent, the stock exchange scenes being particularly realistic. The fight indulged in by White and Lewiston makes one's blood run cold.

"Between Men" will please everybody, chiefly because of William S. Hart

"THE PRINCE AND THE PAUPER"

(Famous Players-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS is a picture that fully justifies the use of that over-worked descriptive 'excellent,' for by way of the artistic treatment of its picturization, "The Prince and the Pauper" becomes an animated replica of Mark Twain's most delightful work. It is, we believe a picture upon which the author, were he alive today, would unhesitatingly place his stamp of approval.

"The Prince and the Pauper" has many merits and no annoying demerits. It has two characterizations rendered by Marguerite Clark in the dual title role that fascinate continually and it has atmosphere of an utterly convincing sort.

Miss Clark is a vivacious and delightful boy whether she be dressed in rags or in silks and satins, whether she appears as the prince suffering the brutality of a band of thieves, or as the pauper, suffering the weight of her restricted and undesirable life as the prince. They are two clearly defined characters, each one containing a vigor and charm that alternately creates humor and pathos.

The atmosphere is indeed a wonderful asset to the production. The court scenes were elegantly clad; royalty moves in grandeur, the London streets and alleys over which terrifying bands hold sway, the palace gardens, the murderers' den, the desolate country places, and finally the startling reproduction of Westminster Abbey, where the coronation activities are in progress, are all scenes exquisitely laid and into which not one whit of modernism has been allowed to creep.

And just a few words should be said of the costumes and in particular the people who wear them. Whether they be principals or supernumeraries they carry their clothes well and move with realistic dignity. Perhaps this will pass unnoticed, but if the actors resembled and played like amateurs, the picture might be irreparably ruined.

As for the double exposure scenes, the producers have carefully avoided filling the picture with them. Only a few appear in the first and the last part of the picture. Then they are well timed and natural. Miss Clark is doubled for in two or three instances and the substitutions are excellent.

It is quite superfluous to dwell upon the choice quality of Mark Twain's humor. It is rich, abundant and natural in this picture. But it is combined with sympathetic bits, a few likeable thrills, and many nice dramatic climaxes that blend into a whole of immeasurable delectability.

FIVE STRIKING SCENES FROM "THE GALLEY SLAVE," A CURRENT PRODUCTION FROM THE WILLIAM FOX STUDIOS, ADAPTED FROM THE BARTLEY CAMPBELL STAGE SUCCESS OF THE SAME NAME.

THEDA BARA, THE STAR OF "THE GALLEY SLAVE," IN POSES FROM THE PHOTOPLAY. STUART HOLMES, HENRY LEONE, LITTLE JANE LEE, AND OTHER FOX FAVORITES, ARE IN THE SUPPORTING CAST

William Sorelle heads the support as gay Miles Hendon and Robert Broderick as the King, William Barrows as the Earl of Hertford and William Frederick as the pauper's father complete a nicely rounded cast of principals.

The subtitles are all well selected, being in most instances excerpts from the book. The camera work maintains a fine consistency throughout.

In fact he who doesn't enjoy "The Prince and the Pauper" has lost all sense of the sympathetic and the humorous, the romantic and the adventurous.

"THE GALLEY SLAVE"

(Fox Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

IN "The Galley Slave," a picturization of the Bartley Campbell play, Theda Bara has a role unusual for her: that of an artist's wife, who after being commanded by him to give herself up to a kinsman of his in order that he may become the kinsman's heir, is abandoned, leads her child through misfortunes that almost end in galley slavery, and finally kills her worthless husband.

The situations built into such a story are tense enough to please the most exacting devotee of refined melodrama, and Miss Bara, dominating the action throughout, gives an impersonation that is strong evidence of her ability in parts resembling not all the vampire.

One of the most gratifying things about a Fox picture is this: one is sure to see not only a highly capable star, but also a supporting cast carefully selected, and of well defined ability. This picture, for example, is peopled with such favorites as Stuart Holmes, Claire Whitney, Henry Leone, Lillian Lawrence and Ben Hendricks. In addition Jane Lee, a little miss, who calls forth her smiles and tears at will, A. H. Van Buren and Hardi Kirkland are present.

J. Gordon Edwards, who adapted the piece and directed it, instilled lightning rapidity into the action. The sets show satisfactorily Italian interiors and exteriors, almost entirely domestic, except for a prison and a street scene or two. The story does not require elaborate decoration.

Summed up, "The Galley Slave," endowed with a theme that could not fail to interest, gains its strength of appeal on the screen from the care and ability with which it is acted. It is essentially not a dramatic narrative, but a play of situations whose home is the speaking stage. But it is convincing because its presentation is in the hands of Theda Bara and her associates.

"A WOMAN WITHOUT A SOUL"

(Biograph-General—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

ALTHOUGH this theme is hackneyed, and has been played upon with increasing frequency of late months, it is done so well in this case as to merit special attention. Adventuresses and friends who prove faithless where another man's wife is concerned are familiar figures to those who watch the screen. This picture presents them on a plane above the commonplace and amateurish methods too often employed. Part of this is due to the script, but much more to the capable cast.

Vera Sisson is the adventuress. She is an alluring siren, moving amid tinseled surroundings, whose great pleasure in life is to lure men on to ruin.

Many victims have fallen before she turns from the last to the brightest prize of all, a young millionaire; but in him she meets her master for the first time.

She marries him simply because he wills it so, but during his first absence she escapes from domestic restraint, and seeks the company of a too-willing friend of her husband, who neglects his own wife for her sake.

CORA MEETS HER MASTER

The husband, returning unexpectedly, traces the two to a private dining room, where he chokes the erstwhile friend into insensibility, and leaves after making it clear to his wife that she need never return to his house.

Her companion when he regains consciousness, flees from her also, recalling that she has left a blight upon every man who has yielded to her wiles.

She finds herself at the brink of the chasm, deserted and alone, and the barren triumphs of her soulless life only memories to accuse her.

The scenes are all appropriately set, and the characters skillfully drawn.

Especially convincing and finished is Robert Nolan, but the work of G. Raymond Nye, Jack Mulhall and Helen Bray is deserving of high praise.

HEARST-SELIG NEWS PICTORIAL

"The Improved Edition Goes On—Bigger and Better Than Ever—It Is My Order"

On the next three pages appears briefly the digest of what is surely the most important statement and promise ever made on the subject of news in motion pictures

The Memorable Interview with Mr. Hearst

SOMETHING over two years ago a motion picture man with a keen sense of values was able to win the attention of Mr. William Randolph Hearst. The publisher of the greatest newspapers and magazines and owner of the International News Service, with various subsidiary departments supplying all the important news publications in America with text, news and photography, had for years previously, appreciated and employed motion pictures.

The result of the interview was the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial. An arrangement was made with the Selig-Polyscope Co. of Chicago whereby that Company was to act as print manufacturer and distributing agent.

With the Hearst organization's advent in the field came a new meaning to motion pictures. With the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial, exhibitors began to vie with each other in the presentation of "beats," "scoops," and it became no unusual matter for a motion picture audience to view great events immediately after their occurrence.

William Randolph Hearst having inaugurated the Hearst-Selig Weekly, through his great news gathering organization, produced the reel in every detail, watched its growth, and visualized its possibilities. The point should be made that there are opportunities in the news reels which so far surpass those of any printed medium that the field is as wide as publishing. The possibilities for making the news reel a tremendous power with myriad activities are unlimited.

The Hearst-Selig News Reel performed its work in its day, but after consultations with exhibitors, exchanges, the Hearst editors and camera men—a plan and prospectus for a greater and better news reel as it should be was laid out.

The proposition was revolutionary—as revolutionary as the modern day newspaper is over the small town four pager. It called for such sweeping improvements, changes and evolutions that even to encompass the scope of what was suggested was a task.

The plan was discussed and developed in every detail. Then the question of the expense of this gigantic plan was considered.

"What do you estimate this will cost?"—Mr. Hearst asked.

The spokesman hesitated.

The figure was a startling one but he mentioned it. The Chief thought for a space of not more than a moment and he wrote the attached memorandum.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST
NEW YORK

Dear Mr. MacManus:-

Following the brief outlined to me this evening, I authorize you to proceed and make the new Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial right.

The innovations are good — make them.

The enlarged scope is essential. Proceed to the limit.

I want you to hesitate at no point because of expense.

Make the Hearst-Vitagraph right.

Sincerely yours,

W R Hearst

Thus the greater news reel comes into being. On January 1st it is to make its first appearance.

In order to bring the manufacturing company closer to the Hearst headquarters, an arrangement has been made with the Vitagraph Co., embracing all its branches whose tremendous plant and well known facilities assure the success of the new plan. It is to be known as the

HEARST-VITAGRAPH
NEWS PICTORIAL
(Formerly the Hearst-Selig Weekly—Now Better)

The Greatest News Gathering Organization in the World

IN the publishing business editors look to the Hearst Organization for their news. They know that through Hearst news comes in the quickest and most accurate manner.

The International News Service supplies a thousand newspapers in addition to magazines of all types with a complete telegraphic report of the world's happenings.

The International Film Service, the allied company supplies these same publications with rush photographs of the most timely events. In addition to this William Randolph Hearst employs special staffs for each of his various newspapers, including the New York American, and Journal, the Chicago Examiner, San Francisco Examiner, Atlanta Georgian, Boston American, etc. In addition to this he employs correspondents, specially retained for his magazines including the Cosmopolitan, Hearst's, Harper's Bazar, Motor, etc.

The manner in which the Hearst organization maintains a vigilant watch of the world is unquestionably the greatest example of efficiency known. Talk about a governmental spy system! Why there is not a city, town or hamlet that appears on the map which has not its Hearst correspondent and photographer on the ground.

This is why if the Sultan of Turkey is passing through Bagdad, a photograph of him is made by the Hearst Photographer and rushed to America. This is why if there is an important event from Maine to Mexico as soon as the news can be dispatched a Hearst man takes the picture and the news with him.

This is why, to relate an actual instance—down in Philadelphia a short time ago when the Roebling fire occurred a Hearst photographer had his films delivered in New York City before even the Philadelphia men were on the ground.

When you are supplied by William Randolph Hearst and his news and photographic service you may be assured that no one can be ahead of you first and generally you are ahead of any one else.

The New Hearst-Vitagraph Offers Many Innovations

The news reel lives or dies on one essential—news.

THEREFORE, the new Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial will get you the news first—will get you the news right, will get you the news that is interesting; will get you "scoops."

But outside of this there are several points which are tremendously valuable to the exhibitor.

First—The Hearst Vitagraph News Pictorial will come to you independent of any other service. It is not going to be packed in as an adjunct to comedies and dramas; it is not going to be just one of several things that are handed to you indiscriminately. It must stand or fall on its own merit because you will buy it separately and insist on its making good separately.

Second—a system has been worked out whereby the exhibitor names his price for the service. It is the most revolutionary move made on the subject of releases, dates of release and prices concurrent with these dates and with the exhibitors territory.

Third—the country is to be divided into zones—that is to say that if you are located in San Francisco you are not going to be served with the same news as though you lived in New York. International news will be supplied to all the zones, but each zone headquarter will maintain its own individual news gathering establishment in its own territory and will supply local pictures along with state, national and international events.

Fourth—for those theatres desirous of obtaining it a "special extra" service will be added. It will consist of photographs of unusual importance. A section of film will be rushed by messenger, special, etc., to the exhibitor.

Not only will the Hearst-Vitagraph be made right but it will be given a popularity by a campaign of advertising which will send people to the theatres where the reel is shown.

Fifth—a system of lobby announcements and posters which will have the atmosphere of news, rush, telegraphic effect has been worked out.

A number of other ideas have been collated into a book which outlines the whole proposition of the new Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial.

Joined with the VITAGRAPH

(America's Greatest Producing Company)

MAN to man with the Hearst Organization, there will be working the great Vitagraph Company. Add to the camera staff of Hearst, the camera staff of Vitagraph. Add to the news gathering facilities of Hearst, the news gathering facilities of Vitagraph. Add to the Hearst institution the Vitagraph institution.

Thus you can gain a conception of the immensity and power of the new Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial.

The Vitagraph Organization has been noted as a producer from its inception averaging higher than any other always. Despite the fact that Vitagraph has in the past years given America master pieces and head liners, there has never been a single picture bearing the name of Vitagraph which has not been up to the mark.

To measure up to Hearst and his Organization, is not a difficult matter for Vitagraph.

But to Vitagraph of all the field, the selection was made for proper co-operation and masterly direction.

To Vitagraph all the honor that is Hearst's is equally given.

"THE PRIMROSE PATH"

(Broadway Universal Feature—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THE Primrose Path," to be released December 13, is by Bayard Veiller, author of the renowned stage success, "Within the Law." The picture was made at the eastern Universal studios, and features Gladys Hanson. "The Primrose Path" may be defined as a more than ordinary society drama that contains a most sympathetic theme, which has been handled in the course of its production with an average degree of capability.

Veiller's central character is a woman, who, speaking in the language of the title, takes a few steps on the "primrose path" in order that her husband may not die of hunger and lack of medical attendance. Having prospered by this supreme sacrifice, John, the husband, proceeds to get well. He becomes popular as a painter of debutantes, and little by little becomes more ashamed of his very plain wife.

In time John becomes so enamoured by one young lady that her father proposes to Joan, the wife, that she recede in favor of his daughter. And then Joan tells him of her sacrifice. Her words are overheard by her husband, who at last awakes to her love and his own worthlessness, and so all is happy again.

On Joan lies the picture's sympathetic power. The author has placed her in a series of appealing situations that follow one another in rapid succession after she has made that self-sacrificing step on the "primrose path." Gladys Hanson makes the most of this featured role, playing with a strong show of emotion in all her many scenes.

Lawrence Martson directed the picture, working on a scenario by May B. Havey. Both the direction and scenario are adequate, while the settings are many times most gorgeous. The Parisian cabaret scene, for instance, is very realistic in its setting, and very daring in its character. For that matter, "The Primrose Path" is marked by unhesitating frankness from beginning to end. There is nothing vague about it.

JOAN'S TROUBLES CONTINUE

Hal Forde is chief of the support as Ned, the husband. Helen, the other woman, is played by Wina Blake, while E. Cooper-Willie appears as Joan's father.

In the exterior scenes the photographer has done well, likewise many of the interior scenes are suitably clear. In a few, however, the backgrounds are not very well defined.

"THE BUZZARD'S SHADOW"

(American-Mutual Masterpicture—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

GOOD old melodrama, with all the trimmings, presented in a spectacular, yet logical, manner, is this newest masterpicture. The life is that of the army on a frontier post, and the location the desert; the combination has allowed a number of striking scenes, of which Director Thomas Ricketts has taken the fullest advantage.

Harold Lockwood is featured as a sergeant of the regular army. He is in love with a young widow, who is acting as camp cook. At an army ball he discovers that Dr. Deschamps is on very intimate terms with the colonel's wife, and by approaching the doctor, and giving him a choice between handing in his resignation and being exposed, he makes a bitter enemy. He makes another enemy in a half-breed Indian, whom he has reproved for brutality to a horse, and when the colonel sends him across the desert with an important message, the two are on his trail.

Dr. Deschamps poisons the lumps of sugar he carries for his horse, and the Indian follows him out into the desert, and when he stops for the night, empties his water canteen and fills it with sand. The next day the horse dies, and he struggles on afoot, until, to his horror, he finds he has no water. The symbol of death hovers around him in the shape of a buzzard, which hangs aloft, waiting for him to succumb.

Painfully, the sergeant drags himself through the wastes of sand, tearing off his clothing in his agony, until, when on the verge of exhaustion, he reaches the railroad which runs across the desert. There he is found by a train crew, revived and assisted on to his destination.

Back at the post he is looked upon as dead, and the two villains are rejoicing. Suddenly he appears; the two meet him in the edge of the woods and there is a desperate fight, which the soldiers interrupt. The half-breed is shot, and the doctor is thrown into the guard house, and disgraced as a traitor.

Excellent photography has yielded some very attractive scenes, which combine well with the thrill of the story to produce a good picture. May Allison, William Stowell, Harry Von Meter, Alice Ann Rooney, Dick La Reno, Betty Hart and Virginia Fordyce are also in the cast.

PALO ALTO COMPANY CAPITALIZED AT $300,000 TO MAKE PICTURES NEAR STANFORD UNIVERSITY

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Nov. 25.

THE Palo Alto Film Corporation, with offices at Palo Alto and San Jose, has been incorporated under the laws of California, capitalized at three hundred thousand dollars.

The studio of the company is to be located on a plot of twenty acres at the foot of the Santa Cruz Mountains, near the Leland Stanford University at Palo Alto, which gives the organization access to the many picturesque spots in the big tree and big basin country, together with ocean, beaches, mines and rugged country.

It is the intention of this organization to make five-reel subjects, and the statement is issued that they have a release on one of the well-known programs. Harry C. Peterson, director of Leland Stanford, Jr., University museum, is also a director of this organization.

It is interesting to note in the formation of this company that Palo Alto is looked upon as being the birthplace of motion pictures, as at this place in 1872 pictures that depicted the movements of a horse made by means of twenty-four exposures, were made, and this gave the first inspiration of motion pictures.

"LIFE WITHOUT SOUL"

(Ocean Film Corporation—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"LIFE WITHOUT SOUL" is an adaptation from the work of Mrs. Mary Shelley, entitled "Frankenstein." Mrs. Shelley's book contains a powerful theme for picture production, because of its unusual main character and the strong situations resulting from his appearance. A slight idea of its possibilities may be gleaned from the outline of the plot.

A medical student creates a near-human body, in the shape of a big brute man, who is blessed with the ordinary senses of a human being but who has few brains and not the slightest vestige of a human soul. The student suffers terribly for his invention. The brute man thoughtlessly murders his sister, murders his best friend, murders his wife, and so exhausts his creator that he expires.

The producers have done well in introducing a prologue and epilogue which alleviates the gruesomeness of the action as it shows one of the characters of the play proper reading the book, and so after the brute man is through with his murdering, it is pleasing to see that all the characters are still alive in the epilogue.

Mrs. Shelley's work as picturized by Joe Smiley is impressionistic in character. The story is impossible and the difficulties encountered in its production were great, the main one being to make a convincing picture of an entirely imaginative story.

THE DISCOVERY

At times the picture refuses to convince, but its interest is always averagely high because of the theme's unusualness.

Since the picture's special showing to the trade at the Candler Theatre, much has been done that contribute towards its improvement. Many more titles have been added which clears the action considerably. Moreover the Candler operator cut short each reel, depriving the picture of its even continuity.

In its present state "Life Without Soul" is a feature that bids fair to please because of its unconventionality. The scenario, though it is inclined to disregard distances and time slightly, is logical.

Percy Darrell Standing as the brute man is a good type for that role, while William Cohill and Lucy Cotten, though not brilliant, carry their parts consistently. George DeCarlton has a character part as the father. The extras employed are not adept at picture work. On the whole the direction of the picture is in keeping with the story, though there are one or two slips which catch the hypercritical eye.

The photography and locations are two of the picture's pronouncedly strong features.

"A ROSE AMONG THE BRIERS"

(Balboa-Pathé—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

EXQUISITE coloring adds a charm to this story which gives it a distinct value aside from its dramatic effects and the thread of the story. This is especially true of the exterior scenes, where the luxurious semi-tropical vegetation of Los Angeles is shown in a natural riot of coloring which appeals strongly to the sense of the beautiful.

Jackie Saunders is featured in the story, which is that of a factory girl, lifted from her sordid environment into the gay and artificial life of the carbarets, where she becomes a dancer. She finds the work more congenial, but it is also attended by numerous annoyances, chief among which is a wealthy bachelor, who pursues her with evil intent and intentions.

In her innocence she accepts his invitation to go to his home, on his promise to have his "wife" educate her. As she is in love with a young doctor, who has offered her marriage, she is eager for this education, but she soon finds the man has no "wife" and she is in a dangerous position.

A young friend of her former environment, however, is watching over her, and breaks into the millionaire's home just after a gay dinner has been given in the girl's honor. He is just in time to save her, and the two escape through a window and flee across the big lawn to safety. Her rescuer perceives that she loves the young doctor, and sacrifices his own love in order to reunite the pair. This time the offer of marriage is accepted.

There is great attention to detail in the factory scenes, and the interiors of the millionaire's home are elaborate to the last degree. It is in the exterior views of the mansion and gardens that the color work shows to its best advantage. The work of the cast is capable and in keeping with the general atmosphere of the picture.

"THE HOUSE OF FEAR"

(Pathé-Gold Rooster—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

ONE of those mystery stories—one with the mystery drawn out to a fine point which is calculated to keep the audience squirming, with everybody wondering how the whole thing can be settled and the many mysteries explained, has been selected for this Gold Rooster subject. The picture is another of Arnold Daly's "Ashton Kirk" stories, directed by Mr. Daly, and with himself as the star.

Numerous mechanical devices are introduced with considerable ingenuity to whet the appetite of the audience; for instance, at the opening, there are flashes of a mysterious man in a high watch tower, throwing the beams from a great searchlight out into the night, and following it with his intent gaze; then there is a mystic death symbol, and mysterious men and women pacing the roads which lead to the House on the Hill, which the village folk dare not approach.

It develops in the last reel that Cramp, the owner of the house, is beset by a band of Mexicans, who had induced his late father to make some counterfeit bank-note plates, which he later refused to deliver; they are hidden on the premises, and the desperate Mexican band has sent the death sign to the son of their maker.

THE MYSTERIOUS SIGNALS ARE SIGHTED

The scheme is explained by Ashton Kirk, who finds that a sword and harp, the possessions of Cramp's aunt, are being used by her in a clever system of signalling; through them, Kirk learns when the attack is to be made on the house, and traps the band.

The details have been carefully worked out, and there has been great attention to the logical development of the dramatic climaxes. Jeanne Eagels is a capable and attractive support to Mr. Daly. Sheldon Lewis does some strong work as Cramp, the master of The House of Fear. The story is by John T. McIntyre.

MARY MILES MINTER, STAR OF "BARBARA FRIETCHIE," AND TWO SCENES FROM THAT CURRENT METRO PRODUCTION

"BARBARA FRIETCHIE"

(Popular Plays and Players-Metro—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

TWO generations have been brought up on the story of Old Barbara Frietchie and the third is just beginning to memorize Whittier's famous lines; and yet the tale has lost none of its charm. To the second generation Clyde Fitch gave a second and younger Barbara to add romance to the patriotism of Dame Barbara, and this second Barbara comes along in the person of Mary Miles Minter to lay the story before the third.

Altogether charming is Mary Miles Minter in this subject. It is doubtful if she has been so well cast before, and it is certain the play has never been better cast. The dainty little Metro star carries the burden of the story along, together with a sympathy which springs from the first view of her winsome face. There is laughter in her smiling moods, and there are tears in her pathos. Only in a child are there such sympathetic routes from the heart to the face —but they tell us that Miss Minter is only a child.

Her girlishness is balanced by the stately dignity of Mrs. Thomas W. Whiffen, whose years are many, but whose grace of manner is such as we have been taught to associate with the original Dame Barbara. Guy Coombs does some of his best work as Captain Trumbull, young Barbara's Union sweetheart, and there is some excellent character work by Fraunie Franholz, Louis Sealy, Frederick Heck and William A. Morse. The others in the cast, which includes Wallace Scott, Anna Q. Nilsson, Myra Brooks, Charles Hartley and Jack Burns, show an able grasp of the subject.

The Fitch play has been followed in detail in the picturization made by Clarence J. Harris. The meeting between Barbara, the Southern girl, and Captain Trumbull of the Union forces, quickly results in a romance. Trumbull is shot in action by Barbara's brother, and is taken to her home, where he dies. During the episode where the elder Barbara stands by the flag, Jack Negly, a rejected suitor, shoots from the street, and the bullet strikes young Barbara. She is carried from the balcony, and dies with her hand in that of her dead sweetheart.

There is stirring action when the Confederate forces descend on the town of Frederick, and rout the Union army, and when sharpshooters are placed in the preacher's house, where Barbara has gone to meet Captain Trumbull. Battle scenes give a vivid picture, and the street of Frederick is especially well done.

"VOICE OF THE WILDERNESS"

(Kalem—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM RESSMAN ANDREWS

THIS is the second episode in the "Stingaree" series, founded on the novel of the same name by the English author, E. W. Hornung. The scenes representing life in the Australian wilderness, "the bush," are vividly presented by clear photography and a careful selection of locations for the exteriors.

True Boardman continues in this release to give a satisfying characterization of the popular conception of a "gentleman-bandit." The girl who, engaged to Irving Randolph, afterwards known as Stingaree, the outlaw, repudiated him in London when he became the scapegoat for his younger brother's indiscretions, goes to Australia, and by chance meets her former lover in a house where she has become the companion of the owner's wife.

Ethel still thinks him guilty and spurns his overtures toward a reconciliation on hearing him confess to being the notorious bandit terrorizing the countryside. Though her manner in the interview indicated irreconcilable coldness, her heart prompts the girl later on to make an effort to save her former lover from possible capture.

Shortly after Stingaree's departure, the head of the house, in announcing that he would take his wife and Ethel to a concert, to be held in the town that evening, declares his intention of going armed with a revolver, as he had heard reports of the bandit's presence in the neighborhood.

Ethel stealthily removes the cartridges from the weapon, and her employer puts it into his pocket without suspecting that the pistol had been tampered with.

The concert is suddenly interrupted by Stingaree and his partner, a long-whiskered individual, bristling with revolvers. Stingaree makes all the men throw up their hands and announces that he intends to run the concert.

The man with Ethel whispers his wife to take the pistol out of his pocket and hide it in her shawl. Grabbing the weapon just as Stingaree leaves the hall, after the bandit felt that he had skylarked enough, he rushes outside, hoping to prevent the bandit's escape. Of course, the empty weapon is useless, and Stingaree, laughing at his discomfited pursuer, vaults into the saddle of his horse, tied to a nearby tree, and gallops beyond reach.

A posse starts in pursuit, and the audience is treated to a thrilling chase over rough country, but Stingaree outwits the men bent on his capture.

"THE HUNGARIAN NABOB"

(Biograph—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS drama, sprinkled with a goodly number of humorous scenes, is an adaptation from a novel by Maurus Jokai, a Hungarian author. Like many things Hungarian it is unconventional, with regard to its construction and its absence of any stirring climax. In the case of "The Hungarian Nabob," wherein the action is at all times slow moving and often repeated, the lack of a quick denouement is felt.

The characters of the story are all clearly drawn and some of them by their very unusualness create quite an air of interest. The Nabob himself, for instance, is a most eccentric individual with a personality strongly defined by Charles H. Mailes. Franklin Ritchie as his profligate nephew and Louise Vale as Fanny, a girl whom he wickedly desires for himself have the other principal parts. Irma Dawkins, Madge Kirby, Herbert Barrington, Laura LaVarnie and Hector V. Sarno complete the cast.

The very original atmosphere of the story is responsible for a little disappointment. The spectator expects and even hopes for the rounder's reform, but instead he keeps on going down and the heroine marries his aged uncle just to spite the nephew.

There is an abundance of comedy in the first reel, and whoever prepared the scenario knows the value of contrasts of comedy and drama for this merit in the construction of the piece is always pleasingly pronounced.

In many respects the subject is modern, though sometimes the costumes and settings suggest a period some years since. Biograph photography seldom merits criticism, and in this picture it is of the usual high order.

"THE BELOVED VAGABOND"

(Pathé Gold Rooster—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. PROCTOR

THOSE who contend that motion pictures are literature, rather than drama, and can well portray psychological studies and character delineation, find plenty of support for their belief in this picture.

"The Beloved Vagabond" was shown for review back in July, and since then has been sent to France and hand colored.

"The Beloved Vagabond" is an adaptation of the book by the same name from the pen of William J. Locke. If any recent novel is devoted to quaint character drawing, and is actionless, this is it. Yet so skillful is the adaptation, and so good is the work of Edwin Arden as Paragot, the beloved vagabond, that the picture is a pure delight.

It is a high class picture, strictly so. It is fit for the patrons of two-dollar psychological plays. It is quaint, subtle and artistic. In fact it is so exceedingly high class that it may sail serenely over the heads of the patrons who want the "movie" type of entertainment. Pardon the use of the word "movie." It is dragged in to indicate vulgarity in contradistinction to pictures like "The Beloved Vagabond."

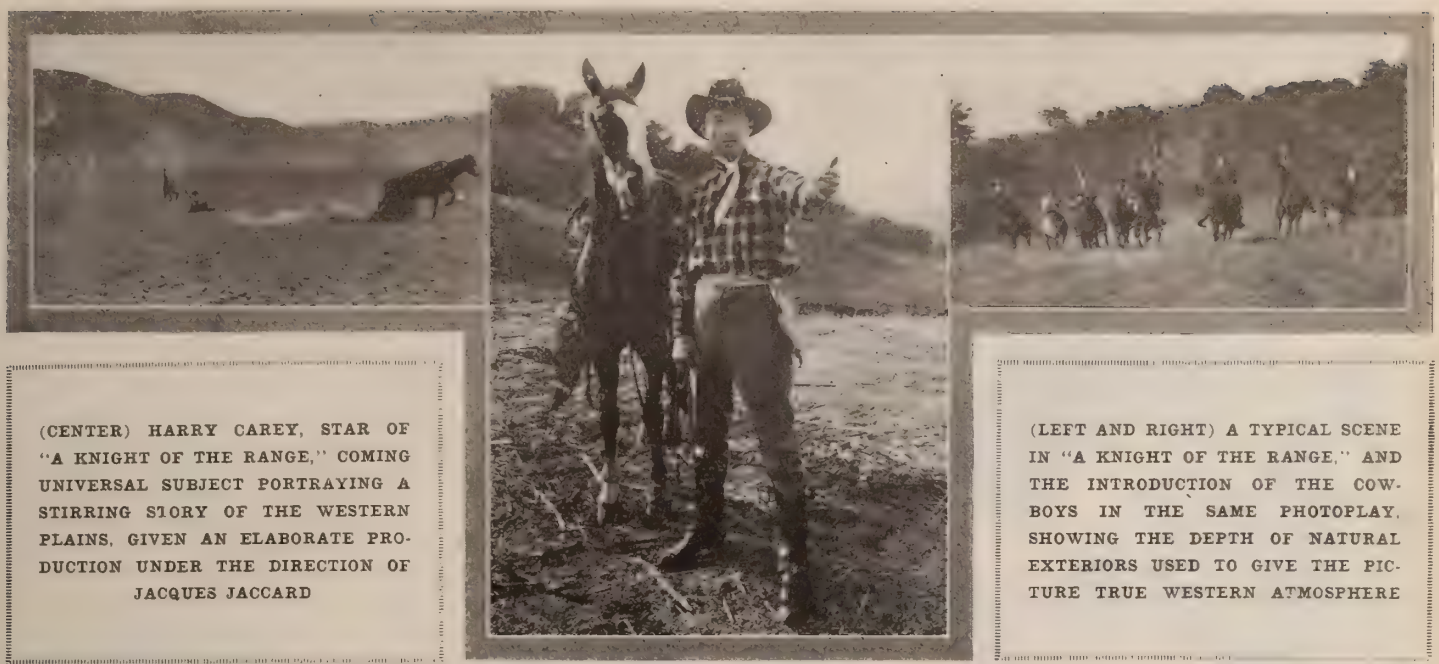
The story is comparatively simple. Paragot, a rising young architect, is betrothed to Joanna. Her father needs a large sum of money to pull him through a business difficulty. Paragot signs a contract with a rival to give Joanna up for two years, and gives her the money to save her father.

Then, in despair, he takes up the life of an itinerant musician, ragged of clothes and down at the heel. His companions are Blanquette, a singer, and little Asticot, a ragamuffin, recruited en route.



Finally Joanna meets Paragot as he and his band are playing with great enthusiasm at a peasant's wedding. Her husband, jealous, tells all that happened between him and Paragot. Joanna brings Paragot back to polite society, but he finds that the carefree life of the road had unfitted him to wear the yoke of convention, so he returns to marry Blanquette, who loves him.

Edwin Arden is positively delightful. To see the living Paragot, child of whim and fancy despite his man's stature, as Arden plays the part is a treat. Bliss Milford, who plays Blanquette, does it well. She is an established picture player anyway. But Katherine Brown-Decker, who plays Joanna, is a positive discovery. She should go far. She is able, screens well, and is good to look upon.

George B. Seitz made the adaptation, and Edouard José produced the picture. They have contributed a real addition to the literature of the screen.

JOYCE MOORE READY FOR BALBOA PICTURE

After an extended vacation, Joyce Moore, is once more back playing in Balboa feature films. She will be remembered as having played the feminine lead opposite Henry Walthall, in the Balboa production of "Beulah," when she more than acquitted herself with credit.

"A KNIGHT OF THE RANGE"

(Universal—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY J. C. JESSEN

BEFORE an audience made up of photoplay people, and a very large representation of the Universal Ranch staff of cowboys, which completely taxed the seating capacity of Woodley's theatre, the first Universal Broadway feature, of a decidedly Western character, "A Knight of the Range," was given its premier, Friday evening. Throughout the showing there was much applause when the marvelous riding the cowboys was shown on the screen. The many sensational scenes, and the decidedly interesting story, well staged, caused all to pronounce it a wonderful picture.

The introduction of the players is decidedly novel, being of the same program as followed at a round-up. Every principal rides to the center of the screen from a distance, at break-neck speed, salutes and takes his position with the company.

This speedy start is but a sample of what is to follow. All the way through there is quick action and fast riding with the players performing some very hazardous Western stunts.

Furious bulls add a punch to these scenes that was not intended. The hold-up of the stage is done in a new manner. The chase of the criminals by the sheriff's posse is over a very rough and rugged country, and the cameramen were successful in catching a number of accidents which occurred.

Harry Carey, starred in this as Cheyenne Harry, proves the claim of the publicity writer that he is a regular cowboy. Other riders of note who possess numerous medals won at round-ups are "Hoot" Gibson, Bill Gettinger, Bud Osborne and A. L. Blake. The part of the heavy is well taken by William Canfield. Olive Golden plays the lead, that of the postmistress of Lariat, and Peggy Coudray appears as the favorite of the dance hall girls.

"THE CAVE MAN"

(Vitagraph Blue Ribbon—V-L-S-E—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM RESSMAN ANDREWS

"THE CAVE MAN" offers Robert Edeson probably the best vehicle for his talents in pictures for sometime. And the subject is made distinctive for another reason. It serves to introduce a newcomer to the screen, Fay Wallace, whose acting puts her among the front rank of photo drama artists.

Miss Walace brings to her work a thorough training in stock and has appeared in support of numerous Broadway stars, notably W. H. Thompson in "The Bishop's Move." Miss Wallace gave a finished performance throughout the screen version of Gelett Burgess's striking novel.

This dainty actress is a decided acquisition to the long list of capable players in motion picture stardom. She is happily cast for the role of Madeline Mischief, the young society leader whose droll sociological experiment affords her untold merriment at the expense of her more conventional friends.

The plot is full of sardonic humor and the incidents bristle with satire on certain accepted traditions of society. These traditions strike the vivacious heroine as fraught with more or less injustice.

As she takes the measure of the men in her set she is impressed with the uselessness of many—they seem to her like so many vegetables, of quite weedy growth.

Then Madeline, who would be shocked if any one told her she was developing a turn for grave reflection, wondered if any man taken from the streets at random could not be made acceptable to the most polished circles.

So she decides to experiment and find out—besides, it was going to afford her a great deal of amusement. She drops a letter from her window with the half of a hundred dollar bill in the envelop, and the request that if it is found by a man he is to call on her and ask for the rest of the banknote.

The freakish message falls into the hands of a coalheaver, who no matter how dense he might otherwise be, does not fail to comprehend the uses of a hundred dollar bill.

The girl induces the man to submit to her experiment. He is put in the hands of a barber and tailor and made presentable. She coaches him in the rudiments of table manners, and at last makes him apparently acceptable for the drawing-rooms of her friends.

In the end the man develops from "a cave man" type and because of his native ability, becomes a respected personage in the community, winning the girl's affection as a reward.

"THE WARNING"

(Triumph-Equitable—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

THIS picture sets out to show just what will happen to a prosperous business man—or anybody else for that matter—who looks too long upon the wine when it is red. There is no doubt that the lesson is explained in full, and made so clear that a child could understand it.

Allegorical scenes, disclosing the sufferings of the damned, make up a large part of the latter reels, and they are staged in a straightforward manner. That is, there is no attempt to create illusion. The devil stands on a hillside, surveying the scene beneath, which is a company of writhing unfortunates, all penitent for having been addicted to the cup while on earth. Two figures who seem to engage the devil's particular attention are a pair of sinful lovers, attired for the most part in Nature's garments.

It is a fair enough observation to say that the allegory in this picture will make an impression upon anybody who witnesses it.

Other sets, also employed in the dream that comes to the drink-lover in time to save him, offer variety: a cabaret on New Year's Eve; excellent night views of Broadway; an explosion; the bread line in the slums; a church wedding; home interiors; the apartment of a vampire; a saloon or two; and several more—all testifying to the effort by Director Edmund Lawrence to give an old theme as elaborate a dress as possible.

SOME OF THOSE WHO DIDN'T HEED THE WARNING

Henry Kolker, in the role of the good fellow who through drink is his own worst enemy, gives a sincere interpretation. Mr. Kolker is inclined at times to be a little theatrical, but his acting is good, taken as a whole. Lily Leslie, Edith Thornton, Christine Mayo and Cyril Rheinhard are the other priicipals. Master Frank Longacre, William McKey and Mayme Kelso are also in the cast.

While a good many things in this production appear crude, and the action leading up to one or two climaxes is not developed sufficiently, the denouement is unexpected and is managed with a degree of skill that does much to make the whole piece satisfactory to the spectator. Few if any persons who see it will suspect that the story is to have a happy ending. But it does. And, as we have remarked before with regard to Equitable pictures, the element of surprise is nearly always present at the finish.

"FAITH AND FORTUNE"

(Edison-General—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THERE is an appeal in this story of devotion which will recommend it to hundreds of theatre-goers who are attracted by the life of the open, and the rough kindliness of the mining camp and mountain. There is a murder, and a near-lynching to add thrill, and the emotional and dramatic scenes are well handled.

The hero of the story is a western miner. The girl hears of him just after her brother, who has been administering her property, has taken the income check and left suddenly to try his fortune in the west. Then the girl reads of Jerry Mason, who loses his second fortune at faro, smiles and turns around to make another. "If he can smile, I can," she remarks.

In the West the brother quarrels with his partner, and they separate; then he forms a partnership with the very Jerry Mason referred to, and writes home to his sister for $150 for a prospecting outfit. She gladly sends it, and soon after, learning that the prospectors have struck gold, starts for the West.

In the meantime the brother is murdered by his former partner, and Mason meets the girl at the train, and gives her shelter after inducing the sheriff to keep the camp silent as to the murder.

Eventually the girl discovers the truth, and the club with which the man was killed is found. It is the handle to a miner's pick, and has Mason's name cut in it. The miners, enraged, surround Mason and lead him off to be lynched, but he is saved by a girl employe of a gambling establishment, who witnessed the murder.

The director, Frank McGlynn, has put a great deal of careful work into the building up of his scenes and climaxes, as well as in the selection of his settings and locations, and the whole is a creditable production. Grace Williams in Molly Claiborne, the Girl, and Curtis Cooksey is Mason. Others in the cast are Yale Benner, James Harris, Jessie Stevens, Mabel Dwight, Rolinda Bainbridge, Harry Linson, Grace Morrisey and Louis B. Foley.

"A YELLOW STREAK"

(Columbia-Metro—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

SIMPLY for the interesting story it tells, if for no other reason, this is one of the best pictures so far offered by the Metro organization. It has thrills, refined comedy, genuinely dramatic action, living characters in a living story.

Chief of these is "Barry" Dale, a Wall street broker, who is a gentleman with a yellow streak, so yellow, indeed, that he permits himself to be robbed of his fortune and of his wife by his "best friend," who finishes the job by slapping Dale's face and then throwing him out of his own home.

Dale loses his yellow streak and becomes a man through an ingeniously constructed plot that holds the interest throughout.

Lionel Barrymore was a happy selection for the stellar role, because he is perfectly suited to the part physically, and gives to it characteristic touches of comedy for which the Barrymore family has long been famous. For example, while he is engaged in losing his yellow streak by alternating between the character of a desperado and a clergyman in a Western mining town, he is called upon to christen a negro infant. Standing on a rock in the middle of a stream he goes through a ceremony that is palpably faked, finally drawing up a small amount of water in an old hat, and flirting a few drops on the pickaninny's face.

The cast is uniformly good. Irene Howley, the feminine lead, like Dale, is another atom, buffeted about by evil schemers. The two meet at Dale's first performance as a desperado—their second meeting, for they had seen each other before on Brooklyn Bridge one night when each was contemplating suicide. She has much to do with making Dale a man, so much in fact that he finally engages in a realistic fight for her sake, and ends by shooting her would-be attacker.

Other players, who contribute appreciably to the worth of the production, are: Dorothy Gwynne, J. H. Goldsworthy, Niles Welch, R. A. Breese, William Cowper, William Davidson, Martin J. Faust and John J. Donough.

We have saved one of the most important facts about the picture for the last paragraph of this review. The picture was written and directed by William Nigh. It would be hard to say whether Nigh is more skillful as a director or as an author. He is excellent as both; so excellent, in fact, and so clearly a creator in this case of a picture that will be thoroughly enjoyed, that we think the few minor faults of the production not worth mentioning.

TABLOID REVIEWS FOR THE BUSY EXHIBITOR

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"A Woman Without Soul." (Biograph. Two reels. Tues., Dec. 7.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"The Poor Relation." (Biograph. Three reels. Wed., Dec. 8.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"The Masterful Hireling." (Biograph. Thurs., Dec. 9.)—This is a touching story of the humbling of a purse-proud man, by the man who befriended him. Doctor Harvey cares for Larkin, the millionaire, when the latter is injured in an automobile accident, but the millionaire, accustomed to being petted, takes offence when the doctor neglects him to attend to the poor, and calls the physician a "hireling."

Dr. Harvey compels Larkin to come to his office to pay his bill, then locks him in, and makes him fight. Afterward Larkin offers a check, but Harvey tears it up; the millionaire "gets even" by cancelling a mortgage which he finds the doctor has placed on his home in order to send an afflicted child to Europe. Ivan Christy, Charles H. Mailes and Mary Malatesta are in the cast.

"The Painted Lady." (Biograph. Fri., Dec. 10.)—A Griffith reissue, in which Blanche Sweet does a notable bit of acting. The young girl protests at her sister's use of rouge and powder, while she herself, depending on natural attractions, goes without suitors.

At last she meets and falls in love with a man, whom she is compelled to meet clandestinely. She tells him certain secrets of her father's business, and that night she is aroused and finds a man burglarizing the safe. She shoots him and when his mask is lifted he is found to be her new sweetheart.

The girl goes mad, and constantly wanders out to the clandestine rendezvous in the belief that she is again meeting her lover. Eventually she dies of a broken heart. Others in the cast are Madge Kirby, Charles H. Mailes, Kate Bruce and William J. Butler.

"Mary." (Edison. Wed., Dec. 8.)—An absorbing story of sacrifice, in which one girl surrenders her love for another. Mary, hard pressed for funds, accepts a position as artist's model, and a love springs up between her and the artist.

A little later she discovers a girl in her own boarding house, sobbing, and on investigation, finds the girl is weeping for the lost love of the same artist. The girl explains that she quarrelled with her sweetheart, and refused to see him again unless he wrote an apology, which never came.

Mary recalls having seen a note delivered for the girl, but which evidently was lost by the maid who received it. She tells the girl to go to the studio the next day, and when she arrives she finds Mary struggling with a man, who is attempting to destroy one of the artist's paintings. The picture is saved, and Mary, telling the artist that his former sweetheart saved it, flees and leaves them together.

Margaret Prussing, Carlton King, Dorothy Grahame, Mrs. Wallace Erskine, James Harris, Yale Benner, Grace Goodall and Edith Wright compose the cast. The script is by William Addison Lathrop and the direction by Langdon West.

"Faith and Fortune." (Edison. Three reels. Fri., Dec. 10.)—Reviewed elsewhere in this issue.

"The Lone Game." (Edison. Sat., Dec. 11.)—This is a strong picture sermon on the treatment and cure of tuberculosis, woven into a romance. Dean, a wealthy young man, finds his former classmate and sister in dire poverty, the brother in an advanced stage of consumption.

He goes West, but as he has no funds to obtain proper treatment, the disease makes rapid headway. Son Dean himself is found afflicted with the disease, and his father sends him West immediately, and under expert treatment he recovers. The girl also falls victim and is cured at a sanitarium in Connecticut. Dean comes back sound and whole, bringing the news of her brother's death. Their acquaintance ripens into romance and Dean takes the place of the ill-fated brother.

"The Power of Publicity." (Essanay. Tues., Dec. 7.)—Not shown for review; the story follows: Edna Morris, the daughter of a banker, is left penniless when her father dies from the shock caused by discovering that his cashier has decamped with the bank's funds.

The girl secures a position as assistant to the editor of the women's page of the News, whose brother is owner and editor of the paper. One night Edna, dressed as a boy, overhears the plans of some political crooks. She is discovered, but manages to escape with her "scoop." Tolliver, the editor, admires her courage, and asks her to marry him.

The cast includes John Lorenz, Alton Goodrich and Marie Bussey.

"Dreamy Dud in Love." (Essanay. Wed., Dec. 8.)—Animated cartoon; not shown for review.

"The Merry Models." (Essanay. Thurs., Dec. 9.)—A Western comedy, not shown for review; the story follows: When the manager of the Brezla cafe receives a telegram informing him that the statues he ordered have been destroyed by fire, he employs Bloggey and Mustang Pete to pose as statues in his restaurant.

The patrons are deceived, and compliment the manager on his good taste. All goes well, until the wives of the posers enter the cafe, and recognize their husbands. A riot ensues, in which the place is completely wrecked, and the two statues are chased home by their angry wives.

The cast is composed of Ben Turpin, Margaret Joslin, Harry Todd, and Carrie Turpin.

"The Escape of Broncho Billy." (Essanay. Fri., Dec. 10.)—Not shown for review; the story follows: Broncho Billy is in love with the rancher's daughter. Her father disapprves of the affair, and one day quarrels with Billy.

A few days later the rancher drops dead while at work. Billy's rival discovers the body, and seeing a chance to implicate him, shoots the body. Billy is accused of the murder, and is in jail awaiting sentence, when a child, who had seen the act committed, tells who fired the shot, and Billy is given his liberty.

Supporting G. M. Anderson are Rodney Hildebrand, Lee Willard, and Ruth Saville.

"Blind Justice." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., Dec. 11.)—Not shown for review; the story follows: Elsie Harding becomes interested in the outcasts of the slums, and induces her father to take her to the night court. Here, among other derelicts, she sees Jack Langdon. Attracted by him, she askes her father to give him a position.

Six months later Jack is making good, and his friendship with Elsie has turned into mutual love. They elope, and the father is highly indignant, until Jack makes such a business success that the stern parent relents. Finally Jack admits that when he was found in the slums, he was merely gathering material for one of his famous novels.

There are in the cast, Henry B. Walthall, Elizabeth Burbridge, John Junier, and Ernest Maupain.

"Minnie the Tiger." (Kalem. Tues., Dec. 7.)—Bud has an unusually busy time in this fast comedy, and comes out in triumph. As he starts a-hunting news arrives that Minnie, the man-eating tiger, is at large, and he, in company with the whole community takes fright. Then comes a mighty hunter, who tell's Bud's sweetheart and her father, how good he is, and all go out after the beast.

They find it, and the great hunter takes to a tree. The tiger overtakes Bud, and asks nothing more than that a splinter be taken from its foot. While the hunter is telling the girl how he routed the animal, Bud and Minnie appear, walking together. The hunter takes to flight and Bud takes the girl. Bud Duncan and Ethel Teare head the cast.

"The Black Hole of Glenranald." (Kalem. Two reels. Wed., Dec. 8.)—Several exciting trick devices are used in this third episode of the "Stingaree" series. The country banker, fearing a visit from the outlaw, arranges a trap door in front of the paying window, with a lever by which it can be worked from behind the counter.

An employe describes the device to Stingaree, without knowing who he is talking to, and the next day the outlaw and his partner call, and knowing of the trap, work it so that the banker and his associates are caught and plunged into the basement.

Then they rob the bank, and taking the employe who gave the device away, flee to the hills. The captive attempts to take Stingaree off his guard, but is foiled, and when the constabulary arrive they find him tied to a fence.

"The Ancient Coin." (Kalem. Fri., Dec. 10.)—The seventh of Marguerite's ventures is one of the most interesting of all, although the plot follows one of the old Sherlock Holmes stories pretty closely. A supposedly wealthy youth works himself into the good graces of Marguerite's guardian, and is a suitor for her hand. Marguerite gives her real sweetheart an ancient coin as a good-luck piece.

He misses it a few days later, and recalls having given a few coins to a beggar on the street corner. The coin is eventually found in the possession of the wealthy suitor, and by a little clever detective work, Marguerite (Marguerite Courtot) discovers that the wealthy young man of the evening is the same man as the ragged beggar of the daytime.

"Crossed Wires." (Kalem. Sat., Dec. 11.)—An exciting auto and train race is a feature in this episode of "The Hazards of Helen." Crossed telephone wires enable Helen to hear a plot between escaped convicts to join a party of Chinese who are being smuggled across the Mexican border in a freight car.

Helen notifies the railway detectives, and when the train crosses the border the Chinese are surprised and arrested. Helen and Conrad, the chief detective, in an automobile, overtake the train, and driving alongside, Helen climbs to a freight car, and with her pistol forces the convicts to jump into the automobile, in which they are held until other officers come. Robyn Adair, Clarence Burton, Franklin Hall and Hi Sing assist Helen Gibson in the cast.

"The Run on Percy." (Selig. Two reels. Mon., Dec. 6.)—Will be reviewed at length next week.

"Orders." (Selig. Tues., Dec. 7.)—An analysis of the plot reveals nothing extraordinary, but the sympathy of the audience is aroused, and the acting is good. Tom Daly, a traffic officer, is ordered to allow no one inside the fire lines of a burning building. In strict adherence to his orders, he does not permit the doctor, who is on his way to the officer's sick baby, to pass through. He also holds up the owner of the building.

The owner is furious, and Tom is dismissed on his complaint. When it is discovered that Tom imperilled the life of his own child in following his orders, he is reinstated, and happiness ensues.

Thomas Santschi directed the picture, and plays the lead. In his support are Edith Johnson, Jean Fraser, and Harry Lonsdale. The script was by Arthur P. Hankins.

"The Baby and the Leopard." (Selig. Sat., Dec. 11.)—This is one of the most exciting pictures ever taken at the Jungle-Zoo. The most blasé of fans will get several thrills during the action of the piece.

An African trapper of wild animals makes the pretty young wife of a farmer believe that she has ability in painting. Under his influence, she promises to desert her husband and little daughter. To escape the husband's wrath, the trapper releases a captive leopard just as he is leaving with the woman, hoping that the animal will kill father and daughter. The husband wakes, and missing his wife, makes a search for her. Meantime the leopard has entered the cabin, and is preparing to spring on the little girl.

As the farmer is about to kill the home-breaker, he sees his baby's danger, and shoots the animal just in time to save the infant. Believing that his wife is cured of her artistic aspirations, he forgives her.

In the cast are Edith Johnson, Lafayette McKee, Jean Fraser, and George Larkin. The play was produced by Thomas Santschi from the story of S. A. Van Patten.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"See America First." No. 12. (Gaumont. Split reel. Tues., Nov. 30.)—The beautiful Lake Mohonk region is visited by the Mutual Traveller, and charming glimpses of mountainside and water are shown. A number of unusually beautiful vistas give an excellent idea of this popular section of New York State. On the same reel is "Keeping Up With the Joneses," in which Pa McGinnis gives a lecture on the cartoons of the war, with disastrous effect.

"Lessons in Love." (Rialto. Three reels. Wed., Dec. 1.)—An attractive story has been built around a bashful young miner of the west, who flees at the mention of a woman. His companions make sport of him for this, and do all they can to throw him into female society.

He is compelled to meet the daughter of a struggling professor, and later a society flirt, who is on a hunting trip with her brother. When he strikes gold and suddenly becomes wealthy, he visits the city, the brother compels him to become his house guest.

The westerner is out of his element at a ball, and his blunders lead him in search of a social instructor. He finds the professor whom he met out west, and the daughter gives him the much needed lessons in love-making. After using his new knowledge successfully on the society girl he realizes that the professor's daughter is the girl he wants, and turns her own instructions to good account against her.

Hal Forde is featured in the production, supported ably by Helen Martin, Lucille Taft, James Levering, John Reinhard, Mathilde Baring, Alan Robinson and Leonard Craske.

"Stanley Among the Voodoo Worshippers." (Centaur. Two reels. Thurs., Dec. 2.)—The Bostock animals, and a series of thrilling adventures make this episode of Stanley's travels bristle with action. Jack, Ada, and their party, after escaping the slave traders, fall into the hands of a tribe of Voodoo worshippers, and Ada is immediately selected as a sacrifice to their god.

Stanley's party gives battle in an effort to rescue them, but is routed by superior numbers. A second attempt is made, and this time Stanley's men arrive just as Jack and Batty have been tied to a stake and a fire lighted. A horse and elephant take a leading part in the rescue, in which the Voodoo worshippers are put to flight, but not until after the treacherous White King has fled with Ada.

"A Shotgun Romance." (Cub. Fri., Dec. 3.)—In this comedy Jerry (George Ovey) finds the path of true love anything but smoth. Grace's father determines that she shall marry I. M. Short, and she and Jerry are obliged to elope. They are pursued by father and Short, and the pursuers are attacked by a couple of highwaymen, who force them to exchange clothes.

Father and Short, in the highwaymen's clothes, are pursued by a party of hunters, and break into a picnic where Jerry and Grace are enjoying themselves. Jerry gets hold of one of the guns and rescues them, thereby winning the parental blessing.

"The Stab." (Reliance. Two Reels. Sun., Dec. 5.)—An exciting story of marital infelicity and murder mystery. Ruth Langdon, who craves excitement, leaves her husband for a visit with Pauline, an actress friend in the city. Her baby is left in charge of Alice, a neighbor.

In the city Ruth falls into a gay whirl, and Clarke, a wealthy idler, falls desperately in love with her. Then Langdon appears on the scene, and Ruth warns Clarke to keep away from the house. Clarke, believing Ruth has jilted him, begins drinking heavily. That evening Langdon calls at Pauline's home, and finds a gay party in progress; he calls Ruth into a little side room, where she is found a few minutes later, stabbed to death.

Langdon is accused, but the mystery is cleared when Pauline, at the trial, testifies to having witnessed the scene in her hand mirror. She tells how Langdon went out onto a little balcony, and the intoxicated Clarke entered and stabbed Ruth to death. Langdon goes back to his child—and Alice. Irene Hunt, Mabel Wiles, Margie Wilson, William Hinckley, George Beranger and Charles Gill are in the cast.

"A Tangle in Hearts." (Casino. Sun., Dec. 5.)—Here is a most amusing and hopeless mix-up which keeps the spectator guessing as to how it can ever be adjusted. Harry becomes engaged to Rose, and then falls in love with Bess, his stenographer, arranging to marry Bess at three o'clock that afternoon. Rose then falls in love with Joe, and her mother asks Harry to investigate his character.

Harry mistaking Joe for a man who has been in love with Bess, brings in an unfavorable report, whereupon Rose falls upon Harry's neck and declares she is his, but as Harry is on his way to church to marry Bess, he doesn't believe it. Then Joe shows up, and Harry, seeing he is not the man he had in mind, retracts his report, hastily, and all drive to the church together. John Daly Murphy, Lucille Taft, Mathilde Baring, Virginia Perry, and Joe Lasher are in the cast.

"Minnie the Mean Manicurist." (Falstaff. Mon., Dec. 6.)—This is a novel comedy, based on the efforts of workers for the suffrage cause. A customer of the barber shop, learning that the two barbers are violent antis, offers a suffrage worker $500 if she can prevent their voting against the amendment.

The girl, Minnie, gets a job as manicurist in the shop, and the barbers fall violently in love with her. They refuse to espouse the cause, however, and Minnie plays on their jealousy until they get into a desperate fight; then they are arrested and led before the judge, who is the man who offered the $500 prize.

The judge sentences them to the Island for over election, and Minnie wins her $500. Louise Emerald Bates, Frances Keyes, Claude Cooper and Arthur Cunningham are in the cast.

"The Water Carrier of San Juan." (American. Two reels. Mon., Dec. 6.)—The Winifred Greenwood, Edward Coxen, and George Field trio have in this picture a better vehicle than they usually draw. The tragic portions of the drama are lightened by a fairly satisfactory ending. The acting is of the sterling kind usually furnished by this cast.

Juanita is the sweetheart of Romela, a prosperous ship-owner. But her affection for Romela is forgotten when Pedro, an itinerant musician, woos her. When her fiance returns from a long journey, he finds that Juanita has fled with Pedro. The deserted lover swears to avenge himself, and engages in a pistol duel with the troubador.

Romela is severely injured as well as blinded by the conflict, and incapacitated by his injuries, later loses his fortune. Juanita wanders about with the musician, until she becomes faded, when he deserts her. She goes back to her parents. Romela, who has become a water carrier, meets Pedro and stabs him. He is put in jail for his crime, where his declining years are made pleasant by the tender care of Juanita.

"Pretenses." (Beauty. Tues., Dec. 7.)—This release is a "Beauty" comedy of the usual amusing type. John Sheehan, John Steppling, Carol Holloway and Sylvia Ashton give their usual finished performances.

Steve meets Mary in the park, and mutually attracted, a friendship springs up. Steve says he is an officer in the bank, and Mary asserts that her father is a big engineer. When it finally comes to light that Steve is only a uniformed policeman in the bank, and that Mary's father is the engineer of a steam-roller, all feeling of class distinction leaves them, and the pair is happier than before.

"There's Good in the Worst of Us." (Mustang. Two reels. Fri., Dec. 10.)—This is one of the Anna Little—E. Forrest Taylor, western dramas. The picture is rather more spectacular, and is given better settings than most program two-reelers.

Carol Danforth, an Eastern girl, and Ainsley, her fiance, are traveling in the West. Under curious circumstances, Carol meets Black Pete, who runs a notorious dive. Her fiance objects to the growing intimacy of the outlaw and the girl. One day the bandit divulges his identity to Ainsley, and the man flees in terror. He is thrown from his horse, and is killed. Carol accuses Black Pete of causing her sweetheart's death.

Then Pete relates to her the incident of bygone years that caused his low social status. At college Pete had befriended Ainsley, and the latter had betrayed the friendship by wronging Pete's sister. As he tells the story, Carol finds love for the misunderstood man stealing into her heart.

"Curly." (Clipper. Three reels. Sat., Dec. 11.)—Will be reviewed at length next week.

PATHE EXCHANGE INC.

"Pathe News," No. 93. (Pathe).—Largest railway engine in the world goes into service at Susquehanna, N. Y.; monster chrysanthemums are shown at Philadelphia exhibit; King Alphonso encourages preparedness among his subjects at Madrid; Grandma Moore, twenty miles from the nearest store, spins her own wool, and makes her own clothes, at Walker Valley, Tenn.; monkeys are finger-printed at the New York Zoo, to help in tracing thefts by animals; largest ocean going raft ever constructed is seen at San Diego; bumper crop of 150 tons of walnuts is gathered at El Monte, Calif.; congestion caused by shortage in ships is shown at New York terminals.

as this episode is entitled, shows numerous delightful touches of comedy, which are well "put over" by Burr McIntosh, Max Figman and Lolita Robertson.

The Wallingford party descends on the sordid little municipal-ownership town of Spanglerville, and Blackie, by assuming mysterious disguises arouses the greedy officials to such an extent that when Blackie discovers that Wallingford is there to buy a pottery inlay process from one of their citizens for $60,000, they immediately offer him $65,000

The process is worthless, and Wallingford turns over to Violet and Fanny the $60,000 which the municipality had gouged out of their father.

"The House of Fear." (Pathé Gold Rooster. Five reels.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"Neal of the Navy," Thirteenth Episode. (Panama. Two reels.)—Action is plentiful in this chapter, which is entitled "The White Gods." Hernandez, with Inez and the brute-servant, are landed by shipwreck on the same island with Annette, Neal and their party, and the brute and Hernandez are immediately accepted as gods.

They lead the natives in an attack on the shipwrecked sailors, and after killing most of them, Annette and her friends are bound and carried away. Neal finds the wireless apparatus of the wreck still working, and sends out signals which are caught by a United States cruiser, which hurries to the scene. A party is landed, and the captives rescued.

"A Rose Among the Briers." (Balboa. Three reels.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"Universal Animated Weekly," No. 195. (Universal. Wed., Dec. 1.)—Tornado wrecks town at Great Bend, Kan.; Boy Scouts in drill and field exercises, at Jamaica, L. I.; novel test of fire department efficiency at Atlanta; all New Orleans celebrates Orange Day fete; mine disaster at Ravendale, Wash., kills 35; women life-savers launch surf boat in exhibition at Ocean park, Cal.; University of Illinois students battle fiercely in annual "sack fight"; naval reserve officers practice flying at San Diego; Brand Whitlock, U. S. Minister to Belgium, reaches New York on trip home; French war balloon carries observer aloft over battle line; loading and firing a torpedo at Newport training station; actual scenes in battles between U. S. bluejackets and Haitians; cartoons by Hy Mayer.

"Gilded Youth." (Laemmle. Three reels. Thurs., Dec. 2.)—There is much that is fresh and original in this story of the Paris Latin Quarter, written by Rupert Julian, with the author in one of the leading roles. Three artists undertake to take care of the baby of Marie, a model, who has died.

When the young man reaches his majority, he falls into the clutches of an adventuress, and the girl his guardians have picked out for him is heartbroken. The eldest of the guardians breaks up the affair, by flirting with the adventuress, and then in the presence of the youth, exposing her and buying her off. Bertram Grossby, O. E. Wilson, Carmen Phillips, Hal Cooley, Rene Rogers and Elsie Jane Wilson are also in the cast.

"The New Adventures of Terrence O'Rourke." (Universal Special Feature. Two reels. No. 3. Week of Dec. 6.)—"The Road to Paradise," as this adventure is called, is indeed very romantic and thrilling, even more so than those which went before. O'Rourke after refuting a group of villains who attempt to compromise him before the girl he loves, departs to win fresh honors and money that he may return to ask her hand in marriage. Supporting Kerrigan are Lois Wilson, Maude George and Harry Carter.

"The White Scar." (Broadway Universal Feature. Five reels. Mon., Dec. 6.)—Reviewed at length in issue of Dec. 4.

"Their Quiet Honeymon." (Nestor. Mon., Dec. 6.)—A very good comedy written and produced by Al Christie, containing many tickling situations and a most humorous characterization of the awkward lover rendered by Lee Moran. Eddie Lyons, Betty Compson, and Jane Waller complete the cast, and are capable of carrying the plot in every respect.

"Idols of Clay." (Gold Seal. Three reels. Tues., Dec. 7.)—This picture deals with a pessimist and shows how he was taught to take a brighter attitude toward life by a young girl. It is one of Bob Leonard's pictures which he also wrote, playing the lead opposite Ella Hall who is in her element as a young girl of twelve. Lule Warrenton and Marc Robbins are in character parts. The picture is most pleasing, containing sound psychology instead of thrilling action. What's more, the leads are very popular.

"Slim, Fat or Medium." (Imp. Tues., Dec. 7.)—A comedy with Victor Potel, written and produced by Roy Clements, that is inferior to most of his products as it gives the players few chances. The slavey is very good.

"Sin on a Sabbath." (L-Ko. Two reels. Wed., Dec. 8.)—The lack of liquid refreshment on Sundays is utilized as a basis for this farce. The various male characters are obliged to patronize the convenient back room of a drug store.

The last scene is one of the most novel ever done in slapstick. The back room is raided by the purity league, but by the mere pushing of a lever the place is transformed into a prayer meeting.

It is an ingenious bit of work and very well done. A large cast of notables such as Billie Ritchie, Gene Rogers, Reggie Morris, Alice Howell, and Louise Orth are in the leading parts of this number which on the whole is quite above the average.

"The Awakening of Patsey." (Powers. Wed., Dec. 8.)—"Little Stories of Real Life" No. 2, by Jacques Jaccard. It is an old story of theatrical life, but produced in a manner that brings out all its possibilities to a gratifying extent. Peggy Coudray, A. D. Blake and Raymond Russell are cast in the leading parts.

"The Sacrifice of Jonathan Gray." (Big U. Three reels. Thurs., Dec. 9.)—This was made from a scenario by Lucille Chatterton and as a three-reel feature it ranks rather low. The plot is unconvincingly and weakly constructed, besides being dragged out to unnecessary lengths. The author has credited her characters with little intelligence and their actions are consequently unreal. Murdock MacQuarrie, Yona Landowska, Arthur Moon and Edna Payne are in the leading parts.

"The Frolic of the Marionettes." (Powers. Thurs., Dec. 9.)—One of the pictured vaudeville numbers of average quality, suitable for exhibition in small towns that never see vaudeville. There is just a little too much of the same thing, but otherwise it is pleasing. A Ditmars educational closes the reel.

"The Little Lady Across the Way." (Imp. Two reels. Fri., Dec. 10.)—Matt Moore and Jane Gail are here presented in a comedy-romance of delightful quality. The leads know their business down to a nice degree of perfection while the situations are most humorous.

"The Power of Fascination." (Rex. Fri., Dec. 10.)—A strong drama produced by Cleo Madison in a decidedly artistic style. It contains exceptional photography, including some pretty light and shadow effects, and scenes of a most pleasant and appropriate sort.

The story has to do with Mexican villainy and its defeat by a civil engineer. Cleo Madison, Tom Chatterton and Jack Holt are in the chief parts.

"Keeping It Dark." (Nestor. Fri., Dec. 10.)—A version of a time worn story, but the comic possibilities in it are well realized by a pleasing and capable cast composed of Stella Adams, Harry Ratenberry, Billie Rhodes and Ray Gallagher.

"The Lion's Ward." (Bison. Three reels. Sat., Dec. 11.)—Another of Universal's animal melodramas, compiled by James Dayton and produced by Norval MacGregor. Although those who like fleeting glimpses of jungle beasts will take pleasure in this, it is not on the whole as good as the Universal can do.

The animals are more or less unconvincing as to ferocity, and seem to be a good deal more afraid of the players than the players are of them. Betty Schade and Paul Bourgeois are the leads.

"Juror Number Seven." (Rex. Two reels. Sun., Dec. 12.)—A sensational melodramatic number, a little crude in places, but of an appealing, heart-interest nature that always has the desired effect on the not over particular. Ben Wilson, Dorothy Phillips, Curtis Benton and Joe Girard are the principals.

"Lizzie's Shattered Dreams." (L-Ko. Sun., Dec. 12.)—A funny burlesque on the old crude melodrama where the girl is lured away frm the farm by a pair of city vultures. It is a burlesque of the greatly exaggerated type and is full of laughs from beginning to end. Alice Howell is the lead, and her support is of an entirely capable sort.

Triangle Progress

Comparisons, say the prophets, are odious—and they are so far as we are concerned, for, very frankly, we do not believe comparisons are possible where Triangle Quality is concerned.

While consistency may be jewel-like, Triangle Plays are more than consistent, for they are constantly improving in quality. For verification of this statement we are privileged to refer you to newspapers and exhibitors all over the country. We've been busy for some weeks now printing these comments.

By this time everybody with a mind alert to what is going on knows that Triangle Plays are drawing $2 through box office windows. Many people know that their local theatres are offering them at a less price, but still a little above the average—and they are glad to pay the difference because of high quality. If there still exists curiosity as to how this can be, a glance across on the other page will give you the other fellow's viewpoint. If he wasn't satisfied it's logical to suppose that he'd be squealing instead of cheering.

Additional Testimonials Arrive With Every Mail

The following is an interesting letter from the Columbia Theatre of Dayton, Ohio, the day Triangle Pictures opened there:

> "The first showing at the Columbia Theatre today of the Triangle Plays was a big success and was pronounced by all the leading newspaper critics the most wonderful photo plays ever shown here. I am very much elated over today's business, especially so in view of a cold, rainy day.

Expressions of opinion of this nature are the best evidence of the quality and popularity of Triangle Plays both from the standpoint of the Exhibitor and the patron. Enthusiasm on the part of both can only be obtained by the highest quality of production.

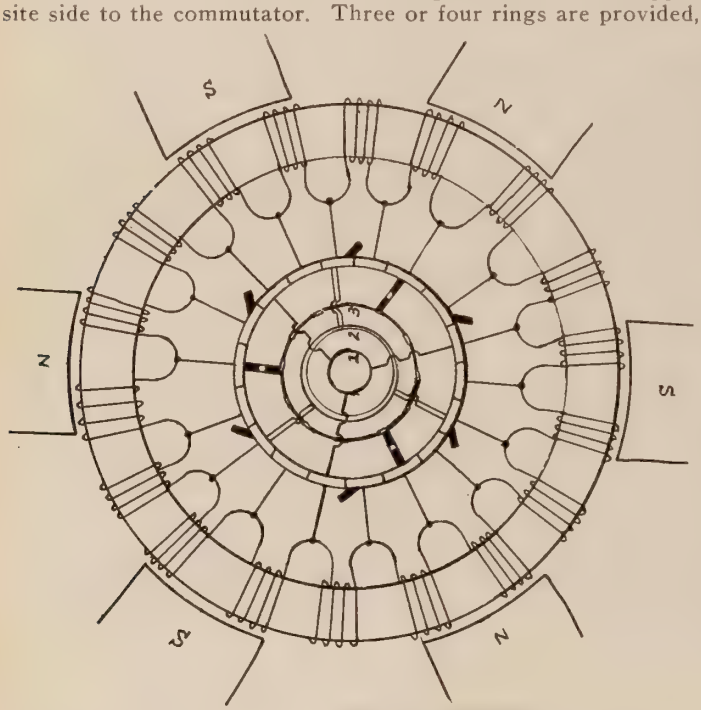
electric generator mounted upon the same shaft with the large machine, but in larger power plants there are separate engine driven direct-connected D. C. generators or exciters, for the purpose of magnetizing the rotating pole pieces of the large alternators with D. C. through brushes which slide upon the collector rings.

Rotary Converter An Interesting Piece of Apparatus



Becoming Familiar to Operators As Device for Transforming Alternating Current to Direct Current for Picture Machine Arc Lamps, in the Cause of Better Projection—Its Peculiarities and Points of Difference from Direct Current Dynamos Fully Explained

BY HERBERT W. ANDEM.

SINCE the demands are for better projection the electrical engineers have come forward with devices transferring the alternating current to direct current for picture machine arc-lamps. These devices are not new in the electrical field. They have been modified to meet the conditions for projection arc-lamps.

The rotary converter is becoming a familiar piece of apparatus to the operator for this purpose. It is an interesting machine in several ways, and, has a number of peculiarities not possessed by a direct-current dynamo.

The rotary converter resembles a direct-current dynamo of the multipolar type and is provided with the usual commutator and brushes. It also has collector rings located on the opposite side to the commutator. Three or four rings are provided, depending upon whether the machine is to be operated on a three-phase system or on a two-phase system. These rings are connected to equidistant points of the windings on the armature, the exact points depending upon the style of armature winding and the number of poles.

ILLUSTRATING THE ROTARY CONVERTER

Principle of the Rotary Converter

The illustration gives the principle involved. It is the wiring diagram for a six-pole three-phase converter. It is the simple ring armature connected to the commutator in the usual way. It also has three taps connected to each of the three rings. That is, one tap for each pair of poles. For a two-pole, single-phase machine there would be only two taps made and connected to the two collecting rings. A three-phase machine would have three equidistant taps brought out to three rings. For a two-phase converter there would be four points and the ends of these four wires connected to four collecting rings.

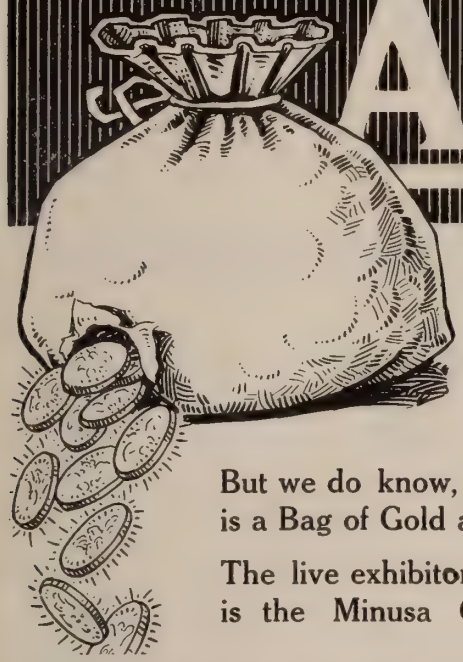
Supposing this armature to be driven by some outside means, an alternating-current can be had from the collecting rings on the one side and, at the same time, a direct-current from the commutator side. A rotary converter is in fact a double current generator; a machine that has come into considerable use. It is only this when it is driven by some outside source of power.

Instead of driving the armature by means of a pulley, it can be driven just as effectively by supplying it with alternating-current through the collecting rings. This current will drive the machine as an alternating-current motor. The conductors on the armature are sweeping through the magnetic field just as much as when it is driven by a belt, so that a direct current can be taken from the commutator side. The machine is therefore running as a rotary converter and converts the alternating-curent into direct-current. This transformation is had by the connections to the commuator bars and is not accomplished by any other means. All direct-current dynamos generate within their armature windings currents that are alternating in their nature and are then made direct current through the commutator connections to the windings.

May Be Run as Direct-Current Motor

In a similar way the rotary converter may be run by feeding direct-current, running it as a direct-current motor. When run in this manner, an alternating-current may be had from the collecting rings. It is then termed an inverted rotary to distinguish it from a rotary used in the other and more usual manner. There is no difference in the two machines, the only difference lies in the manner of using them.

A rotary converter supplied with alternating-current runs as a synchronous motor. That is, it runs at such a speed that the frequency of its alternations is the same as that of the alternator supplying it with current. If the number of poles on the rotary is the same as on the alternator, then both machines will run at the same speed. If the speed of the alternator increases, the speed of the rotaries operated from it will also increase.



The field magnets of a rotary may be either shunt-wound or compound-wound. The current for these windings is supplied from the direct current side of the machine. Changing the field strength will not change the speed of the rotary, but, will effect the current that the rotary takes from the line. For each load delivered by a rotary there is a certain field excitation for which the machine takes a minimum current from the line. The excitation should be kept at this point as near as possible.

If the excitation is increased beyond the point corresponding to the minimum current, the current supplied to the rotary becomes displaced in phase, as regards the voltage, and will reach its maximum value before the full voltage is had at the machine.

When the current and the voltage become displaced in this way, there are intervals during each cycle when they are opposed to each other and the result is, that for a given amount of power delivered a greater current is required than if they were always in phase.

When both the current and voltage alternate together they are said to be in phase and the product of the current and voltage will give the true power supplied to the rotary. On the other hand, when they are not in phase, there are times when the current is in, say, the positive direction, while at the same instant the voltage is in the negative direction. The product of the two at this instant is, therefore negative, showing that instead of power being delivered it is being returned, with the result that the actual power (watts) delivered to the rotary is less than the product of the current and the voltage would indicate. The same is true when the field excitation is under-excited except that, in this case, the current does not reach its maximum value until after the voltage has attained its highest value, or in this case the current lags behind and does not lead as when the field is over-excited.

A Bag of Gold

May be awaiting the progressive pioneer who reaches the end of a RAINBOW. We say it may be. It's largely a matter of tradition.

But we do know, as S. L. Rothapfel, the great "Photoplay Presenter" says, that there is a Bag of Gold awaiting the live up-to-date exhibitor.

The live exhibitor selects only the best projection surface—the best projection surface is the Minusa Gold Fibre, the screen that's Built by Brains to fit your theatre.

Operating Electricity — Questions Answered — Repairing Equipment

Edited by J. H. Hallberg

Who Will Answer All Questions You Send in, No Matter How Simple or How Difficult

HOW TO PRODUCE A FLICKERLESS PICTURE WHEN THROW IS SHORT

W. P. H., Nunda, N. Y.—Would like to take advantage of your information department, and thank you in advance, to answer the following questions; We are using a 1914 Simplex, with two-wing shutter. Our throw is 29 ft. 6 ins., and our picture 11 ft. 5 ins. by 8 ft. 9 ins., 110 volt, 133 cycle current. We use Edison Transformer, which we run open to the limit at most times; ⅝ x 6 Electra soft-cored carbons. Our pictures are fair, but there is lots of room for improvement. Our operator does not seem to be able to keep a steady light, and it seems to be impossible to get a lager crater to form on either carbon.

(1) Position of carbons; (2) how close to condensers; (3) size of condensers front and rear; (4) shutter setting—how far from end of lens tube and how set; (5) how far should lamp-house be from aperture plate. Except in the center our pictures do not seem to be as distinct as they should be, and objects moving across the picture seem to blur more than seems necessary.

Ans.—Your proposition is unusual in view of the very short distance between your machine and the screen. It is a fact that the shorter the throw the more difficult it is to produce a flickerless picture, and to do away with the blur you speak of, due to objects moving sideways on the screen. This statement must of course be taken with qualifications, in that, when you go over 125 ft. or so, then you meet other problems, but as compared with the average throw of 80 ft. you have a harder proposition to contend with.

The Edison transformer, if run wide open or at the highest point, admits, I believe, around 60 amperes. Your ⅝-in. carbons are too small for this service, and I would recommend first of all that you use ¾-in. carbons, both cored of the best make you can secure for your purpose which tests should determine. It is not an easy matter to maintain a steady brilliant light, with A. C. at the arc. In fact, it is a difficult problem. However, I will give you the following advice.

First—Experience proves that with A. C. the lower carbon should sit vertically, and the upper one ought to be set at an angle of about 25 to 30 degrees from the vertical line.

Second—The distance from the arc to the condenser is governed entirely by the focus of the condenser combination, which you use, and there is an adjustment provided on the lamp for moving it back and forth so that the aperture on your machine will be fully covered with light and no more, because any light on the outside in the aperture is wasted.

Third—I would recommend two 6½-in. condensers for your purpose, and with this combination the distance between your arc and the condenser will be around 3 ins.

Fourth—The shutter for interrupting the light should always be set as close to the moving picture lens tube or cells as possible, because the light rays spread as they leave the front lens, and the further out you cut the light the wider shutter blade is required; hence, always keep the shutter as close to the front lens as you can, still giving sufficient clearance.

The setting of the shutter should be such that when you rotate the machine in the direction it operates by means of turning the fly-wheel, the shutter blade should just cover the light when the intermittent sprocket begins to pull the film down, and the shutter blade should continue to cover the front of the lens until the intermittent movement has stopped the downward motion of the film.

With the Simplex projector there is an adjustment for the shutter which can be set by means of a knob on the outside of the mechanism. With the Simplex machine I would recommend that you proceed in the following manner: Set framing lever in the center of its movement; then turn the shutter adjusting knob one way until it comes to a stop, holding the mechanism still all the while. Then turn the shutter knob the opposite way, and count how many turns it will go; after you have done this, turn the knob back again half the number of turns, so that the adjustment of your shutter will be just half way, that is, it would allow you to advance the shutter or retard it. If you have this adjustment with the framing lever in the center of position, then set the front shutter as first directed, and clamp it tight. You understand this gives you perfect control of your shutter on the Simplex machine when it is in motion, as you have leeway both ways.

Fifth—The distance from the slide carrier on the Simplex lamp house to the aperture plate will vary under several conditions, but for your service I would make the distance about 12 inches. There should be no reason why your picture should not be distinct all over. It may be that your lens is out of order, and that the installation of a new lens would be of advantage to you.

HOME-MADE GENERATOR CONNECTED TO MOTOR GENERALLY UNSATISFACTORY

G. B. B., Buffalo Center, Iowa.—I would like to have a little information through Motion Picture News. I have a 4 K. W. generator, 110 D. C. volts, and am operating same with an 8 H. P. gasoline engine. Now, would it be possible to run this generator at 60 volts and generate 30 amperes? The city has put in a new A. C. plant, and if I can belt a motor to my 110 outfit, and run it at 60 volts I might hook on. How many H. P. would it require to run generator? Belt wheel on generator is 5 ins. diameter, and runs at a speed of about 1,300 or 1,350 R. P. M. What sort of a rheostat would I have to have for 60 volts? What is the efficiency of Hallberg 20*th Century* 20 to 40 ampere motor generator?

Ans.—I note you have a 110 volt D. C. generator, with a capacity of approximately 40 amperes when operating at a speed of 1,300 R. P. M., and that you may consider purchasing an A. C. motor to operate on the new city plant for driving the generator, providing you can reduce the voltage to 60.

As a general proposition, I would say that your scheme is not satisfactory, nor an efficient one, although it would be possible to connect your generator for 60-volt operation if it is a four-pole machine, and at the same time to install a new field controller and a new resistance specially designed for 30 amperes and 60-volt operation.

The expense to accomplish this result is not justified on account of the low efficiency which you would obtain with such a motor driven generator. The efficiency of your belted outfit would, in my opinion, not be more than 40 per cent. to 50 per cent. It would require at least a 5 H. P. motor to do your work, and a 7½ H. P. motor would be better.

If I were you I would rather keep my engine-driven outfit as it is for an emergency, and then install one of the modern motor generators for transforming the alternating city current into D. C. for your moving picture machine arc.

With an outfit like the Hallberg 20th Century motor generator for changing the A. C.-D. C., an efficiency of 68 per cent. to 70 per cent. is obtained, and no rheostat is required in series with the arc. A 20 to 40 ampere outfit has a 3 H. P. motor, and the larger outfit, which is generally recommended and used, is adjustable from 30 to 70 amperes, at the will of the operator, by means of a small controller, uses only a 5 H. P. motor. From this you can readily see that your makeshift machine, which would require at least 5 H. P. to produce only 30 amperes, would not be a paying proposition.

The modern motor generators as referred to are of the ball-bearing type, and have only two bearings, operating with minimum loss and maximum efficiency.

My experience has been that any form of home-made generator connected to a motor combination is not satisfactory, and costs a lot of money to operate. Select a good, reliable make motor generator, and I think you will be entirely satisfied, but in any case specify the following:

First—Can the Electric Light Co. supply either 110 or 220 volts, if wanted? Second—State cycles of current. Third—State if two phase or three phase, as well as single phase current can be secured. Fourth—Give distance from lens to screen, size of picture projected, and make and style of machine. If this information is at hand, the manufacturers can recommend the outfit best suited to your conditions.

BRUSH MARKS ON THE PICTURE SCREEN

J. T. H., Colorado Springs, Colo.—I am taking the liberty of writing to you for a little advice concerning moving picture screens. We operate our machine 70 feet from the screen. We have what is called a "silver finish" screen, and we notice that it shows the brush marks on the clear places in the photographs. In looking around locally, we find so many different kinds of screens, and just as many different opinions as to their qualities for reflection purposes, and concluded that, owing to your large experience, you would be able to say what you thought was the best color for a screen. I hear some use gold color, some use cream, some a plain white, and others the silver finish, similar to the one we have.

ANS.—Your complaint about brush marks showing on your silver finished screen, when you have a scene projected showing in part a sky for instance, where the light passes right through the film, is evidently due to a defect in your particular screen, because the better made metallic coated screen shows absolutely no streaks or marks.

Of course, you understand that a perfectly coated screen having a metallic finish can be injured or streaked by improper washing, or if somebody not experienced has tried to refinish or recoat it, but under normal conditions the brush marks do not show.

As a matter of fact, many of the modern screens are not painted with a brush at all—the compound is put on in a different manner by different manufacturers.

The choice in the finish of a screen is entirely in the hands of the purchaser. Some prefer a brilliant, bright silver finish, others like a brassy finish; then again, we have others who prefer the dark, what is called "gold finish."

If your screen is fairly new, and was sold to you by a responsible manufacturer, I am sure that if you communicate with the maker he will be glad to make good, and that is what I recommend you to do first of all. If, then, you should not receive satisfaction, drop me a line again and I will be glad to give you further suggestions.

PROPOSED ORDINANCE WOULD REQUIRE N. Y. CITY OPERATORS TO PAY LICENSE FEES

A PROPOSED ordinance to provide for fees for examination of and licensing of motion picture operators in Greater New York will be submitted to the board of aldermen within a few weeks.

The ordinance was submitted by Commissioner Williams April 6, 1914, but failed of passage. This work costs the city from $6,000 to $7,000 a year, some 1,500 to 1,800 persons receiving licenses yearly, and about 1,700 applicants being rejected.

The ordinance would require the applicant to pay an examination fee of $2.50, a license fee of $2.50 in addition, if the license is issued, and an annual renewal fee of $1 for each annual renewal of the license. The examination fee would be retained by the city whether the applicant passed or not.

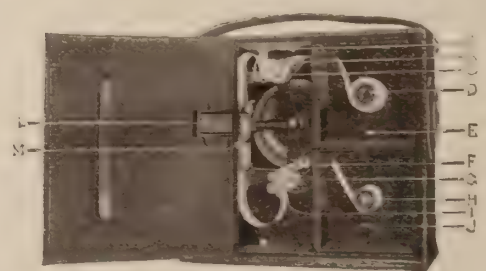
VALIDITY OF LE ROY PATENT SUSTAINED BY U. S. COURT DECISION

ON November 18, 1915, a decree was entered in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York by the Hon. Learned Hand, in the suit of Jean A. Le Roy, of 133 Third avenue, New York City, against Lewis Hetz, of 302 East Twenty-third street, New York City, sustaining the validity of Le Roy patent No. 864,314, of 1907, for Independent Framing Devices for Kinetoscopes, and ordering an injunction to issue restraining the defendant, Hetz, from further infringement of this patent by the manufacture, sale or use of this device. The case was referred to a Master, to take an account of the damages to be assessed in the case.

A few days previous a preliminary injunction was ordered to issue in another suit against Hetz, based on Le Roy patent No. 1,075,215, of 1913, for Automatically Controlled Fire Shutter for Kinetoscopes. This suit is also pending in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, the complainants being Jean A. Le Roy and Chester R. Baird, and the defendant being the same Lewis Hetz. The injunction order in this case was also made by Judge Hand.

It appears that the situation in this second suit is complicated by the existence of certain suits by Le Roy and Baird against moving picture houses in Buffalo, N. Y., using a well-known make of projector, and the manufacturer involved in the Buffalo cases being desirous of making those the test cases. It was arranged that the suit against Hetz on this patent should be postponed, but that an injunction should be issued against him in the meantime.

TROY, N. Y., OPERATORS DEMAND ASSISTANTS FOR EACH PICTURE HOUSE



MOTION PICTURE theatre owners in Troy, N. Y., have been asked by a committee of the operators to grant them an assistant for each picture house in that city and the managers have taken the matter under consideration and will announce their decision later.

It has been hinted that unless the managers or owners of the theatres grant the demand for an assistant there will be a strike of the operators. The committee which waited on the managers said there was no desire on their part to have a strike but they would insist that the demand be complied with and with as little delay as possible. They set forth that their hours are long and that an assistant was absolutely necessary.

KINOGRAPH IS A PRACTICAL MOTION PICTURE CAMERA OF INTEREST TO EXHIBITORS FOR TAKING LOCAL EVENTS

THE Kinograph, sold by the International Photo Sales Corporation, 11 East 40th street, New York City, is a most practical motion picture camera, of simplified design, durably constructed, beautifully finished, capable of the most critical work, and yet sold at a very moderate price. Standard size motion picture film is used, so that pictures made with it can be projected in any motion picture theatre with any standard projector. The movement of the Kinograph is standard, making sixteen exposures on one foot of film per second, the capacity of the magazines being 200 feet of film.

The interior mechanism of the Kinograph is a unit in itself, supported on a metal plate, as shown. This type of construction imparts great rigidity and durability to the Kinograph adding to the steadiness of pictures.

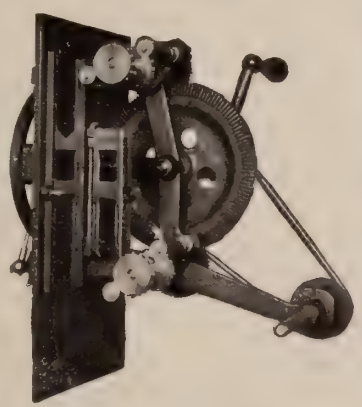
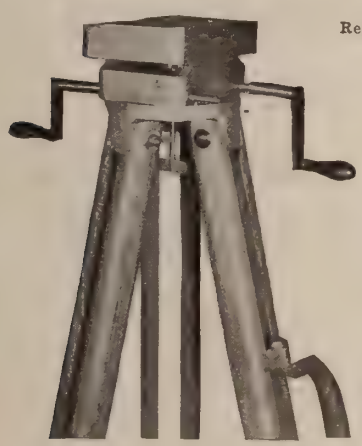
A spring-actuated pressure plate, which is adjustable, is mounted on the film gate. This plate has a rocking movement, which give an even pressure on the full width of the film during exposure. The film is moved by a pin instead of the claw movement used in many other forms of motion picture cameras.

Front view of interior mechanism, showing revolving shutter, the whole mounted on a solid carrying plate.



The revolving shutter acts as a balance wheel, being heavily reinforced, as illustrated. The actual speed of the shutter gives 1/32nd of a second exposure, this being the best average speed for general work. It must be remembered that, due to the short focus lens used in motion picture work, 1/32nd of a second is about the equivalent of 1/100th of a second on the average hand camera.

The Kinograph is easily loaded, an important feature when it is necessary to insert a new film in the open.



The box of the Kinograph is made of thoroughly seasoned hardwood, cross grained, and is covered with durable fine grain black morocco leather.

It is provided with a focusing finder by means of which focusing can be accurately done direct on the film.

For an exhibitor to have a motion picture camera always in readiness is now becoming almost a necessity. There is not a town in the country where things are not happening all the time, which would be of the greatest interest to picture theatre patrons. The exhibitor or manager, who has his own camera, and is on the scene of action, will soon make for himself a reputation among theatre-goers, which will establish him as the most progressive theatre man in the town.

Local pictures of this kind, which are being shown in many places, have proved to be the best possible money makers. All people are vain to the extent of liking to see themselves in a mirror in a still picture, or to a far more acute degree, in motion pictures. The novelty has by no means worn off and the experience of scores of exhibitors has demonstrated this to be a source of creating and sustaining interest.

SELF-LOCKING FILM BOX A NEW CONVENIENCE FOR THE BOOTH

THE Theatre & Office Supply Company, of Aberdeen, Washington, have just manufactured the "Self-locking film box," which is composed of ten compartments, each large enough to hold one reel of film. Each one of these film reel compartments are absolutely separate, and each have their own door. This door, when released, falls in a groove, causing it to extend below the box. When the reel is inserted and the door raised, it is held in place and securely locked by an electrical device, which operates a set of magnets engaging bolts carried by the armature of each magnet. The current for this is supplied by dry cell batteries placed in a compartment fastened at the end of the film box.

This box is particularly well suited for storing films after they reach the theatre booth, for each reel has its own compartment, which makes it absolutely safe. In case of trouble there are no reels lying around the booth which are about to be used. Unless each reel is actually in the machine it is securely locked up in a fireproof box away from everything which might otherwise cause trouble.

EASTERN MAINE'S NEWEST PICTURE THEATRE IS WELL EQUIPPED

THE Bijou theatre, in Old Town, Maine, the newest theatre in eastern Maine devoted to motion pictures, opened Thanksgiving Day, with O. B. Fernandez as proprietor and Paul Carrow as house manager and ticket seller. Harold Dorr is musician and Clarence O'Brien chief operator.

The new theatre occupies the first floor of the new Masonic block in Old Town, and the seating capacity is 625.

The auditorium is 92 feet long and 36 feet wide, and the ceiling is 30 feet above the floor. There are 475 seats on the floor and in the balcony there are 150 more.

Walls and ceiling of the auditorium are covered with steel and the indirect lighting system is used. High up on the walls are two big 36-inch ventilators with exhaust fans behind them drawing out the impure air all the time the theatre is occupied. The heating radiators are along the sides of the walls, in the lobby and vestibule.

The entire front of the building except for the stairway to the upper floors is given over to the two big entrances.

The operating booth is particularly well equipped and has two machines with a Westinghouse motor generator set.

Mr. Fernandez is the proprietor of the New Central theatre in Old Town, which is to be continued with the new house.

'FRISCO THEATRE OWNERS OPPOSE CHANGE IN BUILDING LAWS

THE Building Committee of the Board of Supervisors of San Francisco has gone on record against the proposed enlargement of moving picture theatres in buildings of frame construction. For some time it has been known that owners of frame buildings and a coterie of exhibitors were planning to make an attempt to secure changes in the present ordinances, and the matter came up for consideration at the meeting of the committee on November 16.

The present regulations permit the operation of moving picture houses in frame structures only when there are accommodations for less than four hundred persons. Where the seating capacity is larger the building must be fireproof, or Class A, as it is known there. The building inspector and fire marshal opposed the change, and many exhibitors, even those conducting shows in frame structures, expressed themselves as being satisfied with the present regulations. On this showing, the committee declined to have anything further to do with the matter.

HOW TO GO ABOUT BUILDING A MODERN THEATRE: FIRST, SELECT A GOOD ARCHITECT

MANY letters have been received by the editor of this department requesting confidential replies. While it is contrary to the custom of all papers to answer any inquiries other than through its columns, the writer and this paper have been so desirous of fulfilling the wishes of its patrons that heretofore the requests have been complied with. We invite the continuance of such inquiries, but in general they will be answered through our columns, keeping confidential any items of identification.

We have received a letter as follows:

"I have at the present time a house seating ——— on ground floor, finely ventilated, latest equipment and, in fact, an up-to-date house in every respect, but too small to accommodate my present business. Within a very short time we are expecting to build another house, seating about 1,500 people, and what I am after is 'dope' on a new theatre. Is there a book published on theatre building? . . . We have a lot —— by —— feet. What size house would be practical? With or without balcony? Screen in front or back of house? Has this last one question proven a success? Operating room with full throw or suspended, say, 45 or 50 feet from screen?"

Our correspondent is evidently a very successful exhibitor. He has a fair-sized house, a rather large size for the town he is in, but his business must be good, and he no doubt appreciates the advantage of a larger house, not only for the future, but likely for the present. In the past he might have traveled alone, but in his new undertaking he must at once have a true and trusted scout. He must without delay select a competent architect as that guide.

In several recent articles we dwelt on the requisites of such an advisor, and how he might be selected. We will not repeat at this time.

If the owner desires to favor a local architect for any of many possible reasons, he must do so only if the said party has every required ability. If the owner is not self assured that the local architect is so equipped, and if he still desires to have him, at least to share in the work, then he, the owner, should see that the architect associate himself with a competent theatre architect in one of many ways that may be possible.

There is no book published that can be of any value to the prospective theatre builder. There are no set standards, as in school architecture. Each problem always is and must be a development in itself, resulting from definite requirements and inspirations received by and created within the mind of the architect. The size of the plot, the city and state ordinances, the amount of money to be invested, the class of clientage to be catered to, and the class of show to be given are only a few of the many items in assisting the determination of the final solution.

The correspondent possesses a plot of ground of such size and shape that will lend itself to a very successful solution.

The size of house that would be practicable would be determined by the cost and the desired seating. Likewise, whether the balcony is to be installed or omitted would be determined by the amount of seats to be required. If the seating can be provided on the floor, the original cost of the building, as well as future administrative expenses, will be kept to a minimum.

Direct projection of pictures from the rear of the patrons to a screen placed in front of them has always resulted most successfully. In a recent article we noted the advantages of a transparent screen, where the screen would be placed in a way that it would divide the house into two parts, thus providing for two different classes of patrons.

The booth should be placed so far as possible, in direct throw, that is, on the center axis of the house, and raised above horizontal projection as little as possible. This will give the best picture.

The distance of the throw need not worry anyone, except that the farther away the booth is from the screen the greater will be the required amperage. The writer has seen perfect projection and perfect pictures at a throw of over one hundred and fifty feet.

BUREAU OF STANDARDS ESTABLISHED BY BOARD OF TRADE

AT the November meeting of the Board of Directors of the Motion Picture Board of Trade, a resolution was passed creating a Bureau of Standards. This bureau will consist of experts on each of the several matters that come within its scope. The first matter to be taken up will be standardizing the machinery used in the production, printing and projection of motion pictures.

At present each manufacturer of apparatus has his own standard and there are nearly as many standards as there are factories. After the bureau has made its investigation and reports its findings to the Board of Trade, a pamphlet will be issued giving the standards which have been set. The principal manufacturers of the classes involved are now members of the organization, and others who are not at the moment enjoying that privilege have made application on hearing of the standardization plan.

At first glance this may seem like a trivial matter to the user of films, but when the exhibitor finds that he is getting better projection because the film fits his projection machine, and the producer finds that raw stock from one maker will work as well as that of another without installing expensive and special machinery, the benefit and saving is manifest.

An added advantage is that with the perforating machines all working to make the same size and shape of sprocket holes, this can be done more cheaply by the raw stock manufacturer than by each individual manufacturer.

DECORATORS SUPPLY CLOSES CONTRACTS FOR TENNESSEE AND SOUTH DAKOTA THEATRES

A. F. POWERS, of the Decorators' Supply Company, recently closed a contract with W. H. Wassmann for the ornamental plaster decorations of the new Wassmann theatre at Nashville, Tenn.

This theatre will be completed shortly after January 1, and will be one of the finest in the South. It will be devoted exclusively to feature pictures, and in every respect will be of the highest type in decoration, seating and appointments. Marr and Holman of Nashville are the architects.

The Decorators' Supply Company also designed the remodeling and are furnishing the ornamental plaster decorations for the Jewel theatre at Sioux Falls, S. D., and a theatre at Maquoketa, Iowa.

GOLD KING SCREENS INSTALLED IN KANSAS, CALIFORNIA AND ARIZONA THEATRES

GOLD KING SCREENS are increasing in output. President Jones reports that the demand for the Gold King Screen is increasing to such an extent that he will be compelled to enlarge his plant.

The following theatres have made installations this week: The Alhambra theatre, Los Angeles, Cal.; New Morgan theatre, Henrietta, Okla.; J. R. Burford and Company, Arkansas City, Kansas, operating the Rex, Lotus and Gem theatres; Lamara theatre, Phoenix, Ariz., and Pastime theatre, Canadian, Tex.

PHOTOPLAY THEATRES HERE AND THERE ACROSS THE COUNTRY

DEFECTIVE wiring caused the total destruction by fire of the new motion picture theatre at Whitesboro, recently opened by Mr. Hanson. It is not known whether Mr. Hanson will rebuild or not.

Mr. C. W. Allen, 117 Pond street, Syracuse, has remodeled a store at the above address, and will open it as a first class motion picture theatre within the next week.

Plans have been drawn for A. Steinberg, of 564 Main street, Poughkeepsie, for a $30,000 four story building to be erected at 568 Main street. The ground floor is to be given over to a motion picture theatre.

T. Capron has opened the Olympic picture theatre in Main street, Schuylerville.

Ground was broken recently by Sheer Bros. and Samuel Gallucci of Corona for a moving picture theatre, of brick structure, on the north side of Corona avenue, near Hampton street, Elmhurst. This theatre will be the third which is now under construction by the firm. One house, the Palace theatre, costing $20,000, is nearing completion at Jackson avenue and Forty-fourth street, while another theatre, costing $10,000, is well under way on Kingsland avenue, near Way, Corona.

Plans have been filed for making over the old Atlantic Garden, at 50 and 52 Bowery, N. Y., into vaudeville and moving picture theatre, at a cost of $10,000. The William Kramer's Sons Realty Company is the owner, and Henry Regelmann the architect.

OREGON

W. D. Ingles has leased the American theatre at Condon.

W. G. Chandler is preparing plans, and will superintend the erection of a two-story concrete theatre at Bend, for W. P. Murphy. Estimated cost, $5,793.

Contract has been awarded to Siewart & Engstrom for repairs and improvements on the Grand theatre at Salem. Improvements include tiled floor, marble wainscot, steel ceiling, mahogany doors, stairway, and fireproof moving picture booth. Estimated cost, $2,500.

Contract for constructing of concrete theatre at Mansfield, on Sherman avenue for W. P. Murphy, has been let, to be leased to Dennis Hall. Estimated cost to be $5,783.

PENNSYLVANIA

Peter F. Sharpe, manager of the Lansford Opera House, Philadelphia, is working on plans for a $10,000 theatre to be erected in Coaldale.

One of the Rowland and Clark houses located at Bellevue, known as the Bellevue theatre, is being remodeled, and when the work is completed it will be one of the best theatres in that suburb of Pittsburgh. The owners have installed a new heating plant and ventilating system.

Three new theatres at Altoona are soon to be completed. This will increase the list of theatres in the Pittsburgh district to fifteen.

All of the theatres will be opened at the same time and will be ready for active work about Christmas. The work on all of the buildings is being rushed as fast as possible, and a demand has been made on the companies furnishing the equipment to be ready to place the seats and other necessary adjuncts early in December.

Silverman Brothers' new theatre, which is to be called The Strand, is located at Sixteenth street and Eleventh avenue. It will have a seating capacity of 1,600, and will represent an investment of $100,000.

J. C. Orr is building a new theatre in the residence section of Altoona at Fourth street and Sixth avenue. It will have a capacity of 700, and will cost in the neighborhood of $15,000. It will be modern and fireproof throughout.

The P. O. S. of A. building in which the hall of this organization is located is to be remodeled and will shortly have its first floor turned into a motion picture theatre. The house will seat 500 persons and will be ready for occupancy by the first of the year.

The Queen, a $15,000 moving picture house, opened its doors November 1, at Eleventh and Buttonwood streets, Reading. Harry J. Witman and Samuel E. King are the proprietors of the new house, and Robert Hammer has been engaged as manager.

The Rex theatre, Brownsville's new picture house, opened for the approval of the public November 8.

GRAHAM OPENS NEW THEATRE DECEMBER 18

ANNOUNCEMENT as to the opening date of the Merrill theatre, Milwaukee's newest downtown theatre, has been made by Manager Harry Graham. It will be opened to the public Saturday evening, December 18. The Triangle program will be presented at the Merrill at a fifteen cent admission fee, the highest in the city.

The Unique theatre on Main street, Milwaukee, one of the first picture houses in that city, has been leased for two years by the Frellson Amusement Company to the Unique Theatre Company, which will be managed by Charles C. Frellson. Exterior improvements will be made at the theatre.

A motion picture theatre that will seat 800 will be erected soon at Howell and Kinnickinnic avenues, Milwaukee. The building will be of solid brick, and will measure 40x160 feet.

MINUSA SCREENS INSTALLED IN METROPOLITAN OPERA HOUSE, PHILADELPHIA

WHEN the Shubert interests opened the Metropolitan Opera House, at Philadelphia, they placed an order with the Minusa Cine Products Company, of St. Louis, for a Gold Fibre screen, to be built to fit the specifications of that house.

This screen was a very large one, and the installing of it was done under the supervision of the Lewis M. Swaab Company, of Philadelphia.

Mr. Temple, of the Shubert interests, was so pleased with the results on the screen manufactured especially for the Hippodrome at New York last spring that the Minusa Gold Fibre is in strong favor with him.

OFFICIALS WARN EAST ST. LOUIS THEATRES AGAINST OVERCROWDING

MAYOR MOLLMAN, of East St. Louis, Ill., received complaints last week from theatre patrons that a vaudeville house in the business section of the city was violating the safety regulations by allowing spectators to stand in the aisles while the performance was going on.

As a result of the complaint, the Mayor, Building Commissioner Guenther, Fire Chief Tobin and State Fire Marshal Brucks started an investigation tour of all the theatres in the city, and the proprietors and managers of theatres were all warned by the officials that if there were any more complaints warrants would be issued.

Music and the Picture

Edited by Ernst Luz

This department is maintained for the exhibitor's assistance with a view of suggesting proper musical illustrations for current photo plays. MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be pleased to help solve any difficulties the exhibitors may have with their musical programs. All communications should be addressed to the Music and the Picture Department.

PROPER PROJECTION AND CAREFUL PLANNING OF MUSIC SCHEDULE NECESSARY TO MUSICIAN'S SUCCESS

POSSIBLY the most repugnant feature in picture playing to the advanced musician is the abbreviation or abrupt stopping of musical numbers played. Most of this can be avoided by proper projection and some forethought in your selection and placing of numbers. The remaining times when correct playing is not possible to the pleasure of the musician, the aversion is usually caused by an unduly overworked imagination. Were the number in question abbreviated in its arrangement, it would be played without any thought of criticism; why then should it be different when the musician himself makes the abbreviation?

In picture playing a number is ruined only when it is too abruptly and inharmoniously stopped. Such stops can be avoided by exercising care and are permissible only when segueing into a hurry or agitato. In such segues, the excitable music and the exciting action on screen will hide any inharmonious effects.

Every musician should study a correct method of stopping his numbers. When a harmonic ending in tonic chord is difficult, it is a good plan to let your number softly die out before making your segue. To do this properly it is necessary that you somewhat anticipate the cue. In picture playing it is a good policy to avoid numbers that do not permit good endings at different points, and save numbers that must be played in their entirety to be appreciated for such times when it is possible to play them as written.

In following the Music Plots in this department you will find many suggestions where no cue to stop is given. These are the points to place numbers that should play concert or as they are written. The ambitious player who really desires to play pictures properly, and play good music at the same time, will have no difficulty in solving the problem of doing both well.

Projection plays a very important part in the musical program of every picture theatre. On several occasions it has come to my notice that managers in making up their daily programs have allotted 75 minutes to the same feature in one show, 90 minutes in another show, and then, to show what an utter disregard they have for the difficulty in synchronizing music to the picture, they run the same feature in another show in 60 minutes. This may seem exaggerated to the reader, but I assure you it is true.

The musician that is up against a proposition like this is to be pitied. Still, he should not worry, for he can rest assured that his manager has no respect for his patrons or good music. The operator in the booth is another reactionary element in the picture theatre where good music is desired. There are still many exhibitors who think that the operator should not be scheduled in the running of any picture, which is a mistake. The idea prevails that the operator will change his speed to improve the picture, but the contrary is true, and the operator usually grinds along immaterially unless he is given a positive schedule. When the action in the picture cannot be enlivened in taking and cutting, before the positive films are made, it is very unlikely that the operator will be able to improve it. There are films that can be run faster than others, but when this is true the condition prevails for more than one reel and quite often throughout the entire picture, and is done more often to shorten the picture, having little effect on the screen action.

When the projection evil is remedied, fifty per cent. of the musician's troubles are alleviated. Next comes the selection of music. Music to synchronize with the picture action is the first essential, after which musical character must be observed. Numbers practical for picture playing should be selected and care should be taken to use numbers having many possible endings. The placing of numbers is also very important. When the numbers following each other are of somewhat similar temperament and segues are made for the betterment of the musical program, rather than picture synchronization, greater liberty in the selection of the number used is permissible. The segue point not being so important, more latitude is allowed in finishing the number being played. When a slow number is succeeded by a lively number, the slow number should be one that can be easily ended and segued from. The same is good when a number segues into melodramatic music.

When one is familiar with the picture it is a better plan to anticipate the cues whenever possible. When the above is followed, there is little difficulty in avoiding bad segues or inharmonious stops, which seems to be the better musician's aversion to picture playing.

Good picture theatre music is only possible when the small details in projection and musical direction are thought out in advance, scheduled and put into accurate practice. Every really successful picture theatre is doing it, many of them at a great expense. Everybody will be doing it soon.

SPECIAL MUSICAL PROGRAMS POPULAR IN QUAKER CITY THEATRES

THE Fairmount, Philadelphia, managed by M. S. Kendrick, celebrated Thanksgiving Day by a special musical program interpreted by its orchestra, which is under the direction of R. H. Winter, Jr.

A special children's matinee from 11 to 1 was another holiday feature. Each youngster present received a big box of chocolate as a souvenir.

The Fairmount uses special scenic effects for its screen. This successful house was opened as a vaudeville theatre but soon turned to pictures. It is built on the site of an old market house.

Manager William F. Crozier of the Logan Auditorium, well known as a church singer, arranged a novel musical program at a recent performance of "Salvation Nell."

The new organ was much in evidence, while Mr. Crozier, assisted by a quartet and choir, gave several vocal selections during the presentation of the picture.

THE STANLEY, PHILADELPHIA, TO INSTALL COSTLY NEW ORGAN

A TYPICAL weekly musical program at the West Alleghany theatre, Philadelphia, of which B. Amsterdam is manager, prepared by the organist, J. T. McGowen, is as follows: "Thanhouser" overture; "Somewhere a Voice Is Calling"; "Il Trovatore" selections; "Princess Pat" medley; gems from "La Traviata"; "The Little Grey Home in the West." Recitals are given daily from 6:30 to 7:30 P. M.

The Logan, at 4819 North Broad street, Philadelphia, has after months of work just installed a new organ containing a complete equipment for the orchestral effects, in addition to the human voice pipes, which permit of the solo or choir effects. To celebrate this gala occasion, the management selected Geraldine Farrar in "Carmen" as the picture to be interpreted.

The Stanley, in addition to its fine orchestra, uses the organ during many of its pictures. During the next two weeks a new organ will be installed in the house. From the description, none in Philadelphia will surpass it. It is reported to be the largest, most modern and most costly organ possessed by any Philadelphia theatre.

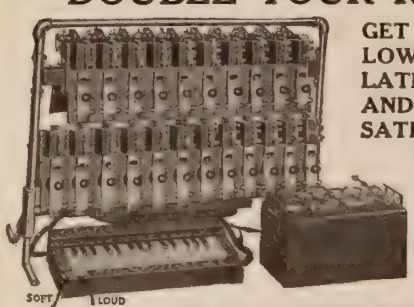
DON'T GET THE IDEA

because of their conspicuous success in large installations, that the W. W. KIMBALL COMPANY is high priced and not interested in the musical equipment of smaller theatres.



For every great instrument, such as the three and four manual organs in the Globe Theatre, Boston; the Orpheum, New York; the Arcadia, Philadelphia; the Colonial, Seattle; the Clemmer, Spokane; the Columbia and National Theatres in Portland; there are scores of Kimballs costing $5,000.00 and under—equally successful—in the moving picture theatres of the country seating from 400 to 2,000. Chicago alone has seventy-five such Kimball organs.

Let us figure with you, whatever your problem.

The instrument is being built by the Austin Company from the plans and specifications of Herbert Brown and collaboration of Richard Bach and Rollo F. Maitland, the organists with the Stanley orchestra. The organ will have three manuals and pedals, and the main organ will be placed on the stage, while the antiphonal organ will be in the rear of the theatre or in one of the upper proscenium boxes.

The main organ will be on ten-inch wind pressure, and the antiphonal organ on five-inch wind. The new instrument will possess vast volume and is expected to be able to produce many novel and beautiful effects never before attempted. A plan is in contemplation by Stanley Mastbaum whereby a large ice skating palace will be built on the roof of the Stanley theatre. Such a departure would be welcomed by many patrons of the theatre.

PROGRESS AND CHANGES IN THEATRE CIRCLES AT BUFFALO

LOUIS EISENBERG is back as manager of the Allendale, Buffalo, N. Y., Mrs. Lillian Hastings having resigned. Mr. Eisenberg was managing the Columbia theatre, which is now looking for a manager, according to Mr. Eisenberg.

"The Battle Cry of Peace" is the attraction at Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo, this week, at regular prices.

The new theatre at Lyons, N. Y., which is being erected by Ohmann Bros., is nearing completion and unless something unforeseen turns up will open the end of this month. The new house will be known as the Ohmann theatre. Admission will be ten cents.

The Elmwood theatre, Buffalo, has issued a new four-page program with an attractive make-up, announcing the entire week's bill, coming attractions and general information.

TOY THEATRE, MILWAUKEE, CHANGES ADMISSION PRICE TO TEN CENTS

THE Toy theatre, Milwaukee, which since its opening some months ago has been securing a twenty-five cent admission fee, has decided to change its policy and will in the future charge a ten cent rate.

Tom Lee has been placed in charge of the theatre and one of his first acts on taking the reins was to book Metro pictures. The first of these, "My Madonna," will be presented at the Toy next Monday. Mr. Lee is an experienced show man and under his management the house has taken on an air of refinement and class that makes it distinctive.

The same surroundings and equipment that made the house famous as a twenty-five cent theatre will be retained. An eight-piece orchestra will supply the music and everything will be of the same high class.

Manager Lee intends to retain every one of his productions a full week.

TURNER AND DAHNKEN SYNDICATE, 'FRISCO, SELLS $1,400,000 STOCK

ANNOUNCEMENT of the sale of stock aggregating one million four hundred thousand dollars has been made at San Francisco, the stock being that issued by the Turner & Dahnken Syndicate, which owns a number of theatres in and about San Francisco.

Frank Burt, director of concessions at the Exposition; M. J. Brandenstein, the coffee king, and Herbert Fleishacker, an electric railroad magnate, together with other San Francisco men of finance, are interested in the proposition, and it is stated that the intention of the company is to lease or build a number of theatres in the East.

CASES OF INDIANA THEATRE MANAGERS CONTINUED INDEFINITELY

THE cases of the four managers of moving picture theatres of Fort Wayne, Ind., who were arrested on affidavits sworn out by Nelson H. Kyser, state factory inspector, charged with violating the Indiana child labor laws by employing boys under sixteen years of age as ticket takers, were continued indefinitely by Judge H. Kerr, after warning them not to repeat the offense.

Those who were arrested were: O. E. Wobrock, Lyric theatre; George Killen, Star theatre; Herman C. Heisler, Colonial theatre, and P. J. Mallett, Grand theatre.

Note.—In music plots each reel of film is divided into 10 units of time, each unit denoted by one X representing about 1½ minutes. Consequently when a number is designated by XX it plays about 3 minutes, XXXX about 6 minutes, etc. When no X appears after musical description it means that the number is very short and does not play a minute or more. When cues to stop numbers are in quotation "——" it means that the cue is reading matter or subtitle. All other cues are action on screen. All segues should be made quietly and clean. When quick segues or abrupt stops are necessary it will be mentioned in Cues or Notes. When the time of each 1,000 feet of film is less than 15 minutes there will appear less than 10 X's in each reel. To get the correct time of projection for each reel, multiply the number of X's appearing in each reel by 1½.

Effect Notes.—During No. 3 and 9 train effects can be made. The effect should be subdued. During No. 7 two pistol shots in quick succession should be used at the end of the number. During No. 18 an imitation of a knock on door is very essential. During No. 19 at the cue "By Alva's orders" an explosion of a ship dynamited. During 14 and 17 harp string imitations can be made.

Music Notes.—This picture is very dramatic. Your music should keep the dramatic tone throughout. The music should be heavy and in minor keys or of agitato tempo as much as possible. Nos. 2, 4, 6, 12, 18 and 19 must be slow dramatic numbers with the usual agitated strain and played legato. Nos. 3 and 20 should be 2/4 intermezzos in minor keys. Nos. 9, 17 and 23 must be concert waltzes with short, slow dramatic introductions. Nos. 13 and 15 are slow waltz lento numbers, played legato and in minor keys. Nos. 1, 5, 8, 10, 11, 16, 21 and 22 are short melodramatic numbers, published by Photo Play Music Company, sole selling agents, Joseph W. Stern & Co., No. 102 West 38th street, New York City. These numbers are very necessary to give proper dramatic emphasis to the picture action.

Organ can be used throughout, when the minor tone is adhered to. When organ is used in conjunction with orchestra Nos. 4, 6, 12, 13, 14, 15, 18, 19 and 20 are good for organ when necessary. The melodramatic numbers, 1, 5, 8, 10, 11, 16, 21 and 22, require string instruments to obtain the proper effect.

Dear Sirs:

Have given Speer Carbons a tryout and find that they are a better carbon than the imported carbon because they give as good a light and I get more service out of one Speer Carbon than I have ever been able to get from any other carbon.

We have put in an order for five hundred Speer Carbons. We are not buying Speer Carbons because they are cheaper than the imported, but because they are just as good, and there is more service in them than any other carbon on the market.

If I can in any way help boost Speer Carbons let it be known.

Wishing you good success, I remain,

or
A STRUGGLE FOR EXISTENCE

Brute Man pitted against brute animals on Equal Footing—

THE FILM OF A THOUSAND WONDERS.

IN all the history of Moving Pictures there is no production which can compare with "THE NATURE MAN." You see a man enter the primeval wilds of the California mountains, unarmed, without tools or provisions, and in a succession of fascinating, breath-taking and hair-raising scenes you see the nature man conquer the forces of nature. You see him provide himself with food and clothing; make a fire and shelter, overcome wild beasts—and emerge victor over every obstacle through the supremacy of human intelligence.

The pictures themselves are the fullest proof of the genuineness of the scenes, and every man, woman and child, regardless of their moving picture likes and dislikes, will be held in thrilling fascination while the "Nature Man"

Builds a fire by friction
Makes a comfortable shelter
Makes a rope of bark
Weaves a fish net from bark fibre
Fashions a fish spear and spears fish
Builds a birch canoe
Makes pets of bear cubs
Snares rabbits for food
Trees and captures a bear
Captures and kills a fierce mountain lion without weapons
Snares wild elk and other animals
Shoots the rapids of a mountain stream on a log

And there's more and more. Every reel is full of breath-taking scenes—all actual happenings. Fights between wild animals, a wrestling match with a bear—punches galore. It provides a new brand of thrills THAT THE WISE EXHIBITOR CAN CASH IN ON FOR REAL PROFITS. If a feature house had this they would make it a "special" feature and you couldn't touch it with a ten-foot pole. Released on the Universal Program, it offers you a rare opportunity to book a wonderful picture at a REASONABLE rental and a chance for a genuine cleanup. Write or wire your Exchange now for release date and booking. Prepare to do special advertising and get the crowds.

Paramount Pictures

bring a large clientele to your theatre. PARAMOUNT SERVICE helps you to increase the patronage and to keep the public pleased.

This is because PARAMOUNT has been thought out step by step,—first the best program obtainable, then an abundant variety of advertising for the exhibitor's use, backed up by a national advertising campaign.

All of this has been done with the one purpose of enabling the exhibitor to give a consistently better performance and to draw the better class of patrons to his theatre,—a large percent of whom have not yet begun to attend motion picture shows.

Every successful business in the world has been established by systematic, persistent, upbuilding work. That is the way the PARAMOUNT exhibitor is building his business. You can do the same thing.

VITAGRAPH POLICY

Today the wise exhibitor buys in the open market.

He picks his program according to merit only—he gives his patrons what they want.

We want every exhibitor to see every picture that he books.

It is the day of the open market.

If you take as much pains with your REGULAR PROGRAM as you do in the selection of your features, you will always be sure of capacity crowds.

Vitagraph insists that you see every picture it releases on the screen

Caught on a Flood of Success

THE V-L-S-E was the first of the large feature distributing companies, we are told, to show a substantial gain in both collections and billings during the summer months.

It was the first, and thus far the only film organization to share its profits with all its employees—the division made October 10th last, and to be made every subsequent quarter, amounting to 20% of the company's net profits.

These forward steps have been made possible only by reason of the superior money-making qualities of Big Four productions, for the exhibitor and for the producer.

Crammed with heart-interest, powerful dramatically, unequalled photographically and with it all, wholesome and purposeful, the public has placed its stamp of overwhelming approval on them—accorded them a favored place as the highest expressions of the photoplay art.

Immediate new releases:

"THE CAVEMAN" (Vitagraph) which one critic described as "the only picture I ever saw at a private showing which made every reviewer laugh" yet it is also an intense drama— Featuring ROBERT EDESON.

"THE ALSTER CASE" (Essanay). An honest-to-goodness detective story, from the great stage success, which will make you mad because it is so baffling— Featuring BRYANT WASHBURN and RUTH STONEHOUSE.

"A MAN'S MAKING" (Lubin). A straight-from-the-shoulder story of the making of a man against terrific odds— Featuring RICHARD BUHLER and ROSETTA BRICE.

"I'M GLAD MY BOY GREW UP TO BE A SOLDIER" (Selig). A smashing, patriotic knock-out, which sounds the high note of love for country, with thrills by the bushel— Featuring HARRY MESTAYER and EUGENIE BESSERER.

And do not overlook the fact that these features represent but half of the Big Four's business-building service.

The other half begins where the film ends—in the most modern merchandising program to help you sell to the best advantage that which you have bought, that the motion picture industry has ever known. This plan of mutual helpfulness and service we call "The New Religion." We give our sales organization a share of the profits, so that they will work harder for you,

A dozen exhibitors in your vicinity will attest to the value of this co-operation. Shall we send you their names?

THE GIRL AND THE GAME

The New Stupendous Railroad Film Novel

featuring

Helen Holmes

The Fearless Film Star

Here you have the biggest, the most stupendous profit-pulling production, that ever has been presented.

"The Girl and The Game" tops them all and stands supreme — the pinnacle of motion picture achievement. Fifteen amazing two-act chapters—one chapter released each week beginning Dec. 27th. Drive home this point: "The Girl and The Game" means fifteen consecutive weeks of crowded houses—fifteen consecutive weeks of big box-office success.

Thrill After Thrill at Lightning Speed

Each chapter of this huge production is fairly alive with thrills—the big, red-blood thrills and the dare-devil action for which fearless Helen Holmes is famous. No man on earth is so capable of directing a thrill production as J. P. McGowan, who directs "The Girl and The Game." No living author is so capable of writing thrills as Frank H. Spearman, the great railroad author who wrote "The Girl and The Game." Each chapter is a distinct production—a distinct triumph in itself. The chapters are bound together by a strong skein of romance, love and suspense which carries over from chapter one to the last scene of chapter fifteen.

George T. Pardy, in the Morning Telegraph, says:

"'Barbara Frietchie' is a tender romance of considerable power, permeated with the glamor of olden-time courtesy and pretty sentiment. A better role for the enhancement of the charms of little Mary Miles Minter, who plays the heroine, could not have been selected. Her piquant, girlish beauty is seen to the best advantage and she stands revealed as an actress of no small ability. * * * The piece is well-directed throughout, the skirmishing between the troops and the spectacular views of the marching soldiers being faultlessly handled. Accuracy of detail is manifested in the picture, and the photography leaves nothing to be desired. 'Barbara Frietchie' is a notable addition to the Metro programme and promises to record a well-deserved success."

THE LITTLE GIRL IN THE BIG MOON

She sat all alone in the big moon and she was very, very lonely.
Her mother had forbidden her to see the only playmate she had.
She looked at the blinking lights of the far away city where her mother promised her some day she would find wealth and position.
But her heart was sad, for it was cold in the moon and she longed for the warmth of love.
Then the rich man her mother was seeking asked her to come and play.
She didn't know he wouldn't play fair, but her playmate did. He was watching and when the rich man hurt her so that she cried out with pain, he came and drove him away.
Then he whispered:
"I love you."
And she was very happy at last.

The Misleading Lady Reveals the Naked, Savage Soul of Man

Edna Mayo

We are savages under the skin.

Scratch the veneer of civilization and you bare the naked soul of man.

This is the theme of "The Misleading Lady"—the story of primitive passions, of cave man methods introduced into modern society.

A girl, blinded by ambition for the stage, leads a man to bare his love for her before jesting friends, to prove her dramatic ability.

The victim is stung to the quick, but he is not the man to brook so cruel and heartless a jest.

His has been the large, free life of the open, life lived in the raw.

He kidnaps the girl, takes her to a mountain lodge, chains her to the floor.

He domineers over her, browbeats her.

She hates him, but is awed by his overpowering mastery.

His reckless daring, his brute force win her admiration, but pride will not let her yield.

One day, goaded by his deliberate taunts, she fells him with a blow.

The woman instinct is aroused.

The mothering love for the helpless comes to play.

The man child is here to care for.

And a great love is born.

HENRY B. WALTHALL and EDNA MAYO make this five-act photoplay one of fascinating intensity.

Adapted by H. S. Sheldon from the stage success of Charles W. Goddard and Paul Dickey. Directed by A. Berthelet.

A Big Look Ahead

A VERY significant statement was made last week by an advertising manager before his associates in convention assembled here in New York.

The convention, by the way, devoted an entire day's session to one subject—motion pictures—which is highly significant in itself.

BUT still more so is the sober, specific statement of the advertising expert when he said:

"I have made a careful study of motion pictures for the past two years as a possible medium for reaching the general public.

"I have finally come to a serious conclusion. I believe that my circulation" (by circulation he means the readers of his advertisements—principally in the magazines) "have left the reading lamp for the motion picture theatre.

"And"—he added—"I intend to follow them there."

He intends, in other words, to withdraw his announcements from the advertising pages of the magazine and place them where the eyes of the public are now seeking a similar entertainment—namely, on the motion picture screen.

WE take some pride in this remarkable declaration—and the thought which projects it, because we have consistently insisted, upon this page, that the real competitor of the motion picture is the magazine.

The object of our insistence has been to drive home to the producer the prime importance of the story, by indicating that his plots and their visualization must be as good or better than the best magazine literature of the day,—if his pictures are to have an equal circulation.

NOW we suggest a broader thought in this connection—a very big, vital thought, it seems to us.

The speaker I have mentioned was followed by another—a man whose keenness of judgment is thoroughly respected throughout the business world.

He said: "I confidently expect to see the time when the regular theatre program will be followed by a film or slide labelled 'advertising program' and thereafter a series of artistic, sprightly, animated advertisements. The patron can remain or not, just as today the magazine reader can pass on into the 'advertising section' or not as he pleases. He is warned in advance. But I predict he will find a lively interest in these animated advertisements, just as today he finds great interest in the skilfully wrought magazine page advertisement."

MANY exhibitors and producers will pooh-pooh this evolution of the theatre program; some will be angered at the thought of this commercial invasion. For these I submit a few suggestions.

Firstly, advertising is a mighty force. It is backed by millions of dollars. It is guided by the keenest, most scientific business minds in the world. If advertising effort is at one point, and circulation is at another, then, in my opinion, the two will somehow and shortly be joined together as certainly as steel joins a magnet.

Secondly, advertising is a beneficial force. It may be that advertising is destined to work out the salvation of the better picture just as it has produced the better magazine and newspaper.

WHEN advertising first invaded the magazine, some publishers were then quite as scandalized as some picture folk may now be shocked at the thought of commercializing the picture program.

But advertising continued its invasion—and it lifted magazines beyond the hands of the cultured few into the hands of the millions, better magazines delivered at the reading table for a fraction of the cost of production. It made possible the penny newspaper with its world news. It has made—more than any other force—our educated millions. Advertising did all this—advertising, a beneficial force, not a commercial detraction.

AND now what of pictures and advertising? Let us see. The cost of the production and the exhibition of pictures is dangerously high today.

Ask any producer and you will find him viewing the rising cost of production with deepest concern. He will probably tell you that more money is being put into pictures—through the utterly ridiculous salaries paid to stars, for one thing—than can ever be got out of them.

Ask any exhibitor and you will find him pessimistic over high rental prices.

THESE conditions can be helped, of course, from within. The producers can—and must—put some reasonable limit upon these skyrocket salaries. Exhibitors can increase their incomes—by being better exhibitors.

But why cannot advertising do as much for pictures as it has for magazines? Why not let it lighten the cost of production and of exhibition and so increase with the quality of the product and the prosperity of those concerned? Why not let it be the same beneficial force?

A long look ahead perhaps—and certainly a big, portentious look.

Vol. XII December 18, 1915 No. 24

The High Cost of Motion Pictures

THE high cost of motion pictures and everything that goes into the making of them is a baffling fact, but a painfully obvious one. And the strangest feature of the situation is that there is no necessity for it. The state of affairs is one the producers themselves have brought about, which they have not only permitted to develop, but which, in many cases, they have actually insisted upon creating.

Why is it that a dollar will only go about half as far in the motion picture production field as it will elsewhere?

Why is it that an actor who couldn't command more than $75 a week on the stage can get $200, $300, $500 a week in motion pictures?

Why is it that stage managers, ex-actors, stock people who never knew what it was to draw three figures in one week, blossom into picture directors at princely salaries?

WHY is it that stage stars can demand and get,—or don't have to demand, but are cheerfully offered, twice and three times what any theatrical manager ever paid them by picture magnates who think them cheap at the price?

Why is it that many a producer of pictures will spend five times as much to produce a feature as it would have cost to put the same play on the stage?

Why is it that producers will offer a publisher ten times what that publisher ever dreamed he could get for the rights to a book or a story, and think he has driven a shrewd bargain?

Why, in short, is there such a wild inflation of values in everything that relates to pictures?

IS the earning capacity of a picture so much greater than the earning capacity of a book, a story, a drama that the producer of the picture can stand a corresponding increase in initial cost? Such a theory, if it is held anywhere, is contradicted by the facts.

And, as we said before, the strangest feature of the case is that nobody has forced these fabulous prices on the producers; the producers themselves have conceded them, sometimes thoughtlessly, sometimes in ignorance.

It is on the question of stories that there is probably as little sanity in regard to values and prices exhibited as anywhere. Just now there are two striking extremes in attitude toward the story.

ONE is that of the producer who believes that the greatest story ever written isn't worth more than $25 a reel.

The other is that of the manufacturer who likes to pay anywhere from $1,000 to $15,000 for anything bound in cloth with a publisher's name on it, because he thinks he is thereby proving his good judgment and literary appreciation.

Both are wrong; and one man is just as mistaken as the other.

The story that is only worth $25 a reel is probably not worth that, and some day, that fact will be realized. But it is just as true that stories which producers are buying today for prices that are staggering the publishers and the writers of them could have been obtained for a quarter, a half and sometimes two-thirds less than the price they paid, if the producer only knew values, or left the purchasing in the hands of some one who did.

This is not speculation. It is fact. Ask any one of half a dozen men and women who have been dealing in book and story rights outside of the picture field, and they will tell you of the "easy money" publishers have found on the screen.

A PUBLISHER was telling me of his first experience with a motion picture magnate," said one of the closest of these buyers the other day. "He had been sent for by the head of a well-known company and the rights of a certain novel were in question. It was not a 'best seller,' just an ordinarily successful book by an ordinarily good, but more or less obscure writer.

"The publisher had gone to the appointment, prepared to ask what he considered a top price,—one that he could shade, if he had to, and still realize on, considering his original investment and the subsequent sale of the book.

"Imagine his astonishment when, without a word or argument or discussion, the producer offered him five times what he had dared to think of asking! He concealed his surprise as best he could and pocketed the check. Then he went back to his office, ransacked his catalogues for novels which he had thought lost their producing power long ago, and prepared for an aggressive campaign in the 'movies.'

"Up to that time I had obtained quotations on various novels at what he considered an excellent price then,—but he laughs at me now when he hears my offers. He knows, and doesn't hesitate to admit to me that he knows the books are not worth a cent more than I am ready to pay for them. But he has found that he can get more,—and he gets it."

The Happy Ending

ONE of the first things to be learned about a picture is whether its conclusion is logical.

If the story requires a tragic ending, it is sheer violation of the story's character to force a happy ending upon it. Picture goers, in the majority, favor pleasant conclusions, doubtless; but in any case they will not endure a comedy denouement in a tragedy. The idea that every audience requires every picture to end happily is a superstition inherited from the legitimate stage.

The outcome of any plot must be logical—first, last, always.

A Million Doors, Not One, for Exhibitor Progress

But Many Managers Fail to Realize This, Declares Rothapfel, Back in New York—He Says That Success Depends Upon Identifying in the Minds of the Public the Theatre in Their Locality Rather Than Trying to Get Patronage by Advertising Stars or Programs

A SCORE of really big ideas for improving the condition of the exhibitor, and consequently the whole motion picture industry, are what S. L. Rothapfel has brought back from his tour of the United States. Mr. Rothapfel's trip, which was undertaken at the instance of the Mutual Film Corporation, now promises to result in one of the greatest advances made in the business this year. He has not only made a thorough and purposeful study of the situation, but has convinced thousands of exhibitors of his sincere intention and ability to help them.

As in the past, Mr. Rothapfel has collected ideas for purposes of action, not merely for the sake of the ideas, and he has come back to New York with definite, concrete propositions for the improvement of the very definite things which he has found going wrong. Chief among his suggestions is the establishment of a great annual trade show, or a trade excursion with a series of shows at the more important centers, for the purpose of getting exhibitors together with each other, and with the manufacturer and standardizing the business from the exhibitor's end.

It can be stated that Mr. Rothapfel's ideas in this direction will be immediately promulgated in substantial form, and sponsored by the Motion Picture Board of Trade.

Mr. Rothapfel has found the exhibitors' affairs in a chaotic state in almost every section; he has found exhibitors driving or drifting along in the same old rut as they were a year ago; he has found them devoting their energies to cutting each other's throats rather than building up their own business; he has found them devoid of originality, energy, individuality, ideas and a knowledge of what is really taking place in the great field of pictures. But the hopeful spot in the situation is that they are beginning to realize their position and are ready to welcome a Moses who can lead them out of the wilderness.

Neglect Opportunities

Mr. Rothapfel this week told MOTION PICTURE NEWS some of the things he learned on the trip. "It was a wonderful experience in many ways," he said. "At first I was coldly, almost suspiciously, received, but soon the exhibitors began to realize that there was something worth while in store, and the latter part of the trip was an almost continuous ovation.

"The principal trouble with the exhibitors —and this applies to nearly every locality— is that they fail to take advantage of the great opportunities which lie before them. They have not advanced a bit in the last year, and are working in the same old rut. The chances to do big things in the way of presentation are excellent, but so many exhibitors have failed to realize the fact.

"The greatest mistake of the exhibitor is making the picture the thing instead of the theatre. He should push forward the theatre—his theatre—as the biggest thing in sight, and teach his patrons to come because of the theatre and what it offers, not because of some particular picture or star. The old cry of 'the play's the thing' may be paraphrased in this case into 'the theatre's the thing.' I cannot too strongly impress this on the exhibitor who would succeed.

"The producer who advertises a certain star above everything else, even his own productions, will find he has created a public eager to see that star, and not the line of pictures he puts out; they may never hear of him or what else he is doing; they will know only the star. It is the same with the exhibitor. Men who have continually 'boosted' certain players or programs, now find that only when these players or plays are on view does the public flock to his house; the theatre is not known for itself. Exhibitors must realize that the theatre is the absolute base in the presentation of photoplays.

More Co-operation Needed

"Lack of co-operation and throat-cutting methods are another great evil. In one city only, El Paso, did I find anything like close co-operation among exhibitors. The exhibitor in other places spends too much of his time watching his competitor, while his own business, unaided by individuality, energy or enterprise, drifts along the old worn channels, and gets nowhere.

"But the exhibitors are anxious to learn. The bright spots on the tour were the proprietors of small houses in the lesser cities and towns. I have found many magnificent houses, equal in every way to the Strand in New York, especially in Seattle, Minneapolis, Detroit, San Francisco and Omaha. The most successful are run on the 'open booking' plan, and that seems to be the answer to success right now.

"An exhibitor who runs one or two programs at a session, has just so many minutes in which to entertain his audience; he must study and learn how to make the most of these minutes. He must understand the principle of co-operation with the local newspapers, general advertising, courtesy and initiative.

"The exhibitor stands at the door of the theatre with a little plate in his hand, waiting for something to be placed in it. Opportunity is running up and down the street and nobody has sense enough to stop him and choke something out of him. The great trouble of today is that the manufacturer of the picture tells the exhibitor what to do; instead, the exhibitor should tell the manufacturer what to do.

Exhibitors Behind Manufacturers

"To maintain and to create a lasting foundation to the picture business, the exhibitor must perk up. The manufacturers have advanced in leaps and bounds, yet the exhibitor has not advanced. He remains exactly where he was. The business today is in a terrible chaotic state. No one knows what to do; everybody wants to get rich quick, and that is not the way.

"We have got to get out of the rut and put the business on a solid foundation. Unless we are going to do this, instead of advancing we will go back. The exhibitors have a power second only to the press. They must do things differently, and not try to do all things just the same. Let not all try to rush through one door; there are a million doors in this game. The business of today and the business of tomorrow does not depend on the picture alone to draw the crowds. The pictures can't be good all the time."

Mr. Rothapfel plans to make his new Rialto theatre at Broadway and Forty-second street, New York, an example for exhibitors everywhere, and he has extended a cordial invitation to every exhibitor, when in New York, to come into the theatre and talk with him about the new ideas which he will put into practice there.

Gaumont Studios Increased Three Fold by Spring

Company Buys Property Bounded by Linden, Myrtle and Congress Streets, Flushing, L. I., and Will Tear Down Buildings on the Site for New Structures

RECENT rumors regarding increased activity of the Gaumont Company on the Mutual program by no means measured up to the magnitude of that company's operations as outlined in an authoritative statement just issued from the Gaumont headquarters at Flushing, L. I.

It was understood that there would be alterations and improvements in the present plant, but large purchases of adjoining property have brought an acknowledgment that by spring Gaumont will have increased its present facilities at least three-fold. This is in addition to the thousands of dollars being invested in permanent winter quarters at Jacksonville, Fla.

Having quietly tied up practically all the Flushing property bounded by Linden, Myrtle and Congress avenues and Park Place, last week the Gaumont Company completed the necessary purchases. Not only will the buildings upon these sites be torn down immediately, but the present administration building, the studio, open-air stage, shipping department and structures housing the staff of the technical director and properties will also be leveled to the ground in order to lay out the new plant to the best advantage.

When the Rialto Star Feature Companies, which make the Gaumont releases on the Mutual Program return from Jacksonville in the spring, they will have great difficulty in recognizing the property where they worked last summer. A large plot will be devoted to the all-year studio, which will be erected on the Linden avenue side of the property. Here several companies will be able to work at the same time under glass and artificial light. The large space required for studio purpose under glass foreshadows the announcement that there will be companies at work all the year at Flushing in addition to the Gaumont winter activities at Jacksonville.

There will be dressing rooms under the stage sufficient to quarter comfortably all the visiting stars, members of the several stock companies, and at least a couple of hundred extra people.

The directors will have offices close to the stages, where they will work. The plans call for an open air stage so large that a dozen directors may work at the same time without interfering with each other. This will extend from a line near Myrtle avenue almost to the present factory site that fronts on Park Place.

The work of the Gaumont technical director will be rendered easier by locating his workshops and property rooms between the studio and the open-air stage. The staff of artists employed by Cartoonist Harry Palmer to aid him in producing his numerous animated cartoon series, "Keeping Up with the Joneses," will be housed in this building.

"We are contemplating an expenditure of from $150,000 to $200,000," said F. G. Bradford, general manager of the Gaumont Company, in discussing the expansion of the interests which he directs. "The greater part of the money will go into our Flushing property, although I am frank to say if we consider our Florida winter quarters prove desirous that we shall put in many thousands of dollars of improvements there to establish a plant on a permanent basis."

Contracts are now being made for construction work to begin soon after Christmas. When the Rialto Star Feature companies return from Jacksonville everything will be in readiness for summer work. There will be no change in one pleasing feature of the Gaumont policy; each production will feature a new star. At present Malcom Williams and Stella Hammerstein are being filmed at Jacksonville.

CURRIER BOOSTED TO VITAGRAPH DIRECTORSHIP

Frank Currier, well-known for his work in Vitagraph productions, has been promoted to the position of director. His first picture will be a one part comedy written by Agnes C. Johnston, with William Dangman, Helen Guerney and Robert Turner portraying the important parts, and will be produced at the Vitagraph studio at Bay Shore, Long Island

"OUR LADY OF LAUGHTER," KLEINE, TO FEATURE HOOPS

"Our Lady of Laughter" is the odd title of a story by Channing Pollock now in work at the Kleine studios in the Bronx. It is a story of theatrical life on Broadway and will feature Arthur Hoops and Alma Hanlon, supported by Frank Belcher, Herbert Hayes and others. "Our Lady of Laughter" will be released through Kleine-Edison Feature Service.

First Ball of Directors' Association Is a Success

Function Held in Hotel Alexandria, Los Angeles, Is Most Brilliant Affair Ever Launched in West Coast Film Circles, and Brings Out Array of Screen Lights

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Dec. 2.

THE most brilliant social function in the history of the Los Angeles film producing colony, was the first annual ball and grand buffet given by the Motion Picture Directors' Association, Thanksgiving evening, at the ball room of Hotel Alexandria, Los Angeles.

The attendance numbered more than three hundred and fifty, and included many of the principal people engaged in the film industry here. The committee on arrangements consisted of Allen Curtis, chairman, Frank Beal, William Robert Daly, Joseph DeGrasse, and M. J. MacQuarrie; the reception committee, Otis Turner, chairman, Charles Giblyn, Robert Leonard, Walter Edwards, Charles Swickard, Reginald Barker, Al. E. Christie, Phillips Smalley, Travers Vale, William D. Taylor and Hobart Bosworth, and the floor committee, Dell Henderson, chairman, Eddie Dillon, Jay Hunt, Frank Lloyd, Francis Powers, Charles K. French, Roy Clements, Raymond B. West, Lloyd B. Carleton, Henry Otto, Leon D. Kent, and J. P. McGowan.

The general supervision of taking care of the big attendance was in charge of H. L. Massey. Music was furnished by a big orchestra, and during the evening buffet service was continuous. The dances were all named from the brands produced on the West Coast, and the ball was representative of practically every studio in this producing center.

Among those present were: D. W. Griffith, DeWolfe Hopper, Mack Sennett, Police Judge White and wife, Marshall Stedman, Mrs. Eddie Dillon, Max Asher, Stella Adams, Ruth Roland, Jack Pickford, Allan Hale, Lois Weber, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mestayer, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Cody, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Daly, Mr. and Mrs. A. Heffron, H. L. Massey, Mr. and Mrs. Willie Collier, Bessie Eyton, Mr. and Mrs. Charles French, Charles Pike, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Curtis, and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Cudahy.

The net proceeds from the ball will be used to endow one or more beds in a local hospital to be used exclusively for motion picture people who are ill or injured.

"On the German Firing Line" Packs Western Houses

W. H. Durburough's Pictures Taken on Eastern Front and Made Up by Industrial, Seen in Milwaukee, Enter on Chicago Engagement

Special to Motion Picture News

Chicago, Dec. 4.

W. H. DURBUROUGH, who has just returned to America after seven months with the German army in Russia, during this time took 16,000 feet of film at the German front. From this 16,000 feet of negative, 9,000 was selected and made up by the Industrial Moving Picture Company. By the aid of interesting and amusing sub-titles, the audience is carried along with Mr. Durburough through his exciting trip.

The film starts on shipboard in the English channel, showing the passengers looking for submarines. Next it shows them passing through custom officials, then appear pictures of the Kaiser, the Kaiserin and notables of the German army. Next comes his trip through the devastated country, the ruins of Warsaw, to the German front. Here actual fighting is registered by perfect photography, and the climax comes with the capture of Noba Gerorbeiewski, the greatest fort in Russian-Poland.

Mr. Durburough, previous to this expedition was connected with the Newspaper Enterprise Association and was accompanied by R. G. Ries, camera man. All the pictures were taken with two Universal cameras. They were enthusiastic in their praise of these cameras, saying that they not only took wonderfully clear pictures, but also weathered the rough treatment of a seven months' campaign without once giving them any trouble.

These war pictures, under the name of "On the German Firing Line," opened Sunday, November 28, at the Stoddard theatre in Milwaukee, and have been playing to packed houses ever since. Mr. Durburough has been lecturing on his experiences at the front during many of the showings.

On Monday, December 6, these pictures start at the Fine Arts theatre in Chicago.

It is the intention of the War Film Syndicate Company, who control them, to sell State rights throughout the country.

WHARTONS BEGIN "HAZEL KIRKE" FOR PATHE

The Whartons have begun work on the famous old-time play, "Hazel Kirke," and are using a cast, including besides Pearl White, Bruce McRae (who starred in Pathé's "Via Wireless"), Creighton Hale, William Riley Hatch, Eddie O'Connor and Allen Murnane. "Hazel Kirke" will be put upon Pathé's Gold Rooster Program.

Margaret Greene, who has had some leading parts in Pathé Gold Rooster plays, has been signed for "Come on Charlie," John Cort's new play. Miss Greene last appeared in "Nedra," a Gold Rooster play produced by Edward José, which is making a hit everywhere.

MANY SCENES FOR "UPSTART" TO BE TAKEN IN GEORGIA

George Le Guere, who is to be featured in "The Upstart," Metro feature that will be put in production shortly, has gone to Savannah, Georgia, where many of the scenes will be photographed. "The Upstart" is a picturization of the comedy which had a successful run at the Maxine Elliott theatre, in New York City.

Edwin Carewe, who is now directing the finishing scenes of "The House of Tears," in which Emily Stevens is starred, will direct "The Upstart."

Ten Thousand Guests Attend Boston Screen Ball

The Same Number Were on the Outside of the Arena Trying to Get in—All Stars Introduced to the Fans Present, from a Platform Erected for the Purpose in the Center of the Hall—Governor Walsh and Mayor Curley at the League Event

Special to Motion Picture News

Boston, Dec. 4.

TEN thousand inside the arena with as many outside trying to get in was the record of the third annual motion picture ball of the Exhibitors' League of Massachusetts. It was an occasion to be proud of and the league with E. H. Horstmann as president should receive the congratulations of the entire industry.

The following officers and committees are the ones responsible for the success of the occasion:

E. H. Horstmann, president Exhibitors' League; S. Grant, chairman executive committee; R. W. Drown, secretary executive committee; G. M. Clark, treasurer executive committee.

Executive and Reception Committee: H. L. Asher, Geo. Baldson, W. V. H. Barhydt, S. Bernfield, L. M. Boas, W. H. Bradley, N. N. Brooks, J. C. Butner, J. J. Cahill, H. F. Campbell, V. J. Cohee, L. Dadmun, E. R. Daniels, W. E. Dowling, J. A. Eslow, E. J. Farrell, J. Gartland, H. A. Gilman, E. R. Gregory, E. W. Helley, H. Hirsch, F. J. Howard, R. M. Kane, Col. H. Kincaide, A. E. Lord, J. Lourie, P. F. Lydon, M. J. Lydon, A. H. Mailey, R. D. Marson, Louis Mayer, E. H. McCloskey, E. L. McEvoy, Sam Moscow, F. B. Murphy, J. F. Patton, Geo. Ramsdell, J. W. Raymond, H. Rifkin, W. E. Spragg, T. Spry, H. G. Segal, H. A. Sivovlos, F. H. Vine, G. Ware, A. F. Washburn, H. I. Wasserman.

Ladies' Reception Committee: Mrs. F. L. P. Brackett, Miss M. H. Brazier, Mrs. A. R. Carroll, Mrs. R. W. Drown, Mrs. J. A. Eslow, Mrs. E. H. Horstmann, Mrs. F. J. Howard, Mrs. A. E. Lord, Mrs. F. B. Murphy, Mrs. E. M. Young.

One of the features of the occasion was the informal introduction of all the stars present to the ten thousand Boston fans who were anxious to see their favorites. For this purpose a platform was erected in the center of the hall well above the heads of all. To this ascended the stars, each being announced so that all knew upon whom they gazed.

Clara Kimball Young, Mary Miles Minter and Francis X. Bushman showed that they were far from being waning stars, for they were applauded to the echo. Mr. Bushman finally having to make a short speech. This does not mean that the others were slighted—for they all received applause.

A Few of the Guests

Among those who were presented were the following:

Edison—Viola Dana, Mabel Trunelle, Edward Earle.

Equitable—Gail Kane.

Gaumont—Cissy Fitzgerald, Hale Forde.

Kalem—Marguerite Courtot.

Metro—Francis X. Bushman, Beverly Bayne, Mary Miles Minter, Valli Valli, Edmund Breese, Grace Valentine, Helen Dunbar, Peggy Hopkins and George Le Guere.

Thanhouser—Flo La Badie, Mignon Anderson, Gladys Hulette, Louise Emerald Bates, Morris Foster, Ethel Cook, Harris Gordon.

United Film—Christine Mayo.

Universal—Paul Panzer, King Baggot, Ben Wilson, Dorothy Phillips, Violet Mersereau, Harry Benham.

Vitagraph—Earle Williams, Edith Storey, Mary Maurice, Hughie Mack, Wally Van, Virginia Pearson.

World Film Company—Clara Kimball Young, Edwin August.

Governor Walsh arrived at 10:20, accompanied by his brother, Major Thomas F. Walsh, Major William J. Casey, Major W. J. Keville, Captain F. N. Gunby, Captain Charles T. Dukelow, Lieutenant Nat. T. Very, Judge Thomas H. Connelly of Brighton District Court, and Joseph F. Mellyn, the Governor's assistant secretary.

Mayor Curley came at the same time, with Mrs. Curley, Mr. and Mrs. Francis L. Daly and Secretary and Mrs. Francis J. Brennan. The officials were greeted by the reception committee and escorted to boxes.

The grand march—which did not get under way until 1 o'clock in the morning—was led by Governor Walsh and Clara Kimball Young. Following them were Francis X. Bushman and Christine Mayo, Earle Williams and Mary Miles Minter, King Baggot and Viola Dana, Edward Earle and Florence La Badie, Wally Van and Beverly Bayne, Earle Williams and Edith Storey and so on through the list.

After the grand march there was the Thanhouser Beauty Contest, in which over a score of pretty New England girls competed for the honor of being adjudged the fairest of all and for the opportunity of a screen career. The judges were Boston dramatic critics.

They selected as the prettiest of the candidates Miss Sophie Sidowski, of No. 73 Bird street, Dorchester, a winsome blonde. She was given the stage name of Doris Grey.

The Metro contingent contributed much to the gaiety of the ball with a dozen attractive maids in pierrot costumes, who graced one of the Metro boxes and were tremendously admired. They had a catchy song, to the air of "Bingo," whose chorus ran thus:

"M-E-T-R-O
T-R-O
T-R-O
M-E-T-R-O
And Metro is its name."

There was a "Metro" newspaper, too.

After all the introducing and the grand marching and the contesting, dancing was resumed and kept up until the big film star banquet in Horticultural Hall.

Accident Insurance, Almost!

J. W. Engel of the Metro officials made the happy suggestion at that banquet that the next national motion picture convention take place in Boston. This motion was seconded by Francis X. Bushman, the Metro star, and was unanimously adopted.

Just before arriving in Boston the Knickerbocker special, to which was attached the Metro special car, almost sought a comfortable resting place in the ditch. The engine picked up five three by ten beams at a cross over and it was only by the merest good chance and a clear headed engineer that the train was saved.

As a result of this escape the stunts and good times planned by President Dick Rowland and Arthur James went over with added vigor and life. Every one smiled when the camera men grouped them at the station, and there was no need of a "look pleasant" or "watch for the birdie"—all had the smile which would not rub off.

There were automobiles in which to parade to the Copley Plaza with a full band to head the procession. The stars were first with President Rowland and the property men in the back car.

After dressing the party was entertained by the company at a banquet in the main dining room. When consulted the hotel management said that they had never served a dinner which was more enjoyed. They did not know, however, of the near wreck and the resultant joy or the fact that Treasurer Joseph Engle, Francis Bushman, Valli Valli and Mary Miles Minter spoke.

The private dance in the St. James Hotel both before and after the big ball in the Arena was another outside feature enjoyed by the Metro party and their guests.

As a crowning feature of the good feeling between all members of this great industry President Rowland sent telegrams to all the stars and prominent members of the industry, regardless of their affiliations, congratulating them on their success at the ball. Capt. Charles E. Kinball was in charge of the transportation arrangements for one of the parties.

PERSONS CONSULTS WITH COL. SELIG

Thomas Persons, superintendent of the Selig Zoo, Los Angeles, Cal., has returned to that city after several days' business sojourn in Chicago, Ill.

While east Mr. Persons consulted with William N. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope Company, on business matters which are calculated to create wide interest among motion picture exhibitors at the proper time. In speaking of Pacific Coast productions, Mr. Persons predicted a most prosperous condition of affairs by Jan. 1.

CURWOOD'S VITAGRAPH FIVE-REELER FEATURES HUMPHREYS

James Oliver Curwood is the author of the five-part melodramatic Blue Ribbon Feature now being produced for the Vitagraph by William Humphrey.

Mr. Humphrey has selected Harry Morey, Carolyn Birch, Leo Delaney, Rose Tapley and Templer Saxe to enact the leading roles.

HORSLEY SIGNS MARGARET GIBSON TO LONG CONTRACT

In recognition of past performances David Horsley has placed Margaret Gibson under a long term contract, one of the clauses of which is that she is to be the featured feminine player in all productions for which she is cast.

Miss Gibson joined Mr. Horsley last September. Her first picture was "The Protest," a three reel Centaur Star Feature with Crane Wilbur. Following this she appeared in "Could a Man Do More?" another Centaur Star Feature with Mr. Wilbur. In both of these her work was of such a high class nature that Mr. Horsley tendered her a contract so flattering in its terms that Miss Gibson readily accepted.

VANCOUVER EXHIBITORS TO GET TOGETHER

Special to Motion Picture News

Vancouver, B. C., Dec. 3.

Although nothing definite has yet been accomplished, the managers of a majority of the leading motion picture theatres in Vancouver are at present working on an amalgamation of interests, with a view to benefiting all the exhibitors concerned.

The air is full of rumors, but those concerned in the scheme are not yet prepared to make an announcement of policy. The idea, however, consists of forming a strong combination to better conditions.

Fox Begins Production Under Californian Skies

General Manager Sheehan, William Farnum, Dorothy Bernard and Fifty Players, Take Special Train for Los Angeles, Where Company Will Work in Selig Edendale Studios

FOX FILM CORPORATION'S NEW STUDIO AT EDENDALE (LOS ANGELES)

THE Fox Film Corporation's invasion of California for the purposes of active studio work had its beginning on Wednesday, December 1, when Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager; William Farnum, Dorothy Bernard, and more than fifty photo players under Fox contracts departed on a special train for Los Angeles.

Coincident with their departure the Fox Film Corporation announces that it has taken on a long-time lease with the option to purchase, the Selig studio located in Edendale, a Los Angeles suburb.

Mr. Farnum, Miss Bernard and their associate players will be on the coast until well into the spring, and perhaps for a longer period. While there they will work in three or four pictures which the Fox Film Corporation considers could be greatly aided by resort to the California environment.

Oscar C. Apfel, one of Fox's leading directors, left Los Angeles ahead of the special train party accompanied by Lester Scott, his assistant, and A. Gondolphi, his camera man. Mr. Fox has recruited a special technical staff, who will operate the Edendale plant, and additional recruits will arrive at the new studio from the East from time to time.

The advent of practically one hundred Eastern players with their directors, and the consequent employment of several hundred other local people will give considerable impetus to the growth of the moving picture industry in Los Angeles.

Fox Film had planned over a period of months to acquire an ideal studio in California. An opportunity suddenly presented itself to take over under lease the fine Selig property, and so eager were the Fox directors to begin work under California skies that the negotiations were conducted and closed by telegraph.

General Manager Sheehan will remain in Los Angeles until the plant is working under a thoroughly systematized schedule.

Five studios are now in active operation under ownership or lease by the Fox Film Corporation. Three of these are located in New Jersey—at Fort Lee, Cliffside, and Jersey City. The fourth is under the direction of Herbert Brenon and is located in Jamaica, where more than twelve hundred persons are now busy appearing in the multi-reel Annette Kellerman feature, to be released in the spring.

The California studio makes the fifth in the chain.

Sixteen acres of ground have been purchased by the corporation on Long Island for the erection of the largest studio to be found in the New York district, and one that will closely challenge comparison with the largest in America.

This Long Island plant will be made the chief manufacturing headquarters of the great Fox picture enterprise. The ground is now being levelled and construction work will begin practically at once.

Miss Gordon to Make Screen Debut for World

International Star Will Appear in "As in a Looking Glass," Directed by Frank Crane—Robert Warwick Is Scheduled for "Ambitions of Mark Truitt"

SEVERAL additions of importance have been made to the list of World Film releases for the month of January.

Of more than passing importance will be the screen debut of the international star, Kitty Gordon. The vehicle chosen for her initial appearance, "As in a Looking Glass," is from the novel by F. C. Phillips. As a spoken play the story enjoyed great vogue a few seasons ago in London. Director Frank Crane will handle this feature, and he has chosen a number of screen artists of recognized ability to appear in Miss Gordon's support.

Work is well advanced on a production based on "The Ambitions of Mark Truitt," a story of the life and progress of a man born in direst poverty, who through honest persistency and pluck overcomes many obstacles and emerges a personage of great power, enjoying the respect and confidence of the community.

Starring in this production, Robert Warwick is seen in the role of Truitt. In his support is a cast of favorites, and the feature is being done under the direction of Oscar Eagle

Holbrook Blinn and supporting company, including Fania Marinoff, are enroute to Death Valley, where scenes will be staged for the production based on "McTeague of San Francisco," by Frank Norris, author of "The Pit." This feature is being made under the direction of Barry O'Neill. Mr. Blinn's wonderful ability and forceful personality should enable him to give an excellent interpretation of "McTeague."

Another feature presenting a star of the spoken stage will be a story based on "The Heart of a Thief," in which Catherine Calvert will star. Miss Calvert, in private life was Mrs. Paul Armstrong, the author of "Alias Jimmy Valentine," and other successes.

This feature will be directed by Emile Chautard.

KALEM'S "FROM THE MANGER TO THE CROSS" READY FOR BOOKING

Kalem announces that arrangements have been completed in time for the holiday season by which the feature, "From the Manger to the Cross" can now be booked direct from the makers. The statement is made in response to frequent inquiries from exhibitors who were desirous of making early arrangements to show the picture during the Christmas week.

For the further information of exhibitors it is stated that an unusually complete line of advertising helps has also been arranged for this five part attraction. The colored lithographs have been especially prepared by poster artists capable of turning out the class of work in keeping with the impressive subject.

The line includes two styles of one sheets, two of threes, three of eights, and a beautiful twenty-four sheet stand. A large four-page courier, printed on quality paper and telling the interesting story of the filming of the production with a score of commendatory quotations from metropolitan newspapers and prominent men is another advertising aid.

Hearst-Vitagraph to Comb Country for Topicals

Organization Lately Completed Plans to Have Cameramen on Lookout for Novel Subjects in Cities as Small as One Thousand Inhabitants, and Exhibitors Will Be Able to Take the Service Independent of Anything Else, at "Their Own Price"—Territory Divided Into Three Zones

WITH the joining of forces of W. R. Hearst, the newspaper and magazine owner, and the Vitagraph Company in the production of a news pictorial independent of any particular service, and for rental at a graduating scale of prices to meet the requirements of particular conditions throughout the country, exhibitors will have at their command a topical medium of vast scope at moderate price.

The company has worked out a plan whereby the country will be divided into zones for newsgathering and the distribution of the pictorial films. The service will be arranged to give exhibitors local and general news pictures. While a certain number of international news events will be furnished to each section the bulk of the subjects will consist of news pictures from the local territory. A theatre in San Francisco will not, for instance, be served with the same topicals as a theatre in New York state.

This full supply of pictures taken in the immediate vicinity is made possible by the combined efforts of the camera staffs of Hearst and Vitagraph. It is expected that the number of men ever on the scent for something new will result in many scoops by the company for the exhibitors taking the service.

A "special extra" service has been inaugurated for theatres desiring more than the usual allotment of subjects for each showing. A corps of messengers will be in readiness to rush pictures of unusual importance to the theatre managers contracting for these additional topicals.

Announcement an Unusual One

The company has worked out a system of lobby announcement and posters for advertising purposes in front of the theatres.

An announcement revolutionary in character is the statement that an exhibitor is at liberty to name his own price for the photo news service furnished by Hearst-Vitagraph. The details of this arrangement will be furnished exhibitors by the company upon application.

"We propose to handle this news weekly on the intensive zone system," states Albert E. Smith, of the Vitagraph Comapny, "and it has been decided to divide the country into three separate and distinct zones. We intend to have cameramen in every important center of over one thousand inhabitants in the United States, and the news weeklies will pertain directly to the zone in which the edition of the news weekly is made.

"In other words, the United States will be divided into three separate parts, Eastern section, Middle West section and Pacific coast section. News will be gleaned from each and every town and city of these three sections and anything of national importance will be sent to the headquarters of each section and embodied in the news weekly.

"Another important point," further remarked Mr. Smith, "is the establishment of laboratories in the principal news centers of the different zones. The news gathering facilities of the Hearst organization, coupled up with Vitagraph's advanced laboratory methods and the method of handling the Vitagraph news weekly, are such that within twelve hours after an important event has happened in a certain section, the pictures may be shown on the screen in all sections of the particular territory.

To Train Men to Camera

"Plans are on foot to utilize the services of trained news reporters who are accustomed to the Hearst system of handling news material and it is the intention of the Hearst-Vitagraph to give these news reporters training in the handling of the motion picture camera.

"A school will be established in the Vitagraph plant where all branches of the camera art will be taught."

When asked as to the method of distribution, Mr. Smith refused to divulge how this is to be done, but it is the opinion that some startling revelations will be made in this direction in the very near future.

One 3-Reel Feature a Week for Edison on General

Manager McChesney States that the Elimination of the One-Reel Pictures on the Program Will Allow More Time for Production of the Three-Reelers

UNDER the new reorganization plan of the General Film Company, the weekly Edison program will be the release of one three-reel feature put through the regular service of that company, Manager Leonard W. McChesney has just announced. This is contrary to the recently made announcements of the General Film Company, which stated that Edison would release a one-reeler on Tuesday and Wednesday of each week and a three-reeler on Friday.

Edison's regular program, until this change, was the release of a one-reel on Wednesday and Saturday and a three-reel on Fridays. The latest, and permanent, program will release a three-reeler on Friday each week.

Manager McChesney feels that the elimination of the one-reels will allow more time and concentration of effort on a three-reel feature.

This change dates from the week of December 20, and the first release under this plan will be "Blade o' Grass, on Friday, December 24, featuring Leonie Flugrath and Pat O'Malley. Next will be "The Matchmakers," on Friday, the 31st., featuring Sally Crute and William Wadsworth.

In addition the Edison studios will continue to release two five-reelers each month, put through the Kleine-Edison Feature Service. In this service, Miriam Nesbitt and Marc MacDermott will once again be seen playing together in "The Catspaw," by William Hamilton Osborne, on Wednesday, January 12; Viola Dana and Edward Earle, a new combination, in "The Innocence of Ruth," on Wednesday, January 26; Mabel Trunelle and Robert Conness in "The Crucifixion of Phillip Strong," on Wednesday, Febuary 19.

Manager McChesney welcomes the new order of things and is enthusiastic about what the open market will do for film betterment and the elimination of the unworthy picture.

League Executive Meeting Called for January 5-6

La Salle Hotel, Chicago, Selected for the Event, and Secretary Delves Issues Invitations to Vice-Presidents of National Body and State Presidents

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 4.

IN view of the numerous requests that have been made of President Fred J. Herrington for information regarding the time and place for holding the semi-annual meeting of the executive committee of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, Secretary James Delves has called a two days' session of the above mentioned meeting, to take place on Wednesday and Thursday, January 5 and 6, at the La Salle Hotel, Chicago, Ill. The first session will convene 10:30 a. m. on Wednesday.

Several matters of vital importance to the organization are to be considered at this meeting, including the selection of the city at which the National Convention shall be held in July.

Requests and liberal offers have been presented to the league by the following cities for the convention to date: Detroit, Mich.; Chicago, Ill.; Pittsburgh, Pa., and New York City.

In addition to the members of the executive committee, an invitation is cordially extended to all vice-presidents and state presidents of the league, and other exhibiting members of the league

Any state league or member of the league wishing information pertaining to this meeting, or in any way relating to the league, may make application to National Headquarters, 238 Fourth avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.

"ACE OF DEATH" FOR MUTUAL PROGRAM DECEMBER 15

"The Ace of Death," featuring Stella Hammerstein, and made by the Gaumont company, will appear on the Mutual program December 15 instead of the Rialto Star Feature, "The Secret Agent," with Robert T. Haines.

FOX OFFICE IN CHICAGO DINE SHEEHAN AND FARNUM

Chicago, Dec. 4.

A luncheon was given at the Hotel Sherman by the Chicago office of the Fox Film Corporation in honor of William Farnum and W. R. Sheehan who stopped off in Chicago for the day on their way to the new Fox Studio in California.

Many prominent Chicago exhibitors and others engaged in the motion picture industry in this section of the country were present. Mr. Worthington presided as toastmaster, first calling on Mr. Burkhardt of the Commission of Public Works of Chicago, who introduced William Farnum and welcomed him to the city.

Mr. Farnum gave a very interesting talk on his experience in motion pictures and ended with his famous recitation from the "Prince of India." He was followed by Aaron Jones in a short talk, then Oscar Apfel and Winfield R. Sheehan outlined the policy of the Fox Film Corporation. A few words from "Bill" Sweeney ended the interesting program.

MARSTON JOINS MIRROR FILMS

Lawrence Marston, one of the best known of the producers of motion pictures, has been engaged by the Mirror Films, Inc., and will join the forces of that organization the first of the coming year.

Col. Heezaliar Will Tell the Truth for Paramount

His Creator, J. R. Bray, Who Was a Steady Contributor to Life, Puck and Judge Before Going to Pathé, Will Furnish One Reel of Animated Cartoons a Week

SMALLER even than "Little Mary" Pickford is the newest star who has been signed up to appear exclusively on the Paramount Program. He is Colonel Heezaliar, who for many months has materialized from the pen of J. R. Bray, the noted cartoonist, and appeared with his travel notes and records of doughty exploits, on the screen.

Colonel Heezaliar, it will be remembered, is the man who calmly stood at the plate, with the bases full, and allowed the second strike to flick the ashes off his cigar, and then clouted the next one a rap which would make the swats of Home-Run Baker sound like the drop of a ripe grape into a coal bunker.

And now the Colonel is to star alongside Mary Pickford, Marguerite Clark, Pauline Frederick, Hazel Dawn and the other notables on the Paramount Program. It has been brought about by a new contract between the Paramount and the J. R. Bray Studios, Inc., whereby Paramount will have one full reel of animated cartoons each week.

J. R. Bray, the creator of Colonel Heezaliar, and inventor of several patented processes by which these funny cartoons are produced, has added five noted artists to his staff. Each one will specialize in one form of cartoon work, and their productions will supplement the bi-weekly appearances of Heezaliar.

In addition to this feature, Mr. Bray is preparing something which he is confident will be the most startling and original feature of this kind ever shown, and will open up a new field in motion pictures.

He is not yet ready to announce it, but C. Allan Gilbert, long famous as artist and illustrator, is working with him on the first releases, which will be ready some time in January. The new feature will be known as the "Bray-Gilbert Releases," and will appear once a month.

"I am surprised myself at the immense popularity of Colonel Heezaliar," said Mr. Bray to MOTION PICTURE NEWS. "It is without doubt the strongest cartoon character in existence, and is second only to Chaplin as a comedy character. Consequently we are going to feature this subject in the new releases, but in addition we will release a quantity of cartoon material, which will include a topical cartoon to accompany the Paramount Newspictures.

"Besides Mr. Gilbert I have added such artists as L. M. Glackens, Earl Hurd, C. T. Anderson and Paul Terry to the staff at the Bray Studios, and each will contribute something strong and striking to the new cartoon releases. Mr. Gilbert's new series is to be a phantasy novelty almost startling in its originality and conception.

"It has long been my ambition to produce the highest class of cartoon comedy possible, and place it before the highest class audiences in this country. For this purpose I have concluded that Paramount best suits my needs, and hence I have joined the Paramount program.

"In addition to these releases, we have arranged extensive distribution abroad. I believe my work is even better known in England than it is at home, and we plan to take advantage of the European market for such subjects. I have studied this cartoon question as related to motion pictures for more than eight years, and my original object in going into it was to open and develop a new field for the activities of artists. I believe I have done this."

Mr. Bray was born in Detroit, Mich., and has lived in New York since 1901. He was for seven years a newspaper artist, being also a steady contributor to the humorous weeklies, such as Life, Puck and Judge. He took his ideas to Pathé Freres over three years ago, since he felt that such a house with its many foreign branches could give him a larger international circulation than any other.

The Pathé officials at once saw the value of his work, and from that day to this he has dealt only with Pathé. Millions of persons have laughed and are laughing at the "Heezaliar" and "Police Dog" series, and his political cartoons in the Pathé News, the motion picture weekly, have attracted widespread newspaper comment.

Mr. Bray has truly originated a new school of art.

"Diamond from the Sky" Now on Mutual Program

Entire Thirty Chapters of North American's Picturization of Roy McCardell's Romantic Novel Is Released in Regular Service to "Help Exhibitors Beyond the Films"

THE release of "The Diamond from the Sky," the North American Film Corporation's picturized romantic novel, as a part of the regular Mutual Program, effective Monday, November 29, is directly in line with the Mutual Film Corporation's policy to give the exhibitor "service beyond the films."

The entire thirty chapters of this serial from the pen of Roy McCardell, may be had by the Mutual exhibitor in his regular service at no extra charge. All business will be handled by the Mutual branches, and not by special representatives stationed at the Mutual branches as was done before the entire picture novel had been released.

"The advantage to Mutual exhibitors, or to prospective Mutual exhibitors, in this new co-operative arrangement between the Mutual and the North American Film Corporations cannot be estimated," says D. J. Sullivan, secretary of the North American.

"First of all, there are no risks to be taken. The exhibitors in 4,000 picture theatres in all parts of the United States, have proved in dollars and cents in such considerable quantities that they have amounted to real fortunes that the North American serial picture was a success.

"These exhibitors had to take the chance last May, when "The Diamond from the Sky" was first ready for release. It really took courage for the exhibitor to book a continued story picture.

"We showed exhibitors all over the country the first three chapters of the picture. They had no further assurance that the rest of the film would be good, otherwise than that they knew the North American Film Corporation was investing $800,000 in it, and that this company had faith that it would make money for the exchanges, since that meant money for the corporation in turn. The exhibitors also believed that the company knew how to produce pictures.

"There was a greater outlay of money required from the first exhibitors, too, since twenty-five dollars a week was charged for the first week releases of each chapter.

"The exhibitor who books this picture today has no risk to run of any kind. The picture has been tried out and found good. He has only one-fifth of the original price to pay for each chapter, if he books it independently of the Mutual. He has nothing more than service rates to pay, if he books it with the Mutual Program."

GERTRUDE ROBINSON IN FLORIDA FOR GAUMONT

Gertrude Robinson goes to Jacksonville, Fla., to augment the Gaumont forces wintering in that city. Miss Robinson will appear in Rialto Star Features.

Miss Robinson first sprang into notice upon the screen when she alternated at the Biograph studios with Mary Pickford. Before that, however, she had made progress upon the stage. After making her debut in Edith Taliaferro's company, she played with H. J. Stoddard in "The Bonnie Brier Bush." Then followed numerous engagements which included roles in the companies of Edith Wynne Matthison and Thomas Jefferson.

After playing with Biograph, Miss Robinson spent two years with the Reliance company, and then returned to Biograph.

Censorship Hand Must Not Strike, Says Los Angeles

Producers, Exchange Organizations, Exhibitors and Everybody Else in the Industry Feel Need of Combating Activity of Censoring Board in the Center of the World's Motion Picture Production—Findings of National Body Is Sufficient, Is Stand Taken by West Coast

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Dec. 4.

THOROUGHLY convinced that local censorship in Los Angeles, the production center of the motion picture world, is a menace with evil effects for the producers, exchange organizations, exhibitors, and general public, locally, and sets a precedent for other cities throughout the country, Los Angeles people of every branch of the film industry have organized with the view of using every means to cause censorship laws of the city, county, and state to be repealed, and that the judgment of the National Board of Censorship be considered final in the censoring of all pictures.

This concerted action follows the censoring of "Damaged Goods," a Mutual Master Picture, and the fight for new censorship was during its primary stages, successfully carred on by J. A. Quinn, of the Superba theatre, and Dr. Sam Atkinson, national lecturer of the Rationalists' Association of America, who with attorneys was employed by Quinn to make possible the showing of "Damaged Goods" at the Superba theatre, where it is now in its third week and playing to capacity from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m., with an average daily attendance of five thousand.

The action of the censor board with regard to this film, and the refusal of the members of the board to reconsider and review the subject, caused an investigation by Mr. Quinn, which led to the filing of affidavits that brought about the dismissal of the president and secretary.

This was Quinn's second battle with the censors, and in it he was brought to realize the extent of the menace, with the result that he personally took it upon himself to organize all branches of the motion picture industry which has been accomplished. At a dinner given Monday evening by Mr. Quinn at a Los Angeles cafe, announcement of the success of his personal venture was made known to representatives of practically every producing organization, film exchange, and many exhibitors.

Want Film Commissioner

At this dinner, J. N. Johns, manager of the Mutual Film Corporation, Los Angeles branch, made a brief report of what Mr. Quinn and Dr. Atkinson, and members of the Mutual staff had accomplished.

This included the reading of a petition to Mayor Chas. E. Sebastian and the city council of Los Angeles, praying that the present censor ordinance be annulled, and that the city in the future, instead of having a board of censors, should have an officer, known as film commissioner, whose duty it is to see that only films passed by the National Board of Censorship be shown, and that all changes in the films recommended by the National Board be made.

This petition was signed by the head of every producing organization in southern California, every exchange manager in Los Angeles, presidents of many of the leading banks, trust companies, mercantile corporations, and leading citizens in all walks of life, containing in all more than five hundred names representative of practically every organization in Los Angeles.

Ways of presenting this petition to the mayor and city council were discussed, and finally those present decided it would be best to have a committee of thirteen arrange with the Chamber and Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association of Los Angeles to co-operate with the film men in the presentation of the petition.

Dr. Sam Atkinson was named as chairman of the committee, and instructed to select other members. Those named were Rev. Thomas Dixon, of the National Drama Corporation; Frank E. Woods, manager of production of the Fine Art Films; Fred Kley, business manager of the Jesse L. Lasky Company; G. A. Hutchinson, business manager, Signal Film Corporation; Henry McRae, director general, Universal Film Manufacturing Company; Lee Daugherty, production manager, Biograph Company; Dwight Whiting, business manager, Rolin Film Company; E. H. Allen, business manager, New York Motion Picture Corporation; J. A. Quinn, Superba theatre, and J. N. Johns, manager, Los Angeles office Mutual Film Corporation. The committee is to meet shortly and make plans for the defrayment of the expenses and completion of the work of getting the petition to the city council in the most advantageous manner.

Eight Thousand Dollars for Censorship

Talks made by those who have been interested and have taken an active part in the fight against censorship here, brought out the fact that eight thousand dollars is appropriated annually by the city of Los Angeles to defray the expenses of the censor board, and that during the past three years of the existance of this board, three films have been censored, and in two instances these were later passed by higher officers. The public viewed the two condemned films, and not a protest was made to the police or any city officers regarding them.

The reorganization of the present censor board by the mayor was reported, and action of this board in ordering eliminations from "Inspiration," a Mutual Master Picture, and "The Sable Lorcha," a Fine Art-Triangle subject, were talked of. In the former, the censors passed the scenes in which a girl appeared in the nude, but ordered views of a statue in a park eliminated.

From "The Sable Lorcha" the censors requested that three scenes be eliminated. One was that of a man being pulled by the hair, another of a view through a hole in the floor into a prison, and the third of a similar character.

Telegrams from the president of the National Board of Censorship advising that he would, within the next few days, reach Los Angeles, and in every way aid in the fight, were read, together with a letter from J. W. Binder, executive secretary of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, stating that this organization was ready and anxious to do anything possible toward killing local censorship.

The latter organization has a committee in Los Angeles, composed of Mabel Condon, Kenneth O'Hara, publicity manager of the New York Motion Picture Corporation; J. C. Jessen, of the News, and Clarke Irvine.

It was the consensus of opinion that any action with regard to censorship in Los Angeles, considered the hub of the motion picture industry, would have a marked effect upon every locality in the country, and for this reason all men of the film industry are particularly anxious to see that plans made here are successfully carried out.

J. C. Jessen.

KRITERION TO ANNOUNCE NOVEL PLANS FOR PROGRAM

In line with the Kriterion policy of cutting unnecessary expense and running their business in a business-like way, they have leased the old Kriterion floor at 1600 Broadway, New York, and will conduct the business hereafter from the building at 106 W. Twenty-ninth street.

S. L. Newman, of the Kriterion, who is at the head of another business conducted in the same building at Twenty-ninth street, will be in a better position than heretofore to take care of the affairs of the Kriterion and every inch of space devoted to Kriterion interest will be used to its fullest advantage.

The Kriterion interests hint at an interesting announcement to be made in the near future regarding the new Kriterion program.

BEECROFT GETS HALF PAGE "STANLEY" PUBLICITY IN HERALD

Chester Beecroft, general manager for David Horsley, has scored another publicity coup. This time it consists of a half page story regarding the Stanley series, in the New York Herald for Sunday, November 28.

The account, illustrated with five large half tones from scenes in the reels, tells of the events concerning the assignment of Stanley to the discovery of Livingston, by the elder Bennett, owner of the New York Herald.

The story goes on to chronicle the time, labor and expenditure of money made necessary by the difficulties confronting the producer in visualizing satisfactorily to the public the events in Stanley's daring penetration into the heart of an unknown continent.

CAREWE TAKES FLYING TRIP TO FARM IN SOUTHWEST

Edwin Carewe, who is directing the final scenes in "The House of Tears," a forthcoming Rolfe-Metro picture, in which Emily Stevens, the emotional actress is starred, will take a flying trip to his farm in Indian Territory, to look after some business matters, before he begins work on his new Metro production.

DIRECTOR EDWIN CAREWE DISCUSSING A SCENE IN "THE HOUSE OF TEARS," A NEW ROLFE-METRO FEATURE, WITH EMILY STEVENS, THE STAR

Mr. Carewe is one-fourth Chickasaw Indian, and inherited a farm of several hundred acres, through an Indian land grant, originally given his maternal grandmother. He has it stocked with high bred cattle and poultry, and in addition keeps a large herd of Indian ponies.

Mr. Carewe has several Metro photoplays to his credit, including "Destiny, or the Soul of a Woman," in which Miss Stevens is starred, and "The Final Judgment," in which Ethel Barrymore has the stellar role. In the accompanying photograph Mr. Carewe is seen discussing with Miss Stevens, the five points of one of the scenes in "The House of Tears."

PREMIER ADDS THREE TO ITS STAFF

Joseph Frederick whose work as a dramatic author is well known, has been added to the staff of the Premier Program in the capacity of scenario editor.

John W. Heaney has been appointed to the Premier Sales Department. Mr. Heaney is known as the man who made a 300-foot picture into a feature—"The Japanese Torpedo Boat in the Storm."

James P. Cogan has also been added to the staff of the Premier Program in the capacity of scenario editor.

NAT GOODWIN SIGNS WITH MIRROR FILMS, INC.

Nat Goodwin, veteran of the stage, who has been the star in perhaps two photoplays, has affixed his signature to a long term contract whereby he will appear exclusively on the screen for the new Mirror Films, Inc. He will begin work at the Mirror studio at Glendale, Long Island, about the first of the year.

Two Players and Two Technical Men Join Horsley

Millcrest, in Pictures for Year and Half, and Alexander, Long in "Legitimate," Will Be Seen in "The Terror of the Fold"

RECENT engagements by David Horsley for his playing forces at his studios in Los Angeles include Howard Millcrest and Edward Alexander, and for his technical departments Irvin J. Martinas and Freddie Wade.

Messrs. Millcrest and Alexander have been placed in Director William J. Bowman's company, producing Centaur Feature animal pictures, in which company William Clifford is featured. Mr. Martinas has been appointed Mr. Bowman's assistant, and Mr. Wade has been made cameraman for Ulysses Davis, who is also engaged in directing Centaur Features.

Mr. Millcrest has been in motion pictures for the past year and a half, and in that time earned extensive popularity. He was first with one of the Mutual group of manufacturers, then went over to Selig, with whom he was last engaged before joining Mr. Horsley.

Prior to his picture debut he followed the speaking stage as a vocation, appearing with the New York Hippodrome Company in "A Trip to Japan" and "A Trip Around the World," and other attractions staged at the big playhouse.

He was also stage manager for Julia Dean. His first picture for Mr. Horsley is "The Terror of the Fold," which is to be released as a Centaur Feature December 30 on the Mutual program.

Like Mr. Millcrest, Mr. Edward Alexander also makes his bow as a David Horsley player in "The Terror of the Fold." He was, until recently, with the American Film Manufacturing Company at their Santa Barbara studios, where he portrayed leading characters in "The San Rat," "The Curse of the Black Pearl," "The Arm of the Law," and other productions. This engagement was preceded by a two and a half years' service with the Universal Film Manufacturing Company.

Mr. Alexander has been engaged as an actor since the age of thirteen when he joined the Comby stock company. Five years later he went on tour with William A. Brady's "The Shepherd King" company, which engagement marked the beginning of many years service under the management of America's biggest producers.

In "The Terror of the Fold," Messrs. Millcrest and Alexander play the two most important parts in the support of Mr. Clifford.

Mr. Martinas, who is Mr. Bowman's assistant, acted in a like capacity for the director during his term with the Quality Company releasing Francis X. Bushman pictures.

Mr. Wade, the fourth acquisition, was for three years with the Vitagraph company. The first negative turned out by him is of "The Arab's Vengeance," which is to be released as a Centaur feature on the Mutual program December 16.

Universal Weekly Gets Shipment of War Films

Cameraman Cossette, Obtaining Pictures on the Western Front by Permission of French Government, Forwards Thrilling Battle Scenes—Subjects Sent from Hayti War Zone

THE Universal Animated Weekly has just received a shipment of war films sent here by its cameraman, Pierre Cossette, who is equipped with passes and credentials to follow the French and English troops to the firing line.

In this week's issue of the Universal Animated Weekly are shown pictures of Lord Kitchener inspecting the troops in London before his departure for Greece.

Among the interesting scenes taken with the French troops is one inside a 12-inch concealed-gun trench, which shows the soldiers actually at work inside the trench, and also shows from the outside the cannon being raised preparatory to being fired, and how it is recoiled after shooting.

As Mr. Cossette is a native of France and his pictures are all submitted to the French Government before they leave the country, he has succeeded in obtaining some excellent real war pictures and one set that will be shown in one of the early Universal Animated Weeklies is that of the raising of a French observation or "look-out" man, to a point from 50 to 75 feet in the air, where he gets the enemy's range and orders the firing of the huge cannons.

Mr. Cossette was raised with his camera to the top of an observation post and procured views depicting the destruction to the enemy caused by the explosion of shells near their lines. It also shows a "shower" of shells passing in front of the camera.

Jack Cohn, the wide-awake editor of the Universal Animated Weekly, has just secured authentic motion pictures of the insurrection in Haiti last September. The only thing that puzzles Jack now is whether they will pass the board of censorship, as the scenes show the actual fighting, firing and the killing of some of the natives.

Haytian rebel soldiers are shown actually fighting the United States troops at Cape Haytian, where ten marines were wounded and one killed on September 28. The U. S. Marines are shown carrying the wounded after the battle, Col. L. T. Waller commanding. Admiral Caperton and staff is shown on board the ship Washington, at Port au Prince. Doctors and Red Cross nurses are seen bandaging wounded marines after the battle at Petiete Riveriere.

The picture ends with the Cape Haitien General Morenci and staff of the Haitien army signing the famous peace treaty.

EXCHANGE OF PICTURES BETWEEN TERRISS AND ROYALTY COMPANY

Tom Terriss has arranged an exchange of productions between the Terriss Film Corporation, of which he is president, and the Royalty Film Company, of London. By this across-the-sea partnership the four and five-reel features of the two companies will be exploited equally in both countries. The two companies will handle also their one and two-reel comedies in the same manner.

XMAS ISSUE OF PICTURE PROGRESS AN INTERESTING NUMBER

That Paramount exhibitors find "Picture Progress" popular among their patrons is indicated by the fact that over 100,000 more copies have been printed for the Christmas issue than for October.

Jane Stannard Johnson, the editor, has made the Christmas issue distinctive in two ways: for the personal note in the stories, and the artistic quality present in the illustrations. The cover is adorned with the face of Edna Goodrich. George R. Meeker contributes a Yuletide poem; Mary Pickford, interviewed by the editor, tells some new anecdotes; Pauline Frederick gives her views on the importance of clothes in pictures; Eleanor Raeburn tells how screen stars will spend Christmas; a full page is given the question and answer department; there are four editorials, and other features that will please the popular fancy.

Mary Pickford — HER REAL SELF

By The Editor

THE most influential girl in the world! That sounds big doesn't it, but that's what Mary Pickford really is. There are hundreds of thousands of young people throughout the world who look upon that lovely little screen artist as a model of everything that a beautiful young girl ought to be. What Mary Pickford does, how she acts, what clothes she wears, and what she says are of the utmost importance to the vast numbers of girls and boys who are eagerly watching for her every appearance on the screen.

Just to give you an idea how influential Miss Pickford really is, I will tell you an experience which I had one day with this world-known little player.

After all the due formalities had been observed, I secured an interview with her at her studio, and when the morning came for the appointment, I found Miss Pickford seated at a desk busily engaged in signing a stack of letters which were piled up almost as high as she was. These letters were shown to me, and they answered questions and gave advice to girls in every part of the country who had written her about various things of deepest importance to them. A number of stenographers had been kept busy writing replies she dictated, and little Mary had a whole day's work before her to turn them. Besides the letters answered, there were thousands of others stacked up in piles all the way around the room which had not even been opened, but the hard working little lady told me she was going to answer every one of them and was doing it just as fast as she could between making pictures.

"And do you know," Miss Pickford said, "these charming girls who write me hold me strictly accountable for everything I do. If I do or say something in a picture which does not come up to their ideals of what I should be, they promptly write to tell me of their disappointment. There is one picture in which I play where it was necessary for me to appear in tights. I never have worn tights and never will do so, and for that reason another actress was engaged to play that particular part. As the face of this actress was not very clearly seen on the screen, the question was raised as to whether or not it was myself, and some girls who thought I really had done this wrote me about it. In fact, I received so

One of the best of the sixteen pages is that given to "Personalities"—Marjorie Daw and Carlyle Blackwell, in this case. Short illustrated biographies of screen players, in a magazine of this sort, offer great possibilities for capturing the picture-goer's interest.

Four Fox Pictures Released This Month from the 5th

Mantell, the American Tragedian, Will Be Seen in the First, "The Unfaithful Wife," as Count Fabio Romani, and on the 12th Will Appear "Her Mother's Secret"

WILLIAM FOX announces four photoplay releases for the month of December, beginning with December 5.

The first screen story of the month, released December 5, is "The Unfaithful Wife," starring Robert B. Mantell, with Genevieve Hamper. It was visualized from the story by Mary Murillo and produced for the screen under the direction of J. Gordon Edwards. Mr. Mantell, as Count Fabio Romani, a gifted nobleman who loves and trusts his beautiful young wife, Juliet, portrayed by Genevieve Hamper, with a devotion that is blind, and the means he adopts when he finds her in the company of his best friend, Durazzi, played by Stuart Holmes, creates a situation that is tense in dramatic appeal.

On Sunday, December 12, Mr. Fox announces for release a human story entitled "Her Mother's Secret," picturized from a successful stage drama by Martha Woodrow, presenting Ralph Kellard with Dorothy Green in the principal characterizations. Frederick Thomson was the director who prepared the story and registers many thrilling situations on the screen. Ralph Kellard, with Miss Green are assisted in the enactment of this story by Jule Power, Jane Meredith and Edwards Davis in the most important characterizations.

The third photoplay will present William Farnum with Dorothy Bernard in a William Fox production entitled "A Soldier's Oath," announced for release Sunday, December 19. The story is from the pen of Daniel Roosevelt, and was produced under the direction of Oscar C. Apfel. The story concerns Pierre Duval, a private in the French army, who, during his first engagement finds the Count De Morave dying on the field of battle. Entrusted by the Count with jewels and valuable papers belonging to the young Viscount Raoul de Reyntiens, he slips from camp at night and deposits them in a secret hiding place in his home, which was near the scene of the engagement.

He is followed by a war correspondent, Lazare by name, who murders Pierre's wife and steals the contents of the secret niche, among the spoils being a necklace belonging to Margot, Pierre's wife. Pierre is accused of the murder and sentenced to life imprisonment.

Mavis, Pierre's infant daughter, is taken into the Duke D'Aubrey's family. As she blossoms into womanhood she meets the penniless young Viscount Reyntiens, and they become lovers. Lazare, who, with his stolen wealth, has been masquerading as the Count de Morave, also falls in love with Mavis and presents her with some of the stolen jewels.

In the meantime Pierre, because of an act of heroism in saving his fellow prisoners from death by fire, is liberated. He obtains employment with a priest, tutor of Reyntiens. When Mavis visits the young Viscount, Pierre sees Margot's necklace around her neck. He soon learns of Lazare and swift retribution is meted out to the bogus count. Among the most prominent members of the William Fox family of stars assisting Mr. Farnum and Miss Bernard are Kittens Reichard and Alma Frederick.

The interest in the month's program will be enhanced by the appearance of Theda Bara in a typical William Fox production, entitled "Destruction," which will have its initial release on Sunday, December 26. It was produced by W. S. Davis from a scenario by Nixola Daniels. Miss Daniels selected as her theme the evil of the underpayment of labor.

Miss Bara is cast as Ferdinande, a captivating creature, whose god is gold and who, after marrying Froment, a prosperous mill owner, induces him to reduce the wages of his thousands of employees in order that she may lavish upon herself luxuries made possible from the increased revenue of the business.

Froment submits to his wife's dictates, reduces his employees' wages and thus plunges the workers into the greatest of poverty and suffering. Entrapped in the meshes of her own weaving, Ferdinande ultimately pays the penalty of her heartlessness. In the cast supporting Miss Bara are James Fury, Carlton Macey and Herbert Frank.

"THE GIRL AND THE GAME" SET FOR DECEMBER 27

In response to the requests of a large number of exhibitors the release of "The Girl and the Game," the Signal Film Corporation's series of railroad stories featuring Helen Holmes, to be released through the Mutual Film Corporation, has been set forward to December 27. Exhibitors in all parts of the country, interested in presenting this special feature, have urged that this postponement would be desirable because of the slack conditions in the amusement world that obtain the two weeks before Christmas.

Arrangements have been completed with a large number of the greater newspapers of the country for the publication of "The Girl and the Game" story week by week.

"Everyone of the fifteen two-act chapters is satisfactory in itself to the audience," observed Samuel S. Hutchinson, president of the Signal Film Corporation, "yet the thread of the main plot follows through in such a way that the exhibitor gets the continued story value. There is something to follow through the whole fifteen chapters, yet each chapter has an adequate climax."

Hutchinson a Keen Student of Screen Literature

"Anything That Can Be Put into Type Can Be Put into Pictures," Declares President of American Film Company, Who Is Optimistic Over Future of Industry

SAMUEL S. HUTCHINSON, president of the American Film Company, Inc., prefers to be known, above all else, as the pre-eminent student of the literature of the screen and the film as a form of art expression.

The "Buck Parvin and the Movies" series by Charles E. Van Loan, now being released, presents some of the most striking phases of the literary development of American productions, thinks President Hutchinson.

"It is in this series that we have discovered the application of literary satire to the screen," remarked Mr. Hutchinson the other day on the occasion of a visit to New York—a reluctant absence from his picturesque studios in quaint old Santa Barbara.

"We have heard a great deal of particularly favorable comment on the release in this series entitled 'This Is the Life.'

"And in this picture we have achieved for the first time in the history of film art the expression of satire, mingled most pleasantly and effectively with good dramatic quality and clean fun.

"A most gifted member of one of New York's literary colonies remarked the other day: 'I did not believe it possible to put the fun and real humor of Van Loan's stories on the screen. I am sure now that it has been done, and it opens up a new line of possibilities in the photoplay.'

"I can hardly agree with this man's point of view. I insist that anything that can be put into type can be put into pictures—and a great deal more.

"Through a study of the releases of the successive years we can trace this very natural but wonderful development of screen literature and its language. You see when films—I cannot possibly call them photoplays—were young there was absolutely no language of the film. The film had just taken over for its own the crudities of the pantomime art as it was then developed. There are no means and no attempts to express the shades of feeling, the coloring of sentiment, the dainty touches that go to make up the real dramatic situations of the high class photoplay of today.

"As I sat in the Mutual's projection room the other evening and saw 'The Buzzard's Shadow' screened, I was amused as my mind flashed back to the time when President Freuler of the Mutual and I organized the American Film Company and made the then absolutely revolutionary decision to make photoplays in which an entire reel, a whole thousand feet, should be devoted to one subject.

"Another fact of significance is in the bringing into the service of photoplay art the really creative forces of literary endeavor, and the rapidly growing appreciation of the possibilities of the medium of film expression. We have seen the greatest of the actors seek the screen. Now we are seeing the more gifted and capable writers adopting the language of the screen for their ultimate expression.

"I can think of no more apt example than Frank Hamilton Spearman, the author of 'The Girl and the Game.' For many years he had been one of the foremost successful novelists of America.

"Yet it is hardly more than two years ago that a Chicago newspaper man of my acquaintance, a friend of Mr. Spearman's, was able to induce the author to go to see a picture play. Mr. Spearman was introduced to the pictures in a little theatre in Evanston, Ill., where he was then living. He stayed the performance through and left with nothing at all to say about the pictures.

"But the next night he managed to spare an hour for the photoplay again. In a short time he was seeing every important release that was booked in his town.

"Today he is author of one of the most remarkable picture novels yet produced, 'The Girl and the Game.' And now instead of gingerly conceding possibilities to the pictures he is insisting on their coming dominance as a medium of literary expression."

Censors Led to Picture, but Not Made to Ban It

Board Refuses to Act on Dictates of Citizens Who Take Exceptions to Certain Parts of "Battle Cry of Peace," Drawing Crowds at Majestic

Boston, Dec. 4.

YOU can lead a board of censors to a motion picture, but you can't make them ban it. For the second time this has been proved in Boston. This time it is the German-Americans who have failed in their efforts to have the board act with regard to the wishes of a certain section and not the majority of the public.

Before it was the negroes. And, as in the case of "The Birth of a Nation," the mayor, the police commissioner and the chief justice of the municipal court have decided that "The Battle Cry of Peace," now drawing crowds to the Majestic theatre, is not offensive to any nation or race. or race.

What will become of the organization formed to fight the film is not known at this writing. But what has become of the petition signed by a large number of residents is known: it has been given leave to withdraw. And this after the three censors have seen the picture once only. They could not understand how Commodore Blackton's efforts to make the film and every part of it neutral could be construed to be read just the opposite.

And now the film reels on, plus additional support brought to it by the free advertising furnished by the petitioners.

In this connection it may be stated that John M. Casey, chief of the license division of the city of Boston, whose duty it is to view both disputed films and questionable exhibitions on the legitimate stage, is not a believer in state censorship. He knows such censorship is not always, nor was frequently effective. There is too much room for the entrance of politics, and therefore a hindrance to the workings of the board.

As for local censorship, Mr. Casey thinks there may be cases where it is needed, but judgment of the National Board of Censors as a general rule he is convinced that the should be followed. Such a course is followed in Boston, and it proves to be a benefit for all concerned.

There is little doubt, however, but that another effort will be made in the coming General Assembly to pass a law providing for a State censorship board.

But meanwhile Massachusetts exhibitors have had the benefit of winning one legislative battle against state assumption of control over their business. They are, therefore, well prepared to fight another one.

NO STOPS IN "WHIRL OF LIFE" STATE RIGHTS DEMAND

State rights for "The Whirl of Life," featuring Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle, the dancers, are in constant demand from the Cort Film Corporation, New York. Territory has been bought by A. Caille and Company, Majestic theatre, Detroit, Mich., for the states of Michigan and Ohio; Authors Film Company, Inc., Empire Theatre building, New York, bought New York state, Pennsylvania, and New Jersey, while the Celebrated Film Corporation, of Chicago, purchased Illinois and Wisconsin.

Warren Short, Equitable building, New York City, has just purchased Virginia, Georgia, Alabama, and North and South Carolina. Options on other territories have already been taken.

WINNING OF THE KANSAS CITY POST TO MOTION PICTURES A LESSON TO EXHIBITORS

KANSAS CITY'S first motion picture page made its appearance November 13 in the Kansas City Post.

The history of the inauguration of this department is interesting. It was the result of five months' work on the part of J. E. Foland, the V-L-S-E exchange in Kansas City, and some of the editorials that have appeared in Motion Picture News.

So far as we are advised, Kansas City exhibitors did not play a conspicuous part in the campaign to win the Post. In fact, the intimation is that they played no aggressive part at all. This is regrettable. After all, it is the exhibitors who will directly benefit by the Post's progressive step.

Which is a hint to exhibitors elsewhere who may be hanging back. If after an honest effort in co-operation with fellow exhibitors you feel that your attack on the newspaper avails nothing, all right; then enlist aid. Get your exchange to help you. If there is no exchange in your city, get the one nearest. And remember this: Foland and the V-L-S-E people toiled five months before they succeeded. It was worth the effort—an effort deserving all praise.

Exhibitors themselves should fight their own battles. If you are defeated, fight again; keep on fighting. It is primarily your battle, anyway. You are in your town to stay; so is your newspaper. The thing to do is to join forces with the newspaper. Tell it you will meet it half way.

The Post's first picture page, part of which is herewith reproduced, is a good starter. One of the things we like about it is its department head. It is a novelty; it gets away from the stereotyped. Another good feature is the splendid action "still" from "The Birth of a Nation." The editor, who by the way is Foland himself, also has an eye for local items. Two appear in the department.

Our chief criticism—and perhaps it would be the editor's also—concerns the length of the stories. They could be boiled down, giving room for a number of shorter items—the more the better.

This is a detail easily taken care of. We shall watch with interest the development of the Post's page. Certainly Kansas City exhibitors should not fail to give it their full support.

BILLBOARDS AND NEWSPAPERS HIS BEST ADVERTISING MEDIA

One of the leading theatres in Harrisburg, Pa., is the Regent. It is owned and managed by Philip Magaro and shows Paramount pictures.

Mr. Magaro is a strong believer in advertising. He uses a great deal of newspaper copy in connection with the Paramount national campaign. In regard to this, he said in a recent letter: "It certainly has improved business.

"I advertise largely myself, and after I was sure that the Paramount Pictures Corporation was sincere in its policy of help to the exhibitor, I went even further. I immediately engaged forty-four billboards in Harrisburg and surroundings. On the top I have a streamer reading 'Regent theatre, the Home of Paramount Pictures,' and underneath a six-sheet of the Paramount film productions."

THE KANSAS CITY POST, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1915.

Kansas Film Men Want Censor Tax Levy Made Lower

There is a new and vital force in Kansas, that is, working for the general betterment of the business public of amusement. It is the Amusement association organized recently at the Motion Picture Exchanges' league convention, at Pittsburg. The objects of the organization are far reaching, and cannot help but bring good results. An effort will be made to help the exhibitor of pictures by securing better legislation so that he will not be compelled to pay a heavy tax for the censoring of films that are shown in his theatre. It is going to help the exchange man by helping the exhibitor and it will secure for the moving picture lasting public better pictures.

Censorship as it is enforced in Kansas is working a great hardship upon the exhibitor in the way of an exorbitant tax, because he is compelled to pay for censoring films, and this problem, being the greatest that confronts both the exhibitor and the exchange man, will receive immediate attention of the association. Just what steps will be taken are not known. That will be worked out a little later by the executive committee.

In many parts of Kansas, prominent clergymen are using parts of the declaration of principles of the new association, in their sermons. They stand for everything that will lead to clean amusement for the moving picture loving public. Declaration of principles [illegible]

GRIFFITH DRAWS ON EUROPEAN WAR FOR BIG FILM.

Scene from the battle of Petersburg, as reproduced in the motion picture feature, "The Birth of a Nation," now being shown at the Grand.

Paramount News Weekly Will Be Released Monday

The departure for the Balkans of Donald C. Thompson, the camera correspondent who helped to take the Chicago Tribune European war pictures, marked the firing of the first gun in the attack on established precedent by the Paramount news pictures. The installation of a news ticker in the office of Walter E. Green, in charge of the Paramount News Weekly, which made its initial appearance November 8, marked the second and skirmishers are expected at regular intervals from now on.

"Paramount news pictures," said Mr. Green, "will truly be all that the name implies, not an assembled collection of photographs taken here there and everywhere, thrown on the screen in a haphazard manner with no thought for their proper presentation.

"They will contain the news of the world in pictures, current events, science, sport, fashions, household economics, and anything in which there is public interest. Paramount news pictures will be edited in an advisory capacity by men of national reputation in the publishing world today and will be presented on the screen as only Paramount productions can be. It will be departmentized, and each department will be in charge of a competent authority.

"This unique presentation of the news pictures has in itself caused considerable interest and unquestionable enthusiasm. In addition to the national service, Para[illegible]

YOUNGEST STAR IN MOVIES STILL PLAYS WITH DOLLS

Motor Car Turns Real Flip-Flop in Film Action

A peculiar accident occurred in the filming of one of the scenes of the Vitagraph blue ribbon feature, "The Turn of the Road," that added a touch of realism to the picture. Fortunately it was free from any fatality, except in the shaking up of the players concerned in its enactment.

In the big scene where Joseph Kilgour, as John King and Virginia Pearson, as Marcia Wilbur, are eloping in King's machine, a high-powered touring car, in making a sharp turn in the road, to avoid colliding with an approaching automobile, they are forced over an embankment. In rehearsing the scene Mr. Kilgour, who was driving, ran the machine too near the edge of the embankment, and the car started to slide. Half way down the declivity the automobile struck a stump and, turning a complete somersault, landed at the bottom in an upright position. Neither the players nor the auto suffered a scratch, but both Miss Pearson and Mr. Kilgour had the scare of their lives.

The camera man had his camera set ready for work and "caught" the machine in its wild slide. Thus most of the accident is shown in the completed picture, the climax, where the players are being rescued from beneath the overturned machine, being staged later.

EVERY HOUSE ORGAN SHOULD CARRY A READY REFERENCE GUIDE

The cut accompanying this article shows how Manager Hulsey, who operates a chain of five theatres in Texas, gives his patrons in four cities a ready reference guide to pictures for the month.

Of course few exhibitors operate so many theatres as does Mr. Hulsey; few have a chance to issue one house organ covering picture news in four towns. But every exhibitor can and should follow Mr. Hulsey's general idea, if he is not already doing so.

What we mean is this: somewhere in your house organ, whether it be monthly or weekly, get together in a neatly arranged schedule your program of pictures. This schedule should be on the first text page.

UNIVERSAL ISSUES ADVERTISING BOOK FOR "GRAFT"

Universal has issued a complete advertising campaign book for "Graft," its new serial, to be released two reels a week for sixteen weeks, from December 13.

Within 24 pages, 14 x 10½, this advertising book gets together about every conceivable scheme for advertising the serial, either by suggestion or in complete outline. It tells the exhibitor how to conduct his advance campaign, how to keep his patrons interested, and just what methods to use in both instances.

The exhibitor is given cuts and brief biographies of the eighteen American au-

Besides being in itself a spectacular piece of advertising, the book is an appeal to exhibitors to book the serial, in the first place, and then advertise it spectacularly in the second.

"POTATO MATINEE" A LIVE WIRE WAY OF HELPING THE POOR

A "potato matinee" is the novel method used by the Majestic theatre, Grand Junction, Col., to help furnish a Christmas dinner to the city's poor.

The Majestic has been running weekly penny matinees for school children, but from now until Christmas it will run each week a matinee, the admission price to which will be a penny and two potatoes, as a minimum. The children may bring a jar of fruit, or any other staple—in addition, if they wish. The donations will be turned over to the associated charities for distribution to the poor.

LOCAL NEWS WEEKLY POPULAR IN OTTAWA

Ottawans are now witnessing weekly several hundred feet of news film featuring local events entirely. To Mr. Errol Elting, manager of the Family theatre, belongs the credit for taking the initiative and originating a local animated review.

A few hours after the occurrence of the event, Mr. Elting is showing the feature on the screen. Although the innovation, for it is an innovation, in Ottawa, has only been going a few weeks, it is decidedly popular.

CLEVER ADVERTISING FOR "COLLEGE WIDOW"

A. W. Ballinger, Manager of the Dean Theatre, York, Neb., is the originator of a clever "stunt" for the exploitation of the Lubin V-L-S-E feature, "The College Widow."

This enterprising exhibitor built a goal post, in imitation of a real one, in front of his theatre and hung the foot-ball eight-sheet on the "The College Widow" between the uprights. Then he secured a large quantity of local high school and college pennants and decorated the posts.

Mr. Ballinger also decorated the stage especially for this production, using an interior setting, covering the walls with pennants, putting a study table with lamp and books, chair, folding screen such as used in dwellings, a big U. S. flag for a table cover, etc., so that it looked like a typical student's room.

TORONTO DAILY NEWS STARTS MOTION PICTURE COLUMN

The Toronto Daily News has recognized the need of a section devoted to the interests of the motion picture industry.

It has started a motion picture column, which is rapidly growing, and if results are as favorable as contemplated, the column may soon develop into a whole page.

The News is working along somewhat different lines to some of the other Canadian papers, in that the news printed is mainly Canadian in nature.

The notable Problem Play

"A Soul Enslaved"

Story by ADELE FARRINGTON Scenario by OLGA PRINTZLAU
Novelized by GEORGE BRONSON HOWARD

Featuring

Cleo Madison

and a brilliant cast

THIS thrilling drama of a woman's bondage touches on the double standard of morals, and while it is clean, powerful and absorbing it is replete with the most intensely dramatic situations. Every fan in your neighborhood will call it a great play. It is very much out of the ordinary in plot and Cleo Madison will further endear herself to your patrons by her wonderful emotional work. If released by the average feature concern it would be heralded far and wide as an extraordinary picture and you would have to pay them such an extraordinary price for it that you could not possibly make a penny of profit. Released by the Universal on the Universal Program at a REASONABLE price you are insured crowded houses and a big generous profit.

FILM NEWS FROM FOREIGN PARTS

Special to Motion Picture News

London, Nov. 24

UNDETERRED by the many obstacles which a war produces, British film manufacturers have during the past few months been putting their shoulders to the wheel, and now hardly a week passes but some notable films make their debut.

Hepworths, Turner Film Company, Barkers and the London Film Company have earned well-deserved fame, and from them early in the new year may be expected several first-class films. Amongst these, to mention a few, are: "Caste" (featuring Sir John Hare), "The Great Adventure" (Herbert Ainley), "Still Waters Run Deep" (Lady Hare, who makes her first appearance in film), "Whoso Is Without Sin" (film version of the Ideal Film Company's prize story), "The Welsh Singer," "Hard Times" (Bransby Williams), "Brigadier Gerard" (showing the late Lewis Waller), and "In Search of a Husband" (from the novel by Max Pemberton). Despite this apparent activity, it is by no means an unusual thing to see entertainments comprised exclusively of American films, excepting, of course for the current topical of the leading events of the day.

British Press Kindly Disposed to Cinema

Since the commencement of the war the press has been booming British industries, and cinematography has been given its due share of publicity—a vivid contrast to the pre-war conditions, when the cinema was almost taboo. Evidently realizing that film firms are big advertisers, the press is at least taking an intelligent interest in the activities of the trade. The co-operative spirit between these two potent factors in national life is as yet in embryo, but now that the ball has been set arolling by Pathé, who are running a big advertising campaign in connection with "The Exploits of Elaine" in the News of the World, and possibilities are being exploited, there are good reasons for hoping that in the future the relations of the press and the cinema will be much more cordial.

In January, the Trans-Atlantic Company are putting on the market a burlesque detective series entitled "Lady Baffles and Detective Duck." Each episode is separate and distinct, and will be boomed in the usual Trans-Atlantic way. Nestor comedies are winning their laurels, and the light and delightful handling of the generally unusual theme is bringing them to the front with amazing rapidity.

Over 2,500 cinemas supported the effort to raise $150,000 for the British Red Cross Society. So far $130,000 has been subscribed, and I understand more contributions are yet to come in. The Essanay Company have given $7,500 altogether. George K. Spoor and G. M. Anderson have given $2,500; the artists of the Chicago studios another $2,500; while H. A. Spoor, of London, and Charlie Chaplin have contributed the remaining $2,500.

Messrs. H. A. Browne & Co., Ltd., agents for the Neptune & Piccadilly films, have secured the agency for Great Britain and the colonies of the Kriterion Sales Corporation films, U. S. A., the first of which, "The Arm of the Law," will be released in January.

Famous Players and Lasky films pursue the even tenor of their way, and are to be regularly seen at most of the best known theatres. Mary Pickford is as much a favorite as ever with the picture-goers, and her films are always looked forward to with keen enthusiasm. The latest arrivals are: "Out of Darkness," "A Girl of Yesterday," "The White Pearl," and "The Fighting Hope."

Hepworths Filming Operas

Now that Hepworths are filming some of Sir Arthur Pinero's plays, it is interesting to note that two of the best known operas—"Carmen" and "Maritana" will shortly be available for the screen. The latter, a four reeler, is by the Kalem Company, and the former a Lasky production. When released, I feel sure that both will be given a reception which will do credit to the producers. While formerly the star film was a more or less original play, often written round some special feature, the public now favors a theme of repute, something that is talked about—whether it be a novel or a play—and certainly it can be said that a production of this kind has the author's name to commend it. "Carmen" has been exhibited to the trade, and it has been accorded some of the finest compliments ever accorded a film. The acting, settings and photography are unquestionably unique. Before long one may see some of the dramas of E. Hill-Mitchellson on the screen. The rights of sale are in the hands of Leon Vint, of London.

Few Christmas Films

Christmas films are by no means profuse this year. Edison and Vitagraph have, however, several new films on hand, and in view of the expected shortage will doubtless be in great demand. One of the Edison films is "The Birth of the Saviour." Some three or four years ago, when one film, "Manger to Cross" was released, there was a very acute controversy on films of Bible stories, and the magistrates of many towns objected to the exhibition of the film in the cinemas, and one wonders whether a subject like "The Birth of the Saviour" will cause a revived discussion of the pros and cons.

S. R. Edmondson, of American Film Releases, London, who has just returned from New York, intimates that he has made an arrangement with the Equitable Corporation, of New York, for the importation of several of their important films. The first to arrive is "Divorced," a five-reel society drama, featuring Hilda Spong.

The Vitagraph Company, whose London representative is George Smith, are booming a new series of films known as the "Blue Ribbon." The first trio of these superb three-reelers are: "Sins of the Mother," "Island of Regeneration," and "Chalice of Courage." Several new brands of American films have been introduced to the British public lately—a somewhat unexpected sequel to the enforcement of the film tax.

The latest leading British films are:

"When Passions Rise" (Walturdaw). A three-reel melodrama, somewhat sensational, dealing with an unsuccessful suitor, who out of revenge tries to abduct the woman he loves.

"The White Hope" (Hepworth). A sporting drama of the first order showing a great boxing contest. The fight takes place between a white man and a negro, George Gunther, who is a well-known character in the ring. There are some excellent training scenes.

"Her Boy" (Hepworth). A drama which will appeal to the emotions. A mother is passionately fond of her son. Away from home his path is beset with trouble and he is an easy victim of bad companions. Swearing he will atone, he enlists, and in an act of heroism, is killed on the battlefield.

Fred Gronback.

MANTELL GOES TO JAMAICA FOR FOX PICTURE

Robert B. Mantell, the eminent Shakesperian actor who recently deserted the spoken drama and entered into a contract of several years' duration with the Fox Film Corporation, sailed December 1 for Jamaica, British West Indies, where he will be photographed in a series of new Fox pictures.

Mrs. Mantell, who is known both on the dramatic stage and in motion pictures as Genevieve Hamper, accompanies her husband and will be co-starred with him in each of the new productions.

These two players appear under the direction of J. Gordon Edwards. Mr. Edwards accompanies them on their trip to the South. Abraham Carlos, general repretative of the Fox Film Corporation, is also sailing for Jamaica on Wednesday to make an examination of the Fox interests in the West Indies.

At the present time, under the general direction of Herbert Brenon, more than twelve hundred film players and technical operators are busily engaged at Jamaica and elsewhere in the West Indies in filming a spectacular multi-reel marine picture, of which Annette Kellermann is to be the star.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

PARAMOUNT PHILADELPHIA REPORTS BIG BOOKINGS ON CARMEN; OTHER EXCHANGE NEWS

THE Paramount office reports things humming on the Farrar "Carmen." There are four copies of the film working overtime.

So great is the demand some exhibitors are asking for rebooking, before they have ever shown the picture at all.

Last week Carmen broke all records at the Alhambra, Palace and Leader theatres in Philadelphia; at the Grand in Camden, Idle Hour of Westchester, Hippodrome of Lancaster, Orpheum of Wilkes-Barre, and Princess in Reading.

At the Leader, the eager crowd pushed the ticket box right into the lobby, so that the police had to be called to restore order.

At the Grand not a seat was to be had by seven P. M. At the Idle Hour windows and doors were broken by the crush. At the Lancaster, Wilkes-Barre and Reading houses a whole week was the unprecedented time given to this photoplay.

Paramount also reports a hearty welcome to its new weekly, "Newspictures." Three weeks solid booking for the first release are the figures. The Newspictures will have the Thanksgiving Day Penn-Cornell football game filmed for its exclusive use.

"Bella Donna," the Famous Players release with Pauline Frederick, escaped lightly the sharp censorial axe and is booked for a week at the Stanley theatre.

J. E. Hennessey, of Fox Film, took a flying trip to New York this week in the interest of the Philadelphia exchange. The Fox Carmen is having a successful career in this territory.

The two copies of the film, all that the Quaker City branch have yet been able to capture, are booked away ahead.

This Theda Bara "Carmen" is now traveling around the state and will not be shown in the city again until next week, in accordance with the Fox policy, which keeps its releases away from the neighborhood theatres for two weeks atfer they have been shown in the big Market street houses.

When "The Flame of Passion," a Picture Playhouse Film Company releases with Tom Ferriss as star, went to the board of censors it was turned down completely.

The board objected to its name as well as many of its scenes, while praising its fine construction and photography.

Oscar Libros, the exchange manager, at once asked for another review of the picture, which was granted.

The censors said at the second showing—if the name of the picture were changed, most of the titles altered and many vital scenes eliminated the photoplay would then pass.

As this would necessitate a retaking of the whole subject, it was, of course, an impossible proposition.

Whether the case will be taken into court has not yet been decided by the powers that be in New York.

In New Jersey, Maryland and Virginia, the uncensored territory handled by the Philadelphia exchange, the picture is going with a rush.

BAMBERGER'S V-L-S-E PLAN BRINGS 40 TURKEY DAY BOOKINGS TO MEADE

More and more those at the helm of things are beginning to appreciate the value of a two cent stamp properly used in getting new business in the moving picture industry.

Leon J. Bamberger, manager of the sales promotion system of the V-L-S-E, who is credited with conducting one of the most successful mail promotion campaigns, which has yet been started, by means of efficient follow-up letters, is booking from the home office, it is understood, several thousands of dollars worth of business a week.

All the members of the sales force of the V-L-S-E are enthusiastic over the mail methods of promoting business, as they have been developed by Mr. Bamberger, under the supervision of C. R. Seelye, assistant general manager of the Big Four, and many of the offices are adopting the system to a larger extent each week.

It is held that if such campaigns are worked consistently and if the letters are prepared in a manner to help the exhibitor, practically the same amount of interest may be aroused as a personal solicitation, and at far less expense.

C. A. Meade, manager of the Dallas office of the V-L-S-E, adopted the follow-up plan with marked success, in soliciting Thanksgiving business. Mr. Meade was the first manager of whom it has been reported, made a special holiday campaign.

Mr. Meade's first letter brought him forty Turkey Day bookings. The final result from the campaign was more than one hundred.

HARDCASTLE TAKES CHARGE OF KLEINE'S ATLANTA OFFICE

B. B. Hardcastle is the new manager for George Kleine's Atlanta office. He assumes charge of the Kleine interests in the southeastern States after a record experience as a salesman traveling out of the Chicago office.

TOM NORTH GIVES "THE BATTLE CRY" BIG SEND OFF IN SEATTLE

A most distinctive reception was tendered the stirring Vitagraph feature, "The Battle Cry of Peace," which the V-L-S-E is now releasing, at a private showing held at the Press Club in Seattle, last Wednesday.

To Tom North, manager of the Seattle branch of the V-L-S-E, belongs the credit for staging the introduction of this picture to the people of the northwest.

The showing was preceded by a parade through the principal thoroughfares of the city, headed by a band, the mayor, the principal military and civil organizations and officials of the city.

After the parade an exhibition of "The Battle Cry of Peace" was given at the Press Club. Two well-known ministers of the city who saw the production, based their Sunday morning sermons on it, and newspapers of Seattle gave it front page stories.

The picture will be shown to the public in Seattle, beginning Christmas Day, also in Portland and Tacoma.

BUFFALO EXCHANGES INAUGURATE C. O. D. POLICY

In the early part of November the film exchanges in the city of Buffalo, N. Y., held several enthusiastic meetings with the idea in view of eliminating the undesirable "dead beat" element which has been a hindrance to the healthful growth of the film industry all over the United States.

On November 22 practically every film exchange agreed to demand prepayment for all services two days in advance of the play date or to ship the films C. O. D. in the event of failure to receive check.

The stand taken by the exchanges in the matter is this, that the exhibitor who can and does pay his bills will be pleased with the new policy because it will help him to eliminate the fly-by-night fellow who opens up a closed theatre and feasts on the credit extended by film exchanges to the detriment of his honest neighbor.

In other words, the exhibitor who is trying to make an honest living will not have the unfair competition of the man who deliberately intends to beat the exchange because if he had to pay his film bills, he could not open the theatre.

The exhibitors as a unit seem to be unanimously in favor of the new policy although it met with some adverse criticism.

DRUMMOND ENLARGES MUTUAL IN SEATTLE

Mr. Drummond, manager of the Mutual branch at Spokane, Wash., is enlarging his exchange and is putting in a projection room. Mr. Drummond reports business of the Mutual very good.

BIG ELECTRIC SIGN FOR PATHE IN CINCINNATI

A mammoth electric sign will blaze forth in front of the Pathé exchange building, 217 East Fifth street, Cincinnati, within a few days.

It will be illuminated by 442 Mazda lamps with the famous Gold Rooster seal reproduced in a large lighted circle of red lights on top. There will also be a border of red lights. When completed the sign will have three lines of reading matter, which will be changed every week to announce to the people of Cincinnati that week's Gold Rooster release, the name of the star and the theatre in which it will run. It is estimated that over 350,000 people will see the sign, as the building is located within a stone's throw of Government Square, where there is the heaviest traffic of the city. Manager Holah of the company has also placed three sixty-foot billboards at advantageous points about the city. These billboards are illuminated at night.

BERNFELD FINDS "AT BAY" FORCES DOUBLE BOOKINGS

Manager Bernfeld, of the Pathé exchange in Boston, is one of the busiest men this side of the cemetery, and all because of the Pathé Gold Rooster plays. "At Bay" is drawing double bookings in many places, and the phone in the Bernfeld office does a jingle-bell dance constantly with the demands of exhibitors far and near for the Pathé specialty.

Among those houses which have taken the Gold Rooster service is the Broadway in Springfield, a Goldstein house. The Inman Square theatre in Cambridge, a new house, has placed Pathé on its program with Paramount, including the Wallingford series, "Neal of the Navy" and "Who Pays?" The Pathé stars at the film ball were Pearl White, Creighton Hale and Sheldon Lewis. L. S. Gasnier, general manager, was also present.

TAUBE AND BEYERLY IN CHARGE OF UNIVERSAL IN MONTREAL

The Canadian Universal Film Company has made an unique change in its Montreal office. Sid Taube, formerly in charge of the Universal office in Vancouver, and Tom Beyerly, latterly with the General Film Company, have been placed in joint control of the Universal office in Montreal. Their authority is equal, but it is felt that with two men of the calibre of the above, the full amount of business should be derived from the fertile, though difficult field, in Quebec Province.

So far as is known, the Universal has established a precedent in this matter, and the results will be well worth watching. Both of the men selected have an exceptionally successful record, but it was only after a careful consideration that they were chosen.

METRO BRANCH IN 'FRISCO READY FOR BUSINESS

The new branch exchange of the Metro Pictures Corporation in the Film Exchange building at Golden Gate avenue and Jones street, San Francisco, is now ready for business, the office fixtures and equipment having been installed this week.

The entire stock of Metro films has been moved from the Golden Gate Film Exchange, and several of the employes of the latter concern have been taken over by the new exchange. William Bernard, traveling representative of the William Fox Film Corporation just around the corner, will represent the Metro interests on the road and will start upon his initial trip at an early date.

While in the Northwest Harry J. Cohen engaged the services of E. J. Lipson, of Seattle, as manager of the branch to be established in Los Angeles, and the latter was in San Francisco recently for a few days on his way south.

Mr. Cohen will go to Los Angeles shortly, leaving the San Francisco establishment in charge of E. D. Selden. The local exchange is a large one and compares very favorably with other San Francisco film exchanges.

FIREPROOF BUILDING ERECTED SPECIALLY FOR FILM INTERESTS FOR PHILADELPHIA

THE film interests of the Quaker City are expressing much satisfaction that at last an up to date, fireproof building suited to their needs is in sight. Mastbaum Bros. & Fleisher, one of the members of which is Stanley Mastbaum, has commissioned its architects, the Hoffman Company, to prepare plans for a seven-story fireproof building exclusively for the use of film exchanges and allied lines.

Ground has been acquired at the northwest corner of Juniper and Arch streets, in the heart of the city, within a stone's throw of city hall, railroad stations and express offices.

Philadelphia capital is represented in this project which, it is said, entails an expenditure of a million.

The proposed building will be ready for occupancy by spring, and will have every modern equipment known for the industry, including a storage vault for films on every floor, as well as ample projection rooms.

The Board of Fire Underwriters has approved the plans of the architects, and it is said will give the building the lowest insurance rate ever known in the city for a similar structure.

Before going into the project, Mastbaum Bros. and Fleisher, who also have interests in a chain of picture houses in several cities, asked opinions from the most prominent exchange managers as to the desirability of such a building, receiving the most favorable replies in nine-tenths of the cases.

At present all of the exchanges ramble over Vine and adjacent streets between Twelfth and Juniper, familiarly known as "Film Alley."

The stringent fire laws of Philadelphia, however, have forced the exchanges to this section where they are housed for the most part in buildings entirely unsuited to their purpose, but which have nevertheless tremendous insurance risks.

PICTURE PLAYHOUSE OPENS FRISCO OFFICE

The block on Golden Gate avenue, between Jones and Leavenworth streets, has become the center of the film exchange business in San Francisco during the past year, and is steadily drawing new recruits.

The latest addition is the Picture Playhouse Film Company, which is preparing to open an exchange shortly at 100 Golden Gate avenue. E. H. Emmick, who returned to the coast recently from a trip to New York, is opening this office and will make this his headquarters.

MARRIED IN PATHE OFFICE AT CLEVELAND

What is claimed to be the first motion picture film exchange wedding in Cleveland was the uniting of Mack Zucker, shipping clerk of the Pathé Freres, and Stella Barrows, who is well known in motion picture circles. The ceremony was performed November 30 in the Cleveland headquarters of the Pathé company.

VERLEYE IN CHARGE OF PARAMOUNT AT NEW ORLEANS

R. S. Verleye, a salesman out of the Atlanta office of the Southern Paramount Pictures Corporation, has arrived in New Orleans and assumed active management of the Crescent City branch of Paramount. Mr. Verleye is well known in Southern territory. He succeeds F. F. Creswell, who was temporarily in charge.

It is announced that World Film has taken Mr. Creswell. He has gone to Memphis to take charge of the Memphis branch of the World Film Corporation.

Mr. Verleye told MOTION PICTURE NEWS that the Paramount's New Orleans business had exceeded his expectations. "We're right here, and here to stay," he said.

DAVIS FILM SERVICE ENLARGES QUARTERS

The Davis Film Service, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., handling quality programs, is overhauling and remodeling its quarters to comply with the stringent fire laws passed by the last session of the legislature in Pennsylvania.

The office and the paper mounting department will occupy the main building, 30x100 feet. A portion of this space will be devoted to the display of modern machine equipment. The film vault and the projection room are in a separate building, surrounded on all sides with a fifty foot driveway.

FAMOUS PLAYERS WITH LARGER QUARTERS IN VANCOUVER

New and larger quarters have been secured by the Vancouver branch of the Famous Players Film Service, Ltd., and during the past week the change was made from the Holden building to the Orpheum building, which is in a more central location, and gives the Paramount force a much finer place of business than before, the suite comprising four offices and a large vault.

The Orpheum theatre, using first run Paramount pictures, is in the same building.

ANNA PAVLOWA IN A QUINTETTE OF POSES, AS SHE APPEARS IN "THE DUMB GIRL OF PORTICI" (Universal)

AUGER VISITS ST. LOUIS FOR MUTUAL

E. Auger, formerly manager of the General Film Exchange, was in St. Louis last week on business for the Mutual Film Corporation, with whom Mr. Auger is now affiliated.

Mr. Auger is well known in the St. Louis district, and renewed acquaintance with many of his old friends

J. W. Cotter, who has been manager of the St. Louis branch of the Kriterion Film Exchange for some time, has resigned, and says he will take a short rest before joining another organization.

BOSTON PHOTO-PLAY EXCHANGE DISTRIBUTING "OLD GLORY"

The Boston Photo-Play Company, of 100 Boylston street, Boston, is distributing the film spectacle "Guarding Old Glory" throughout the New England district.

A circular letter has been sent to exhibitors everywhere in the district, stating just what the film is, quoting prominent persons who have seen and praised it, and urging the exhibitors to lose no time in booking the feature.

FOX SECURES CONTRACTS FOR FOUR-FIFTHS OF LOS ANGELES SECTION

The Los Angeles Fox branch has been so successful in making bookings that they now have contracts for four-fifths of the estimates for the maximum business in the territory.

In making the estimates for business, the size of the town, theatre, seating capacity, and prices were taken into consideration, and every town in which a theatre is located was placed in the estimate.

LARGER QUARTERS FOR FOX BRANCH IN CLEVELAND

The Fox Film Corporation now is located in its new offices in the Belmont building, Cleveland, taking two-thirds of the space on the fourth floor. The new offices contain four times more floor space than the old offices in the Columbia building.

Ohio Doesn't Temper Wind to Shorn "Mary's Lamb"

Censor Board, Ignoring Fact that Film Version Does Not Vary from Stage Play with Carle, Who Also Is in the Picture, Declares It is "Harmful"

Special to Motion Picture News

Cleveland, Dec. 4.

THE state censors have barred "Mary's Lamb," declaring that the comedy is "harmful." The filmed version is the same as the musical comedy that appeared on the stage for a number of years with Richard Carle as the star. Carle is in the screen play and no one ever believed before that the comedy was "harmful."

"The Devil's Daughter," featuring Theda Bara, is being exhibited at the Bijou Dream theatre. No, the Ohio censors have not reversed their action in barring certain parts of the film on the alleged plea that "as the Devil never had a daughter, the title is misleading." The censors are being ignored, as they never rescinded their original order.

Cleveland theatre managers are looking to the National Board of Censorship for guidance, and as that board has approved the film, it is being shown in defiance of the state censors.

The cut-outs that were originally ordered by the Ohio board are included in the picture being shown.

Commenting on the film, the Cleveland Press, which has a live motion picture department says:

"Those who saw the play when first presented here, and now see it in its more complete form, may enjoy the mental exercise of guessing the reasons the censors had for barring the scenes they refused to pass.

"In many other film plays the orders of the state censors are now being disregarded in Cleveland."

Another straw that shows how the Ohio Board of Censorship stands in Cleveland is the refusal of Squire Schwartz to retry Sam Bullock on the charge of violating the censorship laws. Squire Schwartz, in discussing his refusal said: "Chairman Williams is determined to push the case, but he will have to go before some other justice of the peace. I told him last week that I would not preside, and I won't change my mind."

Chairman Williams, of the state censors, is convalescing from an operation for appendicitis, and no further action will be taken to uphold the censorship dignity in the courts until he recovers.

In the meantime Mrs. Mary Barchard, chief clerk of the board of censors, is unofficially a picture mentor, reviewing films after eliminations have been made. It is said that Mrs. Barchard is more qualified to pass upon pictures than any of the board members.

Paul Alwyn Platz.

FOX SIGNS THREE AND FIVE YEAR CONTRACTS WITH HIS STARS

The Fox Film Corporation makes announcement that all of its featured players, including William Farnum, Theda Bara, Robert B. Mantell and his wife, Genevieve Hamper, have been signed up for contracts covering a long period of years.

These contracts vary from three to five years in duration.

William Fox has also made long-time contracts with several of his directors, beginning with Raoul A. Walsh, whose most recent achievement was the Theda Bara impersonation of "Carmen."

MULTIPLE REEL PLAY IN ORIGINAL COLORS FROM GAUMONT

In "A Prince of Yesterday" Gaumont has produced, for release at the holiday season on the Mutual Program, a multiple reel feature in original colors.

The story—that of a young prince who will not wed a princess of a foreign court because he has never seen her—lends itself, because of its elaborate interiors and exteriors, readily to colorful investure.

It will be released as a Rialto Star Feature December 29.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

"SEALED LIPS," JOHN INCE PRODUCTION, FIRST ALL STAR EQUITABLE SUBJECT

ADELE RAY MARY CHARLESON MARIE E. WELLS

THE first all-star cast production from the Equitable studios is the John Ince production of "Sealed Lips," in which William Courtenay, Mary Charleson, Arthur Ashley, Marie Wells and Adele Ray handle the principal roles and which required seven weeks of work before the scenes in which Mr. Courtenay appears were completed and four additional weeks to complete the lesser scenes.

Mr. Ashley, who recently completed his appearance before the Rolfe camera, portrays the role of Cyril Maitland, while Mary Charleson and Adele Ray and Marie Wells have equally important parts.

E. Mason Hopper completed the production of "The Labyrinth" in which Gail Kane is making her Equitable debut and leaves for Tucson, Ariz., this week to begin work on Miss Kane's second production, "Her God," which will characterize the Equitable program early in February.

In "The Labyrinth," Mr. Hopper engaged for the theatrical scenes Marcus Loew's Plaza theatre and the entire Town Topics company of one hundred and ten players.

In "Idols" in which Katharine Kaelred is playing for Equitable, Murray's Restaurant is the locale for a great number of scenes. The elaborate ballroom was engaged for an entire week, with privilege of using the magnificent ballroom each day until the lunch hour. Lighting equipment was installed and moved each day.

Charles Seay, accompanied by Muriel Ostriche, Molly King and eighteen other principals, left last week for Albany, Ga., where, in conjunction with the Con T. Kennedy Carnival and Gala Week Company, Miss Ostriche's next picture "Babette of the Ballyhoo," a purely circus story, will be staged.

The production of the Ostriche picture was delayed one week because of the accident suffered by the Kennedy Company, when five of their people and a number of animals were killed in a train wreck.

At the civic ball held by the municipal authorities of Albany, Director Seay procured the use of the big open air ballroom and staged a number of essential scenes, using the several thousand natives as extras.

In addition to Seay, Ince and Hopper, Equitable has Harry Pollard, Webster Cullison, S. E. V. Taylor at work, and Frank Powell preparing to begin his first production under the Equitable banner.

Mr. Taylor, with Molly McIntyre in "Nan Perrine," the debut of Miss McIntyre, is at Port Royal and Kingston, Jamaica, in the Antilles, where the principal scenes of his picture will be staged.

"MAKING OF CROOKS" WILL SHOW UNDOING OF THE UNSUSPECTING

Jack Pickford will make his initial appearance in Selig productions in the forthcoming feature production, "The Making of Crooks," to be released through General Film Service on Monday, December 27.

In "The Making of Crooks," Mr. Pickford assumes the role of an unscrupulous pool shark, who, through the instigations of the "pool room ring," entices the rising generation into ways that are dark and tricks that are vain. Mr. Pickford is supported by an all-star cast of players.

"MAN'S SACRIFICE" A VEHICLE FOR EDITH STOREY

In A. C. Lichty's dramatic story, "A Man's Sacrifice," produced by George D. Baker as a Vitagraph Broadway Star Feature in three parts, Edith Storey, Ned Finley, Evart Overton, Thomas R. Mills and George Stevens are featured.

GREAT NORTHERN PLOT THROBS WITH WARM CITY LIFE

On December 20 the Great Northern Film Company will release the next Polar Bear feature, entitled "Sins of Great Cities." This is a problem play, featuring Ebba Thomsen.

After her father's sudden death Dorothy

SCENE FROM "SINS OF GREAT CITIES" (Great Northern Film)

Reynolds finds a temporary home with her friends, Paul and Irene Walter. "Monty" Sullivan, an adventurer and proprietor of the ill-famed Red Mouse, represents himself to her as a former business friend of her father, and arranges to have his manager offer Dorothy an engagement at the Red Mouse, which she, much to her distaste, accepts.

In order to ensnare her he soon proposes marriage to her. One of Sullivan's butlers, garbed as a minister, officiates at the mock-marriage, which takes place at Sullivan's home. Dorothy discovers the plot, and at once returns to her friends, through whom she obtains an engagement at the Casino theatre. After a successful debut she becomes acquainted with Judge Walcott, who falls in love with her, and after a short while he proposes to her.

Sullivan, who has not lost track of his intended victim, threatens to denounce her as his former mistress unless she leaves Walcott. Paul, learning of this, shoots Sullivan, who sends for Dorothy and Walcott and with his last breath brands her. Walcott thrusts her aside; but learns the truth and he and Dorothy face a happy future.

JULIA SWAYNE GORDON, ROBERT WHITWORTH IN "WASTED LIVES"

Julia Swayne Gordon, Robert Whitworth, Arline Pretty, Arthur Cozine and Leo Delaney will be featured in Ouida Bergere's three-part dramatic Broadway Star Feature, "Wasted Lives," which was produced for the Vitagraph by Director Theodore Marston.

"PRICE FOR FOLLY" AND "WHAT HAPPENED TO FATHER" ARE DECEMBER VITAGRAPHS

THE Vitagraph Company announces two Blue Ribbon features for December. "A Price for Molly," a five-part drama of French social life, which will be released on Monday, December 13, strikes a deeper note that will clutch at the heart strings.

The second release of the month will again bring Frank Daniels to the fore in Mary Roberts Rinehart's story, "What Happened to Father, in which Mr. Daniels has a part similar to those that made his name a household word during the time he was the best-known and best-liked comic opera comedian on the legitimate stage.

In holding "What Happened to Father" for release until the latter part of the month, namely, Monday, December 27, the Vitagraph Company offers it as their contribution to the festivities of the holiday season.

There is a story attached to "A Price for Folly" that is unusual in the production of motion pictures. George I. Dillenbeck, the author, sold it to the Vitagraph Company as a one-part drama and its was turned over to George D. Baker for production.

Selecting a cast that included Edith Storey, Antonio Moreno, Harry Morey, Charles Kent, Louise Beaudet and Hughie Mack, the Vitagraph stars, who were to portray the principal characters, when the story began to take shape it was found there was so much real meat in Mr. Dillenbeck's manuscript that it would be impossible to crowd even a few of the many powerful scenes that made up the story into a thousand feet.

Several consultations ensued between the heads of the Vitagraph Company and Director Baker with the result that "A Price for Folly," when completed, was in five parts and listed as a Blue Ribbon feature.

Diametrically opposed in theme and treatment, Frank Daniels, in "What Happened to Father," is as radically different from "A Price for Folly" as anything that can be imagined.

Mr. Daniels fairly revels in the character of father and fully lives up to his reputation as a laugh maker par excellence. Those who have seen "What Happened to Father" were unanimous in declaring it to be funnier than "Crooky," Paul West's delightfully entertaining comedy, in which Mr. Daniels made his initial screen appearance.

FOUR IMP-UNIVERSAL PLAYS WILL SOON BE UNDER WAY

DIRECTOR John Harvey will soon start working on a three-reel drama, "The Man of Mystery," by William H. Lippert, featuring Harry Benham and Mildred Gregory. It will be an Imp-Universal feature.

A real live lion will figure in the production of "The Social Butterfly," which is now being made by Director Brinsley Shaw at the Imp-Universal studios. This is the first animal picture to be made at the new Leonia studio.

"Sing Loo," a love story of 'Frisco's Chinatown in three reels, is being written by Ray Schrock for Brinsley Shaw and his company of Imp players. Mr. Shaw, who has been directing and not acting lately, will come back before the camera in this photoplay and play the part of a Chinese high priest.

William H. Lippert has written "The Headquarter's Man" for the Imp-Universal company, from Charlotte Wharton Ayre's novelette in "Snappy Stories," in which will be featured Ben Wilson, who will also direct the picture.

Harry McRae Webster is at work on "Passions in the Foot Hills," a drama from Ray Schrock's pen, in which the Imp stars, Harry Benham, Edna Hunter and Billy Welsh will take part.

"Are You an Elk?" is the title of an original single reel comedy by W. J. Lippert featuring King Baggot and produced by Henry McRae Webster.

SELIG'S "NO GREATER LOVE" IS STUDY OF A WOMAN'S HEART

"No Greater Love," a life drama of today, being the study of a woman's heart, will be released as a Selig Red Seal Play in five soul-stirring acts through V-L-S-E on January 10. The play was written by William Le Queux and features Regina Badet, the French emotional actress in the role of Sadunah, the dancer. "No Greater Love" is a drama, revealing the wonderful power of mother love. Husband, fame, life itself are all surrendered in a sacrifice for an only child.

Sadunah, the dancer, has a beautiful daughter whom she wishes to defend from the perils of the world and see comfortably settled. Pursuing her sole ambition she marries a rich financier and when he gets into serious straits compels him to commit a crime.

But she, too, is ready to sacrifice and the call coming, Sadunah, at whose feet the artistic world has paid homage proves the biblical adage of no greater love.

MAE MARSH, WELL, WORKING ON HER FIRST TRIANGLE PLAY

Encouraging news has arrived from the Pacific Coast that Mae Marsh has quite recovered from a six weeks' indisposition. She is now hard at work on her first Triangle play, "Hoodoo Ann." Robert Harron is in the leading male role, and others in the cast include Mildred Harris, Pearl Elmore, Loyola O'Connor, Charles Lee, Wilbur Higby, William H. Brown and Elmo Lincoln.

The title role is that of a little orphan asylum girl who is adopted into a wealthy family and becomes a sort of modern Cinderalla, winning the affections of Jimmy Vance, the son and heir.

Granville Warwick is the author of the scenario, and Lloyd Ingraham is making the picture under the supervision of D. W. Griffith.

"Hoodoo Ann" will probably be presented at the Knickerbocker theatre, New York, during the holidays, with realease to the country late in January.

CRANE TO START "AS IN A LOOKING GLASS"

All preliminary detail for the production of "As in a Looking Glass," from the novel by F. C. Phillips, and chosen for the initial screen appearance of Kitty Gordon, has been completed.

The production will start immediately under the direction of Frank Crane, of the World Film staff.

"MYSTERY OF CARTER BREENE," FIRST "ALLAN DARE" SERIES, DECEMBER 22; OTHER HORSLEY FILMS

THE first episode of the "Adventures of Allan Dare" series, made by David Horsley and released under the brand name of Centaur Star Features, is entitled "The Mystery of Carter Breene." It is in three reels and will be released Wednesday, December 22, in the regular service of the Mutual program.

This series will offer a complete story in each release. One picture will have no bearing on the preceding or subsequent release except that the principal characters are retained throughout. Each time another adventure of Allan Dare will be taken up and carried through to its final solution so that in the case of a patron missing a release the chain of the series will not be broken beyond following.

The series is by Crane Wilbur, who has written such scenarios as those used in "The Blood of Our Brothers" and "Could a Man Do More?"

In each picture Mr. Wilbur will also enact the leading part.

"The Mystery of Carter Breene," the first of the series, evolves around Allan Dare, a mysterious gentleman of leisure, who steps in at the psychological moment and proves the innocence of a girl charged with the murder of her guardian after having been made the beneficiary in his will. The story does not end in the usual way with Dare claiming the girl for his bride, but with Dare disappearing abruptly after his mission is performed.

In the cast besides Mr. Wilbur, who plays Dare, are Carl Von Schiller, Gordon Mullen, J. H. Lynch, Edward Collins, Celia Santon, Mrs. Williams and a host of other actors.

The production was made under the direction of Robert B. Broadwell, with the assistance of E. F. Bishop.

The next release of the series will be made in January.

An element of interest is added to the Centaur Feature release on the Mutual program for December 23, under the title of "The Winning of Jess," by the fact that this picture introduces for the first time the puma contingent of the Bostock animals as motion picture players.

It also marks the second appearance as a featured player of the beautiful Margaret Gibson.

The picture is in two reels and is directed by Ulysses Davis, a recent acquisition to Mr. Horsley's staff of directors. The cast besides Miss Gibson includes Captain Jack Bonavita, Charles Gay, Thomas P. Morrissey, John Oaker, Roy Watson, Jane Keckley and Maxine Schneider.

"Doctor Jerry" is a Cub Comedy which is to be released December 10 on the Mutual program with George Ovey in the title role.

Ovey is supported by a big cast of comedy artists including Belle Bennett, Ovey's new leading woman, as the daughter; Jefferson Osborne as the father; George George, Gordon MacGregor, Janet Sully, Louis FitzRoy and Arthur Jackson, all familiar to film fans.

HARRY VOKES AT WORK ON "THE HOUSE PARTY," GAUMONT COMEDY

Having just finished being filmed in "Beauty in Distress" for the Gaumont Company, a Casino Star Comedy on the Mutual program, Harry Vokes is now being caught by the same camera in "The House Party," the scenario of which was written by Adrian Gil Spear. Mr. Vokes is seconded in this latter production by Eleanor Fairbanks.

COLORED FASHION PICTURES FOR "MUTUAL WEEKLY"

Pell Mitchell, editor of the Mutual Weekly, is happy over the receipt of a cablegram from the Société des Etablissements Gaumont of Paris, announcing the shipment of several hundred feet of hand-colored fashion pictures of models furnished by leading Paris dressmakers.

ESSANAY'S DECEMBER LIST INCLUDES MYSTERY DRAMA, "THE ALSTER CASE"

ESSANAY closes the year with a large list of releases for the month of December. Its two big features for this month on the V-L-S-E program are "The Alster Case," taken from the novel of Rufus Gillmore, and "A Daughter of the City," adapted from the play by H. S. Sheldon.

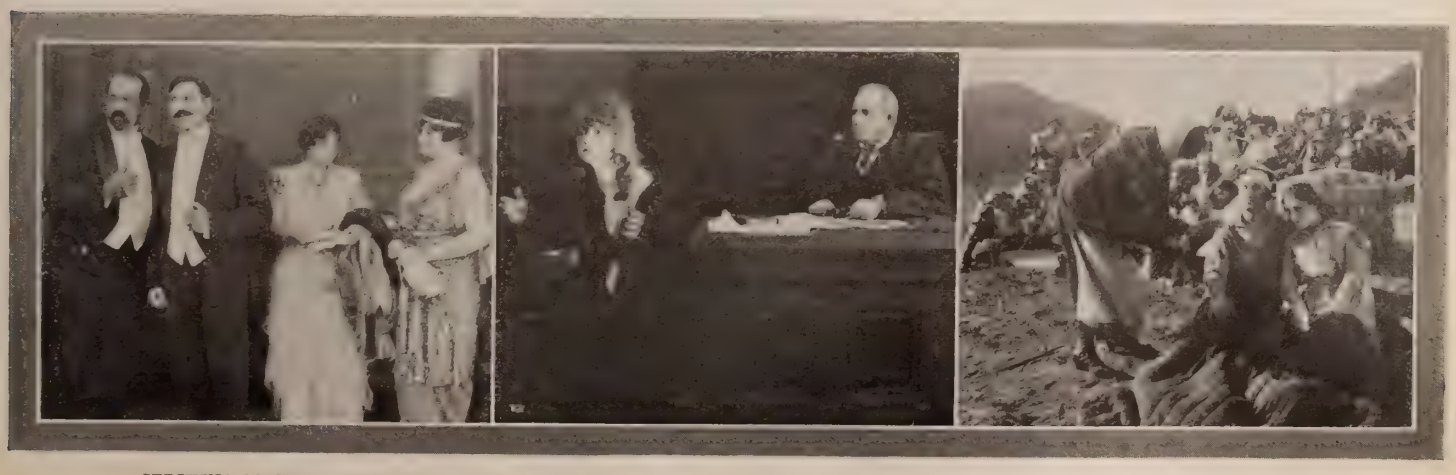
"The Alster Case" is a five-reel mystery drama, with the problem involved unsolved until the denouement. It carries out the element of surprise so well that all guesses are upset. Bryant Washburn, John Cossar, Ruth Stonehouse and Anne Leigh lead in the cast.

"A Daughter of the City" is a love romance and touches on the problem of the life of girls who have small means and living in a large city. Marguerite Clayton plays the part of the girl whose life is so nearly wrecked by a vulture of society, which part is taken by E. H. Calvert.

In the General Film program Henry B. Walthall appears in an emotional drama of three reels, "Blind Justice." "Reckoning Day" is another three-reel release, featuring E. H. Calvert and Elizabeth Burbridge.

Among the two-reel dramas are "On the Private Wire," featuring Joseph Byron Totten; "The Power of Publicity," a newspaper story produced in conjunction with the Baltimore News prize scenario and beauty contest, featuring John Lorenz and Marie Bussey, winner of the beauty contest; "The Danger of Being Lonesome" and a Christmas photoplay featuring G. M. Anderson, "A Christmas Revenge."

There also are three George Ade Fables, a "Dreamy Dud" cartoon and a "Canimated Nooz Pictorial" by Wallace A. Carlson, with burlesques on the news of the day, besides the regular Western dramas and comedies and other plays.



BELLE BENNETT FIRST IN "SHOTGUN ROMANCE" FOR HORSLEY

The Cub Comedy release of December 3, on the Mutual program, under the title of "A Shotgun Romance," holds special interest in that it presents George Ovey's new leading woman, Belle Bennett, for the first time in a David Horsley production.

Miss Bennett, who aids George Ovey, as Jerry, is the daughter of the well-known theatrical manager, Billy Bennett, and has had a great deal of theatrical as well as motion picture experience.

The plot deals with the amusing vicissitudes of Jerry and his sweetheart, played by Miss Bennett, and the truly heroic manner in which fatherly wrath is turned to paternal blessing.

In the supporting cast are George George, Louis FitzRoy, Jefferson Osborne, Janet Sully and others.

STRIKING SCENES FROM THREE LASKY FEATURES, STARRING THEODORE ROBERTS, FANNY WARD AND VALESKA SURATT

SCENES FROM "THE MISSING LINKS," "DON QUIXOTE," AND "LET KATY DO IT" (FINE ARTS-TRIANGLE)

"THE IMMIGRANT," LASKY, WITH VALESKA SURATT, BASED ON FACT

Although not designed for the purpose of propaganda against political dishonesty and as an exposure of the league which exists in many places between dishonest politicians and dishonest contractors, the Lasky production of "The Immigrant" contains a severe indictment against this form of graft.

Valeska Suratt will make her appearance as the star in this production, which was recently finished at the Lasky studios. She appears in the title role as a young Russian girl who come to this country as an immigrant.

Marion Fairfax, author of "The Immigrant," has made a study of political conditions, and there is said to be actual basis in fact for many of the incidents which take place in "The Immigrant."

The photoplay reveals the dam as it is being unsettled by dynamite. There is a note of real pathos in the scenes depicting the flight of the refugees. In some of these scenes nearly a thousand persons participated.

The players, besides Miss Suratt, include Theodore Roberts, Thomas Meighan, Jane Wolff, Raymond Hatton, Ernest Joy and Gertrude Keller.

BUILDING HEAVY SETS FOR "THY NEIGHBOR'S WIFE," SELIG

A large number of carpenters, scenic artists and property men are hard at work preparing numerous and heavy sets for the forthcoming Selig Red Seal play, "Thy Neighbor's Wife."

Colin Campbell, dean of the Selig producing staff, has the production in charge, and it will be necessary to utilize an ocean liner to add atmosphere to the story Tyrone Power, Kathlyn Williams and other Selig stars will appear in this photoplay.

WORLD FILM TO OFFER "OVER NIGHT" WITH MOST OF STAGE CAST

"Over Night," the William A. Brady comedy which ran six months at the 48th Street theatre, New York, is to be picturized under the direction of James Young, who made a striking success of Philip Bartholomae's other World Film Comedy, "Little Miss Brown."

As far as possible the original cast will be presented in the photoplay: Vivian Martin, Herbert Jost, Jere Austin, Ada Stirling, Lucile LaVerne, Dorothy Farnum, Arthur Aylesworth.

THAYER BRINGS BONDHILL REELS FOR ASSOCIATED

Otis B. Thayer, who has been making pictures for the Associated Program in his Garden of the Gods studio, has just arrived in New York to look over the field of new stars.

He has brought with him two of the forthcoming releases of the Associated Program featuring Gertrude Bondhill. Mr. Thayer also is looking for some novel scenarios which he will use in his future releases that will be released on the Associated Program as "Big A" features.

JEWELL HUNT TO DANCE BEFORE VITAGRAPH CAMERA

Jewell Hunt, well-known society dancer, who formerly conducted the Dolly Varden Studio in Manhattan under the patronage of several society women, is the latest member of the Vitagraph Company.

Her dancing ability will be shown in the films.

VALESKA SURATT, WHO WILL STAR IN LASKY'S "THE IMMIGRANT," AND HER FAMOUS MOLE

"THE CHEAT," LASKY, DEC. 13, GIVES FULL MEASURE OF THRILLS

There is unusual interest attached to the coming Lasky Feature Play Company's release, Fannie Ward in "The Cheat," a Cecil B. DeMille picture, which will be shown in Paramount theatres December 13.

Jesse L. Lasky in a letter to W. W. Hodkinson, president of the Paramount corporation, declared his belief that this production was one of the very best, if not the best, photoplay the producing firm has done.

Hector Turnbull is the author of "The Cheat," the story of which finds an application to thousands and thousands of families. It is the story of an extravagant and unthinking wife who compromises herself through thoughtlessness. In the moment of her great peril, her husband comes to her rescue, shoulders the blame for her pistol attack on a wealthy young Japanese and stands trial for the assault.

The verdict of the jury is that the husband is guilty. But the wife goes to the stand, tells the true story, shows the mark which the Japanese made on her shoulder and wins the acquital of her husband. Meanwhile the Japanese is nearly mobbed in court.

The supporting company includes Jack Dean, as the husband; Sussue Hayakawa, as the Japanese; James Neil, Utaka Abe, Dana Ong and Hazel Childers.

TOM MOORE OPPOSITE ETHEL CLAYTON IN "DOLLARS AND CENTS"

Announcement is made by the Lubin Manufacturing Company that a contract has been entered between that company and Tom Moore whereby he begins work with Lubin in the coming feature production "Dollars and Cents," where he will play opposite Ethel Clayton.

For many years Mr. Moore, with Alice Joyce, were favorites with the Kalem Company and quite recently his retirement came from that company, since which time he has resisted many flattering offers until Messrs. Singhi and Lowry, for the Lubin Company, made overtures which he could not resist.

"Dollars and Cents," by Albert Payson Terhune, appeared both in serial and book form and was one of the best sellers of the season.

Director Joseph Kaufman and Mr. Terhune have been in collaboration for many days on the scenario adaptation of the story.

Houston Exhibitor Sues to Abolish Censor Board

IN a sensational fight against the Board of Censors, P. C. Crown, manager of the Crown theatre, Houston, Tex., was arrested several times, thrown into a cell once, his three operators were arrested, his theatre was closed a number of times in a period of three days; and the mayor of the city and the chief of police were served with injunctions—all because Mr. Crown thought "The Soul of Broadway" was a decent, moral picture and the Board of Censors did not.

All of this happened three weeks ago, and finis is yet to be written in the merry fight that has started, for A. D. Polemankos, proprietor of the Crown theatre, and Anthony Xydias, a prominent exhibitor, have filed a suit in the courts of Harris County to abolish the city Board of Censors.

A long series of grievances against the Board of Censors culminated on November 4, when was fired the opening gun of the battle. On that day the Board filed information against Crown, and succeeded in having him arrested for showing "The Soul of Broadway" without a permit.

Crown gave bond, said he would await trial, but went right right on showing "The Soul of Broadway."

Successively these incidents happened:

Crown and his chief operator, H. J. Nelson, were arrested; William Green, operator, was arrested; L. W. Merchant, operator, was arrested; while deputies made ineffectual attempts to serve Mayor Campbell and Chief of Police Davison with temporary injunctions granting the motion picture men leeway to show the picture until the court had ordered otherwise.

Hot Fight on with Police

Crown and his chief operator were arrested in the afternoon. At 6 o'clock that evening Patrolman Newman notified police headquarters that the picture was again showing. Crown was again hailed to headquarters, and given one hour to change the reel. He had no substitute and promptly invited the authorities to perambulate to the place made famous by Sherman's remark.

He went calmly back to the theatre, and instructed Operator William Green to continue with the showing of the picture. Then the exhibitor and Green were summarily haled back to the police court, and locked up at 7:20 o'clock.

In the meantime, events were moving thick and fast. An application for a temporary order to stop the police from making further arrests was granted by Judge William Masterson. Patrolman Newman, who was afterwards suspended from the force, notified headquarters that the show was running fifteen minutes later.

The Chief of Police appeared personally on the scene. Shortly after this, a deputy constable, armed with the temporary injunction, attempted to get service on the Mayor and Chief of Police. The Chief closed the show. (Hereafter the word "ditto" will appear in reference to the Crown's numerous closings.)

The Crown refused to stay closed. Shortly before ten o'clock that very evening, hundreds of Houstonians, attracted thither by the unusual publicity given the picture by the evening newspapers, packed the theatre. It was running full blast, was "The Soul of Broadway," like the irresistible soul that it really is.

Operator Locked in Booth

Officers were again sent pell mell to the theatre. They arrived, found the operator securely locked in the booth, found it impossible to get in without smashing the booth, and finally decided to let the remaining reels of the picture be shown. After which:

Ditto: (But this time the show closed of its own volition. It was late at night, and the last showing of the picture.)

To complete the comedy of this day's errors, the cashier of the Star theatre, owned by Anthony Xydias, was arrested and taken summarily from the box office, leaving the show abandoned, on the orders of the censors, who claimed that Xydias had failed to obtain a permit from them to project a certain picture.

In this instance, Xydias claimed that he had made three trips to see the city official who issues the permits, and that each time that official was absent and he failed to secure the permit. Xydias remarked that he paid $1,500 a month rent on Main street, and he felt that it was a "sad commentary on the city of Houston when a business man has to close his place of business under such circumstances."

Bright and early Friday morning the Crown theatre opened. "The Soul of Broadway"—irrepressible soul—was the attraction. Houstonians again flocked to see the picture that a goodly majority of the police force had in vain tried to stop.

The exhibitor was the winner. "The Soul of Broadway" was showing, the police were powerless to stop it, for the temporary injunction had been issued. So the exhibitor and the police and the Board of Censors marshalled their legal forces and attended the hearing on the injunction before Judge Henry J. Dannenbaum.

Judge Decides for Police

The hearing was short and decisive, and against the exhibitors. Judge Dannenbaum dissolved the temporary injunction against the city officials and the Board, and decided in every particular against Polemanakos, owner of the Crown theatre, and Anthony Xydias, both of whom had asked for a permanent injunction.

Counsel for the exhibitors announced that an appeal would be taken to the Appelate Court at Galveston. This hearing is expected before long.

Following the decision, another operator was arrested, and the Crown theatre (ditto) for the 'steenth time.

Besides the injunction proceedings, Anthony Xydias filed an additional suit alleging that the censor ordinance was unconstitutional, on the ground that it is unreasonable and conflicts with state laws. This petition was filed before Judge Murray B. Jones, of County Court at Law No. 2. Judge Jones stated that in his opinion the suit should be filed in the district courts.

If Judge Jones refuses to consider the petition, it is likely that it will be transferred to the district courts, most probably before Judge Masterson.

One point that the exhibitors have won in Houston is this: the ordinance which created the Board of Censors has been amended so as to take away from Mrs. F. W. Vaughan, secretary of the Board, the power to refuse to issue permits. These must be considered by the Board as a whole.

A. Jules Benedic.

CLEVELAND CITY OFFICIALS INDORSE "DAMAGED GOODS"

City officials of Cleveland have indorsed "Damaged Goods," they saying that it will do more to lessen crime in Cleveland than the recent abolition of the segregated district in that city.

One city official said: "This picture is without doubt a powerful play against vice. It will do much toward abolishing it, and the more people that see it, the more will be benefited."

"CLANSMAN" CLOSES IN 'FRISCO AFTER MAKING RECORD RUN

Special to Motion Picture News

San Francisco, Dec. 2.

The last exhibition of "The Clansman" was given on November 27 in the Savoy theatre on McAllister street, completing its thirtieth week in San Francisco, smashing all former records for either moving pictures or the legitimate stage.

With the passing of this production from the local field the "Battle Cry of Peace" has made its entry, and what promises to be an exceedingly satisfactory engagement has been commenced at the Columbia theatre on Geary street. This production is receiving the personal attention of Eugene Roth, manager of the Portola theatre, and is being presented on a scale of magnificence such as has never been seen here before.

Beautiful stage settings have been installed and music is furnished by a specially trained orchestra of selected musicians. Capacity houses have been the rule since the opening, and the engagement is limited to three weeks.

Three Comedy Reels for Vitagraph Week of Dec. 13

First Release Is "Benjamin Bunter, Book Agent," by Tremayne, Produced by Van Deusen with Ethel Corcoran in Cast—Six Reels of Drama Also for Same Period

"A QUESTION OF RIGHT OR WRONG" AND "THE DECEIVERS," TWO VITAGRAPHS

A PROGRAM consisting of three reels of comedy and six of drama is announced for release by The Vitagraph Company for the week commencing Monday, December 13.

The week's program starts with a one reel comedy from the pen of W. A. Tremayne, entitled "Benjamin Bunter, Book-Agent," produced by Courtlandt Van Deusen with a cast including Ethel Corcoran, William Dangman, Templer Saxe, William Shea and Florence Natol as the important characters.

"A Question of Right and Wrong," listed for Tuesday, is a dramatic story in two parts; written and produced by Van Dyke Brooke. The plot tells how a girl has been tricked into marriage to a man she hates, in order to save her father from ruin, after proof has been shown that her real lover is dead. After marriage she is confronted by the man supposed dead and realizes the truth. The story ends with the real lovers reunited.

Bobby Connelly is featured in the release on Wednesday, which is a Christmas story entitled "The Faith of Sonny Jim," written by Frank Dazey and produced by Tefft Johnson, who is also in the cast together with Mabel Kelly as Mother Dear, Harry Fisher is Father Time, Logan Paul is Sonny Jim in after years and Harry Waldron portrays Santa Claus.

A dramatic story written in collaboration, by Edward Montagne and Frank Dazey, entitled "The Flower of the Hills," is announced for Thursday, December 16. The production is by William Humphrey, enacted by a cast including Carolyn Birch, Leo Delaney, Denton Vane, Louise Beaudet and Rose Tapley.

For Friday, December 17, Sidney Drew Day, Paul West, the well-known humorist, has written around Mr. Drew a comedy entitled, "The Deceivers," in which the popular comedian has many exciting and laughable experiences. He is ably assisted by Mrs. Sidney Drew, Edward Faver and Mrs. C. Jay Williams, all of whom lend merriment to the picture.

A three part Broadway Star Feature, "A Man's Sacrifice," is announced for Saturday, December 18, written by A. C. Lichty and produced by George D. Baker. This story is one of intense human interest dealing with the life of a girl, who rejects a worthy man and marries one with a weakness for drink.

The story is enacted by a cast including Edith Storey, Ned Finley, Evart Overton, Thomas R. Mills, Frank Bunny, George Stevens and Jay Dwiggins.

Morosco Enlarges Plant for Paramount Production

Los Angeles Picture Maker Adds Bungalow Property Adjoining the Studio Proper, Giving Firm More Room for Scenario and Technical Staffs and Art Director

SHORTLY after completing the new additions to the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company plant in Los Angeles, this Paramount producer indicates a continuance of its policy of expansion and improvement.

The most recent development along this line is the purchase of a large bungalow property adjoining the studio proper. The grounds of the property allow for a waiting room for "extras" awaiting their scenes and the extension of scene docks.

It is planned to house the scenario department, technical staff and art director in the newly acquired bungalow, making room available for other needs in the offices vacated by these. The additional property adds to the appearance of Mr. Morosco's up-to-date plant which has become known as "the model studio of the Pacific coast."

The bungalow is a pretty, vine covered home and is so desirable for office room that several heads of departments have made a plea for space in it.

Carpenters and scenic artists are especially active at the studio, at this time building new scenery for the pretentious productions now in the making and contemplated. All scenery is to be made fifteen feet high to permit of longer "shots" being taken, while all sets will be of the most substantial construction in keeping with the studio policy to dress all productions properly.

LOS ANGELES ROSE TOURNAMENT TO BE FILMED BY UNIVERSAL

Arrangements have been consummated by the officials of the Universal's Pacific Coast studios for the exclusive right to make motion pictures of the annual Rose Tournament which is to be held in Pasadena on New Year's day.

By a drawing of lots, the company of Joseph De Grasse has been chosen for the honor. Ida May Park is at present working upon the construction of a scenario.

SCENE FROM "THE UNDERWORLD," FORTHCOMING PHOTOPLAY FROM THE UNIVERSAL STUDIOS

In and Out of West Coast Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Dec. 4.

DURING the past summer the streets of Los Angeles have been decorated with palms set in mammoth concrete boxes placed there to be things of beauty, but found to be annoyances because they needed water, and were always in the way. For months the city council has been trying to find a way of disposing of these, and during the past week wished them on the Universal Film Company. The potted plants, dwarfish and wilted, have been transported to the film city, and there set out to adorn the grounds. Each has been named after a player of the company, and there is every indication that they will at some future time become part of the scenery for motion pictures.

The Sydney Ayres Universal Company, making "John O' the Mountains," has had a series of bad luck. First, seventeen exterior scenes were spoiled by static. These were then all remade, and seven of the seventeen were found defective because of electrical effects on the film. When these seven were remade, static destroyed three. To top this all off, the automobile in which the company was riding from Bear Lake Valley, where scenes for this subject were made, overturned, badly injuring practically every occupant, but most seriously affecting Charles Hall. Bones of one leg and one shoulder, and several ribs were broken.

The Nestor companies arrived home Saturday from Frisco after making scenes for three subjects. The Al Christie company, made "A Trip to the Fair" and "Some Chaperone," both single reels, and the Horace Davey company completed "When Three's a Crowd."

Leonard and Rex Company at Arrowhead

While scenario is being prepared for the filming of the "Pollyooly" stories which appeared in series form in the Pearson's magazine, Robert Leonard and his Rex company are at Arrowhead, California, making another subject. The title of this is "Just from Sweden," in which Leonard appears in the part of the arrival, the big Swede, similar to the characterizations that he gave some time ago. It has not been definitely decided whether the "Pollyooly" stories will be filmed in serial form as they appeared in the magazine, or whether a multiple reel subject will be made using the principal incidents of the series. It has been definitely decided, however, that Ella Hall will play the name part, and a fat baby boy will be secured to impersonate the part of Lump.

The Smalley-Weber company is producing a subject entitled, "Discontent," of a dramatic character. What size this will be has not been definitely decided, and the cast has not been announced.

Universal Director William C. Dowlan and Gloria Fonda are playing the principal parts in a three-reel subject, entitled, "One Against Many," and the Joseph Franz Universal organization is making scenes for "The Dawn of Betterment," from scenario by Ben Cohn. "The Water Clue" is the title of a one-reel story by A. W. Caldeway, being filmed by the Rupert Julian Universal company.

"Buck Simmons, Puncher" is the title of a three-reel Western picture, written and being produced by Leon Kent who also plays a leading part. This is of a Western type, and prominent in the cast are Jack Livingston and Mina Jeffries.

Costly Sets for "Pool of Flame"

"The Pool of Flame," a five-reel subject adapted from the Louis Joseph Vance story of the same name, will be one of the most expensive pictures so far made at the Universal City, because of the costly interior settings used in this. In all there will be thirty different interiors of an expensive variety. Director Otis Turner is in charge of producing this, and no expense is being spared to make it a very elaborate film.

A Universal company of players, under the direction of Lynn Reynolds, and headed by Myrtle Gonzales, are just home from spending a week at Mt. Wilson, where exterior scenes were made for the subject entitled, "Missy" from scenario by Mr. Reynolds. Other principal members of the cast are Frank Newberg, Val Paul and Alfred Allen.

Director Richard Stanton is making great progress in the making of the Universal serial entitled, "Graft," and in the next few weeks will complete scenes for the fifth episode. Arrangements are being made for Hobart Henley to appear in later numbers, as it is believed his injury received when an automobile turned turtle, will not be as severe as first thought. Mr. Henley is at a local hospital where he is receiving every attention possible that he may early return to his work.

The Allen Curtis Joker Company is making "Lemonade Aids Cupid," written by Gale Henry, wherein the unfavorable father when he drinks too much spiked beverage at a church sociable, is brought to realize that he should favor the young man who wishes the hand of his daughter, inasmuch as the young man has found the girl's father flirting with the prettiest girl at the sociable, after drinking too much of the lemonade.

The second Joker company is making "I'll Get Her Yet," wherein the triangle again proves the basis for a beach flirtation. Victor Potel is cast in this as "Slim," and other members of the cast include one of equal importance named "Fat," taken by Ed. Sedgwick. The other members are Pat Rooney, Dan Duffey, Marion Bent, Jane Bernoudy and Eileen Sedgwick.

Jack Holt, Irving Lipener, Genevieve Abbott and Raymond Russell have been selected as members of the Universal company to support Grace Cunard, who will direct the making of the production in addition to playing the featured part. The first subject now being made is "Her Better Self," written by Miss Cunard.

Activities at Vitagraph Studios

At the Vitagraph Santa Monica studio a one-reel comedy, "Pansy's Papas," is being made by a cast composed by Mary Anderson and Webster Campbell in the leads, supported by Anne Schafer, Otto Lederer and others.

"UNDINE" AND HER NYMPHS AS THEY WILL APPEAR IN THE FORTHCOMING UNIVERSAL FEATURE

Forty extra people were sent from Los Angeles this week to Bear Valley to take part in scenes for the coming Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature, "God's Country and the Woman," being filmed by Rollin S. Sturgeon. They will work in the Alaskan scenes for this in connection with the various teams of wolf dogs and malamutes, secured especially for this picture. Among the several dog teams is one owned and driven by Captain Smith, who but recently arrived from Alaska with these full blooded wolves. Another famous team is that of John Johnson's Siberian wolf dogs which has won the Alaskan derby for the past six years.

Thirty-two doves were released in order to secure a scene for "La Paloma," the Vitagraph subject just finished by Director William Wolbert. It was desired that the doves fly past a flag pole on which the national emblem was waving in the breeze and this was finally accomplished.

The Vitagraph Santa Monica studio is almost dismantled, the greater portion of the studio effects having been removed to the new studio in Hollywood. It is expected this will be ready for occupancy by holiday time, and that the first picture will be made about the first of the year.

Some unusual light effect scenes introduced in "The Terror of the Fold," a Centaur drama, by Director William J. Bowman, will prove interesting to the trade. These were secured by night photography, and those who have been fortunate in seeing them at the trial runs at the studio, pronounce them most unusual.

Ovey Comedy About Finished

One Horsley Cub comedy company is just finishing, "The Holdup," with George

FANNY WARD (Lasky)

Ovey, George George, Louis Fitzroy, Jefferson Osborne, Janet Sully and Belle Bennett in the principal parts. In this, mother interferes with her daughter's love affair, but the youth succeeds in gaining her good will when he rescues the family from the clutches of a bold bad-man.

"All Wrong" is the title given another Cub comedy now in the process of filming with Billie Armstrong as Luke Sharp, the private detective, and Tom Hayes his assistant, Gigger. This deals with the adventures of a pair of amateurs in securing a reward offered for a notorious crook. The company will next make, "A Terrible Night," dealing with a music hall romance.

The U. S. Davis Centaur dramatic company is filming "The Homesteaders," which will consist of two reels, and be of the nature of a Western drama. Principal parts are taken by Roy Watson, John Oaker and Marguerite Gibson.

The Horsley-Bostock Zoo and Arena in connection with the Horsley studios on South Main street, Los Angeles, are undergoing a very big change which will add approximately fifty per cent. to the studio space. The fifty odd animal cages are all being moved to one side of the grounds, and the big amphitheatre approximately 100x200 feet, will be used for the storage of props, scenery, etc. To the west of this a big open air studio will be built. This will be fitted with water proof diffusing cloths that will make it serviceable in bad weather.

R. H. Hammer, vice-president of the

LEW FIELDS, SAM BERNARD, MACK SENNETT AND JOE WEBER

Biograph company, and W. L. Gray, superintendent of the laboratory department, arrived in Los Angeles Saturday, November 27 for a short visit at the studios.

A Present Day Hungarian Melodrama

The making of present day Hungarian melodramas was taken up by Director Travis Vale this week. The title of this is "Poor Plutocrats," and will feature Franklyn Ritchie in the leading role. Principals of the cast are Louise Vale, Jose Reuben, Herbert Barrington, Jack Drumier, and others. Locations for exterior scenes in this have been selected in San Francisquito canyon, approximately fifty miles north of Los Angeles.

Allan Hale, who came to the Coast with the Biograph company, has been signed with the Lasky company where he will play leads.

"Tennessee's Partner," adapted from the story of the same name, has been selected as the next vehicle for Fanny Ward, which will be made under the direction of George Melford. Rehearsals for this have been taken up, and filming will be commenced within a few days.

The final scenes for "The Golden Touch," Lasky production starring Cleo Ridgley and Wallace Reid, were made this week, the last being a big fight in which a number take part. The principal battlers were Wallace Reid, frequently referred to as the film giant, and Ray Hatton, who is of such miniature size that the cameraman must look twice before he can locate him in the finding glass.

The hook and ladder brigade recently formed among the Lasky technical employes had opportunity this week to make their first public exhibition when a portion of the high fence surrounding the studio caught fire. The work of the fire laddies was so effective that the fire was put out before there was much damage done.

Snakes Tried Out for Lasky Feature

A number of snakes have been given a try-out at the Lasky studio for scenes in the haunted house in "Puddin' Head Wilson," adapted from the Mark Twain stories, and Director Frank Reicher now makes the claim that he has found one with true dramatic and artistic instinct and that he has passed a number of snakes that belong to the "lens louse" class, for they continually keep looking into the camera.

Director T. N. Heffron, who recently was transferred to the Los Angeles studios from the Chicago Selig plant, is soon to take up the filming of a three-reel subject entitled "The Black Orchid," in which Kathlyn Williams will be featured. The entire cast for this number has not been selected.

Princess Olga Celestie, tiger trainer at the Selig zoo, is training a number of Bengals for exclusive picture work. Princess Olga will appear in a number of pictures with these cats, the first of which is to be made at an early date. Kate, the large lion at the Selig zoo, who has appeared in more than one hundred photoplays, is the proud mother of two cubs.

Little Gene Frazer, age two and a half years, who plays many of the child parts in Selig productions, is decidedly fond of Tom Santschi, and when she saw a life-sized portrait of this well-known photo-player in the lobby of Clune's Broadway theatre, Los Angeles, despite the fact that she had been eating chocolate candy and had it smeared all over her face, broke away from her mother and ran to the picture giving it a resounding kiss.

Mammoth Chimney Blown Up for Keystone

A mammoth brick chimney on a deserted factory at Inglewood, California, was purchased by the Keystone company, and sent skyward during the past week, when a large quantity of dynamite was placed at the base and set off. The thrill of this scene was the hero being on the top when the fuse was lighted, and was picked off and carried to safety by an aeroplane driven by his sweetheart. Practically all members of the Keystone staff went to Inglewood to see the explosion, together with many others from Los Angeles.

The M. E. Spero company, making comedies for the Vogue Mutual release, this week moved from the old Masterpiece studio at 1336 Gordon street, Hollywood, to the studio formerly occupied by the America Europa Company on Allesandro street, Edendale. This adds to the Edendale district the fifth producing company, the others being the Selig, Keystone, Rolin, and the United Motion Picture Company.

Rita Stanwood has been engaged by Thomas H. Ince to appear in forthcoming Kay-Bee Triangle procedure, and has arrived at the Santa Monica studio and begun work under the direction of Scott Sidney.

Charles Ray, who has been with the NYMP Company for the past three years, has been promoted to stardom by Thomas H. Ince and will head a cast in a Triangle Kay-Bee Western picture written by Richard V. Spencer. The promotion came as a result of the very excellent work in the second Ince Triangle subject, "The Coward."

About fifty additional Indians have been secured from Government reservations to work in Western and Indian dramas, making a total of more than one hundred now at this studio. In addition, negotiations are now under way for the engagement of a still greater number who will in all probability arrive at the studio within the next few weeks. Thomas H. Ince contends that to make true to life Indian dramas, it is necessary to have virtually an entire reservation moved to the studio and plans are now under way for the fulfillment of this.

To Film Second Warner Subject

Director Charles Swickard has been assigned to the filming of the second H. B. Warner subject which will be laid in East India. Warner appears in this as a young British physician. An East Indian prince has been engaged to assist Director Swickard in order that the customs of the people, settings, etc., will be correct.

Because of the recently staged fire at Inceville which destroyed the Western village that included the big dance hall, it has been found necessary to build another setting of this type, and workmen are now preparing such a setting. The one now being built is to be much larger than any previous structure of its kind, and will be of sufficient size that five hundred people may take part in scenes at one time. The setting will be used first in a William S. Hart subject.

Director Charles Giblyn and company of Ince Kay-Bee players, headed by William H. Thompson, have spent the past week on Mount Baldy, where they found the weather so extremely cold that the cameraman had difficulty in keeping the machine in operation.

The second Frank Keenan subject, "The Destroyer," many of the scenes of which are laid in an Oriental country, has now been entirely completed and music for it is being arranged by Louis Gottschalk.

Hopper in "A Knight of the Garter"

Buster, the son of William Collier, who has had a number of important stage engagements, has been added to the cast of the first William Collier subject which is being made at Inceville, a special part having been written into the scenario for the son of the famous comedian.

The second Fine Art Films subject in which De Wolf Hopper is starred has been titled, "A Knight of the Garter," and is from an original screen play by Chester Withey and Tod Browning. The supporting cast will include Fay Tincher, Julia Fay, Max Davidson, Jewel Carmen, Bobbie Fuehrer, and the co-author Chester Withey. The direction has been intrusted to Edward Dillon who was in charge of filming the first Hopper subject, "Don Quixote." In the forthcoming subject, the knight is made the victim of many amusing complications.

A rare curio, a snuff box owned and used by Voltaire, is being used in scenes for the film play "Daphne," which is laid in France in the time of this writer. This is the property of Howard Gaye, who appears in the part of the prince. The snuff box is of the Sixteenth century French manufacture, and being of gold and silver set with precious stones is very valuable.

The title of the Jane Grey Fine Art Films subject, a comedy drama with scenes laid in New England, has been changed from "Mother of Seven" to "Let Katie Do It."

Announcement from the Fine Art Films studio is to the effect that Dorothy Gish, now at the New York studio of this company, is soon to be seen in a comedy drama entitled, "Betty of Greystone."

Lucas in "Acquitted" for Triangle

Wilfred Lucas is being starred in the Fine Art Films Triangle subject entitled, "Acquitted," a psychological society story by Mary Roberts Rinehart, adapted for the screen by Roy Summerville. The story treats the injustice of the law and its effect upon an innocent man, who accused, has no redress. His career is ruined as the result of the notoriety. Opposite Mr. Lucas will be Mary Alden in the part of the wife, and Bessie Love as their daughter. Sam De Grasse, Elmer Clifton, F. A. Turner and W. E. Fremont have been cast for the important parts. Paul Powell is in charge of the direction.

Mae Marsh, of the Fine Art Films Company, is now spoken of as the bravest girl at the studio, for she is said to have brought her hand in contact with a red hot stove for the sole purpose of securing the best effects possible for close-up views in a fire scene for the coming subject entitled, "Hoodoo Ann."

REALISTIC SCENES FROM "STANLEY AMONG THE VOODOO WORSHIPPERS," AN EPISODE OF THE "STANLEY" SERIES MADE INTO TWO REEL CENTAUR FEATURES FOR RELEASE THROUGH MUTUAL

Mack Sennett is recovering from numerous bruises received when he slipped and fell from the roof of the projecting room building fifteen feet to the concrete walk below. Sennett was directing a water scene being made on the roof at the time of the accident, and that he escaped serious injury is accounted remarkable by those who witnessed the accident.

"Dizzy Heights and Daring Hearts" is the greatest aeroplane picture ever made at the Keystone studio. It was completed during the past week and in the last scenes the two bird machines of the studio equipment, a mono and a bi-plane, were practically wrecked when they collided with a telephone pole in coming to the ground after a flight. Both occupants of the machine were injured. Principals of this picture are Chester Conklin, Dave Anderson, Nick Cogley, Betty Anderson and other Keystoners.

Sam Bernard Subject Finished

The first Sam Bernard Keystone Triangle subject has been completed and shipped to the Eastern laboratories. This has been titled "The Great Pearl Tangle," and features Bernard as the cutter and designer at the most fashionable modistès in Paris. A feature of this subject will be the very remarkable display of new gowns, many of the scenes being made in replicas of the showrooms of Pierrote and Paquin in Rue de la Prix. The gowns are worn by a "chorus" of pretty girls, the handsomest bevy that ever took part in a Keystone subject. Supporting Bernard are Harry Gribbon and Minta Durfee.

"Fatty and the Broadway Stars" is the title given the Keystone subject in which every member of the producing staff takes part. For this, a motion picture studio covering almost half a block was especially built, and later destroyed by fire. Mack Sennett, for the first time in his motion picture career, appears in a straight make-up, that of producing manager at the studio. The Broadway stars are Sam Bernard, Weber and Fields, Burt Clark, Joe Jackson and the Keystone favorites are Roscoe Arbuckle, Chester Conklin, Ivy Crosthwaite, and others.

The new indoor Keystone studio of reinforced concrete construction, size one hundred and twenty by two hundred and twenty-five feet will be completed within the next few days. This is built in the side of a foothill where a portion of the earth was removed to make room for it. There are no windows in the building, and the lighting will be wholly by electricity. The lighting banks will be hung on trolleys making it possible to move the lighting system from one portion of the building to another in a very short time.

More Land for Ince Studios

Negotiations are being conducted by Thomas H. Ince and Eugene H. Allen for the purchase of thirty-one additional acres of land adjoining the property where the new studios and producing plant are being built in Culver City. If this purchase is made, and it is stated on authority that the deal will be consummated, it will give the New York Motion Picture Corporation a total of forty-three acres in this suburban town of Los Angeles which will enable them to build all big sets and have their eight 65 x 160-foot exterior stages, and the three interior stages of about the same size.

Business Manager E. H. Allen advises that the buildings will all be ready for occupancy by December 15. The steel work has now been practically completed, and it remains but to add the walls to the buildings. A particular feature of the construction for the exterior stages is the manner in which the floors are being built. A half ton of white lead is being used to cement the cracks, making them waterproof, thus preventing warping. Three shifts of men are now employed on the building, and everything is being done to rush the work to completion.

Several important conferences have been held between Thomas H. Ince and the executive committee of the Chamber of Commerce of Culver City, at which plans are being made for the dedication ball of the new studio. This will be held on New Year's Eve or New Year's Night, to which all members of the photoplay colony of Los Angeles will be invited, making it the greatest gathering of motion picture people the industry has ever known.

NEWS OF THE WEEK IN AND ABOUT SAN DIEGO

Special to Motion Picture News

San Diego, Cal., Dec. 4.

At the Lubin studio in Coronado the past week Director Sloman has had his company busy with the production of a three-reeler, "The Embodied Thought," a script by Julian Lamothe.

The story is built around some of the theories which are advanced by Thomas Jay Hudson regarding psychic phenomena, and the transmission of thought after life has passed from the body.

In the cast Director Sloman appears as David Goodman, while Melvin Mayo takes the part of Max Rosenthal, his partner. Helen Wolcott is seen as Nanon Labal, with Adelaide Bronti as the mother of Goodman, and Alice Neice as Ruth Goodman. Isaac Cohen is impersonated by George Routh, while L. C. Shumway appears as Jim Rolfe, Nanon's friend. B. C. Hayward operated the camera.

In one of the scenes a large number of girls are used as models in the costume establishment.

Miss Neice is a recent accession to the Lubin staff, coming from Robard's studio at Santa Paula. She was at one time with the Vitagraph. Among the pictures in which she has appeared have been "Into the Light" and "The Greater Power." She was born in Albuquerque, New Mexico, but spent some time in Alaska.

She was for a while in the legitimate and in concert work.

Another newcomer at the Lubin studio is May Cruze, a native of Ogden, Utah, who was formerly in the Frontier studio at Santa Paula, Cal. She is a sister of James Cruze, who is with the company at Palo Alto, which is being financed by the Hearst interests. This is the same company with which Francelia Billington, for a time with the Lubin company at Coronado, has gone recently.

TRIANGLE SERVICE GAINING LARGE NUMBER OF ADHERENTS

The program service of the Triangle Film Corporation is increasing at the rate of 60 to 75 new theatres every week. The expectation that 1,000 theatres will be taking the service before the middle of the year is rapidly being converted into reality.

A noticeable fact is the fairly equal distribution of the films all over the United States in proportion to population, showing that the work of Messrs. Griffith, Ince and Sennett is as strong in one section as in any other.

ANNA LITTLE, THE MUSTANG STAR, AS SHE APPEARS IN RECENT MUTUAL RELEASES

JUST TO MAKE TALK

By LONGACRE

MORE and more the moving picture business is developing along lines parallel to the publishing industry. In the publishing business there are the daily newspapers, the printers of cheap editions, the firms which turn out "best sellers," the dealers in educational books and so on. Each company has its precinct and sticks to it.

Now the line of demarcation is being drawn between the feature producing companies, the comedy concerns, the news films and so on. It is worthy of note that the companies most generally credited with financial success are those which have a definite policy to which they adhere. The companies which have been making both features and short subjects are now beginning to specialize in one thing or the other.

Another parallel lies in the present methods of compiling news films, a method much similar to that on which a newspaper is run. Formerly one news film was distributed all over the country, the issue of one date being the same all over the country. Now the new films will be half international and national news and half local news. So the weekly handled in Boston will be different in its local news from the print in the San Francisco office and both will be different in local news from the Chicago. Thus the space will be split up between local and foreign news items just as a newspaper will give more space to the death of a prominent citizen than it will to the death of an Indian prince, because the prominent citizen is a local man.

Speaking of news films, the Hearst-Vitagraph weekly will soon succeed the Hearst-Selig pictorial. This weekly will contain half local and half foreign items in each city and will be handled on a new plan for scaling prices.

The Gaumont Company of America will soon have one of the finest studios in America. The parcels of ground adjoining the present studio in Flushing, L. I., have been quietly acquired and a whole new plant will be built—studio, factory and executive offices. Gaumont is now distributing through the Mutual program.

Equitable continues to grow. It has just taken over David Horsley's studio in Bayonne, N. J. Edmond Lawrence is busy making "The Ransom" with Julia Dean.

Mary Pickford's contract with Famous Players runs out January 1. This is of no immediate interest to a small company either, for she draws important money and draws it every week.

Rudyard Kipling's work will reach the screen through Pathé. "The Light that Failed" will be the first, directed by Edward Jose.

The Arrow Film Corporation, releasing through Pathé, has increased its capital stock from $300,000 to $350,000 and elected new officers. President, W. E. Schellenberger; vice-president, Gaston Van-Werveke; treasurer, Norman Conniers; assistant treasurer, Frank W. Lynch and secretary, Albert S. LeVino. LeVino, Van-Werveke and Schellenberger are the executive committee. Van Werveke, until recently, was secretary to Louis Gasnier, general manager of Pathé.

Kinemacolor may come back. It is making a five reeler, "Her American Prince" for the World Film Corporation. Arthur Donaldson and Ormi Hawley play the leading oles.

Siegmund "Pop" Lubin was one of the first to wire Henry Ford endorsing his peace ship.

Officers of the Ed-Au Club of scenario writers were elected recently as follows: President, Arthur Leeds, Edison; vice-president, Howard Irving Young, Kalem; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Mary Louise Farley. George Ridgewell of Edison, was appointed to the Boad of Governors.

Romaine Fielding's Universal brand will be known as Cactus films.

Metro Pictures Corporation has bought its California franchise from Sol Lesser, and will open new offices. Harry J. Cohen took a trip to the Coast to close the deal. The capital stock which Lesser owns in Metro, of which he is one of the original incorporators, is included in the deal. Sol will continue to operate the All Star Feature Distributors, Inc.

Several men prominent in motion pictures have recently drawn comparisons between the film and the newspaper. Some of them have gone so far as to predict that the picture eventually will supplant the newspaper, and have pointed out the growth of the weeklies and news pictures as indications. But nothing more strikingly indicative of the popular trend in this direction has occurred than Henry Ford's association of the newspaper and the picture. Without comment, as though it were a matter of course, Mr. Ford has invited all the big newspapers and motion picture producers to send representatives along with his "peace ship" when it sails for Europe this month. We hear that at least four of the big Eastern producers will accept, and will have cameramen aboard the Oscar II, and two of these are firms which are not releasing news weeklies, or news pictures in any form. The matter may not be important, but anyhow, it shows how much and what kind of a factor the motion picture has become.

Taking with him a company headed by Dorothy Bernard, Oscar Apfel, of the Fox producing staff, has gone to the West Coast, where he expects to make at least four features during the winter months. His last work in the East was to put the finishing touches to "A Soldier's Oath," in which Dorothy Bernard and William Farnum are featured. Since September Mr. Apfel has produced three big features for Fox in the East: "The Little Gypsy," "The Broken Law" and "A Soldier's Oath."

If there is any lull in the producing end of the picture industry Howard Hansel, director for the Arrow Film Corporation, hasn't heard of it yet. The Arrow's new arrangement with Pathé, which calls for about ten Gold Rooster plays during the coming year, has put it squarely up to Mr. Hansel. Not only is he busy with the two-reel chapters of the "Who's Guilty?" series, but these big five-reelers are coming his way also. We hear that such sleep as he is getting is snatched on the cars between the Yonkers studio and the New York offices and that he eats his truffles and pate de foie gras while reading scripts.

"Kid" Hogan, once well known as a boxer, who left pugilism flat in order to go into pictures, and is now chief property man at the Rolfe-Metro studio, did not attend the Metro family dinner last week. That he was there in spirit is indicated by the fact that the following evening he gave a "rump dinner" to the rest of the Rolfe staff, at Mr. Reisenweber's popular hostelry in New York. The Metro publicity offices were supplied with a verbal list of guests, which at first created the impression that Hogan was trying to produce a little "animal stuff." "All the boys were there," he reported, "that is, all the boys that really belong. There was 'Kid' Broad, and 'Buffalo Mike' and Ike, the Bite; 'California Ed' and Eddie the Wolf. The whole gang was there."

Lyman B. Cozzens, who exhibits Paramount pictures in the Boston suburbs, came down to New York Thanksgiving week and spent most of his time studying up the Paramount Press idea. He says he is more than ever impressed with the necessity for close relations between the theatre and the local newspaper.

CHANGES OF THE WEEK

The marriage of Eddie Peters and Zeneta Harthorne of the Balboa forces at Long Beach, Cal., is reported. This is the fifth wedding at this studio within the past three months.

D. W. Whitcomb, late of the Balboa scenario staff, has now become affiliated with the Ince organization at Inceville in the same capacity.

Miss Elizabeth Burbridge, for some leading woman of the NYMP studios and recently with the Morosco Pallas players, has signed a long term contract with the Essanay company and left this week to take up work at the Chicago studio.

Charles Miller, who became affiliated with the Ince producing organization as an actor, has been promoted to the position of director and will take up the filming of a subject featuring Frank Mills. Miller is the nephew of Henry Miller, the noted actor.

Stars gathered this week by Lubin are Tom Moore and E. K. Lincoln, two real screen favorites.

Thomas Bedding has resigned from the publicity department of the World Film Corporation.

Additions to the Edison producing staff are: Everette McNeil, Edward H. Griffith and Paul Sloan, scenario writers, and Burton George, director.

John Brownell, scenario writer, and his wife, Estelle Wynne, leading woman, have left the Eastern for Kleine.

IN AND OUT OF TOWN

Harry E. Aitken, president of Triangle, and his brother, Roy Aitken, are visiting the three Triangle studios on the Pacific Coast.

H. A. D'Arcy, well remembered as press agent for Lubin for many years is back in New York, and will do special publicity work.

Jack Cunningham, Mirror publicity man, is back after several weeks acquiring the Chicago accent.

LYON, NOTED SHORT STORY WRITER, JOINS INCE FOR FIVE-REELERS

Harris Merton Lyon has joined the Ince forces and is writing five-reel dramatic scenarios for the New York Motion Picture Company. Mr. Lyon was for five years one of the editors of Hampton's Magazine, and has written some powerful and psychologically intense short stories. Two volumes of his works—"Sardonics" and "Graphics"—fell under the eye of Frank Tannehill, Jr., now a member of the personal staff of Thomas H. Ince, and an offer was at once made to Mr. Lyon.

Speaking of his new line of work, Mr. Lyon says: "I regard Thomas H. Ince as one of the important men in the motion picture world whose work at present and in the future will go far toward answering that keen, critical cry: 'Who'll put a soul in the movies?'

"The strain of poesy in the man, his readiness to appreciate that psychology can be made as thrilling as action—and much more memorable—his evident love of sheer beauty in scenes of nature, his constant appeal to the aesthetic side rather than the practical side of his audiences, all mark him in my mind as a man apart.

HARRIS MERTON LYON

"Plot, of course, must always come first in the making of a scenario. But the great motion pictures of the future are going to be those which combine a natural and not distorted plot with powerful studies of character."

HILL, TECHNICAL EXPERT, OPEN FOR ENGAGEMENT

Charles Hill, for eight years in charge of the Kalem laboratory, rising from working foreman to superintendent of his department, recently resigned from the company and is open for an engagement with a motion picture concern in need of a technical man conversant with all branches of photography.

CHARLES HILL

Mr. Hill was engaged by the late Samuel Long, who was in search of a man capable of directing a staff of workmen and willing to turn his own hand at anything in the department at time of need.

Mr. Hill is perhaps the only person in America who served a regular apprenticeship in photography. Early in his career he became possessed of the secret processes of emulsion-making used by French manufacturers, and put in several years at various plants devoted to the manufacture of materials for photographers.

During the eight years Mr. Hill was associated with the Kalem Company he never had a complaint from the New York Fire Department for violation of the statutes affecting photographic plants. Mr. Hill's address is 1442 West Farms Road, the Bronx, New York City.

GRACE WILLIAMS IN LEADS FOR EDISON

A new and pretty face appearing in Edison leads of late is that of Grace Williams whose work has been well received by critics and exhibitors.

Born and educated in New York she first appeared on the stage in stock. Later came an engagement with the "Coming Through the Rye" company while still a slip of a girl. Other companies which she has been with are: "The Rose Maid," with Weber and Fields in their New York theatre in "Roly Poly," with Christie McDonald in "Sweethearts," and in "The War of Wars."

She had done some work for Reliance and the Biograph before she went with Edison.

RANKIN NEW PUBLICITY DIRECTOR FOR FOX

John W. Rankin, who has been actively connected with the general news publicity service of the Vitagraph Company, on Monday joined the press department of the Fox Film Corporation as publicity director.

Mr. Rankin is experienced both in showmanship and publicity attendant upon it and enjoys a very large acquaintance in the picture trade field, as well as with dramatic editors of daily newspapers in New York and other cities.

The Press, Press Representative and the Picture—X

Circus Alliteration for Publicity Matter, with a Generous Sprinkling of Big Words Is Not, Contrary to the Idea of Some Theatrical Managers, the Way to Impress the Public for Motion Pictures—Straight, Simple English Is Most Effective

THE press agent of a certain theatre in Boston was talking with the manager of the house. The agent had submitted a story for use in the press, telling about the bill for the Sunday night concert.

"That's poor," said the manager. "It isn't strong enough. I tell you, man, you've got to pound things into the public. They won't believe you at all unless you exaggerate. Give 'em big words; pile it on thick. Then when they read they'll take notice, and remember."

Now the publicity man knew better, but he kept his peace. Even when the manager was groping about in mid-air for a flowery word to describe his Sunday bill, the publicity man kept still—for awhile. Then his sense of humor opened his mouth. Without cracking a smile, he said to the manager:

"Why not call it stupendous"

The press agent had expected the manager to jump at this word like a hungry dog leaping for a juicy bone. But the manager didn't jump. Instead, he scratched his head, looked wise, as managers know so well how to do, and finally said:

"Stupendous. Stupendous. Don't you think that's a bit over their heads?"

And when the notice was finally sent to the press it said that the Sunday night bill was to be "beyond comparison."

Plain Words for Plain People

When will exhibitors and publicity men learn that plain words forever have and forever will be the best medium for the transmission of facts from one mind to another? And when will they also learn that facts and facts only are what the public wants to know about film entertainments?

There are still thousands of exhibitors left who belong to the Barnum age, the day of alliteration, the time when the Monstrous Man-Eeating Mastodon vied for a place in the gullible public's mind alongside of the Terrible Tantalizing Tiger of Titticut.

But in no line of advertising outside of the circus does alliteration or the reiteration of constantly murdered words and phrases, commonly known as bromides, attain the results worthy of the space used to express them.

The great and ever growing motion picture public is becoming less gullible every day. It is beginning to know how to judge its pictures for itself. It will not for long patronize exclusively that house whose manager in flowery phrases floats miles away from the truth in regard to a picture that does not live up to his eulogies of it.

The public is beginning to demand truth in newspaper advertising. Advance notices of film plays are nothing less than advertising. The day is here when the up-to-date manager should insist upon nothing but truth in whatever is written about his theatre.

Avoid Hackneyed Words

For instance, why insist on referring to Mme. Bernhardt as the "Divine Sarah?" The manager referred to above does so insist. The distinguished actress (that's a bromide, too, I suppose) is no doubt "divine" in a certain sense, but she hasn't yet sprouted any wings to speak of and no one short of a chronic peruser of the cheapest sort of literature is impressed when she is spoken of as the "divine."

There is no reason why the manager should ask his publicity man to write his notices down to the level of the worse than common. That is not the level from which the great body of film attendants is coming these days. Audiences are improving all the time. What is written about the film and the film house should improve along with them. And when a publicity man knows that the plain truth, the truth not embellished with broken down words and wooden-legged phrases, is the only sort of writing which will help to plant the theatre firmly in the public's confidence, then it is a near-sighted manager indeed who comes along with his "incomparable" pictures, his "Divine Sarah," and his scorning of that veteran of all hyperbolic veterans, "stupendous."

Let the publicity man tell the truth all the time, and be sure that it is the plain truth. Straight English has always been and always will be the most emphatic language which can be used to impress the American public.

When the flowers begin to bloom in the garden of the press agent's typewriter phrases, it is time to cut loose a little freezing common sense.

Triangle Issues Two Biographical Press Sheets Separate from News Matter

THE Triangle Film Corporation issues its press publicity in three divisions—news sheet "A"; biographical press sheets "A" and "B." The first carries items about current and coming productions, with some human interest stuff about players. It displays no cuts, but occupies its seven columns with stories whose distinguishing characteristic is their brevity. We are glad to note also that the Triangle publicity does not overemphasize the name of the manufacturers.

As for the biographical sheets, we have not recently seen a more effective means of

TRIANGLE FILM CORPORATION

BIOGRAPHICAL PRESS SHEET "A"

NOTE TO EDITORS—These short sketches of Triangle film directors and players are furnished in response to innumerable requests for such material from all parts of the country. We shall be pleased to have you clip from the same and publish any of the sketches you deem timely and interesting.

DAVID W. GRIFFITH.

David W. Griffith, the great director and general manager of the Triangle-Fine Arts studio, was born in Louisville, Ky., thirty-five years ago. His father was Brigadier General Jacob Wark Griffith, C. S. A., a brave fighter of the civil war. Mr. Griffith was educated in the public and high schools and became a clerk. A fine singing voice which received considerable cultivation caused him to go on the dramatic stage. He subsequently drifted into acting, but his chief interest was aroused in play writing and play producing, to which he has devoted the principal part of his career. Several years ago Mr. Griffith availed himself of a lull in theatricals to go to the old Biograph studio in New York and present some experimental scenarios. The chiefs put him to work as an actor and within a few months gave him the opportunity of directing his first picture. The changes he made in the art were revolutionary, including the close up, the flashback, the fade out and the parallel action. Mr. Griffith's ability was presently recognized as director and playwright by making him the head of the Biograph studio. During the five years there he made numerous of many of the greatest literary classics. He also introduced poetry and the poetical treatment of nature into the films. About two years ago he left the Biograph and became general manager of the Mutual activities in Los Angeles. There last year he became transferred his talents and [illegible]

MARY ALDEN.

Mary Alden who came into prominence by her splendid work as Lydia Brown, the mulatto housekeeper in "The Birth of a Nation," was born in New Orleans. Being desirous of becoming an illustrator, she came to New York and took a course at the Art Students' League, after which she returned to New Orleans. While waiting for something to turn up in the illustrating line she met a sister of Blanche Melville of "Sis Hopkins" fame. The sister was a member of the Baldwin-Melville Stock Company, and through her Miss Alden obtained a position in this company. She had been playing with Philip Smalley in "The Wolf" and met him on the streets of New York after the season was over. Smalley was in motion pictures at the time and invited Miss Alden to the Rex studio, where he was working. During her visit to the studio she appeared in a mob scene. A short time later she became a member of the Biograph organization under the direction of Mr. Griffith. When Mr. Griffith became director-in-chief of the Majestic-Reliance he took Miss Alden with him to play leads. Miss Alden is probably without a superior in depicting characters requiring deep emotion. She will be seen at an early date in "The Lily and the Rose" with Miss Lillian Gish.

VIOLA BARRY.

Viola Barry, one of the youngest and most pleasing leading women of the Triangle-Griffith studio, is a girl of culture and charm. She was born in Evanston, Ill., and received her education at the University of California and a woman's college in England. She made her debut across the water with Beerbohm Shakespearean Company. After her return to the United States she played ingenues at Oakland and Los Angeles, starred in "The Landslide" and "The Bird Cage" and then was cast for one of the principal parts in the picture version of Jack London's "The Sea Wolf." Then followed her engagement to act under Mr. Griffith's supervision for the Triangle, and her first part was that of the heroine of "The Scarlet Band," John Emerson's detective-crook story. Miss Barry is married and has a baby.

BESSIE BARRISCALE.

Bessie Barriscale, who is starred in one of the latest Triangle successes, "The Golden Claw," was born in New York. When only five years old she spent a season with James A. Herne in "Shore Acres." Before her teens Miss Barriscale had about run the gamut of child parts in famous plays of the period.

When a little over fifteen she played her first serious part as Madge in "In Old Kentucky." Two years of success in this she followed. Then she came

ELIZABETH BURBRIDGE.

Elizabeth Burbridge, appearing as the pretty sister in "Matrimony," hails from California originally, that state being her birthplace. She was born in San Diego on Dec. 8, 1904. She lived at various times in Los Angeles, Salt Lake City, Detroit and Chicago, in all of which places she went to school. Coming to New York, she was engaged by the Biograph Company. She soon entered vaudeville. She had a summer engagement with Robert T. Haines and again returned to vaudeville in a sketch entitled "The Girl With the Lisp." She appeared in succession with the Lubin, Universal and Kinemacolor companies. Next she was featured with the Frontier Company. She was then working in Los Angeles. There she attracted the favorable notice of Thomas H. Ince and has appeared with the Triangle forces since.

MAE BUSCH.

This clever little girl was born in Melbourne, Australia, eighteen years ago. Her parents were theatrical people, being well known wherever vaudeville exists as the Busch-De Vere Trio. Miss Busch was brought to this country when a mere baby and was educated in St. Elizabeth's convent at Madison, N. J. Following the family traditions, Miss Busch took up stage work after graduating from the convent and was a huge success. In "Over [illegible]

FRANK CAMPEAU.

Frank Campeau, one of the finest character players of the American stage, is a native of Detroit and made his theatrical debut in repertoire with Bessie Taylor, first playing in "The Two Orphans." He worked in repertoire for three years. Then followed seasons in "The Silver Spur," "Money Mad," "Faust" with Louis Morrison, "Husband and Wife" with Mrs. Dion Boucicault and in "Pudd'nhead Wilson." Mr. Campeau's big moment came on the first night of "The Virginian" in New York, when he was cast for the role of the villain, Trampas. Although Dustin Farnum was the star of this western piece, Mr. Campeau fully shared the honors, and his portrait of the sneaking, vicious greaser was acclaimed a masterpiece of character acting. For the last eighteen years Campeau has been playing villain roles of various sorts. Like a good many other actors, he has feared he could never get away from the melodramatic ties which the public demanded. His Joe Garrison, in "Within the Law," was a particularly fine piece of work. Now, in "Jordan Is a Hard Road" Mr. Griffith, who supervised this Triangle play, has put him forward as Bill Minden, a reformed convict, and he is glad to be a good man instead of a sinner. Griffith was so pleased with Campeau's photographing that he placed him under a long term contract. Of [illegible]

MARIE DORO.

Marie Doro, who has just joined the Triangle forces as a star in "The Wood Nymph," has had a distinguished career in the theatrical world. Among the stars with whom she has been associated may be mentioned William Gillette, Willie Collier, the late Mrs. G. H. Gilbert and Jerome Sykes. Miss Doro was born in Pittsburgh, Pa., May 25, 1882. Her initial appearance on the stage took place at the Criterion Theater, St. Paul, Minn., in 1901 as Katherine in "Aristocracy." In 1902 she toured with Jerome Sykes as Rosalba Peppercorn in "The Billionaire." In 1903 she played Nancy Lowly in "The Girl From Kay's" at the Herald Square Theater. Later she played with William Gillette in "The Admirable Crichton." Her first London appearance was made at the Comedy Theater in 1905 as Lucy Sheridan in "The Dictator," with William Collier. Next she was seen at the Duke of York's Theater as Clarice and in the revival of "Sherlock Holmes." She first ranked as star at Boston, in 1907, when she appeared as Carlotta in "The Morals of Marcus." She later took the same part at the Criterion, New York. Some of her later successes were as Peggy in "A Butterfly on the Wheel" and as Oliver in "Oliver Twist" and as Patience in a comic opera of that name.

DUSTIN FARNUM.

Dustin Farnum, the star of "The Iron Strain," in the Triangle program, is the son of a well known Shakespearean actor who was born in England. Three sons have attained distinction on the stage, Dustin and William as romantic actors and Marshall as a stage director and present director of motion pictures. William Farnum's great success was won in the title role of "Ben-Hur." Dustin came before the public as a star of "The Virginian," an adaptation of Owen Wister's novel, in which he proved enormously popular and toured the country for several seasons. Subsequently Dustin and William Farnum starred together in "The Littlest Rebel." Of recent years both have been in great demand as picture stars, William having scored heavily in "The Spoilers" and Dustin duplicating the success in Ince's Alaskan story of a primitive race man and his lady love, entitled "The Iron Strain."

LOUISE FAZENDA.

Miss Fazenda was born in Lafayette, Ind., nineteen years ago. She was an awkward, tomboy girl, fond of outdoor sports. At the age of fifteen she joined a dramatic stock company to play ingenue parts, but her sense of humor and her love of grimacing behind the backs of other players soon proved that she was not intended for serious drama. Three years ago she became [illegible]

DOROTHY GISH.

Dorothy Gish, the youngest leading lady in Hubland, is well known from her great success in "Old Heidelberg." She recently celebrated her sixteenth birthday. When only four years old she appeared as Little Willie in "East Lynne." This was followed by her appearance in various other chosen parts in melodrama. After five years of the footlights Miss Gish entered a school in Virginia, where she remained until two years ago. Then she came to New York and was engaged by D. W. Griffith as a member of the Biograph company. When Griffith left the Biograph for the Reliance and Majestic productions of the Mutual corporation Miss Gish was taken along to play leads in the new organization. He considers her one of the most versatile actresses now appearing before the motion picture camera. She is now a permanent Triangle star. She recently appeared in "The Mysterious Shot," "The Mountain Rat," "The Floor Above," "Silent Sandy," "The Newer Woman" and other notable productions.

LILLIAN GISH.

Lillian Gish, who scored a noticeable triumph in her portrayal of Elsie Stoneman in "The Birth of a Nation," was born in Springfield, O., Oct. 14, 1895. She first made her debut when only six years old in "The Little [illegible] publicity. These biographies are biographies. They are unadorned with the killing adjective; they contain facts of the players' lives; they are short. Unless we are greatly mistaken, a good many photoplay editors will be glad to get them.

The advantage gained in issuing separate biographical sheets is of course obvious. They can be filed by the editor for use at will. They will serve not merely for one picture, but for many. They afford the editor a means of answering questions from picture "fans." And they make it possible for the news sheet to tell its story in short items, because it isn't necessary to load it down with biographical data.

The Triangle people seemed to have solved successfully the problem of news vs. a work of reference. The latter is just as necessary to the photoplay editor as the former, only he doesn't want both jumbled together in the same sheet. Separated as they are in the Triangle publicity, each gains its share of attention. The editor can run the biographies as news if he wants to, or he can work them into stories of his own. The important thing is that the data is given him, and in the shape the majority of editors want it.

The news sheet will be issued fortnightly. We hope other manufacturers will see the wisdom of separating biographical data from news, and if they don't care to use the style of presentation adopted by Triangle, at least they ought to emulate the general idea.

THIRD COMPANY TO MAKE GAUMONT PICTURES IN THE SOUTH

The success of the Rialto Star Feature productions made by Gaumont for the Mutual Program has been so marked that a third company is now being organized to work at the Jacksonville, Fla., winter studios.

This desire to accommodate a larger working force is responsible for the great improvements just announced for the Flushing, N. Y., plant.

These will be completed in time for the return of the companies from the South in the spring. Announcement will soon be made of the personnel of the new company.

East's Dark Money Cloud Has Silver Film Lining

Financial Condition Reflected in Current Phrase, "Everybody Has Plenty to Spend," and the Willingness of Banks to Lend Funds for Photoplay Building

CARL H. PIERCE, who has recently spent about two weeks in New England for the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company, of which he is the special representative, in a letter recently written to a friend, outlines some of the conditions as he found them in New England, which are of more than passing interest.

To quote from the letter:

"The general tone of the photoplay conditions throughout New England is good—very much better than a year ago, when things looked so dark from the commercial side. Foundries and manufacturing establishments, particularly in Waterbury, Bridgeport, New Haven, Ansonia, Fall River and New Bedford are running full blast.

"In Bridgeport they are working three shifts of men each twenty-four hours. In both Waterbury and Bridgeport the phrase is current: 'Everybody has plenty of money.'

"The demand of the photoplay theatre owner and manager is for pictures with more punch. Eighty per cent. of his trade is from the millspeople of perhaps average intelligence, but to a large extent interested in melodrama. The other twenty per cent. are so-called 'high-brow' audiences of the Beacon Hill type who desire the so-called higher and better things in photoplays.

"One new note in this district which is very encouraging to manufacturers is the fact that banks are beginning to lend money to responsible citizens with which to build the better class of photoplay houses. I visited one such theatre in Somerville, The Strand, beautifully decorated, built to accommodate about fourteen hundred, and containing all of the modern devices for the right kind of projection of good pictures. The house opened while I was in Boston to a fine audience the first night and gives every evidence of fulfilling the hopes and predictions of its backers. There are about eight of the houses going up in towns around Boston.

"Moe Mark with his own capital is building a very beautiful theatre, the Strand, in Lynn, and everywhere along the line there is evidence of an improvement in the exhibition of pictures.

"There is still much need for improvement, and probably always will be in advertising the pictures on the part of the exhibitors. Theatre managers are still too prone to remember the old days when all they had to do was to open the front door and have a constant stream of people.

"One theatre along the line told me that its receipts were five hundred dollars a week less than they were last year, and wondered how to account for it. The reason is very simple. Their advertising had not kept pace with the progress of the times. With several programs on the market and a constantly-increasing discrimination on the part of the public, the exhibitor must let his people know in ways that are increasingly attractive what he is going to show and what is the reason for his demand for their patronage.

"Where exhibitors have shown the right hand of progressiveness in this respect, as instanced very plainly by such men as Nichol, of the Poli theatre, at Waterbury, and Morrison, of the Majestic theatre, Hartford, there are no complaints as to the profits from showing good pictures.

"Mr. Nichol is an unusually progressive exhibitor—is constantly thinking up new ways of presenting the good points of his pictures to the people in Waterbury. His receipts the first day when he took hold of the theatre about a year ago was $10.80. The house was run down and everyone predicted that he could not make it pay. Today he has a magnificent trade that is showing him a good deal more than one thousand per cent. over and above the receipts when he took charge of the theatre.

"I understand that the banks in Pennsylvania also are beginning to lend money for the purpose of building the better class of theatres. I assume that it is only the question of a short time after these prove their worth, that the photoplay industry will be recognized throughout the United States as a legitimate and solid investment field."

CROWDS FIGHT AT THEATRE DOORS TO SEE "WARRING MILLIONS"

Special to Motion Picture News

Chicago, Dec. 4.

"The Warring Millions," latest war feature of the American Correspondent Film Company, Inc., is proving an attraction at the Olympic theatre. At its first public presentation there was a near-riot caused by the frenzied crowd of picture-goers seeking to gain admission to the theatre. Hundreds were turned away disappointed.

The new production contains the latest pictures from the European war zone taken by Edward Lyell Fox, A. K. Dawson and Jack Everetts,

"The Warring Millions" is being exhibited under the auspices of the Buffalo Times Motion Picture Syndicate, of which Norman E. Mack is proprietor.

Two 5-Part Features from Novels for Ocean Film

Company Which Just Released "Life Without Soul" Buys from the Paget Literary Agency Rights to "The Fortunate Youth" by William J. Locke

THE Ocean Film Corporation, which has lately released its initial production, "Life Without Soul," is now actively engaged in the production of features to form a part of its program to release two five-part features a month, adaptations from stage plays or popular novels, with legitimate or screen stars in the lead.

The program will have its initial release about January 15, the program to be controlled by independent exchanges, to whom a franchise will be awarded at a convention of the exchanges, called for Saturday, December 11, to be held at the Astor Hotel, New York.

"Life Without Soul" is being disposed of on a state right basis; the purchasers of that production are being invited to attend the convention of the exchange men.

The Ocean Film Corporation has purchased, through the Paget Literary Agency, the rights to "The Fortunate Youth," written by William J. Locke, and has also secured options on sixteen other dramatic and literary productions.

Negotiations are also pending with legitimate stage and screen stars to appear in each of the coming releases of the company.

The formal organization of the company was completed Thursday evening, at a meeting of the subscribers to the capital stock, and the following were elected officers and directors:

President and financial manager, John L. Dudley, a trustee of the Citizens' Savings Bank, New York, and a member of the New York Chamber of Commerce.

Vice-president and general manager, Jesse J. Goldburg, who, prior to his association with the Ocean Film Corporation, was the organizer and secretary and general manager of the Life Photo Company; secretary, George S. Brown.

The board of directors consists of the three officers above named and Francis R. Masters, of William Whitman and Company, textile manufacturers; Paul E. Rasor, a representative of foreign insurance companies in America; William D. Judson, of Parker, Wilder and Company; R. C. E. Brown, formerly of the New York Tribune.

George DeCarlton has been engaged, under a long term contract, as manager of productions.

The present quarters of the company have been enlarged by the addition of six offices immediately adjacent to those heretofore occupied by the company in the Candler Building, New York.

Plans have been drawn for the erection of an eastern studio and laboratory in Westchester county, the construction of the building to be under the personal supervision of Edward Barnard Kinsila, a well-known architect.

"We have proceeded rather slowly in our organization work, in order to systematize the entire organization and general policies. Every employee of this company will be men who are experienced in the production end of the work," said Mr. Goldburg in explanation of the firm's plans.

"Each individual department will have its practical head, who will be held responsible for the results obtained in his particular department."

Lewis J. Selznick Pleased with Profit-Sharing Plan

World Film Executive Inaugurated the Scheme a Year Ago and Employees Praise Practical Workings of a System Enabling Them to Rise Above Mere Wage Scale

LEWIS J. SELZNICK finds after a trial lasting a year that his profit-sharing plan for employees has been one of the vital factors in building up the business of the World Film Corporation. This co-operative relation between employer and employee has resulted in satisfactory results for both sides, it is stated.

So successful was the World in its scheme of mutual helpfulness that one of the first steps taken by the Equitable Company, releasing through the World, was to provide a similar working basis for World employees getting business for Equitable in addition to their present profit-sharing from the World.

"Mr. Selznick was the first to see the vast possibilities both to employee and employer of the profit-sharing plan," says an official of the company. "He inaugurated it November 29, 1914.

"After the close of the first year he not only finds it copied by a great number of feature and regular service distributing companies in the United States, but he has found from practical experience in his own organization that it has been one of the most vital factors in the upbuilding of the World Film.

"The plan makes every man feel that he is a part of a human and not a mechanical institution. It inspires a spirit of co-operation, a feeling of partnership with the firm, a personal interest such as many could not otherwise possess.

"It has had its effect in holding to the company the many loyal employees even in face of constant effort made to take them elsewhere.

"It makes every man do his work as if his own money were invested.

"It eliminates friction and self-interest. It puts a premium on creative talent and initiative as well as co-operative effoort in and between offices to build the business up to as great a height as it is possible, which in turn gives each employee so much more in return."

Goff Becomes Assistant General Manager for V-L-S-E

Former Coast Division Head Elevated to Direction of Big Four Sales Force as Walter W. Irwin's Lieutenant—His Second Big Promotion Within Six Months

AN important change was made in the executive staff of the V-L-S-E this week when General Manager Walter W. Irwin announced the appointment of A. W. Goff, for the past three months in charge of the Coast Division of this organization, as the assistant general manager of the company.

Mr. Goff is now on his way East, and will assume his new duties on Monday, December 13.

His elevation to the direction of the V-L-S-E sales force—which comprises the principal function of the position of assistant general manager in the V-L-S-E—is the recognition of the splendid work which Mr. Goff has done for the Big Four in the West.

It is the second appreciation of his capacity made within six months, Mr. Goff having been transferred from Cleveland where he was branch manager for the V-L-S-E, to San Francisco as Coast Division manager, last July, where he has been until now.

In the appointment of Mr. Goff, it is understood that General Manager Walter W. Irwin desires more time for creative work, and therefore sought a lieutenant upon whom he might depend to take care of the great deal of executive detail in connection with the V-L-S-E.

Mr. Irwin plans to spend more time with his different department managers and with his branch managers, bending every effort to make the Big Four's service of the highest possible efficiency to the exhibitor.

FORTY PIECE ORCHESTRA FOR "CABIRIA"

What promises to be one of the highest tributes ever paid the motion picture will be given when "Cabiria" is shown at the Academy of Music, New York, December 17-18-19, with an orchestra of forty pieces and an accompaniment by one of the best known organists in the city.

COBB LEAVES RAMO AS FIRM RETIRES FROM FIELD

C. Lang Cobb, Jr., for three years manager of sales and publicity for Ramo Films, Inc., retires January 1 from that position as a result of the company's intention to discontinue production on that date. No plans are announced for the future, but Mr. Cobb's recognized ability assures him of a speedy connection in some department of the trade.

STRIKING SCENES FROM KALEM'S ELABORATE PRODUCTION OF A CLASSIC EXTRAVAGANZA: "THE BLACK CROOK," FIVE PART FEATURE

"Black Crook" 1st Kalem Under General's New Plan

Film Version of the Spectacular Show Running in New York Over 400 Times, a Record in New York Then, Will Be Ready for Public on January 10

"THE BLACK CROOK," famed for two generations, will be given to the followers of motion pictures on January 10. Kalem announced early this week that the finishing touches had been put to its adaptation of the extravaganza and that the early date in the New Year had been chosen for its release. "The Black Crook" therefore will mark the first release by Kalem on the new plan for General Film features.

Many weeks have been spent on "The Black Crook" since the last scene was taken by director and players in pruning it to five reels, at which length it will be released. The story, of course, is told in the amount of footage required, but care was taken that only the pick of the spectacular scenes and ballet features was retained for use. Technical men have been at work on the tinting and toning and hand coloring was even called into play.

The cast was largely recruited from the speaking stage. It includes E. P. Sullivan, who has played over four hundred times in the stage production of "The Black Crook." On the screen he is seen in his familiar role of Hertzog, the Black Crook. Charles De Forrest is seen as Greppo, the Black Crook's drudge, and Count Wolfenstein, the villain, is played by Henry Hallam. Pretty Gladys Coburn appears in the leading female role, that of Amina, while her lover is played by Roland Bottomley, who has already secured considerable of a screen following in Kalem productions.

Frank Leonard and Helen Lindroth are others in the support, while Mae Thompson is in the role of Stalacta, the fairy queen. Close to two hundred prominent ballet dancers and many solo artistes were secured for the production and special numbers adapted to screen reproduction were arranged

The screen adaptation was prepared by Phil Lang, who spent many months collecting from various old sources the real story of "The Black Crook," so that the screen is able to boast of telling the story for the first time.

As originally written "The Black Crook" was a tragedy, and Manager Wheatley, owner of the rights, hesitated before offering it to a fickle public. Messrs. Jarrett and Palmer, names well remembered in stage history, had just imported a number of famous Parisian ballet dancers, and when fire destroyed Whitney's Opera House, their theatre, they found themselves with costly contracts on their hands and no way of securing profitable return.

It was then decided to introduce the ballet and musical features into "The Black Crook," and the production opened at Niblo's Garden, startling New York audiences with a new form of entertainment, which was hailed by Leslie's Weekly of that time as "a gay gift from naughty Paris." The initial production ran over four hundred times, and frequent revivals since then have made its record two thousand performances.

The Black Crook, also known as Hertzog, is a character, who, because of wrongs committed on him, makes a compact with Satan by which he agrees to win over to perdition one human soul each year, or himself pay the penalty.

Amina, the pretty ward of Count Wolfenstein, refuses to accede to the former's proposal of marriage, so the feudal baron conspires so that Rudolph, her lover is first banished from his domains and later, when he dares to return, cast into a dungeon. Hertzog, in search of a soul, and having but twenty-four hours in which to make good his compact, turns his crafty eyes on Rudolph and Amina, who are in despair.

How Hertzog is frustrated, Rudolph and Amina united, and the Black Crook himself consigned to the care of Satan and his imps is told in spectacular fashion in the Kalem production.

Carey to Play Heavies for Associated Program

Actor Who Joins Nola Studio Worked Under Boggs at Selig's in Chicago—Leatrice Joy Zeidler Engaged for Leads, and Rogers Also Signed

LAWRENCE CAREY has been engaged by the Nola Film Company, whose output is handled by the Associated Film Sales Corporation, to play heavies. Mr. Carey worked in the Selig studios in Chicago under the direction of William Boggs, playing character and leads in 1910 and 1911. He has also played for Director Frank Howard, of the same company.

Mr. Carey's former connections before joining the picture business were with E. H. Sothern in repertoire. He played characters with the Edna May Spooner Stock Company at the Lyric theatre, New Orleans, La., in 1910, and also played with the Baldwin-Melville Stock Company in Buffalo and New Orleans.

Leatrice Joy Zeidler has been engaged to play leads in all future productions of the Nola Film Company, one of the releasing companies of the Associated Program. Miss Zeidler holds the unique distinction of being the only player of the Nola Film Company who has played in all of its productions and is held over for the "Big A" productions.

Miss Zeidler is of an ingenue type, though she also displays great skill in the interpretation of dramatic roles. The next feature she appears in is "The Turning Point," soon to be released by the Associated.

Andrew Rogers, one of the older dramatic men, has been converted to the silent drama. His former connections for the last two seasons have been as leading man in "Old Kentucky." He has also played with the most eminent actors, such as Frederick Ward, in repertoire.

He played Mark Antony to Frederick Ward's Brutus in Shakespere's "Julius Caesar." He also appeared for a short time with the Solax Company.

BOSSNER MANAGER OF THEATRE DEPARTMENT FOR PARAMOUNT

W. F. Bossner made many friends during his service as manager for Paramount of the Park theatre in Boston.

All are pleased to learn that he has just been appointed manager of the department of theatres for Paramount. He is now in New Orleans to open a Paramount-Klaw and Erlanger theatre.

PUBLIC AND UNIVERSAL STARS MEET FOR ENTERTAINMENT

One of the greatest get-together meetings ever held between people prominent in filmdom and the public patronizing photoplays, was held Saturday night, December 4, at Woodmanston Inn on Pelham Parkway, where the proprietor, Joseph Pani, was host to ten of the leading Universal favorites in the East, and had invited to be host with him, over one thousand of his patrons.

The inn was beautifully decorated for the occasion and offered a rich setting for the great array of style and fashion which was presented by the patrons and special guests. Those who represented the Universal were: Jane Gail, Matt Moore, King Baggot, Violet Mersereau, Paul Panzer, Dorothy Phillips, Alan Holubar, Rosemary Theby, Harry Myers and Edna Hunter.

There was an excellent menu served, followed by dancing and an entertainment at which the different stars were formally introduced to the public.

"GREAT DIVIDE" BOOKED FOR LYRIC'S XMAS ATTRACTION

Another illustration of the inroads which the screen is making upon the stage, is afforded in the announcement that the Lyric theatre in Cincinnati, a Shubert house, will offer for its holiday bill, the new Lubin drama, "The Great Divide," which is to be released through the V-L-S-E on December 20.

This feature will run at this house during all of Christmas week, and will be extensively advertised in the same manner as Hubert Henck, manager of the Lyric, advertises the legitimate productions.

The Lubin company through the V-L-S-E is issuing a wealth of advertising on this feature. It has been prepared under the direction of R. W. MacFarland, the New York representative.

JUST WHAT SEITZ DID DO ON PATHE SERIALS

In recent issues of several publications was published a résumé of the career of George Brackett Seitz, scenario editor of the Pathé organization, in which an error of omission was made.

In specifying that Mr. Seitz "wrote" "The Perils of Pauline," and "The Exploits of Elaine," it was meant that he wrote the working scenarios, a number of the story synopses having been written by Charles W. Goddard.

The stories written from these scenarios were published by the Star Syndicate, a William R. Hearst organization, and were the work of Arthur B. Reeve.

EXCHANGEMEN SEE RAVER FOR STATE RIGHTS

The following exchangemen called on Harry Raver, president of the Raver Film Corporation during the past few days for the purpose of negotiating for the territorial rights of the Raver-Thomas productions:

J. F. Cuberley, general manager Zenith Feature Film Company, Duluth, Minn.; I. H. Kuh, E-L-K Film Company, Chicago; N. Palley, manager United Film Service, Detroit, Mich.; William J. Benedict, Kriterion Company of Boston; and J. E. Donahue, Union Film and Supply Co., of Boston.

LUCILLE TAFT, GAUMONT PLAYER, BELIEVES IN HARD WORK

Lucille Taft, leading woman for Richard Carrick's company of Gaumont players, who appear in the Mutual Program in Rialto Star Features, is an advocate of the theory that it pays to work hard.

Miss Taft was born in Memphis, Tenn. Seven years ago she went into the motion pictures. Some months ago she went out to the Gaumont studio at Flushing and asked Director Richard Garrick to let her play extra parts. Mr. Garrick gave her a part. She played her role so well that Mr. Garrick decided to keep her on permanently. She was not elevated to the position of leading woman immediately. It took weeks of hard work to put her in that position.

LUCILLE TAFT

Miss Taft appeared in the three-part Rialto Star Feature, "The Card Players," in which she played in support of William Roselle. She played opposite Hal Forde in "Lessons in Love." At present she is playing opposite Malcolm Williams in the first Gaumont Masterpicture, which will be released through Mutual later.

MOTHER OF CARLYLE BLACKWELL DIES IN SYRACUSE, N. Y.

Mrs. Esther Irene Blackwell, mother of Carlyle Blackwell, of the Jesse L. Lasky Company, died November 16, at her home in Syracuse, N. Y. She had been ill more than a year and her death was anticipated.

Mr. Blackwell was in Syracuse a few weeks ago to stop off and see his mother, and had just returned to the Lasky studios in Los Angeles when he received the sad news. He is now on his way back home and is expected to reach Syracuse in time for the funeral.

KELLARD SIGNED FOR "PRECIOUS PACKET," A PATHE

Ralph Kellard, who has been signed by Donald Mackenzie for his Pathé Gold Rooster Play "The Precious Packet," as co-star with Lois Meredith, is one of those rarely found individuals, a native of New York City.

He had always been fond of the stage, and looked for a chance to break into the profession. He got one—in "The Eternal City," and played twenty-six weeks in one night stands in the south!

His first appearance on Broadway was with David Warfield in "The Music Master" at the Bijou theatre, and he remained with that company through the next season—forty-five weeks in all. Then followed two seasons with "The Warrens of Virginia," under Belasco; one summer season in stock in Washington, D. C., with Charlotte Walker; leading man with Virginia Harned in "The Land of Hope"; leading man with "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" during the New York season; three seasons in the Ralph Kellard Stock Company in Syracuse, N. Y.

MOROSCO SIGNS PAGE PETERS

Page Peters, one of the younger leading men in pictures, is now permanently engaged at the studio of the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company in Los Angeles.

Mr. Peters is a Kentuckian, having been born in Louisville, April 21, 1899.

He has been engaged for three years in picture work, starting as an "extra" in small parts and working shoulder to shoulder with hundreds of others in scenes lending atmosphere to the production. His latest work is that of Wilson Ostron, the heavy, in "He Fell in Love With His Wife," a Morosco-Paramount production in which Florence Rockwell is being starred.

BALTIMORE EXHIBITORS HEAR HERRINGTON ON ANTI-CENSORSHIP

The exhibitors league of Maryland held a stag get-together meeting November 30, at the Hotel Raleigh, Baltimore. Fred J. Herrington delivered a very strong address on censorship, which is the bugbear which seems to confront the exhibitors of Maryland at the present time.

At the meeting, the exchange men of both Baltimore and Washington signified their intention to assist in every way they could in regards to the censorship question, and the exhibitors have asked the exchange men to become honorary members of the league.

VIM PLAYERS HOLD DINNER-DANCE ON THANKSGIVING

A turkey dinner followed by an evening of dancing and gaiety, lasting until the "wee sma' hours," made an enjoyable Thanksgiving for the Vim comedy players and many of their Jacksonville friends.

During the course of the evening, Ethel Burton and "Walt" Stull introduced the "Vim Vango"—a dance of their own creation—and soon everybody was doing it. Another feature was a clever acrobatic number by "Bobbie" Burns and "Spook" Hanson.

BORZAGE MADE A DIRECTOR FOR AMERICAN FILMS

Frank Borzage, the versatile young star of "Beauty" comedy fame, has become a director. The first production for which he is responsible is "The Pitch of Chance," a two-reel Mustang drama to be released by the American Film Company, on the Mutual program, December 24.

In addition to directing the picture, Borzage plays a leading role along with Helen Rosson and Jack Richardson. Borzage's rise in filmdom has been meteoric. He was playing varied parts in another company, when he came under the eye of Samuel S. Hutchinson, president of the American.

FRANK BORZAGE

The latter engaged Borzage, and he at once appeared in leading roles in American "Beauty" comedies, playing opposite Neva Gerber. The young actor's remarkable sense of "film intuition," as President Hutchison terms it, is responsible for his promotion to a directorship.

It is likely that Borzage will take prominent roles in most of the productions which he will be called upon to direct in the future.

RAIN PREVENTS HOUSE BURNING FOR THANHOUSER SCENE

If Leon J. Rubenstein could control the elements of nature as easily as he controls the English language, doubtless the sun would have driven away the rain on November 27 in the thriving municipality of Portchester, New York.

On this day it was Ruby's plan to herd a gathering of newspaper representatives to the aforementioned town, to watch W. Eugene Moore, Thanhouser director, burn a village for a forthcoming release of the Mutual program, but rain and wind put a stop to the entire proceeding.

And so there was no fire, but instead a lunch at Germania Hall, somewhere in New Rochelle. At the gay repast much data was gleaned, including the fact that Harris Gordon and Louise Emerald Bates of the Thanhouser company were married the Sunday following the Screen Club ball, that Arthur Cunningham, Falstaff comedian, has a liking for jolly songs and sings them, that Director George Foster Platt is fond of grape juice, and that Ruby is a good entertainer.

Following this enlightening entertainment the newspaper folk were taken to the studio to watch the filming of several scenes for future Thanhouser subjects and then came the ride back to Times Square in one of Edwin Thanhouser's automobiles.

EDISON BEGINS "THE CRUCIFIXION OF PHILIP STRONG," FROM SHELDON NOVEL

Edison last week commenced work on a Kleine-Edison feature called "The Crucifixion of Philip Strong," a problem play dealing with the modern churchman and his work. It has been adapted from the novel by the Rev. Charles M. Shelden, author of "In His Steps," "His Brother's Keeper," and "Born to Save."

Philip Strong, a rising young pastor in a fashionable church, surrounded by luxury and lionized by a wealthy congregation, is suddenly made to realize that his life work is a failure. He determines to renounce his rich parish and take up a real work in the slums. In this he meets with strong objections from his beautiful, luxury-loving wife, who refuses to share his lot.

"The Crucifixion of Phillip Strong," aside from its religious phases, has much of life on the East Side in its relation to the rich.

TWO VIM COMEDIES FEATURE BURNS AND STULL

"Speed Kings," and "Mixed and Fixed," are two Vim Comedies of December 17 and 24, respectively.

"Speed Kings" is the story of a couple of men—Pokes and Jabbs—who receive an automobile in payment for a debt and proceed to get the speed fever. The picture is marked by the explosion of an automobile which is said to be a most realistic bit of photography.

"Mxed and Fixed" presents a mixup in wives and husbands, a mask ball and a "dummy" figure which is the cause of all the fuss. The comedy ends in a lively chase which promises to even surprise the most blase.

In both of these comedies, "Bobbie" Burns and "Walt" Stull as Pokes and Jabbs are featured with pretty Ethel Burton as chief support.

ROTHACKER ON TRIP TO SAN FRANCISCO

Watterson R. Rothacker, president and general manager of the Industrial Moving Picture Company of Chicago, is on his way to San Francisco, on an important business trip.

He will remain in San Francisco four or five days, then go to Los Angeles for a few days, returning to Chicago on December 21.

"RED WIDOW" GIVES WAY FOR WHITE XMAS PLAY, "OLD HOMESTEAD"

After the first showing of the completed adaptation of Denman Thompson's, "The Old Homestead," it has been decided by the Famous Players Film Company to advance the release date of the feature on the Paramount Program from December 30 to December 23.

As the picture is so full of the spirit of Christmas, and as the play is associated in the minds of everyone with the holiday season, it has been thought advisable to so advance the release date that the picture will be on the screen during the entire holiday period.

The changing of this date has necessitated the re-arrangement of the other December releases already scheduled. "The Red Widow," originally listed for the date now assigned to "The Old Homestead," will be held over to a future date to be announced later. Mary Pickford in "The Foundling" will be issued on December 27, the date originally scheduled for its release, and John Barrymore in "Nearly a King" will take the place of "The Old Homestead" on December 30.

MARY MILES MINTER TO GIVE XMAS PARTY TO CHILDREN

Mary Miles Minter, the young Metro star, will play Santa Claus to a number of poor children on Christmas Day by giving them a Christmas party at her home in Riverside Drive. The little ones will be the children of parents now identified with the stage or screen in minor capacities.

Miss Minter is but fifteen years old, but she began her stage career when she was five years old. She first appeared with Nat Goodwin in "Cameo Kirby," and is perhaps best known to theatregoers throughout the country as the delightful little star in "The Littlest Rebel."

Miss Minter is now working on a five-part feature at the Columbia-Metro studio called "Rose of the Alley," under the direction of Charles Horan.

When Miss Minter finishes "Rose of the Alley" she will be starred in Dickens' "Old Curiosity Shop," in which she plays both "Little Nell" and "The Marchioness."

SELZNICK ENGAGES ARTISTS TO PAINT PORTRAITS OF WORLD STARS

Half a dozen artists of note are devoting their time to the painting of portraits of World Film stars, for use on the posters and other advertising matter used on World Film features.

There is an unusual demand from exhibitors for papers bearing individual likeness of Clara Kimball Young and Alice Brady, as well as all other favorites in the features in which they appear.

Realizing the importance of their faces being prominently displayed, Lewis J. Selznick, vice-president and general manager, has commissioned several illustrators to paint a series of photographs of each, for the use of exhibitors, first on "Camille" and "The Rack," in which Miss Young and Miss Brady star respectively, and other important features that will follow in due course.

"THE UNFAITHFUL WIFE"

(Fox Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

ROBERT B. MANTELL'S second screen appearance, like his first, is eloquent evidence of the fact that motion pictures have acquired another actor whose abilities are eminently fitted to the shadow stage.

Here Mr. Mantell is called upon to portray one of the most difficult of emotions to express convincingly—vengeance. Difficult, that is, because its portrayal is hedged about by a quagmire of melodramatic posing, into which the ordinary actor inevitably falls.

Mr. Mantell meets this severe test with perfect ease. His role is that of an Italian nobleman, who is entombed while still alive by his faithless wife and her lover. He awakens, struggles out of the coffin, and then deliberately plans revenge, ultimately killing the lover in a duel, and sealing up the unfaithful wife in the very vault where the two had, a few months before, laid him.

A story like this, if it is to be really dramatic, requires careful development, and acting of a high order. In this picture it gets both, and grewsome as it is, nevertheless leaves the spectator with a satisfied feeling because the plot is carried out to its logical conclusion.

In his rendition of cunning, cold blooded revenge, thrown against a background of pathos which completely commands sympathy, Mr. Mantell is unsurpassed by any screen actor we have seen.

In Genevieve Hamper (the unfaithful wife) he has unusual support. We knew, of course, that Miss Hamper's beauty would grace any photoplay, but we had not realized before that she could portray so well the full extent of emotions like that of horror. She portrays it with great impressiveness in the final tomb scene.

Stuart Holmes has never appeared to better advantage than in his present role. Other members of the cast, all of whom give sincere interpretations, are: Doris Wooldridge, Warner Oland, Runa Hodges (in an excellent child impersonation, and Lawrence White. The scenario is by Mary Murillo.

J. Gordon Edwards directed. An extensive country estate was used for the exteriors, and as for the interiors nobody needs any longer be told that in a Fox picture they are everything they ought to be. Some of the early scenes moved almost too rapidly for clear understanding, and occasionally the photography was a little dark.

But viewing the production as a whole—and that is the only way to view any production—it is one of the best Fox has so far offered. Which is saying a great deal.

"THE LABYRINTH"

(Equitable—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

IT would be hard to find a feature whose principal scenes were staged with more elaborate care than that bestowed upon "The Labyrinth."

Chief among these is a theatre, with dressing rooms, stage, and audience employed to make a series of scenes faithful to life, and convincing. The climax of these is the presentation of a musical comedy, with complete chorus, star, orchestra, in a set of great depth—that is, in a real theatre. Here Director E. Mason Hopper did some able work.

Other scenes in the picture, among which should be mentioned a neatly contrived train collision by night with the accompanying rescue work carried on by the fitful light of burning wreckage, are unusually good also. When interiors of cafes or apartments or a church in the slums or a sanitarium flash on the screen, they give the spectator the impression of leaving nothing to be desired.

In this story of stage life, Gail Kane is starred. Miss Kane is of course an actress with real personality, whose presence would dignify any play. Here she has to assume the role of a successful star who spurns the advances of her evil-seeking manager, though she is dogged by him even after her marriage to a minister. Such a story is not new, and in its treatment here gains nothing additional in the way of originality, but Miss Kane succeeds in winning one's interest and keeping it.

Just to show that Miss Kane is capable of holding her own in a scene of violence as well as in repose, we will cite two encounters between her and the persistent theatre magnate.

One of these takes place in a cafe, where the furniture is wrecked, and the second in the minister's home, after his marriage to the actress. In the latter, after Miss Kane has again demonstrated her prowess in physical combat, the magnate is accidentally shot and killed.

THE CROWD OF FIRST NIGHTERS

Dolly Larkin, Richard Neal, Edward Roseman and Polly Champlain are the other principals. Neal, as the minister, merits especial commendation.

"THE PAINTED SOUL"

(Mutual Masterpicture—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

RUSSELL E. SMITH has furnished a strong story which brings together two extremes of human life, for this feature, and it has been well presented. The "thrills" are of the straight dramatic order. Bessie Barriscale has a difficult role, that of a girl of the underworld, who is redeemed through the influence of a face in a painting, but she interprets it clearly, and with great conviction.

She is brought into the story when a young artist, who has finished his great work, "The Resurrection," goes to the night court in search of a model for his next picture, "The Fallen Woman." He finds the girl, who is led in on the usual charge, and released under suspended sentence.

He induces her to pose for him, and once in his studio she comes under the influence of the "soul" which he has incorporated in his painting of the "Resurrection." The girl forsakes her former ways, and she and the artist fall in love.

The artist's mother, alarmed for his social position, breaks up the match; she cannot change her son's mind, so appeals to the girl, and she, for the sake of the man, consents to cure him of his love. So she pretends to have slipped back to her former life.

She is arrested, and the artist comes to court to bail her out after she has pleaded guilty. Thus they part. That night the girl slips into the studio, and from the face which was her inspiration, gets renewed strength to face the struggle with the world alone.

At no place is there any striving for sensationalism, and the scenes of underworld life have been arranged with attention to the dictates of good taste. The work of Miss Barriscale is well supported by that of Truly Shattuck, as the Mother, and Charles E. Ray, as the artist.

SELIG-TRIBUNE TO CARRY SLOGAN OF "WORLD'S GREATEST NEWS FILM"

THE Selig-Tribune, the new animated news film to be released starting the first of the year by the Selig Polyscope Company in conjunction with the Chicago Tribune, will carry the slogan of "The World's Greatest News Film."

A corps of expert editors have been installed at the Selig studios, Chicago, who are preparing the initial numbers of the Selig-Tribune for exploitation. A number of interesting innovations will be introduced.

"WHAT HAPPENED TO FATHER"

(Vitagraph Blue Ribbon—V-L-S-E—Five Reels)

(REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER)

GIVEN a situation humorous in itself, and a cast capable of realizing its possibilities, and you have true comedy.

In this picture is present that happy combination. There are plenty of laughs scattered through the five reels, but laughs that do not have blushes for their counterpart.

Chiefly responsible for this refreshing piece of entertainment is Frank Daniels, whose grimaces, posturings and overflowing good nature "gets over" on the screen just as they used to on the stage. Daniels has not abandoned his mannerisms. But his mannerisms are really funny, and look well when photographed. And what is more, his mannerisms do not get in the way of the story's progress. He enters heart and soul into the spirit of the tale.

The plot is a plot of predicament, as all genuine comedy is. Wather disappears on daughter's wedding day, driving away in daughter's new car with daughter's trousseau in a trunk on the rear of the machine. Father has written a musical comedy, and has been called away suddenly by a telegram from the pretty young star, who has been "fired" by the wealthy backer of the show in favor of a retired lion tamer. After Father arrives the fun gets faster, and culminates in the "egging" of Father when he essays the principal role in the production.

The upshot of this is jail for father. Here Daniels gets off some of the best comedy we have ever seen on the screen. Still attired in stage costume, he organizes a conspiracy which results in everybody's escaping from jail except himself. Finally, he succeeds in locking the jailers in the cell previously occupied by him, gently placing the keys on the desk as he goes out, with this remark (by way of a subtitle): "I'm giving up my room."

Whether he is zigzagging in an automobile, rehearsing his play with the aid of the housemaid, playing sick in a sanitarium to conceal his adventures from his wife, or outwitting the police, Daniels is funny.

The action gets under way slowly, and once or twice there is a feeling that it could have been shortened without injury, but we wouldn't vote to shorten by a foot any of the scenes in which the star appears.

C. Jay Williams, the director, performed his work in the best Vitagraph manner. Mary Roberts Rhinehart wrote the story. Members of the supporting cast are: Bernice Berner, Adele Kelly, Anna Laughlin, Billy Quirk, Frank Kingsley, William Sloan, John Hollis and William Sellery.

"UNCLE SAM AT WORK"

(Powers-Universal—Numbers One and Two)

(REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE)

THE first two numbers of the Universal series of educational pictures, to be released under the general title of "Uncle Sam at Work," have already been shown to the trade press and prove to be equal to all expectations. The series is to be released in one reel subjects, the first of which is to appear Saturday, December 25; the second on Saturday, January 1; with the rest following at intervals of one week.

The first number is divided into two parts, the first consisting of interesting scenes of the National Capitol, including a wealth of entertaining views of the Congressional Library, besides several pictures of United States notables.

The last half is devoted to the Smithsonian Institute at Washington, D. C., and from this place the camera man has gathered a series of instructive and pleasing scenes concerning things the public in general knows little about. It is a valuable reel and one that will surely prove interesting to everyone.

The second issue of the series is even more interesting in an instructive way than the first. The Bureau of Engraving and Printing at Washington has been chosen for the means by which to acquaint the public with the processes that all paper money and stamps used in the United States go through, before it is issued and after it has been used.

Among these scenes are scattered pictures of veteran employees in this department, all of whom add a personal interest to the mechanical processes shown on the screen.

Next the camera takes the observer to the Philadelphia Mint, where he is a witness to the manufacture of gold coin. If he is able to resist jumping at the screen to grab a few handfuls of twenty-dollar gold pieces, he will find that this series of pictures is of enlightening interest.

The last part of the reel is devoted to the United States Treasury Building at the capital. Here William G. McAdoo steps before the camera, and then the washing of paper money is seen and also the heartrending act of destroying cancelled paper money.

Judging from the first two numbers, "Uncle Sam at Work" bids fair to be the foremost series of educational and actually entertaining pictures of this country that the exhibitor has had the fortunate opportunity to secure.

"THE VICTORY OF VIRTUE"

(Exclusive Features—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THIS is a most pretentious dramatization of the old conflict between vice and virtue, and does full justice to the evident money, time and brains expended on it. It is skillfully built up, and the dramatic units have been handled in a professionally able manner. Nearly half of the piece is allegory, and it is allegory of appropriate sort, which serves to drive home convincingly the moral of the story.

Brilliant photography has aided elaborate and carefully-studied settings and there are glimpses of Washington life, both out and in-doors which should have an attraction for American audiences from coast to coast. There is always a sort of magnetic mystery in Washington official life, and this is well played upon in "The Victory of Virtue."

The theme is told in few words. The unsophisticated daughter of a wealthy man meets and falls in love with a young man-about-town; they are together at balls, drives, and the like, and finally he gives her a bohemian dinner in his apartment, which she attends without her father's knowledge. The dinner has been carefully planned as the climax of the young man's pursuit of the girl—and is successful.

THE PURSUIT SUCCEEDS

Then the allegory comes in; the insidious appeal of vice is combatted by virtue, and in the course of the struggle, the cause of their contention is taken back through pagan scenes in the Daphne grove of Antioch, where the wild revels of Baccus are shown, as well as the misery and degredation to which they lead.

There is a great deal of double exposure, double printing and other camera effects, all of which are expertly handled, and the illusion is pleasing to the eye. These scenes in the Grove of Daphne are especially well costumed and mounted, and Harry McRae Webster, the director, has shown a deep study and comprehension of his subject.

Gerda Holmes is a pleasing figure as the Girl, and Rapley Holmes, who will be remembered for his expansive parts in recent picturizations of George Ade's fables, is excellent. Others are Wilmuth Merkyl, Bert Howard, J. H. Gilmour, Marie Yould, Arthur Stengard and Cecil Owen. Penelope Knapp is the author of the piece.

LOOKING AT A FEW TYPICAL SCENES IN "ROSEMARY," A CURRENT METRO, STARRING MARGUERITE SNOW

√ "ROSEMARY"

(Quality Metro—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

IN picturizing this popular play, the story has been subjugated to a charming and active picture of a bit of old England, in the stage-coach and tavern days. So faithfully has the atmosphere of these almost classical times been built up and preserved, that the result is altogether alluring and appealing. Where Directors Bowman and Balshofer found the locations is a mystery; the exterior of a roadside inn is faithful and complete enough to have been set in a studio.

Little touches of nature, so important in the left of that period, are abundant. Old fashioned gardens, roads and buildings decorate the film throughout, and the costumes are in good keeping. Moreover, there are some delightful bits of character drawing, of the kind which would delight the followers of Dickens or Thackeray.

Marguerite Snow is the star. She holds the interest well, and is a dainty figure. She portrays the daughter of Captain Cruckshank, a retired sea captain, and she elopes with William Westwood, a youth unknown to her parents. A terrific storm comes up, and the couple take refuge in the night in the home of Sir Jasper Thordyke.

The girl's parents, in pursuit, are also compelled to spend the night at the same place, and in the morning, Sir Jasper succeeds in reconciling the Captain to his prospective son-in-law. The whole part starts aboard a coach-and-four for London, there to have a brilliant wedding.

They stop at a roadside inn, and there the girl quarrels with her sweetheart over a page in her diary which she refuses to let him see. The page contains sentences highly complimentary to Sir Jasper, and when he sees them, he is on the point of confessing his love to the girl. He is prevented by a friend, and instead he patches up the quarrel between the young folks. Then the girl is trapped in a burning stable, and Sir Jasper, in trying to rescue her, is overcome, and Westwood saves the two.

Sir Jasper buys the inn, and in a closed room of it he places as a shrine the Rosemary which the girl has given him "for remembrance." Years afterward, when Westwood and the girl are happily married, Sir Jasper, aged and decrepit, crawls to the shrine to bury his face in the long-cherished Rosemary.

Artistic handling has created a number of strong scenes, which in hands less competent would have failed utterly, and there is a convincing air about the whole. The cast includes Virginia Kraft, William Clifford, George F. Hernandez, Frank Bacon, Paul Gilmore and Maurice Cytron.

"A MAN'S MAKING"

(Lubin—V-L-S-E—Five Reels)

(REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW)

A GOOD story-teller can get a great deal out of comparatively little. Anthony Kelly is such a story-teller, and this Lubin feature is a good example of his work. Given a theme, however familiar, and he will find a way to present it, and enough in the way of dress and environment, to make it stand out as an unusual narrative.

Too often in these cases the scenario writer has weakened, and after the third reel, one merely sits and waits for the National Censorship stamp, which is the only thrill offered in the latter half of the film; not so "Tony" Kelly; he never seems to weaken once, he has so taken his narrative in hand. He keeps his action smooth, save for those little lumps of dramatic climax carefully spaced throughout the footage like an ostrich swallowing eggs, and there is always a feeling that something worth waiting for is on the way.

This is the simple story which he has woven in five interesting reels: Harold Graham, son of the king of Wall Street, incurs his father's anger while in college. The father calls and upbraids him, and the son, with a flash of the hereditary spirit, declares he will have no more of his father's money, but will make good on his own account. He leaves college and looks for a job, but doesn't find it until one day, ragged, hungry and weary, he wanders into a seaside village, and finds the job—and a girl.

FATHER AND SON TOGETHER AGAIN

The girl is the daughter of a fisher-captain, and the job is on her father's boat. A huge sailor, who aspires to marry the girl, seizes Harold when he is aloft furling sail, and after a desperate fight, hurls him to the deck. Hovering between life and death, he is cared for by the girl and her father, and the latter, in searching his effects, finds letters which reveal his identity. He telegraphs for the elder Graham to come on.

Harold recovers, and his father urges him to come home with him, but the boy prefers to stay and "make good" first. Later he reads that his father's great financial enemies are making a last great fight against him, and he decides to go home and help the old man through. The girl sorrowfully admits that such is his duty; he goes and wins the fight, then comes and gets the girl.

By such things as the fight in the upper rigging of the ship in a strong seaway, the breakers bringing home the body of the brutal sailor, and scenes in Wall street, the action has been kept going at a high pitch, and the interest strengthened. There is a logic in the fitting together of the subject which is a grateful thing to see.

Herbert Fortier as Graham, Richard Buhler as his son, and Rosetta Brice as the girl, ably carry the heavy part of the acting. Others are George Clarke, Nelson Hall and William H. Turner.

"DIVORCONS"

(Biograph-General—Four Reels)

(REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW)

THERE is a subtlety in Victorien Sardou's great play which the screen seems unable to catch. Most of the dry humor of the situations have pictured well and, all in all, a good result has been obtained, but to a student of Sardou the picture version of the play which Grace George brought to New York, is apt to be a little disappointing.

The truth is, the adapter has not found sufficient material to make four strong reels. He has shown a reverence for Sardou himself, and has declined to dilute the pure stream of the original drama with the grosser alloy which the screen versions seem to demand.

Nevertheless, the picture is entertaining. It has been elaborately costumed and set, and there is a great deal of lively incident to keep the interest where it belongs. Furthermore, the cast is able and the characterizations good. Gertrude Bambrick is an attractive Cyprienne, and Dell Henderson and Dave Morris, as Des Prunelles and the Count, respectively, are satisfactory.

The European atmosphere has been striven for successfully in most places, and these scenes will be found attractive. Especially is this true of the scenes on the beach, and in the restaurant.

Des Prunelles finds his young wife in love with the Count, her cousin. He decides to give her to the Count, and tells them so. The Count, overjoyed arranges to marry Cyprienne after a divorce has been obtained, but in the meantime, Cyprienne realizes that her husband is the better choice after all, and decides to stick by him. She has an engagement to dine with the Count, but instead, leaves word that she has gone to her aunt's, then goes out to dine with her husband. The Count gets the message, and rushes to the aunt's house, in the suburbs, only to find that that lady has been dead two years. On his way back he is arrested as a highwayman, and locked in a cell.

A friend obtains his release, and brings him to dine in the room adjoining that where Cyprienne and her husband are dining. The Count hears Cyprienne's laughter and breaks into the room, but a policeman throws him out, and the wife flies into her husband's arms.

Florence Lee, Charles H. West and Walter Lewis are capable supports in the cast.

"THE HOUSE OF TEARS"

(Rolfe-Metro—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

EMILY STEVENS is climbing very rapidly into the foremost rank of dramatic artists. In almost any circle she will be accepted as one of the leading actresses of the hour. She is versatile in her expression of emotions, she understands the art of appeal, and her work screens excellently. Consequently her field and her possibilities are much broader than those of most of her contemporaries.

Emily Stevens is at her screen best in this new Metro subject. Her versatility runs such a wide gamut as playing a mother and her daughter simultaneously in the same scene, and the characterizations are faithful and convincing. She is always sincere, and what is better, always pleasing. Her work shows a characteristic good taste which carries her far on the road to the sympathy of the spectator.

The picture is a triumph for Emily Stevens; she has been aided by settings of careful and studied elaborateness; brilliant photography and a logical continuity of action; she has been hampered by somewhat cumbersome titling and construction in the early part of the piece, which is apt to confuse some spectators in following the thread of the narrative.

Edwin Carewe, the director, has done a great deal of excellent work throughout the picture; but he has introduced a child into the opening chapters, and then taken all the childhood out of it. Childhood, even denatured childhood, however, is a bright spot in any picture, but almost any child can portray the elementary human emotions without training, which may be one reason why Colley Cibber looked upon children as the greatest natural actors.

Mrs. Collingwood, divorced from her wealthy husband, leaves him and her infant daughter, and weds Henry Thorne, who was mentioned in the divorce suit. The two go west, where Thorne's fortunes lie in low places, and the couple, at the end of fifteen years are in sore poverty. Then Thorne makes a "killing" gambling, casts off the wife of whom he has tired, and thinking he has killed her, flees from the hovel. He returns to New York, and under an assumed name, builds up a great fortune, and becomes a power in Wall street.

He then meets the daughter of the Collingwoods. Her father has failed, and died, and she has made a name for herself as a special writer on a newspaper. The two fall in love, and are about to be wed, when the deserted wife, and mother of the new love, appears. When the daughter hears the story, she conspires with her mother to entice the man to the old Collingwood home, and there he is fronted by the two women. He flees in terror, and mother and daughter are reunited for the balance of their lives.

"YOU WILL RECOVER"

Miss Stevens' support is most capable. Henri Bergman is Collingwood, and Walter Hitchcock is Thorne. Others in the cast are Madge Tyrone and George Brennan. The author of the picture is Frank Dazey.

"THE GREY MASK"

(Shubert-World Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

AS a detective melodrama, "The Grey Mask" accomplishes all that is desired of it in the way of providing sixty or seventy minutes of intense entertainment. As a piece of dramatic handiwork it is negligible, for while worked out well and nicely enough to ever maintain the interest, it proceeds somewhat jerkily, owing to the presence of so many characters.

Edwin Arden is nominally featured, but the picture itself prefers to divide honors about equally between Arden, Barbara Tennant, John Hines, Mario Majeroni, Buckley Starkey, and two or three other players. However, the ultimate impression is the most important and "The Grey Mask" is never confusing despite its many players, and besides it is always exciting what with divers robberies, and attempts at robberies and the sensational spectacle of an automobile dropping over a ferry dock into the water.

Charles Wadsworth Camp is the author of the production, and Frank Crane directed it. Crane always manages to get the utmost realism into his pictures, with results that are easily convincing. "The Grey Mask" is an excellent example of Crane's talent along these lines. He procures "atmosphere," whether the scene be a gangsters' rendezvous, or a chemist's laboratory. In other words Crane has an extensive comprehension of all sorts of life, a knowledge which shows praiseworthily in his products.

The acting of this picture is very good concerning all the members of the cast. Edwin Arden is a polished detective, Barbara Tennant an energetic heroine, Mario Majeroni a typical "agent of a foreign power," and John Hines is as usual a comedian in every respect, always ready to turn a laughable trick. The remaining persons in the cast meet adequately every occasion that presents itself.

The camera man has procured some very fine light effects for the night scenes of the production, while the photography is good in a general way as well.

"The Grey Mask" will certainly delight the lovers of detective melodrama, for the story moves swiftly all the time and sensational events are by no means lacking.

Further Concerning the HEARST VITAGRAPH NEWS PICTORIAL

Formerly Hearst Selig Weekly

The Greater News Reel

LAST week all motion picturedom sat up at the news of the discontinuance of Hearst-Selig and the entrance of its successor Hearst-Vitagraph. It was told how in a dramatic interview with Mr. William Randolph Hearst, foremost news authority in America, a plan for a greater news reel was evolved. It was told how this new outline was so revolutionary in its aspect that it was difficult to appreciate at one sitting.

As someone said, "The greater news reel is more than a news reel". It should be defined by another name. It might also be called the motion picture newspaper, for the Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial is to be run on the same lines as any of the Hearst newspapers. In other words, the Hearst-Vitagraph is to be bound by no traditions, no past rules—it is to be built on imagination, such imagination as governs only Hearst himself.

JANUARY the THIRD NINETEEN SIXTEEN

the first issue of the new Hearst-Vitagraph makes its appearance succeeding the Hearst-Selig.

Get your requests in now so as to permit no lapse in your news reel service. Every Hearst-Selig exhibitor should make it his business to book the Hearst-Vitagraph.

But this doesn't limit those who have not known the Hearst reel to take advantage of it at once.

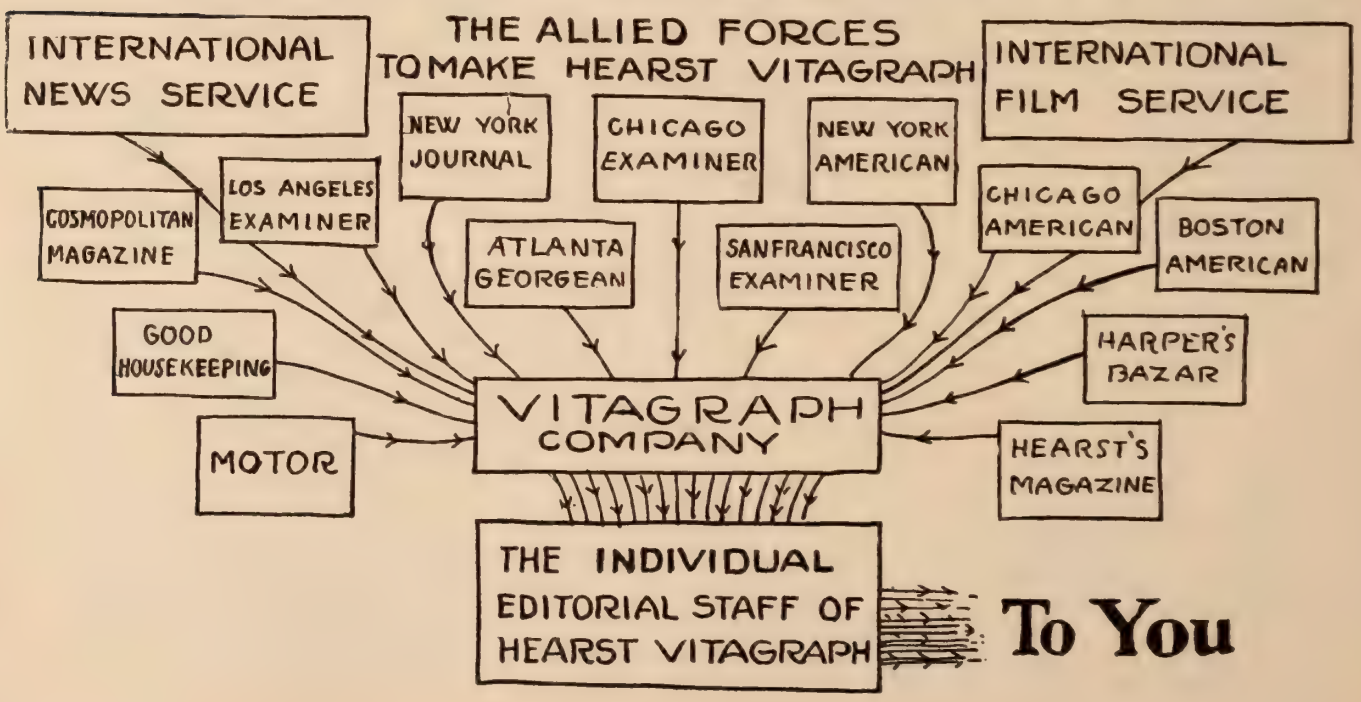
Greatest-News-Gathering-Organizat

Survey your news field, consider where those men who furnish the real news, the newspaper news, get their material.

The Hearst Organization gathers and furnishes news not only to Hearst's many newspapers and magazines but through International News Service and International Film Service to over a thousand other publications.

Examine the map, prick it at any point and I will show you the name of the man who writes the news at that place and the name of the camera man who takes the pictures.

Gaze at the attached graphic representation of the Hearst news gathering organization. Each of these squares represents at least a dozen men. Jump down to the very last square on the page, illustrating the Individual Staff of the Hearst-Vitagraph and I will convince you that no other reel has any greater staff than that division alone.



Man for man, the individual editorial staff of the Hearst-Vitagraph measures up, man for man with the entire staff of any other news reel. And then from that point upwards through those other magazines and Hearst newspapers and news gathering institutions, there is nothing with which to compare the competitors.

When you want steel the U. S. Steel Corporation is the place to go for it. When you want oil the Standard Oil is the place to go for it. When you want news go to news headquarters—the Hearst Organization.

If you want to prove to yourself how infallible the Hearst Organization is from a news standpoint, take any newspaper in the country which doesn't use the Hearst Service and article for article, photograph for photograph—see which got there first with the news—the individual publisher or Hearst.

You can, therefore, imagine why Hearst-Vitagraph with this entire organization at our disposal, the best of every unit of it turned into the direction of the Hearst-Vitagraph, why it must immediately assume the uppermost position.

HEARST-VITAGRAPH NEWS PICTORIAL

...head-of-News-by-America's ...ion - The HEARST Institution-

In Collaboration with VITAGRAPH

Hearst for the news gathering. Vitagraph for the pictorial effects. There you have the ideal combination.

The Vitagraph Organization which has gained its supremacy as a producer, through sheer force of perfect productions, has gained this place because it has the inherent abilities. Therefore, realizing that Vitagraph not only assists in the news gathering and making up of this reel, it is important to realize its function in the refining of the film itself.

The exhibitor can scarcely appreciate the care and religiously zealous attention which is lavished on every foot of negative and positive in the Vitagraph Laboratory—the largest and most perfectly equipped of its kind in the world.

The Vitagraph staff which has earned its right to be known as the foremost technical group in the industry, has itself been responsible for numerous improvements in cameras, films and projection.

It is one thing to get a film, it is another thing to bring out its fullest value. Just as the artist works over his canvas until it is perfect, so the Vitagraph Laboratory men will work over the Hearst-Vitagraph negative.

Vitagraph as the print manufacturer and distributing agent will answer all questions regarding the reel itself—or for that matter any other question that might be addressed to it individually.

You Book It Independently

NO! Hearst-Vitagraph is not to be bought on a program. The exhibitor who wants it must get it separately. This means that it is not to be packed away and bolstered up by anything else.

No good comedy or drama is going to save it. It has no aids, no helpers, no supporters. It comes to you absolutely unaided.

It comes to you as itself. You accept it in that way and this means that if it does not make good as an independent—out it goes.

Free On Request EXHIBITORS Guide Book

There is now on the press and will be ready for distribution inside of the next two or three days a complete analysis of the story of Hearst-Vitagraph.

This explains the reasons for the discontinuance of the Hearst-Selig for its successor the Hearst-Vitagraph; explains about the intricate workings of the entire news gathering organization, explains about the work of Vitagraph in the make-up of the reel, and explains the various ideas listed on this page.

The ZONE Idea

The exhibitor residing in San Francisco will have an entirely different service than the man in New York. The man in Pittsburg will have a different service than the man in Chicago.

Each territory will have its Hearst-Vitagraph organization. A distinct entity working independently of any other as far as local news are concerned—but supplying other sections with that which is of importance outside. In other words you will receive European and Eastern News from New York, Far East and Pacific News from San Francisco, interior news from Pittsburg and Chicago and then in addition your own local news.

Buy at Your Own Price

We have worked out a system whereby you absolutely make your own price. A chart most simple to understand enables you to select for yourself the date of your release and the price you are to pay.

Backed by National Advertising

When you take the Hearst-Vitagraph you thereby do more than merely show the greatest news pictorial — you attach to yourself the power of a tremendous national campaign, runnning in newspapers and magazines throughout the country, which is to send the multitudes to that theatre exhibiting Hearst-Vitagraph

This campaign will be the most astounding thing yet heard of in the advertising of motion picture features and we promise you that the publication power of William Randolph Hearst is at the disposal of the Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial. Analyze this and see what it means.

226 WILLIAM STREET, NEW YORK CITY

ILLUSTRATING "THE ALSTER CASE," ESSANAY MYSTERY PLAY, WITH BRYANT WASHBURN, JOHN H. COSSAR, AND RUTH STONEHOUSE

"THE ALSTER CASE"

(Essanay—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM RESSMAN ANDREWS

THE suspense caused by the suspicion cast on five people in this mystery plot holds the attention throughout the unfolding of the story. Knowledge of the real murderer is skillfully withheld to the very last, and keeps the spectator guessing, regardless of the rule known to be observed in detective yarns, that the person apparently suspected the least by the sleuth working on the case is generally the criminal.

Bryant Washburn in the role of George Swan, the man responsible for the death of the eccentric woman of wealth, played the character with all the appearance of craft demanded by the part. The actor kept careful guard over his features, and never betrayed by the slightest facial expression the real thoughts of the person he was portraying. Although there was not the faintest hint in Swan's actions or expression of his secret, which might be expected to prepare the audience for some unknown relation of the man with the mystery, the audience will not have the feeling at the denoument that they had been imposed upon.

Trask, the detective, played by John H. Cossar with vigor, has the centre of the stage, or, rather, "the centre of the film."

The star is completely overshadowed by a supposedly subordinate character. This, however, is not the first instance of the actor in the name role being relegated to the rear—through no design, however. The detective in a mystery story must necessarily be at the front continually from the moment his services are needed for a solution of the crime.

Thus it followed that the actor playing the part of the detective had an opportunity to show what he could do, and Mr. Cossar has acquitted himself well in a difficult role. He was in reality the star in "The Alster Case."

Mr. Washburn did not fail to play with his usual animation. He made the most of a role somewhat circumscribed in its activity by its relative position to the other characters in the story.

A queer old lady of great wealth takes the management of her estate from a firm of lawyers which had looked after the business for years, and turns over its supervision to a clerk in their employ. A few nights later he accompanies her to the theatre and she is found murdered in her room. Her will disclosed the fact that the young lawyers' assistant, Swan, has been made executor.

He manages to have suspicion thrown on others pretty much throughout the whole picture without the audience realizing his villainy, but the detective finally exposes the murder.

"THE WAIF"

(Aurora Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

THIS is essentially a play of child life, with a brilliant youngster, Matty Roubert, as the star. It is one of those pictures which does not have to be analyzed with the knitted brows and loft isolation of the hypercritic, simply because the picture does what it was intended to do—draw forth tears and smiles alternately.

Precisely this reception was accorded it at the private showing given in the Wurlitzer theatre, New York, last Saturday.

The theme strikes one as very old, as old as sentiment, say, and therefore always new—not so much of a paradox as it seems, if you think it over carefully. A waif, lost to his parents through the villainy of a discharged chauffeur, forced out on the streets by the same villain, takes up his residence in a barrel, and earns a scanty livelihood by shining shoes and selling papers. By accident, he meets a destitute old actor, and together they take up the struggle. Finally, the boy, always adventurous, goes to a theatre manager, in answer to a newspaper story, and offers himself for the star's part in a play.

The manager gives him a chance to show what he can do, incidentally also giving young Roubert a chance to impersonate, in a stage setting, Fagin, Bernhardt in "Tosca," and Sherlock Holmes. These scenes are well done, and of real appeal.

After the old actor has become director for the motion picture version of the stage play, in which The Waif is also the star, accident brings the company to the country estate of the boy's mother, and there everything is cleared up.

Such a story, if well handled, yields plenty of naive situations, and well handled it is in this production. There is an abundance of human interest throughout. The cast does its work in an acceptable manner also, and the direction, by William L. Roubert, is good. The photography is unusually clear.

"THE GLORY OF YOUTH"

(Kalem-General—Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

ALTHOUGH announced as a "drama of modern life" this picture deals with a phase which few who see it will recognize as having ever entered into their own experiences. It is frank melodrama, with an unusual setting, and a number of novel effects, but all the old elements of melodrama are there, and are the backbone of the subject. It has surprises enough to prevent the interest from lagging, and there can be no complaint of lack of action.

The theme is carried out by a young dancer, an athlete, and a deformed and crippled millionaire. The millionaire worships youth and strength, the only things denied to him, and hearing of the young athlete, he induces him to come and live in the great Cairns country mansion. Then he hears of Gay Raydon, the dancer, and induces her to dance for him.

He is infatuated with her, and wishes to marry her, but she finds him repulsive. The millionaire wins over Dolores, the dancer's benefactress, and she practically commands the girl to marry the ogre. Through his valet, the millionaire learns that the dancer and athlete are in love with each other, and in a rage he locks them in a room together, places the valet, who also is in love with the girl, on guard, and leaves the young folks to starve.

For days the valet gloats over the gradual weakening of the young couple, and then, thinking the athlete too weak to defend her, he enters the room and tries to embrace Gay. Her cries put new strength in the athlete, and he pounces on the valet. In the meantime, the millionaire has repented his deed, and after notifying the police, kills himself. The police arrive at the country house in time to rescue Gay and the athlete.

The characters are all well drawn, and the locations and settings well chosen. Inez Bauer is featured as the dancer; others in the cast are Robert Ellis, Walter McEwen, Nat Sack and Agnes Mapes. The piece was written by Louis B. Gardner and produced by Robert Ellis.

"SINS OF SOCIETY"

(Peerless-World Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"SINS OF SOCIETY" is a melodrama typical of the Drury Lane classification. It has a number of sensational and spectacular scenes and action that travel along with such swiftness that the incongruities of the plot are almost forgotten in the resulting excitement.

That enormous wing of the amusement loving public, who glory in the thrills of a melodrama, who are deeply stirred by the noble self-sacrifice of the hero and who refuse to bother over strained situations will find in "Sins of Society" a picture modeled strictly after their ideals.

The sister of the heroine is dragged into all manner of precarious escapades through her gambling debts. And the hero, gallant that he is, saves her good name by disappearing and assuming the blame for a robbery committed by the weak-willed woman.

THE BRIDAL PROCESSION LEAVING THE ALTAR

His reappearance occurs just in time to save the heroine from being forced into a marriage with the villain, who being refuted every way he turns, proceeds to bite his nails and thump the table in a true melodramatic way and disappear forever.

But this is by no means all. The producers have seen fit to introduce a disaster at sea and incidentally they are very up-to-date in their methods of bringing on the catastrophe for they employ a submarine. The picture of the submarine is the invention, ostensibly, of the property man, but the explosions on the transport full of soldiers are very realistic and will undoubtedly thrill.

A cast of favorites fair well in the leading roles. Robert Warwick makes a very fine hero and Frances Nelson is always a pretty heroine. Alec B. Frances does all but convince as the heavy, while Dorothy Fairchild makes a pitiable figure of the weak-willed sister. Royal Byron essays a comedy role and acquits himself fairly well.

"MR. GREX OF MONTE CARLO"

(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"ISN'T that a great story!"

"Yes, and Roberts is what might be called an 'actor.'"

"And Carlyle Blackwell is certainly the ideal lover."

The foregoing are our sentiments, but they were heartily and audibly voiced by several patrons of the Broadway theatre where "Mr. Grex of Monte Carlo" was first presented. It can be concluded therefrom that this latest of Lasky's will find its mark in the eyes of the most cosmopolitan audience. And moreover it is a brilliant proof of the ability of a good story, well enacted, to register without a stage satellite in the featured role.

Mr. Grex is a creation of E. Phillips Oppenheim, who moves in a story of intrigue and romance laid back in those pacific days of 1913. It is a story in which three agents of European powers attempt to hoodwink England and America, but by the cleverness of our U. S. hero and the subtle diplomacy of our British representative things go all against the trio of conspirators.

The romance is interwoven by Lane, the American, and the Duchess, daughter of the Grand Duke Augustus Peter, alias Mr. Grex, chief of the conspiring agents. But it is not the usual romantic strain that runs through Oppenheim's tale. The Duchess is wont to snub out gallant Lane at his every turn, but Lane is an "American who has his way," so in the end the Duchess just has to give in.

The personalities of the lovers are so contrastingly different that their various encounters are, everyone of them, considerably tinged with humor. In fact throughout the picture, there runs a vein of comedy of a delectable sort.

The adaptation was made by Marion Fairfax and to our mind the scenario leaves nothing to be desired.

The cast is finished in every respect. Theodore Roberts, always a welcome figure, makes the character of the Grand Duke stand out with commanding force. Carlyle Blackwell is typical of daring millionaire American lovers, and Dorothy Davenport as the Duchess is a most attractive opposite. James Neil, Horace B. Carpenter and Frank Elliott fill the other major roles in a fitting style.

Under the direction of Frank Reicher, the picture has been most artistically produced. The foreign atmosphere is convincing to a high degree. The scenes are excellently laid while the action always moves at a natural and even gait.

The photographer has contributed largely to the pleasing aspect of the picture. The light effects, particularly those in the many night scenes that appear are quite startling as to realism. The photography in general is faultless.

"BLIND JUSTICE"

(Essanay—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

THERE is every element in this picture to make it a popular release. First of all there is Henry B. Walthall—and playing the role he does better than anything else—the part of a down-and-outer. The support is eminently satisfactory, too. Ernest Maupain has never created a better part than that of the harsh, but good-hearted philanthropist.

Elizabeth Burbridge proves that she has real emotional ability, and John Junior, a recent Essanay acquisition from the musical comedy stage, makes the most of his unlovely role.

The plot has the unexpected wallop of an O. Henry story, and has a cumulative intensiity that the capable directing makes even more effective. This is one of the best Essanay three-reelers in months.

Elsie Harding, daughter of William Harding, a philanthropist, is greatly interested in the outcasts of the slums. In the night court she sees Jack Langdon, arraigned on the charge of vagrancy. She persuades her father to give him employment, and after six months, the two become engaged. This enrages the father, and he disowns his daughter. Later Harding finds that a check for a large amount has been forged in his name, and he accuses Langdon of the crime. Jack proves that Harding's own son was the forger, and offers to pay the check himself.

NEW TRIANGLE PHOTOPLAYS, "LET KATY DO IT," "FATTY AND THE BROADWAY STARS" AND "THE CORNER"

JANE GREY, WILLIAM COLLIER, IVY CROSTHWAITE AND CLARA WILLIAMS ARE SHOWN IN SCENES FROM THE PHOTOPLAYS

TENTH KNICKERBOCKER TRIANGLE PROGRAM

("The Corner"—Triangle-Kay-Bee—Five Parts. "Fatty and the Broadway Stars"—Triangle-Keystone—Two Parts. "Let Katy Do It"—Fine Arts—Five Parts.)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM RESSMAN ANDREWS

ALTHOUGH "Let Katy Do It" is listed last on the program, it comes first in order of quality. While "The Corner" is a play embodying many excellent points and contains many appealing scenes the bill would have been more satisfying if it had led off with "Let Katy Do It." Perhaps, however, the idea was to leave "the old wine until the last of the feast."

Founded on the novel by Granville Warwick and scenarioized with a sure hand by Bernard McConville, the story of "Let Katy Do It," capably directed by C. M. and S. A. Franklin under the supervision of D. W. Griffith, is a simple one. But the development of the plot with the masterful touches evident in every foot of the five reels, makes the picture a noted one.

Katy Standish is the family drudge on a farm in Maine. Everybody loafs but Katy. She is kept so busy that no time is left for her to be alone with Oliver Putnam long enough for the sturdy young farmer to tell her something he had had on his mind for a considerable period.

In desperation, Oliver accepts an invitation from her Uncle Dan to help him work a mine in Mexico. Shortly after his departure Caleb Adams marries Katy's sister Priscilla. In the course of time seven children make their appearance. When the parents are killed in a railroad accident, Katy is obliged to act as mother to the flock of helpless tots. An invitation from Uncle Dan, whose mine has proved rich, solves the problem of feeding so many mouths.

The seven children are played by a remarkable cast of youngsters, whose parts keep the majority of them on the screen for a good share of the picture. Violet Radcliffe, George Stone, Carman De Rue, Francis Carpenter, Ninon Fovieri, Lloyd Pearl and Beulah Burns, the precocious little actors, deserve as much credit for the success of the drama as the grown up principals.

Not once was there the slightest suggestion of the patient coaching which must have been necessary from the directors. Every child acted naturally.

Even the scene where the Mexican outlaws attacked the house of Uncle Dan Standish at the mine during the absence of all the adults, for the purpose of stealing the gold bullion known to be ready for shipment, the child who touched the battery blowing up the trench prepared for just such an attack, made the scene vivid without any sacrifice of infantile ingenuousness.

The attack on the mine house by the hundreds of Mexicans and their repulse by the rifle fire from the building and their subsequent dispersal by the troop of dashing American horsemen in some respects surpass for swerve and animation many of the best battle scenes in "The Martyrs of the Alamo."

A memorable episode is the stand made by Oliver Putnam in the deserted hut where he and his sweetheart have taken refuge from the frenzied crowd of bandits. A mere exchange of glances between Jane Grey and Tully Marshall when the last cartridge was fired and the pair was at the mercy of the yelling throngs outside, impressed the spectator with swift deft touches always at the command of these players for getting big effects.

"Let Katy Do It" is a finished production. The story is well told; the work of the cast shows excellent judgment in the selection of the players for all the roles, the sets, the locations and the details of costuming all indicate care. Indeed, those responsible for the picture have left nothing to be done on "Let Kate Do It."

The Ince production, "The Corner," featuring George Fawcett as a speculator in food products, David Waltham, and Willard Mack as an engineer whose family is made to suffer from the closing down of a cannery owned by the monopolist Waltham, is worked out with considerable power.

The story shows the effect upon helpless working people of a heartless attempt made to corner the food market by a brainy but ruthless speculator. The man has a will of iron and, clutched by the hand of insatiable greed and a distorted sense of the importance his action may give him in the realms of high finance, he pursues his purpose with feverish and relentless energy. He buys cannery after cannery, only to close them up. His action throws thousands out of employment and works grave hardships on their families.

Accounts of suffering and privation, and even stark hunger resulting from his course fail to move him. The clamor of the public, the threats of prosecution for violation of the anti-trust laws by the government, the scorn of honest men, the disgust and loathing of his wife fail to move him from his heartless purpose.

But retribution overtakes Waltham at the hands of Adams, a man who brings him to a horrible death as vengeance for the loss of home and the haunting recollection that during his enforced absence Mrs. Adams had been compelled to make sacrifices for the children which forever gave to his cup of domestic happiness an eternal bitterness of regret.

In the scenes where Waltham is entrapped by Adams into going to the warehouse, is tied to the floor in a remote part of the building and left to die of starvation in the sight of food just out of reach, the picture reaches the heights of gripping realism.

A whole galaxy of twinkling filmites is seen in this week's Keystone comedy, "Fatty and the Broadway Stars." There are Joe Weber, Lew Fields, William Collier, Sam Bernard, Joe Jackson, Ford Sterling, Polly Moran, Mae Busch, and the irrepressible Roscoe Arbuckle.

Fatty has the part of a studio cleaner, in love with the leading lady, whom in a dream he rescues from a fire at considerable peril to his own precious safety. His fire laddie exploits even extend to Mack Sennett himself, and, still dreaming with all his might, the window cleaner imagines his heroic efforts rewarded by a prominent part given him in one of the Triangle companies.

Besides being amused by its uproarious fun, the public will find an added interest in the peep "behind the scenes" it affords the spectator. Scenes are shown in the actual making, with cameramen turning the crank and other activities attending the filming of a picture. Of course they are all done in a burlesque spirit. But this will heighten rather than lessen the interest.

"THE HAND OF THE LAW"

(Edison-General—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THIS is a melodrama of pastoral life. It might have been from the pen of Lottie Blair Parker or Charles Felton Pidgin, for it has the good old flavor of the picket fence gate, the old mill and the missing papers, and so closely does it follow the line of such famous plays as "Quincy Adams Sawyer" that it should share the great success of those offerings.

What will commend it to the audiences of the middle and far west as well as New England are the types presented. The characterizations are artistic and excellent in every way, and are to be found in the flesh in any one of a thousand villages in the United States. The sheriff, the candidate, the grist-mill owner and the loafers around the barroom are such as will be recognized and hailed as old acquaintances by many a film spectator.

Unlike so many rural photodramas, it has not been found necessary to take any of the characters to the city, or to bring any city people into the country town. The home folks put on their own murder tragedy and act it out to a happy finish without assistance of any kind from the outside—except that of a Correspondence School which made a full-fledged, licensed detective out of one of the village youths.

The hero is Dan Chamberlain, a young lawyer, candidate for prosecuting attorney, against Squire Evans, the villain. Both seek the hand of Bettie, whose father has been "done out" of his grist mill property by Evans and Hi Gregory. Gregoy is found murdered in the mill, and Bettie's father is arrested. Chamberlain, who in the meantime has been elected prosecutor, helps clear up the mystery by fastening the crime on Evans, after the latter has attempted to blackmail the sheriff into shooting the prisoner for attempting to escape.

Bessie Learn is attractive as Bettie, and she has able assistance in Edward Earle, Bigelow Cooper, William Wadsworth, Nellie Grant, Jessie Stevens, John Sturgeon, Brad Sutton, James Harris, Ford Fennimore and Billie Ruge.

"JOSEPH AND HIS BRETHREN"

(Dormet Film Co.-Films Lloyds—Six Parts)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

PICTURES built on bible stories prove conclusively that the older the plot the dearer it is to all. "Joseph and His Brethren" is a familiar story. It is perhaps the most interesting from a narrative standpoint of those contained in the Old Testament. Both stage and screen have offered it before and with its dramatic possibilities we are well familiar.

The version here offered is clear, concise and interesting because of its faithfulness to biblical tradition and the entertainment presented by the pictured struggle of Joseph pressing his way to success through sheer honesty, silent obedience and good will.

Mayhap the casual observer will become a little restless toward the close, when Joseph's Brethren travel back and forth from Canaan to Egypt at their brother's bidding. This calls for a repetition of practically the same scenes. But the scenario writer has in this instance, as he has throughout, adhered strictly to his text. It is the bible story over again all the way through the picture.

However, this is a small point. In general the story has been arranged entirely satisfactorily. Joseph is an appealing character, from the time he is stripped of his coat of many colors and cast into the pit until he brings his entire family of brothers, their wives, their children and his father into prosperous Egypt.

The story disposed of, there remains the setting, a matter hardly of less importance. Briefly, it is convincing to the lay mind. The interiors are laid with care. The exteriors show almost the same good choice. Modern harness on the horses is about the only really noticeable slip in detail.

In many of the interiors painted back drops have been brought into use, but they are very well arranged. They are not too obvious and blend well with the erected portion of the settings. In fact the only fault with the scenic arrangement is Pharoah's dream of the seven fat and the seven lean kine. The kine are not real—they are painted.

In the print exhibited for review, the photography was only fair, although good enough not to interfere with the enjoyment.

The acting is of an uniformly good order in every instance. A few of the extras are a little self conscious, but Joseph, Jacob, Pharoah, Benjamin, Simeon, Zelikah, Reuben, Asenath, the jailor, the baker and divers other servants are carried by sincere players, the ultimate effect of whose acting is convincing.

"CURLY"

(Clipper—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

HAVING completed "The Diamond from the Sky," the cast has turned its attention to vehicles of less pretension. This picture should be especially well received in houses where the "Diamond" has already been shown, and where Lottie Pickford, William Russell, George Periolat, and other players of the long, continued photoplay already have a following.

The plot is in many ways reminiscent of the "Diamond." There are the same kind of mistaken identities, plotting by adventurers, and involved complications. The work of the principals and subordinate characters is fully equal to their past performances.

Arthur Brewster, a wealthy young man, and founder of the Good Hope Mission, is loved by Curly (Lottie Pickford) a girl of the slums. Isabel Morrisey, an adventuress, is trying to marry Brewster for his money, and succeeds in making him propose.

Seeing his interest in Curly, she decides to rid herself of her rival. This she does by stealing some rings, and directing suspicion toward the little waif.

Isabel's brother Roland is the executor of the Peters' estate, but not being able to locate the heir, he begins to spend the fortune himself.

Finally the innocence of Curly is established, as well as the fact that she is the heir of the Peters' money. Brewster breaks his engagement with Isabel, and puts the solitarie on Curly's finger.

VIEWS FROM "GRAFT," "CHRISTMAS MEMORIES," AND "FATHER AND THE BOYS," UNIVERSAL OFFERINGS

"FATHER AND THE BOYS"

(Broadway Universal Feature—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

GEORGE ADE'S comedy that is here presented via five thousand feet of film is pleasant, genuine and funny. The dialogue being absent it is not such a sidesplitting affair as it was several years ago on the stage, but it is a lively comedy, funny because of several cleverly drawn characters and a wealth of comical situations. "Father and the Boys" never waxes boisterous, but it amuses every minute and has the happy faculty of ever retaining the interest.

Digby Bell wears the character of Lemuel Morewood, the father, as if it were tailored specially to meet his individual requirements. Although George Ade's character is in a large sense responsible for much of the story's humor, Bell is by no means the least of the picture's merits. He is a good type for Father, and though making his initial appearance before the camea, is a capable picture actor.

Ida May Parke scenarioized the comedy and has done thoroughly efficient work. Despite a large number of characters, the story is always clear and smooth. To keep up the interest in a comedy that relies on character portrayal and development of situations is not a simple task, but Miss Parke has accomplished it in a manner that warrants no serious criticism.

Joseph DeGrasse produced the comedy in a meritorious manner. The office of Morewood is a realistic set, owing to the fact that people may be seen from the windows moving along the street. Save for the fact that the appearance of these people is rather affected in its air of nonchalance, this bit of realism is commendable. In fact, the production is set admirably well throughout and the movements of the players have been directed carefully.

Photographically the picture presents a satisfactory appearance save in regard to a few scenes, most of them closeups, which are not as well defined as the majority.

The supporting cast includes Yona Landowska as Emily, Morewood's ward, and Louise Carbasse as Bessie Brayton, the gay young lady who succeeds in waking Father up, two pretty and accomplished actresses. Harry Ham and Colin Chase are the irresponsible boys who finally awake to their sense of duty when their father decides to enjoy life, and Hayward Mack in the one heavy part of Major Didsworth is as polished as usual. Others are Mae Gaston, H. Davenport, Doc Crane, Tom Chatterton, Jean Hathway and Lon Chaney.

To recommend "Father and the Boys" to any exhibitor who wants refined comedy that is comedy is perhaps the best statement of the picture's merits.

"GRAFT"

(Universal Special Feature—Second Episode)

(REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE)

LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE is given credit for suggesting "The Tenement House Evil," the second instalment of Universal's "eighteen author" serial.

It is constructed along lines of equal power as was the opening number. It is melodrama, pure and simple. The action travels at a marvelous rate, and is frilled with a plentiful amount of thrills, the largest of which is a series of tenement fire scenes. These last are convincingly realistic, as is indeed anything that Director Richard Stanton sets his hand to.

As implied in the title, these two reels concern Bruce's battle with the head of the Tenement House Trust, a powerful member of The Fifteen. The young attorney strives hard to bring his enemy to bay and at last succeeds in trapping him.

It so happens that his children have visited a tenement with Bruce's fiancee and are caught in the fire. Bruce rescues them, and by so doing wins the tenement magnate over to his side.

The next morning the former member of the Graft Trust intends to reveal the secrets of the organization to the attorney, but the rest of the Grafters, whose numbers have now been reduced from fifteen to thirteen, plan his removal, and so he is killed by a bomb.

Hobart Henley, Jane Novak and Glen White continue in the principal roles, doing the same good work which marked their appearances at the outset. Henley is given a number of heavy emotional scenes which he handles well, while the rest of the cast lends him most consistent support.

"CHRISTMAS MEMORIES"

(Gold Seal-Universal—Three Reels)

(REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE)

ROBERT Z. LEONARD has written and produced in "Christmas Memories" a picture quite worthy of its title, and while drawing heavily upon the sympathies, it is void of the usual mawkish sentiment that Christmas pictures are so often called upon to bear.

Leonard has constructed his story with an eye to the requirements of his leading lady, Ella Hall, as well as his own. The first stages of the picture introduced light romanc, considerably well tinged with delightful comedy, and in these scenes both Leonard and Miss Hall appear to the most attractive advantage. Later on the story takes a serious turn and here, as well, the two leads handle their respective roles with a skill that is appealing.

Leonard has handled the entire picture tastefully. His love scenes, though a little drawn out, are well arranged, beautifully set, and possessed of a pleasing atmosphere. His allegorical bit of the birth of the Savior is done well, and blended in with the proper story in an easy and unconventional way. In striking contrast to this religious spectacle, he has staged a typical Broadway cabaret, celebrating Christmas Eve in a typically boisterous way.

Leonard has also used closeups of Miss Hall time and again with results that are very effective. Then again the snow scenes are excellent, while good photography prevails at all times.

The story opens with the romance of a city man and a country girl. They are married, but the young wife finds it hard to become accustomed to her new environment. On a Christmas Eve she accompanies her husband to a cabaret where he disgraces himself. She returns to her country home.

On another Christmas Eve the husband tears loose again, but awakes the morning after to hear in the church across the way the choir singing of the Savior's birth. In a vision he sees the familiar spectacle laid in the lowly stable. Realization dawns upon him and he rushes back to his wife, arriving on the first birthday of his own child.

Marc Robbins as the girl's guardian, and Kingsley Benedict as a street musician, her ardent admirer, have the other main roles, which they handle nicely.

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"Her Stepchildren." (Biograph. Two reels. Wed., Dec. 14.)—This is an intense story of unusual happenings and situations. Two children of Dr. Lambert, Rose and Ray, receive their new stepmother with cold courtesy, and she tries in vain to win their affection. She finds that Rose has become infatuated with a young man of bad reputation and morals, and one day learns that the girl has agreed to visit him in his apartments that evening.

The stepmother follows the girl, and when she bursts into the apartment, Rose is helpless in the man's clutches The stepmother attempts to save her but Rose scorns her interference, and during the scene Dr. Lambert himself is seen approaching the building. The stepmother hides Rose behind the curtains, and when the husband enters, takes all blame on herself. Without listening to explanations, Dr. Lambert casts off his wife.

Months later, when her baby is suffering from lack of medical care, Mrs. Lambert leaves it on the doctor's doorstep. She hears the doctor say the child will live, and faints. She is found under the window, and is reconciled to her husband after Rose has confessed. Vera Sisson, Charles Perley, Jack Mulhall, Gretchen Hartman, G. Raymond Nye, W. C. Robinson, Robert Nolan and Helen Bray compose the cast.

"Divorcons." (Biograph. Four reels. Wed., Dec. 15.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"Cupid Entangled." (Biograph. Thurs., Dec 16.)—The story of a kind heart which got itself into trouble. An actress, resting in the country, unwittingly captures the heart of a country boy. When she learns that he is neglecting his little local sweetheart, she gives him the cold shoulder, but this does not send him back to his first love. Then she sends to the city for her own sweetheart, and when he arrives she orders him to pretend to make love with the country girl, in order to arouse the jealousy of the "rube." He does it, under protest, but falls in love with the country maid and elopes with her. Claire McDowell, Alan Hale, Vola Smith and Victor Rottman head the cast.

"Fate." (Biograph. Fri., Dec. 17.)—A reissue of one of the most successful Griffith pictures, in which Mae Marsh, Lionel Barrymore, Robert Harron and Charles H. Mailes appear. In revenge for a fancied wrong, Sim Sloane lays a trail of shavings to the can of powder in the back room of an old man's cabin, then lights the shavings and flees.

As the fire is creeping along, the intended victim's little granddaughter comes home, and unconscious of the impending disaster, sets about getting supper. She is interrupted by the brutal son of Sloane, who is hungry, and who throws her out of the house.

During the struggle a wind has blown an opening in the trail of shavings, and holds back the fire, but the draught caused when the door is slammed on the girl, blows the chain together again; the fire reaches the powder and blows up the house, killing the invader.

"History of a Big Tree." (Edison. Split Reel. Wed., Dec. 15.)—This is a carefully arranged and photographed description of the logging industry. The selection and cutting of a giant tree are shown, the hauling to the river, the formation of the log raft, and the various processes in the saw-mill. "The Animated Grouch Chaser" on the same reel, presents two of Raoul Barre's most laughable cartoons, "The Black's Mysterious Box," and "Hicks in Nightmareland."

"The Hand of the Law." (Edison. Three reels. Fri., Dec. 17.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"Santa Claus Versus Cupid." (Edison. Sat., Dec. 18.)—Here is a pretty Christmas story, ready on time for the holiday season. Two youths are rivals for the affections of Helen, and when they learn she is to give a Christmas eve party for children in whom she is interested, they vie with each other for the job of Santa Claus.

Edward gets it, but Jack through a misunderstanding, thinks he is elected, so both get on their make-up; Edward is at the house first, and encounters a poor cabman, who, seeing the cheer within, resolves that his children shall have a Christmas also. He locks Edward in a closet and takes his bag of toys. Jack meets him, learns the situation, gives the cabman a roll of bills, and takes the bag. When Edward is released he finds he has lost both the Santa Claus job and the girl.

Grace Morrissey, Raymond McKee, William Casey, Mrs. Wallace Erskine, Mabel Dwight, Gladys Gane, Guido Colucci and Edith Wright compose the cast.

"Reckoning Day." Essanay. Tues., Dec. 14.)—Not shown for review; the story follows: Gideon Winfield, a bank employee, steals money to pay his gambling debts. He marries Clara Worthington, the daughter of a financier, and asks his father-in-law to pay the remainder of his losses. The theft of the bank's funds is discovered, and Winfield leaves town. Clara's father, to escape notoriety, pays the defalcation.

Some time later Clara hears that her husband has been killed, and she remarries. He is really alive, but is killed by a burglar as he is entering Clara's home to blackmail her. Clara is accused of the crime, but at the last minute is saved by the burglar, who confesses.

The cast is composed of E. H. Calvert, Elizabeth Burbridge, Ernest Maupain and Sydney Ainsworth.

"The Fable of Sister Mae Who Did as Well as Could Be Expected." (Essanay. Wed., Dec. 15.)—The scenario and sub-titles written by George Ade are far better than the acting in this comedy.

Luella was Plain, but she had taken Prizes in the Mission Sunday School. Her sister Mary lacked Industry and Application, but she had to keep her Date Book on the Double Entry System. Luella found employment in a Hat factory, while Mae (nee Mary) grabbed off a Bucket Shop Man and lived in a Mansion. Luella is now her sister's assistant cook. MORAL: Industry and Perseverance bring a Sure Reward.

In the cast are Betty Scott, June Keith, Charles Stine and Sydney Ainsworth.

"Snakeville's Champion." (Essanay. Thurs., Dec. 16.)—This comedy, based on a burlesque wrestling match, does not differ in any material way from the numerous similar pictures already on the market. Ben Turpin, Lloyd Bacon and Margaret Joslin maintain their good comedy character work.

Hotch, the world's greatest wrestler, arrives in Snakeville and offers to meet anybody in a match. Bloggie starts training, and challenges the champion. He wins the first fall, but Hotch scores the second. Bloggie wins the third and deciding fall by tickling the sole of his opponent's foot.

"Broncho Billy's Marriage." (Essanay, Fri., Dec. 17.)—A typical Broncho Billy drama that will please audiences that admire G. M. Anderson. Neither the plot nor settings are in any way remarkable. The picture was taken before Marguerite Clayton transferred her activities to the Chicago studios, and she plays opposite Anderson.

Broncho Billy, while in a dance hall, goes to the assistance of the girl who is playing the piano, when a patron tries to force her to drink. As a result the girl is discharged, and a few days later Billy finds her wandering about the streets. She tells him the story of her life, and how, through her innocence, she was led into a life of shame. Billy falls deeply in love with her, and shortly after, proposes to her and is accepted.

"A Christmas Revenge." (Essanay. Two reels. Sat., Dec. 18.)—Not shown for review; the story follows: A stranger comes to town and wins the affection of Broncho Billy's sweetheart. When the girl and this man are being married, Billy shoots up the church, and wounds the bridegroom. He threatens to kill the man if he ever tries to have the interrupted ceremony finished. The wounded man decides that Christmas would be a good time to get married, and announces this date.

Billy, disguised as a Santa Claus, creeps into the church, but suddenly relents, and decides to let his rival go unharmed as a Christmas present to his old-time sweetheart.

Marguerite Clayton and Lloyd Bacon are in G. M. Anderson's support.

"The Glory of Youth." (Kalem. Fur reels. Mon., Dec. 13.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"Almost a King." (Kalem. Tues., Dec. 14.)—Yes, this is a good comedy in which Bud Duncan and Ethel Teare are at their best. The King is threatened by a creditor, and being advised to abdicate temporarily, he hires Bud's partner in idleness as a substitute. This rouses Bud's envy, and he makes his way into the palace with a bomb which a band of conspirators has given him.

The bomb finds the temporary King busily chatting with the favorite dancer, but does no harm. The real King is enraged when he finds the favorite, Nicotina has developed a fondness for the substitute, and throws the sub and Bud into the torture chamber, whither he is thrown himself when the Queen finds him and Nicotina together.

"To the Vile Dust." (Kalem. Two reels. Wed., Dec. 15.)—This episode of the Hornung "Stingaree" series, is a strong subject, but has everything but a happy ending. Stingaree and his partner discover a man in the last stages of starvation and thirst on the desert, and rescue him. As he regains strength, he discovers the identity of his rescuer, and attempts to betray him.

He is foiled, but his treachery is repeated, and so persistent is he in attempting to betray Stingaree, that it is finally decided to put the ingrate out of the world. Stingaree and his partner are about to do this, when by chance, Ethel, the bushranger's former sweetheart, passes and interceded for his life.

Stingaree agrees to spare him, but takes him back to the desert where he was found, and there he wanders helpless until he falls prey to the vultures. True Boardman, Paul C. Hurst, Marin Sais and Frank Jonasson compose the cast.

"The Secret Message." (Kalem. Fri., Dec. 17.)—This is another venture of Marguerite, in which invisible ink figures as the solid matter of the plot. Marguerite is captured by a band of blackmailers, and held until she draws a check for $50,000, in the name of their leader. In the meantime, her sweetheart, seeking her, is enticed into the same house and made prisoner. Marguerite bethinks her of a fountain pen filled with invisible ink, which her sweetheart has given her, and after drawing the check, she writes instructions in this ink on the back.

A woman member of the band accompanies her to the bank, to make sure she does not try to notify anyone of her predicament. As an indorsement, Marguerite writes "heat this check" on the back, and when the mystified teller does so, he finds the address of the gang. Marguerite and her sweetheart are saved. Marguerite Courtot, Bradley Barker, Richard Purdon, H. E. Barrows, Stella Jenno and Freeman Barnes are in the cast

"The Wrong Train Order." (Kalem. Sat., Dec. 18.)—An unusually thrilling episode in the Hazards of Helen. The girl operator returns from her vacation, but missing the limited, is accommodated on a freight. In the meantime, an operator worried over the illness of his son, mixes the train orders, and there is danger of collision between the limited and freight.

Air brake trouble develops on the freight, and in attempting to repair it, the engineer and fireman are thrown from the cab, and the train runs wild. Helen, realizing the situation, crawls across the tops of the swaying cars, along the side of the engine, and reaches the air-brake release on the pilot, throwing on the brakes just in time to avoid disaster. Helen Gibson, Robyn Adair, Clarence Burton, Franklin Hall and Billie Boy are in the cast.

"The Other Sister." (Lubin. Mon., Dec. 6.)—A strong and appealing drama written by Harry Chandlee and produced by Joseph Smiley in very good fashion. For the love of her sister Jane presses her marriage with the man she herself loves, that the younger girl may be safe from harm.

And afterwards she makes her sister realize by endangering her own reputation, the worth of her husband and the worthlessness of her lover. Joe Smiley, Lilie Leslie, Flora Lea and William Cohill are the leads.

"Playing the Same Game." (Lubin. Tues., Dec. 7.)—David L. Don, sans grotesque makeup, appears here in a comedy that will heartily amuse patrons of the program theatre. The story by Cornelia Bleakney is clever and well worked out while Director Edwin McKim has not allowed the players to overwork themselves as Don and his associates sometimes do. Florence Williams, Carrie Reynolds and Bartley McCullun are in other major roles.

"The Web of Hate." (Lubin. Two reels. Wed., Dec. 8.)—Not shown for review. The story follows: Louisa, an Italian girl nurses a secret hate against Antonio, because his father causes her father's death. She incriminates him before the eyes of the law but later her hate turning into love, she hides him.

When he discovers who she is and what she has done, he too, is possessed of a wild hate toward the girl, but in time his feelings change and love unites the two at last. L. C. Shumway and Helen Eddy are the leads.

"The Ogre and the Girl." (Lubin. Three reels. Thurs., Dec. 9.)—Three lovers and one girl create a quandrangle of difficult proportions. Clay M. Greene, usually a dependable author, has not been able to master his plot of "The Ogre and the Girl" which concerns four such people. The characters are not well defined. Their change of mood is confusing.

Besides, the story is quite drawn out. The scenes and photography are very good, while the cast is capable enough to please the most exacting, but the story is the weak point. Bernard Siegel and Geraldine O'Brien in the title parts, Kempton Greene and Clarence Elmer are the principals.

"The Stool Pigeon." (Lubin. Fri., Dec. 10.)—The title implies all that is in this rapidly moving and interesting picture. There is the innocent man, the victim of a frameup and the usual thrilling events resulting from his trial, conviction, escape and exoneration. It was written and produced by Paul Powell while the cast includes L. C. Shumway, George Routh, Velma Whitman and Robert Gray.

"Bashful Billie." (Lubin. Sat., Dec. 11.)—A comedy with Billie Reeves and Carrie Reynolds, that has not been shown for review.

"The Coquette's Awakening." (Selig. Two reels. Mon., Dec. 13.)—Will be reviewed in the issue of December 25.

"On the Eagle Trail." (Selig. Tues., Dec. 14.)—Not shown for review; the story follows: Tom Merry, a stagecoach driver, is in love with Vicky, daughter of the superintendent of a mining company. She returns his love, thereby causing the enmity of another suitor named Jordan. This unsuccessful lover plans to rob the stagecoach when Tom is bringing money for the payroll.

Vicky discovers this plot, and rides to warn her fiance. He gives her the money, and drives on. When he reaches the mining buildings, he finds that Jordan has incited the men to riot. He settles the dispute, and the father blesses the lovers.

Tom Mix directed the picture and plays the lead. In his support are Victoria Forde, Joe Simkins and Sid Jordan.

"The Golden Spurs." (Selig. Two reels. Thurs., Dec. 16.)—Bessie Eyton and Wheeler Oakman play the leads in this African story. The plot is an old one, but the addition of the animal scenes puts a big punch in the play. The acting is of good quality, the sets are fair, and with a few exceptions, the photography is good.

When Dick Belmont announces his engagement to Helen Ryder, daughter of Col. Ryder, commandant of an African garrison, his fellow officer, George Favre, plans to ruin him and to marry Helen himself. To bring about Dick's downfall, Favre steals some gold spurs, a treasured heirloom belonging to the colonel, and puts them in his rival's room. When they are discovered there, Dick is disgraced and dismissed from the service. He wanders out into the jungle, where he builds a cabin. One day he finds Helen in this cabin, where she had taken refuge from the attentions of Favre. Favre is attacked by a lion, and in his dying statement absolves Dick of all blame.

Others in the cast are Edward Piel, Richard Morris and Edwin Wallock.

"Jungle Justice." (Selig. Sat., Dec. 18)—A Jungle-Zoo picture not shown for review; the story follows: Nell Clinton, daughter of an African game hunter, is engaged to Captain Trent. When her cousin, Laura, comes to visit her, Trent is infatuated with the newcomer.

While Laura flirts with him, Nell silently suffers. But Laura also flirts with Kahale, a native chief, and when he realizes that she is making sport of him, he ties her to a tree, where she is later found dead.

The story was produced from the story of Wm. R. Daly from the story of Louise Borganza.

"A Man's Sacrifice." (Vitagraph Broadway Star Feature. Three reels. Sat., Dec. 18.)—A plot of average interest well acted by Edith Storey and associates. A defeated lover, in the role of benefactor to his successful rival who is addicted to drink, secretly sends money to the girl six months after her husband is dead.

Finally, she goes West in search of her husband, is saved from violence at the hands of a designing Westerner by the benefactor, and all ends happily. A realistic fight scene, in which the girl, the benefactor, and the villain share, is well done. George D. Baker directed.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"His Vocation." (Thanhouser. Tues., Dec. 7.)—This is a pretty story built around a circus clown, who became ashamed of his profession when he fell in love. He met the girl by rescuing her from the sea, but when a young doctor appeared in the case, he sorrowfully went away, feeling that his vocation barred him.

Some time later the girl's baby sister fell dangerously ill, just as she was planning to go to the circus. She wept so because she missed seeing the clown that the doctor said to deny her the pleasure might prove fatal. So the girl went to the circus manager and pleaded until he sent a clown to the house. Of course it was the hopeless lover, and his antics so pleased the baby that her life was saved.

Then the clown learned that his vocation made no difference to the girl. Grace De Carlton, Bert Delaney, Helen Badgley, Ethyle Cook and Eugene Moore, Jr., compose the cast.

"Her Mother's Daughter." (Reliance. Three reels. Wed., Dec. 8.)—Russell Smith is the author of an appealing drama of modern life, in which Dorothy Gish is the star. The girl's mother dies when the daughter is an infant, and the grandfather, a religious fanatic, resolves that the girl shall enter a convent.

When she reaches the proper age he induces her to give up her sweetheart and become a nun by telling her her mother was never married, and she must expiate the sin. The girl takes the veil, and the sweetheart, a rising artist, marries a wealthy woman.

Through the death of her grandfather, the mother's possessions come into the keeping of the girl, and among them she finds a marriage certificate and a wedding ring. She is sent as a nurse to the bedside of a dying woman, and discovers that it is the wife of her old sweetheart. Heart-heavy at the knowledge that he had married in spite of his love for her, the girl goes back to spend the remainder of her days in the convent.

"Stanley in Darkest Africa." (Centaur. Two reels. Thurs., Dec. 9.)—This is the last of the series of Stanley adventures, featuring the Bostock animals. In attempting to rescue Ada and Jack from the clutches of Andrea, the White King, Stanley is captured himself. Andrea ties the explorer to a tree, and sends word to Ada that Stanley will die at sunrise unless she comes to save him.

Ada sends her maid, disguised in her own clothes, but Andrea discovers the deception, and is about to put Stanley to death, when Ada, who has been watching nearby, rushes in. There is a desperate fight, which is going against the whites, when the long-sought Livingstone and his party arrive. Stanley is rescued, and the historic greeting: "Dr. Livingstone, I presume," is passed.

"Doctor Jerry." (Cub. Fri., Dec. 10.)—George Ovey has plenty to do in this comedy. In order to be near his sweetheart, despite her father's orders, the girl pretends to be sick, and Jerry poses as a doctor. Suspicious, father gives the girl a sleeping powder, and decorates her face with red ink spots.

When he sees her, Jerry takes fright and flees but is captured and decorated in the same way. In terror he runs through the streets, shunned by the populace and pursued by the police. In this flight he is obliged to swim a stream, and the ink washes off, leaving him whole and well—but captured. George George, Jefferson Osborne, Gordon MacGregor, Belle Bennett, Janet Sully, Louis Fitzroy and Arthur Jackson are also in the cast.

"A Broken Cloud." (American. Fri., Dec. 10.)—While not possessing a revolutionary plot, the story of this drama has an ingenious twist that makes it unusually interesting. Vivian Rich and Alfred Vosburgh are the principals, and their work is gile-edged.

Colonel Armstrong, a man of strong feelings, desires his daughter to marry Joffrey, an unprincipled lawyer. Nellie, however, is in love with Jo Bradley. Joffrey conspires with a disreputable woman to ensnare Nellie in a plot in which he plans to rescue her from a threatened scandal on the condition that she marry him.

Jo comes to the rescue, and takes her home. The colonel relents, and being attacked with heart disease, writes a note: "Marry Jo—It is my dying wish."

Joffrey comes in, and seeing the colonel's dead body, changes the word "Jo" to "Joffrey." Nellie finds the note, and decides to accede to her father's wishes. Jo looks at the blotter on the dead man's table, and finds proof of Joffrey's perfidy. He forces the lawyer to confess his crime.

Others in the cast are Perry Banks, Roy Stewart and Lizette Thorne.

"Nobody's Home." (Beauty. Sat., Dec. 11.)—The thinnest possible plot is transferred into a delightful little sketch by the good work of Neva Gerber and Frank Borzage.

Dick receives a message from his father, stating that the parent will do something handsome for him as soon as he is married and settled down. Dick persuades his fiancee, Mabel, to elope with him, and to put up a front, they lease a comfortable house for one day.

Their father arrives, and wishing to present his daughter-in-law with a house, asks a real estate agent to show him a nice place. Mabel's parents think of the same thing, and the whole crowd meets before the house leased by the young couple.

Seeing that the pair already are comfortably housed, they decide not to buy them a home. When the real conditions are exposed, however, the parental bankrolls are pooled to make the young folks comfortable.

Others in the cast are William Carroll, Mollie Shafer, Lucille Ward, Rae Berger, and Dick Rosson. James Douglass was the director.

"Her Confession." (Thanhouser. Sun., Dec. 12.)—This is an old story, told in a novel way—in the form of a confession by a murderess who has taken poison in her cell, to a priest. The girl tells of meeting a famous artist, when she was living alone with her mother in a rural locality; he made love to her, then left for the city promising to come back and wed her.

But he didn't come and she found herself facing disgrace, so went in search of him. When she found him, he scorned her and turned to the wealthy society girl to whom he was engaged. Enraged and despairing, the little model seized a knife and plunged it into his heart. The cast includes Florence La Badie, Carey Hastings, Thomas A. Curran, Kathryn Adams, and Ernest C. Warde.

"Curing Cissy." (Casino. Sun., Dec. 12.)—Again Cissy Fitzgerald is featured in a busy comedy under her right name. In this case she is an athletic "fan" and her father, to cure her, hires Oswald Boomer, a retired actor, to pose as the head of a back-to-nature cult. Cissy is hoodwinked, and follows the leader through a series of "stunts" which are a clever satire on the modern efforts to gain health and strength through the "latest" methods. After several pounds of flesh are run off her, Cissy is cured. Charles Craig, Bud Ross and Phin Nares are also in the cast.

"The Solution of the Mystery." (American. Two reels. Mon., Dec. 13.)—This essentially melodramatic play at times is almost laughable in its wild improbability. Audiences that enjoy the work of Vivian Rich and Alfred Vosburgh will appreciate this picture, because these principals are very much in evidence throughout.

The action centres around the attempt of the heavy to marry Bessie Mitchell, the daughter of a vice investigator. This villain, Willard by name.

captures Bessie's fiance, and holds him captive while he woos the girl.

When Bessie does not respond to his advances he has some thugs attempt to murder Mitchell, while he himself abducts the girl, intending to force her to marry him. Davis, the fiancee, manages to attract attention to his plight by reflecting a light out of his window by means of a mirror.

When he is freed, he rescues his sweetheart. All the crooks are arrested, and peace is restored.

Others in the cast are Charles Newton and Roy Stewart. Reeves Eason directed the production.

"The Conductor's Classy Champion." (Falstaff. Mon., Dec. 13.)—An unusual comedy, in which Riley Chamberlain again appears as the aged car conductor. Con's rival plans to make trouble for him, and hires a couple of husky men to create a disturbance on Con's car, thereby getting him in trouble with the company.

Con recalls the Champion Woman Hammer Thrower, who is under obligations to him for having saved her dog, and he has her on the car when the trouble starts. She seizes the villains and with ease throws them to the street. Con is promoted by his employers. Louise Emerald Bates and Frank McNish are also in the cast.

"An Innocent Traitor." (Thanhouser. Two reels. Tues., Dec. 14.)—This is a cleverly arranged and well staged story of twin girls, who became separated in their youth. One of them is stolen by a foreign spy, and brought up as the daughter of his wife and himself. The other is carefully reared by her parents, her father being an officer in the United States Army.

When both the girls are half grown, the spies dress the stolen daughter to resemble her sister, and while the latter is out, the innocent spy is introduced into the home, and being mistaken for the daughter of the house, easily gets the much coveted plans of the defenses.

Later, overhearing the spies talking of her real parentage, the stolen girl realizes her position, and seizing a pistol, forces the spies to accompany her to the army headquarters, where her father is being court-martialed for the loss of the plans. She saves him and is received into his arms. The Fairbanks Twins, Wayne Arey, Carrie Niblack, William P. Burt and Kathryn Adams compose the cast.

"A Girl, a Guard, and a Garret." (Beauty. Tues., Dec. 14.)—Different casts in different Beauty comedies have tried many ways to force stern parents to relent, and allow them to marry. Perhaps the most ingenious method uncovered so far is employed in this release.

John Sheehan and Carol Holloway are charming, as always, while John Steppling and Rae Berger furnish adequate support.

When Martin Fowler discovers that his daughter Jessie is in love with Billie, a cub reporter, he refuses to let them marry. The couple then decide to elope, but the vigilant father has hired a man to follow his love-lorn daughter, and the plan is foiled.

Jessie discovers some photographs of her father, taken in his younger days, some of which are of quite a compromising character. She gives these to Billie, and the reporter threatens to have them published if Fowler does not sanction his marriage. The pater finally decides to let true love take its course.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"Slightly Mistaken." (Joker. Sat., Dec. 11.)—An excellent Joker written and produced by Allen Curtis, based on the mistaken identity theme. Max Asher, Gale Henry, William Franey, Lillian Peacock and Margaret Whistler are in the principal roles, the first three doing some fine eccentric comedy work.

"The Primrose Path." (Broadway Universal Feature. Five reels. Mon., Dec. 13.)—Reviewed at length in issue of Dec. 11.

"Her Speedy Affair." (Nestor. Mon., Dec. 13.)—One of Horace Davey's pleasant offerings with Billy Rhodes walking away with all the honors. The comedy is wont to drag in its opening phases but it has a clever idea that was well handled by all concerned in its production. Neal Burns, Ray Gallagher, Harry Rattenberry and Stella Adams furnish supprt.

"Lord John in New York." (Gold Seal Four reels. Tues., Dec. 14.)—This is Adventure No. 1 of the series entitled "Lord John's Journal," the first instalment of which was reviewed at length in the issue of Dec. 4, under the title of "The Journal of Lord John."

"Almost a Papa." (Imp. Tues., Dec. 14.)—A very good King Baggot comedy by Raymond Shrock, produced by Henry McCrae Webster. The husband hears that a "cute little stranger" is to arrive at his home and is all agog until he discovers it is a dog. The idea has been employed for comedy use before but Baggot and Edna Hunter carry the fun in a most pleasing style.

"The Widow's Secret." (Victor. Two reels. Wed., Dec. 15.)—Nell Shipman based her scenario for this on Tosti's "Goodbye" and as produced by Jack Kerrigan it makes a very delightful photoplay. Scenically it is excellent while the light and shadow effects are quite marvelous.

The female fortune seeker can stomach the presence of her lover's long-lost and lately found mother but when she discovers that he has lost his fortune she shows her true colors. There is much more entertaining action than this which makes the picture wholly desirable. It is one of the best of recent Universals.

"Blackmail in a Hospital." (L-Ko. Wed., Dec. 15.)—Once more has this company staged a knockabout reel in a hospital where the opportunities for the slapstick art are many. Peggy Pearce is in the cast, which proves itself capable of any task alloted to it. Of its kind it is a good picture with nothing vulgar and doubtless will be well received.

"The Bride of the Nancy Lee." (Laemmle. Two reels. Thurs., Dec. 16.)—A good strong story written and produced by Lynn Reynolds, that contains any amount of appealing heart-interest action and several good characterizations. Realism dominates throughout and there are some fine bits of startling action together with a wealth of excellent light effects that are introduced via the storm scenes. Myrtle Gonzalez, Frank Newberg, Val Paul and Alfred Allen are the leads.

"Colonel Steele—Master Gambler." (Big U. Thurs., Dec. 16.)—A character study with Murdock Mac Quarrie in the title role. The picture ends with an intended comedy touch that hardly registers.

"Where the Heather Blooms." (Nestor. Two reels. Fri., Dec. 17.)—A costume comedy in which the members of Al Christie's company play in the leads in a story laid in Scotland. The subject was written and produced by Christie and contains a wealth of pleasant humor that will be sure of registering with any sort of public. Betty Compson, the new Nestor leading lady appears to excellent advantage, while Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran, Stella Adams and Harry Rattenberry are in the other leading roles.

"The Vacuum Test." (Laemmle. Fri., Dec. 17.)—A version of the story of the busy inventor and his lonely wife, rather poorly produced and too artificial to cause any great interest. Jack Livingston, Constance Johnson, Ray Hanford and Malcom Blevins are the principals.

"His Real Character." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., Dec. 18.)—A Western, in which a man's contemplated vengeance on his father's enemy is overcome by love for his enemy's daughter. Its a good number, constructed along very pleasing lines and produced by Joe Franz with an eye to the power of closeups. The suspense is strong and a thrilling chase is introduced. Sherman Bainbridge, Rex de Rosselli, Edythe Sterling and Norbert Myles are the leads.

"The Water Clue." (Laemmle. Sat., Dec. 18.)—A fine mystery story that maintains a satisfying degree of suspense throughout owing to its manner of production and construction and the mystery surrounding several of the characters. The plot hinges on a novel chain of incidents that are only uncovered in the exciting climax.

The story is by Rupert Julian and Anthony Coldewey, the former also directing. Julian, Elsie Jane Wilson, Harry Southard, John Hope and Hal Cooley are prominent in the cast.

"The Opera Slingers' Romance." (Joker. Sat., Dec. 18.)—James Dayton wrote this ludicrous farce that is laid in a tank town and concerns the debut and rapid exit from the stage of a slavey. Gale Henry, Max Asher, and William Franey appear at their very best in this offering.

One Hundred Dollars QUICK For a NAME

The UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY desires to secure immediately the very best name for a new brand of feature film plays, these plays to be the very finest of their kind ever filmed, and to the person who sends in the most appropriate name on or before MIDNIGHT OF DECEMBER 10th, the UNIVERSAL will PAY ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS ($100) IN SPOT CASH. The UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY will release this new brand of features under the brand name that is chosen from the names sent in. Should more than one person send in the brand name exactly as chosen by The Universal Film Manufacturing Company each will receive $100.00.

In sending in your name suggestion for this new brand, bear in mind these several important points: first, this new brand will be of a class and character which will be adequately described as distinctive moving picture achievements. The name MUST BE SHORT and names composed of a single syllable will be given preference over names containing more than the one syllable. The name must lend itself to several things, i. e., The adaptability in trade mark designing—to psychological advertising possibilities and most of all, IT MUST BE SIMPLE AND EASILY PRONOUNCED so as to be EASILY REMEMBERED.

The name must carry a certain punch to it—must personify CLASS AND QUALITY in its very highest form and must have something about it that will clearly distinguish this new brand from the ordinary brand names. The title, after it has been chosen by the officials of the UNIVERSAL, will be announced in all the leading Moving Picture trade papers, together with the name of the person who suggested it. You may send in one name or a hundred names. The number of names you suggest makes no difference—but, KEEP IN MIND, WHAT IS WANTED, from the above description. Your suggestions for brand names MUST REACH THIS OFFICE NO LATER THAN MIDNIGHT OF DECEMBER 10th.

D'ANNUNZIO'S GREAT CHARACTER CREATION

MARVELOUS MACISTE
The Giant of Cabiria

POSSIBLY YOU SAW HIM IN THE GREATEST FILM EVER MADE
"CABIRIA"

YOU CAN SEE HIM NOW IN A MODERN MELODRAMATIC COMEDY

NOT ONLY PASSED BY THE NATIONAL BOARD OF CENSORSHIP
BUT ENDORSED IN A SPECIAL REPORT AS FOLLOWS - ARTISTIC VALUE - EXCELLENT - ENTERTAINMENT VALUE - EXCELLENT "FULL OF ORIGINAL SITUATIONS WHICH GIVE SUSTAINED AND INTENSE INTEREST. SPLENDIDLY STAGED AND FINELY ACTED. A RETURN ENGAGEMENT PRODUCTION"

He Is Not An African!

By WID

Did you see Cabiria? If you missed that masterpiece, you have certainly heard about it, and of course you know about the wonderful "giant" in that great film. His work was so unusual that he became the star of this greatest of all photoplays, even though the part was not originally considered a star part.

And now you can see this "wonder man" again. No, he is not a colored giant from Africa—he is a white gentleman.

"Maciste" was his name in "Cabiria" and now and forevermore he will probably be known as "Maciste." The new feature film in which this "super-man" has been starred, was written especially for him and it is a wonder work of amazing acts, tantalizing thrills and stirring struggles. Maciste fights with scores of men and seems to enjoy the battles.

The most remarkable thing about this very unusual film is the fact that it is both comedy and tense, exciting drama. There is an element of mystery which holds and the action moves with a speed that will bring you to the edge of your seat.

If you didn't see "Cabiria," surely you have heard of "The Giant in Cabiria." Here is an opportunity to see him in a modern melodramatic comedy, that gives him every opportunity to display his super-human power. And he is not only a marvel of strength, he is a finished actor.

"Wid" Gunning, of Wid's Films and Film Folk:
"A series of thrills. A sure fire winner. Star a marvel."

Motion Picture News:
"Something new in every scene. The big thing of the season up to this moment. It is the sort of thing that anyone will enjoy immensely. There is a directness and incision unusual in melodrama. It will amuse, entertain and satisfy because of its novelty and ingenuity."

The Dramatic Mirror:
"It is thrilling, exciting, intensely interesting and laughably amusing. The most startling claim it has for popular approval is its novelty and ingeniousness. We are free to admit that this offering was one of the most entertaining that it has been our pleasure to witness."

The Moving Picture World:
"Entirely new and highly ingenious. Will undoubtedly prove to be a big drawing card wherever shown. It grips the interest from the onset."

The Billboard:
"A welcome novelty. The most entertaining of all the exploits type of production seen to this day. Radiates with what is called personality. Never before has there been such a figure as Maciste who is always a comedian."

Variety:
"Maciste's strong work has never been equalled. He will surely appeal in this."

The Clipper:
"A pleasing entertainment. Countless thrilling situations."

The New York Morning Telegraph:
"Is entertaining and thrilling. Will amuse, entertain and satisfy because of its novelty and ingenuity."

READ WHAT THESE "LIVE WIRE" EXHIBITORS SAY

These are a few letters selected from different parts of the country. I have hundreds of exhibitor subscribers who are just as enthusiastic.

S. L. ROTHAPEL, Mgr. New Rialto Theatre, N. Y. City, Original Mgr. Director of Strand, N. Y.
I have watched your criticisms with a great deal of interest, and have always found them to be thoroughly reliable and written with a great real of ability. Honest criticism of motion pictures is a very rare article, and I do not hesitate in saying that I think your criticisms are usually among those I seek first. I wish there were more in the film business like you.

THOMAS FURNISS, Brunswick Amusement Co., Duluth, Minn.
I have always found you sincere in giving "constructive" criticism. Any one can write that a film is fine, good, bad or rotten, but there has never before been any one to my knowledge in the film world who gave such "constructive" criticism as yours. You tell "why" the film is good, bad or indifferent and that makes all the difference in the world. I want to congratulate you on the grasp you seem to have of the exhibitor's problems. I know you were once "one of us," but you have not allowed your training in the other fields since to keep you from seeing things as the man behind the box office has to see them. You will find enclosed check, and I think I have a few friends in this part of the country who should have "Wid's." Send along 25 samples for me to send out. I shall immediately get in touch with these men and suggest that they write to you. You have done more for me than if I had a man paying him a hundred a week to look at films, because I think the training you have had is worth many hundred a week. But my point is that it is pretty fine to get the services of a high-priced man, when you wouldn't have as much confidence in the reports rendered by a man to whom you were paying personally many times the amount, because there are really few absolutely capable judges of films from the viewpoint of the exhibitor. Lots of luck to you, and I hope some one of these days to have the pleasure of seeing you in our own "Home of Fine Films."

W. L. HOLT, Managing Owner, National Theatre, Lynchburg, Va.
Take it from me, you are the "real thing." I devour your "Films and Film Folk," and every statement, remark, suggestion and criticism you make is TRUE. * * * * Thank you, you are "the goods." (This was 3-page letter.)

L. G. ROESNER, Colonial Amuse. Co., Winona, Minn.
We are pleased to hear that your subscription list is steadily growing. Your publication deserves a large following. Have boosted to all my friends in this locality.

EMPRESS THEATRE, Missoula, Montana.
I think your "Wid's Films and Film Folk" is one of the cleverest things of its kind ever gotten up and meets a long felt want of the higher type of exhibitor. I will take great pleasure in referring my friends to your magazine.

H. A. SIMS, Gen. Mgr., Liberty Theatre Co., Salt Lake City, Utah.
I consider your publication to be something which the exhibitors have been in need of for a long, long time. * * * I believe that what the picture industry needs today is a fearless publication along your line. Wishing you all the success in the world.

PROSPER F. SCHWIE, Calhoun Theatre, Minneapolis, Minn. (Telegram)
Wire me collect report on———. Am mailing subscription for Wid's today.

V. B. VALLEAU, Broadway Theatre, Albert Lea, Minn.
My first two-second glance yesterday at your Films and Film Folk convinced me that I could no longer do business without it. It is the best ever and I hasten to send you my check for $5.00, covering a year's subscription, same to begin with Issue No. 1. Kindly send all the back numbers at once and see that we do not miss a single week in the future. Otherwise it would "bust up the show." With advance compliments of the coming Holiday season and best wishes for your continued success, we are ———

S. H. FRIEDLANDER, Empire Theatre, Los Angeles, Calif.
You have struck the "keynote." No exhibitor should do without your clever journal of review. It is what I have been seeking for a long, long time. I am "with you" and wish you success and shall preserve every issue of "Wid's" for reference.

F. R. SMITH, Bijou Theatre, Fond Du Lac, Wisconsin.
We certainly want it and enclose check herewith. We subscribed to the New York Evening Mail in order to get your criticisms, and we were certainly disappointed when they disappeared from that paper.

F. J. McWILLIAMS, Casino Theatre, La Crosse, Wis.
Let's have 'em all from Sept. 9th. We might miss something good otherwise.

BROADWAY THEATRE CO., Salt Lake City, Utah.
We believe you have the right idea in your criticisms and trust you will keep up the good work.

G. H. FOSTER, Marion Photoplay Co., Marion, O.
After reading two sample copies of your "Films and Film Folk" I find myself "falling" for the most intelligent feature reviews I have ever read. Enclosed find check for $5.00, for which start me with No. 1.

RALPH R. RUFFNER, The Liberty, Spokane, Wash.
Your style is infectious and we hope we are not taking advantage of you by guranteeing a continuation of "Wid's Films and Film Folk" when we send five iron men along.

B. A. ROLFE, Mng. Director Strand Theatre, N. Y. City.
I want you to know that I voice the usual understanding that you are known everywhere through the excellence of your work and your competence as a critic.

Make all checks payable to Wid Gunning, Times Bldg., N. Y. City

P. S.—To any one who subscribed to the "New York Evening Mail" in the last six months that I was there, I will allow a rebate of $1.00 on their subscription to "Wid's" upon their forwarding their receipt from the "Mail."

DO IT TODAY!—TOMORROW YOU MIGHT FORGET!

Making "Movie Fans"

Most progressive newspapers are now conducting motion picture departments wherein are printed reviews of the various plays, together with comments about studios and stars. But there is only one paper in the United States (so far as can be learned) that is making extensive use of its advertising columns to create "movie fans."

The Chicago Daily News is publishing a series of advertisements ranging in size from 200 agate lines to one-half page, telling its hundreds of thousands of readers why they should attend motion pictures and read The Daily News directory of motion picture theaters.*

Naturally this is not only increasing The Daily News' productivity for Chicago motion picture theaters, but for film manufacturers. Even without this stimulation of interest in motion pictures, The Daily News is the logical medium in Chicago for the film manufacturers. For The Daily News has a circulation of over 400,000, of which more than 92% is concentrated in Chicago and suburbs. As there are approximately 450,000 families in Chicago, it can readily be seen that, disregarding the non-English speaking and the illiterate, The Daily News is read by very nearly every worth-while family in the city.

The Daily News sells more papers in Chicago and suburbs by over 100,000 than any other daily newspaper, and over 80,000 more than any Sunday newspaper. Therefore it is the only newspaper through which you can reach all these worth-while families.

Moreover, The Daily News sells its space at a less cost per line per thousand readers than any other Chicago newspaper.

So that with the added stimulation of the motion picture news in the news columns, and the extensive motion picture campaign in the advertising columns, The Chicago Daily News is an advertising medium that commends itself in a very special way to the maker of motion pictures.

THE CHICAGO DAILY NEWS

Over 400,000 Daily

*We will be pleased to send reprints of a few of these advertisements if you are interested.

They all want "FORBIDDEN FRUIT"

(It's all in the story and the cast)

Imagine, it's all sold, with the exception of a few states. And now, no longer are Ivan Productions sold on state rights.

Buyers now are buying on Ivan popularity. They are signing up for all future Ivan features.

"Forbidden Fruit" which was sold without being seen or read about—won't disappoint a soul. It's going to prove bigger than "Concealed Truth."

These state rights buyers know that, because "Forbidden Fruit" is an IVAN PRODUCTION, it's got to be good. They know that, because the story is by Ivan Abramson and directed by him, it must be strong, effective and of universal appeal.

Ivan on a film is coming to mean as much as "Sterling" on silver. The name Ivan on a film is a guarantee of merit, of saleability, of strength of plot, of perfect direction, fine acting and a demand among exhibitors.

Starring Paula Shay, the leading lady with an individuality. Starring Everett Butterfield now creating a sensation in the stage drama, "The Unborn." Starring Minna Phillips, the "darling" of the stock audiences. Starring James Cooley, the versatile power in social drama. "Forbidden Fruit" tells the dramatic story of the eternal triangle, but with such unique developments as to prove that there is something "new under the sun."

The Sensation of all War Pictures–Bar None!

The Warring Millions

Opened at the Olympic Theatre, Chicago, Nov. 28, in rain and blizzard—to sensational business

Police Reserves Called Every Day to Handle the Crowds!

Why?

Because it is the only war picture that has ever shown an actual battle fought from the beginning to the very end—

Right Before Your Eyes You See

One of the bloodiest fought battles of the year!!
Charge after charge of maddened, blood-thirsty armies!!
Heroes falling like chaff before the withering fire of the enemy!!
The blasting cannon leveling one of the most modern strongholds!!
The wicked spitting Howitzers ripping the ranks of on-coming men!!
The death dealing machine guns tearing great gaps in human walls!!

THAT'S THE REASON

NOTE! Heretofore the only war pictures allowed to reach this country have merely shown soldiers maneuvering—cannons firing—trench digging, and other interesting details of the soldier's life—but no actual battle.

What Triangle Offers for Week of December 12th

The production of consistently successful picture plays demands the highest resources of the human mind. You know what TRIANGLE PLAYS have done toward setting a high standard. It is time to tell you what some particular TRIANGLE products will do toward elevating it still further.

"The Lily and the Rose" with Lillian Gish, Roszika Dolly and Wilfred Lucas. This play, we believe, strikes an entirely new note in motion picture history. Everyone who has seen it comments on its wonderful charm and atmosphere. There are features of photoplay artistry in this production that make it of extraordinary attraction, and ultra novel appeal.

Then comes a distinctly new type of drama—one that makes full use of natural resources, "Aloha Oe," a powerful Hawaiian tale, with Willard Mack and Enid Markey in the principal roles. The storm at sea is acknowledged to be a triumph of motion picture artistry. In fact, the play has that extraordinary quality that makes a theatre patron talk about it afterwards.

And then there are two Keystones. Any exhibitor knows what results follow the announcement of a Keystone Comedy. "The Great Vacuum Robbery" and "Fatty and the Broadway Stars." The first with Charles Murray and Louise Fazenda outdoes anything Mack Sennett has attempted for swift action. It is filled with real "Keystone Stuff." The second brings in Weber and Fields, William Collier, Sam Bernard, Joe Jackson, and the inexpressible Roscoe Arbuckle. That's one week's bill. Your patrons have a right to such service.

New York Reviewers and Critics Assume Role of Enthusiasts

"The principal play in the Triangle program was 'Aloha Oe,' a romantic drama of San Francisco and the South Seas, which had Willard Mack as the star. Enid Markey is also featured in the romance, which is perhaps the finest example of artistic staging by Thomas H. Ince. Nothing more realistic has been produced on the screens than the ship laboring in the 'white squall'—a storm to fill the spectators with terror."—Philadelphia Press.

"No fault can be found with the way in which this production ('The Lily and the Rose') has been put on the screen, the casting is above reproach, the settings are charming and the photography is excellent. As for Lillian Gish, who has the leading role, she is truthfully described in a subtitle as being 'most adorable.' "—N. Y. Morning Telegraph.

"In 'Aloha Oe,' an Hawaiian film-drama produced by Thomas H. Ince, with Willard Mack and Enid Markey, the Triangle Film Corporation presents this week at the Knickerbocker Theatre the most beautiful and artistic picture-play which has yet appeared upon its program."—N. Y. Evening Post.

" 'The Lily and the Rose,' produced by Paul Powell, featuring Lillian Gish, is a most unusual and charming production built upon the story of the love of two men for one woman. 'Aloha Oe' is a Thomas H. Ince production—a story of the South Seas—with extraordinary scenic effects, featuring Willard Mack."—Chicago American.

"BLADE O' GRASS"

A love idyl of a wood nymph child

A father embittered of man and woman and the world which has treated him cruelly, takes his beautiful daughter to secluded woods and there the wood nymph grows up pure, innocent, and as sweetly refreshing as its own pine breezes. Then comes to her, life and love.

Leonie Flugrath, favored by nature with a charming sweetness and talented to a pre-eminent degree, draws hearts to her in this appealing well-fitting role. This little girl is causing the sensational heart landslide that she made when she swung from Broadway to coast in featured roles on the stage. Friday, December 24. Direction Burton George. Scenario by William Addison Lathrop.

Release name changed. "Her Inspiration," released Friday, December 10, has been changed to "Faith and Fortune."

Motion Picture Projection Simplified

By J. H. Hallberg

40—How would you demonstrate by comparison the generation and distribution of Alternating Current?

Ans.—It has been stated that Alternating Current surges back and forth over the entire electric distribution system and through the electric generator. In answer to question 36, there appears Fig. 26 which illustrates in a simple manner the generation and distribution of direct current, as compared with a water operated system. In Fig. 26, the entire system including all the moving parts operate continuously in one direction and the potential or water pressure is in consequence thereof, constant and uniform in one direction. The resultant power at the motor or other translating device is also continuous and constant.

The accompanying Fig. 29 illustrates a system of power distribution wherein "A" is an engine or motor of any suitable kind, driving continuously the oscillating pump "B." A study of the illustration will clearly show that for the direction given by the arrow on the belt from "A" to "B," the piston in "B" will force the water in the system through pipe "C," through the motor or engine cylinder "D," exerting a pressure on its piston which will turn the wheel "F" in the direction indicated by the arrow. At the same time it is evident that the water on the left-hand side of the piston in cylinder "D," will be forced back to the pump cylinder "B" through pipe "E." The continued action of the engine "A" will in the next cycle exert a pressure on the left-hand side of the piston in pump "B" and the water will then be forced through the system through pipe "E," exerting a pressure on the left-hand side of motor or engine piston "D," which will then move in the opposite direction, forcing the water back again to the pump cylinder "B" through pipe "C." You will from this illustration, see that by proper arrangement of piston rods, crank rods, cranks and proper flywheels mounted on the shaft of the motor or engine "D" continuous motion will be obtained at the point "F," but in reality the actuating movement or the power is oscillating or alternating, surging back and forth through the system.

Suppose you imagine the piston in "B" moving back and forth once every second that would give you 60 revolutions per minute at the crank "F" and proper results would be obtained with this method of operation, transmitting the power over a distance of 500 feet. Suppose now, that for some particular reason or due to not originally wishing to use this water power to drive a motor, the power plant "A" and "B" had been designed to operate with 10 reversals per second or 600 reversals per minute, and later on it was desired to install the engine or motor "D" at the 500-foot distance. Under that condition, if the system was operated, the piston "D" would give a speed of 600 revolutions per minute to the fly-wheel "F." You can imagine that the friction in the pipes and the spring effect of the water in the system, the water not being a solid, is considerable which would make the engine "D" inoperative at the higher speed. Here you have a physical demonstration of one of the reasons for the lower cycle A. C. system being more desirable for the operation of motors or electric generators. The impedance which represents spring effect in any transmission system of the kind referred to, increases with the increased reversals or alternations. Therefore, for power transmission for motors the lower number of reversals or cycles have been found desirable and are applied.

The student will find much food for thought in Fig. 29. You can imagine that with a high speed of reversal of the piston "B" the result at "D" will be much impaired even to such an extent that "D" would not move a sufficient distance to accomplish the full stroke required to revolve the fly-wheel "F."

New Edison Super Kinetoscope Marks a Great Advance

This "Superdreadnaught" Among Motion Picture Projectors, Now Completed and Ready for the Market, Produces an Absolutely Flickerless Picture, Utilizing in Its Construction a Secret Discovered by the Inventor—Advantages Over Any Machine of the Sort Previously Made, and Details of Operation, Fully Explained.

By J. H. HALLBERG.

THE rapid development in the character of the modern photoplay and the production of perfect motion picture films has created a demand for a motion picture projector different from the ordinary machines used during the past. Thomas A. Edison, the great inventor, has in consequence thereof devoted a great deal of time during the past few years to the development of a motion picture projector which will fill the most exacting conditions and requirements.

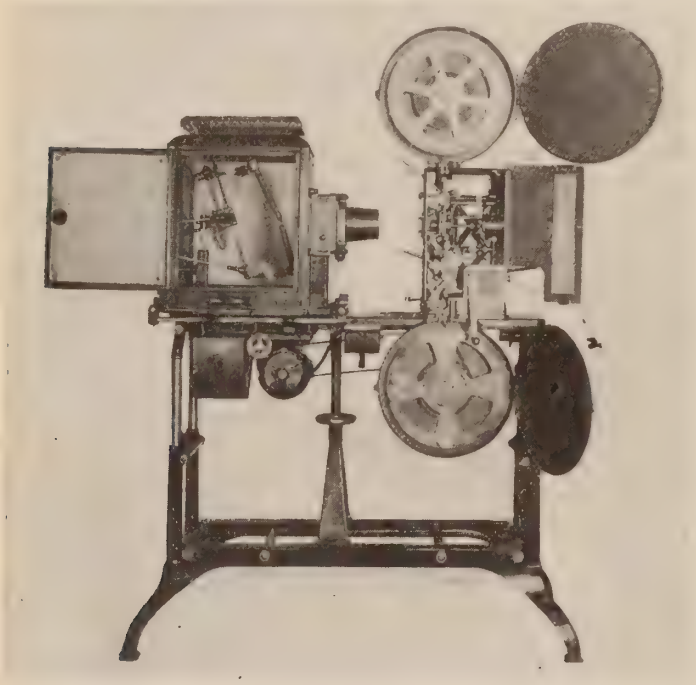

FIG. 1

The development of this machine was put into the hands of Adolph F. Gall, technical director of the Motion Picture Division of the laboratories of Thomas A. Edison, Orange, N. J. Under the direction of Mr. Edison, Mr. Call has produced a projector which is novel in many respects and which has advantages not possessed by any other projector on the market at the present time.

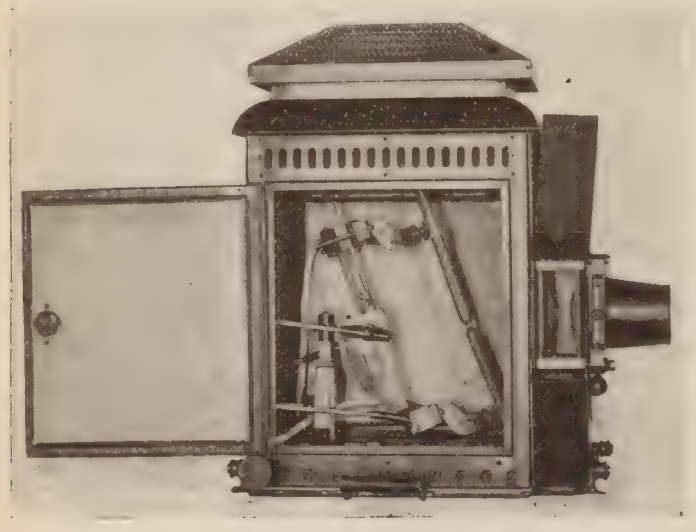

FIG. 2

In designing this machine the instructions were to produce the best at any price, and judging by the exhibition which the writer saw at Orange, Thomas A. Edison has certainly produced what he has set out to do.

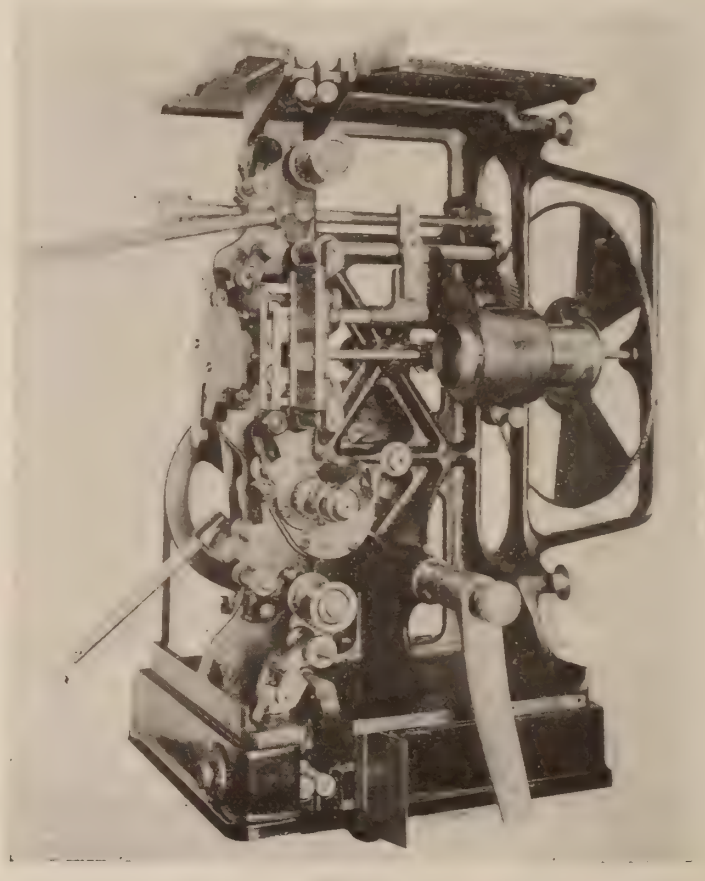

FIG. 4

The name "Super," as taken from the term "Superdreadnaught," as used in connection with the largest and most modern battleships, is well chosen, because the new Edison Super Kinetoscope

New Edison Super Kinetoscope Marks Great Advance

certainly is a superdreadnaught among motion picture projectors.

Fig. 1 illustrates the solidity, simplicity and beauty of its design. The lamphouse as illustrated in Figure 1, has, however, been modified since the photograph was taken, and now appears as illustration Figure 2. The change consists of a new perforated top fitting of such design that it is impossible through carelessness to put anything on top of the lamphouse which might be injured or ignited from the heat dissipated by the arc.

I offer the above explanation in view of the fact that Figure 1 is not an exact representation of the machine with the latest lamphouse.

The Table or Stand

The stand itself in Figure 1 is not of the pedestal type. That type would not be in keeping with the massiveness and rigidity —staunch dependability—found in every other part of the Super Kinetoscope. The stand of the Super Kinetoscope is of the design used in machinery where rigidity and stability are of vital importance, and is a distinct advance over other makes, and a radical departure.

The table or stand may be elevated or lowered to any required height or position, and may be instantly tilted to any desired angle. The legs of this machine are located so that they help rather than hinder all movements of the operator.

Simply loosening two nuts and operating a hand wheel adjusts the table quickly and surely to an almost micrometer nicety or accuracy. Although provision is made for it, it is not necessary to bolt the Super Kintescope to the floor, because of its own weight and rigidity.

The drive from the motor to the machine is accomplished through a countershaft provided with an adjustment to take care of varying lengths of drive belts. It is also provided with a roller clutch which disengages the motor drive from the machine should the machine at any time be hand driven. This is an excellent feature, as on all other machines the operator has to drag the motor when he is hand cranking. This is only another indication of the superdreadnaught nature of the Super Kinetoscope—adaptable, immediately and efficiently, to all conditions, ready, responsive and trouble proof.

Also, while the machine is motor driven, the hand crank is pendant, and cannot be run backwards as it automatically disengages itself. But unlike many machines which must take off the handle when it is electrically driven, the hand crank on the Super Kinetoscope may always be left on without being in the way of the operator and making it a friend, indeed, in its instant availability should anything go amiss with the current or motor.

The Lamphouse

The lamphouse (Fig. 2) is unusually large, substantial and built on scientific principles for the radiation of heat from the arc. The lower part—that part nearest the operator—never becomes uncomfortably warm, as the inside of the lamphouse is lined with transite board. Transite board is especially adapted to this use, as while it radiates heat, it is a non-conductor of electricity. Between the heat-radiating board—which is on three sides—and the outside of the lamp house there is ample air space.

This causes a current of air, when in operation, to pass steadily up along the sides of the lamp house and out of the well ventilated top.

The entire lamp house is in a sheet iron casing which serves to minimize the condenser breakage when heavy currents are used—a thing quite likely to happen on most other machines.

The lamp house top is perforated and gabled to obviate any possibility of there being accidentally placed on top of the lamp house any reel of film. This is in accordance with the most exacting boards of fire underwriters, not to speak of the protection it affords the exhibitor.

The lamp house is mounted on rollers so that with a very slight effort it can be shifted from the motion picture objective to the stereopticon lens.

The New Lamp

In the lamp of the Super Kinetoscope (Fig. 3) are found a number of efficient and convenient improvements and innovations. The lamp may be adjusted to any desired position from the vertical to an angular position of 30 degrees.

The carbon jaws are unique in design and are made of phosphor bronze and accurately machined to make absolutely sure perfect alignment and contact with the carbon. The jaws design is somewhat similar to the claws of a lobster. They will accommodate any size of carbon from one-half inch to one inch. Extended, the lower jaw will take an 8-inch long carbon and a 12-inch carbon in the upper jaw.

The jaws are also provided with extra long conductors which eliminate the possibility of the lead wires burning off at the terminals.

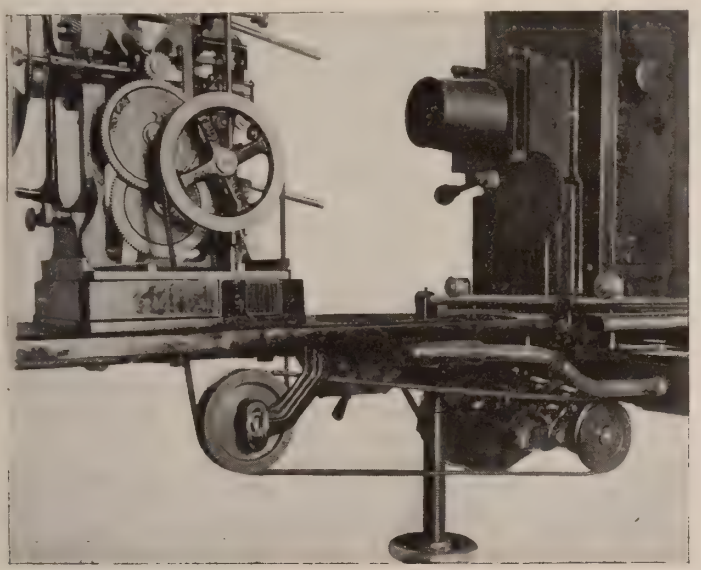

FIG. 8

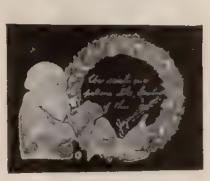
The arc, which is of unusually sturdy construction, is of the rack and pinion type, and has a maximum current carrying capacity of 125 amperes.

The carbon gripping features of the Super Kinetoscope will appeal to every operator in its time and trouble saving features. While the jaws will grip the carbon with a tight and permanent grip, they will practically never break the carbon through this pressure, as the contact with the carbon is distributed over a large area instead of having the contact pressure all at one point, as in screw clamping devices on other machines.



The jaws are independently adjustable so that the carbons may be "jack knifed" if such an arrangement appeals to the operator. The lower carbon jaw has a "right and left" adjustment and the upper carbon jaw a backward and forward adjustment. The convenience of the Super Kinetoscope here is again shown in the fact that all of these adjustments are made from the outside of the lamp house at the rear, and may be made while the arc is burning.

The forward and backward adjustments of the entire lamp can be accurately and quickly done by the rack and pinion adjustment.

The simplicity of good machine design is again evidenced in the fact that in the changing from or to any position, the position of the arc, with respect to the centre of the condenser, remains unchanged.

In the condenser mechanical provision is also made for that perfect and permanent alignment which makes for perfect pro-

A CHRISTMAS NOVELTY

Wish your patrons the Season's Greetings by means of an animated film announcement.

The illustration portrays the beautiful ten foot animated film which can be attached to any of your reels and will show your patrons your thoughts are always with them.

This is not an ordinary title, but is animated, and is much better than a slide. The beginning shows Santa Claus holding a holly wreath and then an invisible hand writes the words "We wish our patrons the greetings of this Joyous Season."

jection in the Super Kinetoscope. The lens mount is part of the casting which supports the lamp house and is in no way fastened to the lamp house itself. Quite the contrary, the lamp house is supported by this lens mount. Therefore, as is plainly seen, the optical axis or centre of the lens mount can never be disturbed or thrown out, through the warping of the lamp house from heat.

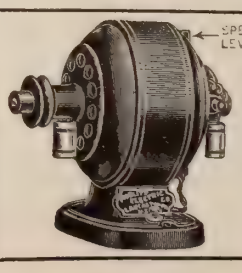
The lens mount will accommodate different lens systems—a combination of meniscus and bi-convex lens; a combination of meniscus and two plano-convex; or the conventional double plano-convex systems. Either may be as readily used in the adaptable and highly efficient Super Kinetoscope. In no other machine are these features embodied. Other makes require the use of auxiliary devices—more parts and more trouble—to meet these conditions.

The lens mount on the Super Kinetoscope is also provided with a simple but effective arrangement to accommodate and facilitate the spacing between the convex surfaces of lenses of different focal lengths. The lamp house is also adjustable to meet any optical system.

The Mechanism

The secret of the flickerless picture which the Edison Super Kinetoscope projects is due mainly to the one big truth which Mr. Edison's genius discovered—the machine must be "built around" the flickerless shutter. All previous designers of machines had gone at it the other way—the illogical way—of building the shutter into the machine, of making the shutter fit, or be adapted to the rest of the machine instead of, as in the Super Kinetoscope, adapting or designing the entire machine to the requirements of a theoretically and optically perfect shutter.

The Kinetoscope (mechanism in Fig. 4) is so designed that the picture is shifted in one-sixth of a revolution instead of the longer one-fourth of a revolution. As in other makes, this means fifty per cent faster and with a 3-bladed shutter three periods of darkness which are exactly equal to the three periods of light, and the movement so rapid that the shift takes place in one of the periods of darkness. This is the reason why, even with the mechanism running at sixty a minute and without any film, there is absolutely not a trace of quiver in the light.



New Method of Threading

One of the most marked features of the Super Kinetoscope is its "straight line" threading. In it, threading is no more the slow, inaccurate job it has been. The film follows no tortuous, roundabout path in the Super Kinetoscope, to exhaust the patience of the operator—and the audience—when he "loses his loop," jams up the mechanism with crumpled film and ruins the films. The film in the Super Kinetoscope follows one straight line, direct from the upper magazine to the lower magazine. You do not have to fuss and guess, as with other machines, in making allowance for when threading the loops the hands are not used to form the loops.

The upper and lower sprockets on the mechanism (Fig. 4) are provided with a device to rotate them in either direction. Thus the loops may be quickly and accurately adjusted to any desired length without removing the film from the mechanism. These sprockets, too, are reversible; that is, when the sprocket teeth, from long use, wear perhaps more on one side than another, by simply removing one screw the sprocket may be turned end for end, thereby utilizing the other—the unworn—side. This means double life for the sprocket.

In threading the film is pulled straight down from upper to lower magazine and all sprocket rollers closed. Simply a half turn of a knob on the upper or lower sprocket sets the loop to the exact length required. The operation is most simple. By pulling outward on the knob the sprocket is released from its shaft and it turns backward or forward, increasing or decreasing the

Edited by Nathan Myers

PROPER ELEVATION OF FLOOR AN IMPORTANT POINT IN THEATRE BUILDING

By A. F. Powers, Designer for the Decorators Supply Co.

IN a previous article the writer called attention to the many problems confronting the exhibitor in the erection of a modern theatre, and will in this and future articles attempt to take up different points which should be given careful consideration in order that he may avoid mistakes, which are too frequently made in the general arrangement of the theatre.

One of the most important points of consideration is the proper elevation of the floor so that the patrons in all parts of the auditorium equally well can see the whole picture without craning the neck to see around instead of over the people in front, which is disagreeable and interferes greatly in the comfortable enjoyment of the picture. While the principle involved is exceedingly simple, it is astonishing how many theatres are laid out without more than a haphazard guess as to the proper elevation necessary.

The bottom of the picture screen is seldom less than five feet from the floor, and the first row of seats seldom less than eight feet from the screen, therefore the first six rows (which are generally two feet eight inches back to back) should set on a level floor which brings you back twenty-four feet from the screen; the next six rows (measuring on this basis sixteen feet) should have an elevation of nine inches; the next sixteen feet an elevation of fifteen inches; the next sixteen feet an elevation of eighteen inches and so on, increasing the slope by three inches to each sixteen feet, which would, in an auditorium of one hundred feet, give an elevation of six feet and nine inches. The increase of the slope is necessary on account of the relative position of the screen, which is lower in relation to the rear seats than it is to the front seats.

INTERIOR OF THE STRAND

The opposite diagram showing the sectional view of the Saxe Strand theatre at Minneapolis presents an interesting study of floor elevation entirely different from the ordinary way of laying out the floor, in that the floor at the rear of the auditorium is only sixteen inches above the floor at the opposite or picture end, still the floor is dipped in the center so that the sight line from any part of the house is perfect, giving a clearance of twelve inches in every fifteen feet, which is sufficient.

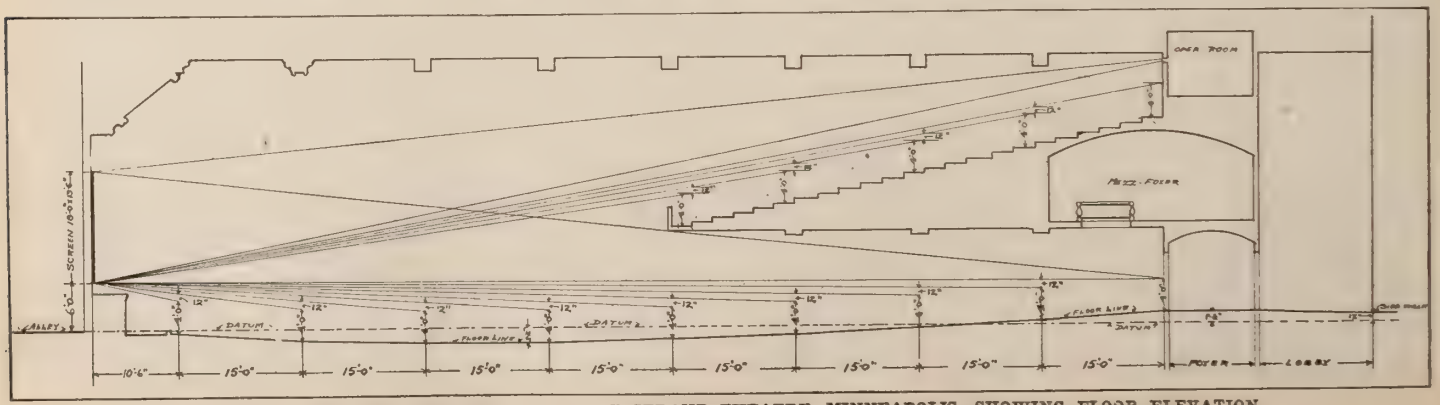
The first row of chairs is ten feet six inches from the screen, and as the line of sight is below the level of the picture screen, making it necessary to look up somewhat at the picture, the floor slopes down the first thirty feet of seating space, gradually lessening the incline to a level floor line which extends the next fifteen feet and from there back sloping upward, gradually increasing the angle of elevation every six rows to the rear auditorium wall.

The benefit derived from this layout is the lack of a steep incline either at the front entrance or the rear exits, as nowhere is the slope more than three-quarters of an inch to the foot, thereby increasing not only the comfort but also the safety of the patrons, as the exits at both the front and rear ends are without steps or even a steep incline.

This principle is applicable only to theatres which have no stage, as the sightline of the patrons is mostly below the level of the stage and therefore they would be unable to see the stage floor at the rear.

MINUSA CINE PRODUCTS COMPANY FEELS FORCE OF GOOD TIMES

JUDGING from the many orders pouring into the offices of the Minusa Cine Products Company, of St. Louis, the picture industry is preparing for big business for this fall and winter. E. R. Anderson, one of the high officials of the company, says that the orders have been unusually large, and come from all parts of the United States and Canada for Minusa Gold Fibre screens.



Some of the screens shipped recently went to Marshalton, Iowa; Boston, Mass.; Colorado Springs, Colo.; Jonesboro, Ark.; Cleveland, Ohio; Seattle, Wash.; Hamilton, Ont.; Farrel, Pa.; and Rosebud, Tex. New office and factory forces have been added to the Minusa Cine Products Company, and Nat. I. Brown, the sales manager, is nearly always away somewhere looking after rush orders and estimates.

E. P. BLOOMFIELD, formerly a supply man among the picture companies in Pittsburgh is now connected with the Satin Gold Fibre Screen Company of Detroit, Mich.

He arrived in Pittsburgh recently and visited a number of his friends there.

He will visit many of the Eastern cities before returning to Detroit. He also plans a long trip through the South and Southwest.

loop. Let it go and the sprocket instantly re-engages with the shaft.

The Magazine

The winding hubs in their greater diameter mean a distinct advantage to all exhibitors in that they will save the film much wear and thereby make better pictures for all. The hubs of the Super Kinetoscope are three times the diameter of the regular hub in general use. They are 4 1-2 inches in diameter. To get the proper initial speed on the smaller—the regular—hub, the film must travel around the hub three times as fast and be subjected to three times as much abrasion as on the Super Kinetoscope, the regular hubs being but one-third as large as those on the Super Kinetoscope. This, of course, scratches the film badly, particularly the first and last of the film. These larger hubs, too, means less wear on the mechanism as well as less wear on the film.

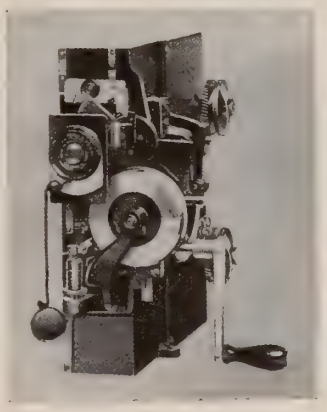
The upper and lower magazines are uncommonly substantial and enduring. Made of heavy pressed steel and seamless, the magazines and doors cannot possibly become bent or warped. They measure full sixteen inches in diameter and will accomodate 2,000 feet of film. The magazines' hinges are richly nickeled and to be had with or without springs, complying with the requirements of the various boards.

Absolute Permanent Focus

Another striking feature of the Super Kinetoscope is the positively permanent focus which it maintains, once adjusted. The focusing device is part of the mechanism, the lens tube being mounted in the mechanism casting. There is an adapter ring so that the lens may be adjusted to any position and then clamped rigidly in place by a tightening thumb screw. The lens is focused by a thumb screw which moves the casting forward and backward. The lens is therefore left in absolute, unchanging alignment with the aperture. No amount of vibration—if there was such vibration in the Super Kinetoscope—can jar loose the lens and throw it out of focus. This remarkably simple arrangement eliminates the necessity of the rack and pinion jacket, as only the lens tubes are used. Whatever wear there might be in the lens focusing is automatically taken up on both screws, assuring always that same rigidity and permanency of alignment.

Here, as everywhere else in the machine, the design is also more convenient to the operator. He can, with this arrangement, focus from the rear instead of the common and awkward front focusing. This feature is especially convenient when the operator cranks with the right hand. His left hand is free to focus readily and quickly.

A New Kind of Film Gate



The film "gate" (Fig. 5) on the Super Kinetoscope is really not a gate at all, as it is not hinged. It is ingeniously devised to slide along on two rods and is quickly opened or closed by the single downward or upward movement, respectively, of a lever or handle. The "gate" has two hardened, highly polished solid steel runners which are pressed against the edges of the film by two equalizing springs. These instantly grip the film and insure, at all times, a perfect equal tension on both sides of the film which gates on other machines, because of their mechanical principles, cannot have. The tension on the Super Kinetoscope steel runners or shoes is controlled by convenient thumb screws. The eliminating of hinges, with their consequent wear and lack of constant perfect adjustment, substituting for them the positive action of this new Super Kinetoscope film "gate" is in keeping with the admirable mechanical perfection attained in this superdreadnaught model.

The aperture plate (Fig. 6) is easily removable and readily cleanable. It is so designed that it will practically never wear out, as it is protected on either side of the plate by two thin strips of highly tempered steel which, however, are replaceable in less than five minutes and at a trifling cost, insuring practically a new plate each time. Four small screws on each side hold this strip of steel in place, under which is clamped a very thin wide strip of spring steel which furnishes the actual track for the film. This type of plate does away with the commonly seen stretching of film from passing the aperture plate. The lens, aperture plate and revolving shutter are always in a fixed relative position.

One of the most radical departures in the Super Kinetoscope is its method of framing the picture. Where in other makes the mechanism is moved up and down to effect the framing, on the Super Kinetoscope it is remarkably simplified by moving the film instead. Any such method of framing that involves this shifting of the mechanism itself is bound, as has been proved so often in daily experience, to be a constant source of trouble in, for instance, throwing the shutter out of synchronism or the correct relative position. With the Super Kinetoscope innovation in framing, the shutter and the framing device always remain in a permanent correct position, and there is never any need of a device for resetting the shutter. This insures perfect alignment, absolute and unchanged, for the lens, the aperture plate and revolving shutter.

The gears are not concerned or do not enter into the framing movement, with the result that the shutter, once adjusted, is always adjusted.

Framing is effected by simply raising a lever or handle which connects with a roller. This roller presses the film against another roller—just below the aperture plate (see Fig. 4). and against the intermittent sprocket, thus forming the loop. This looping action pulls the film further down over the aperture plate and frames the pictures, quickly and accurately.

The Flickerless Feature

The very heart of the secret of the flickerless picture which the Super Kinetoscope projects is found in a most ingenious adaptation of the Star and Geneva movement. The innovation is this: The movement of the cam is accelerated by an "accelerator" (Fig. 7) during its engagement with the star wheel accelerating the cam so that the picture is shifted in one-sixth of a revolution instead of in the one-fourth of a revolution found in other machines. The result is the long-sought movement of a true 6 to 1 —the ideal in projection. This 6 to 1 movement gives the ideal 3-wing shutter possibility of fifty per cent light and fifty per cent darkness—the scientific and optical reason and secret of an absolutely flickerless picture—a picture without "travel ghosts" or even a trace of projection imperfections. The star wheel and cam are of the enclosed type and run in oil, and are hardened and ground.

The cooling arrangement is as much improved as other parts of the mechanism. The fire shutter (see Fig. 4) is so devised that it never fails to work. It is over two inches removed from the film. In front of the fire shutter is also an auxiliary cooling plate and in front of that is another radiating plate. These ingenious precautions allow plenty of air to pass through, cooling quickly and steadily, so that fire could not possibly start at this source while the fire shutter is down, even if the light were long standing.

The Rest of the Mechanism

The bearings are all made of finely tempered tool steel, accurately ground and lapped to a fine finish. All bearings are provided with oil cups.

The gears are large and substantial, and are of the helical type —the type erroneously called "spiral"—are accurately generated, not cast.

The take-up is all gear driven, thus eliminating trouble making belts and chains. The tension of the take-up is adjustable. There are but two parts in the entire machine which require pins. This feature makes the disassembling of the machine an astonishingly simple task, as each part is held in place by a screw in the end of its shaft.

This is just typical of the simplicity attained in this super-dreadnaught machine.

The projecting mechanism, which is cast as one solid piece insuring the greatest rigidity and permanent alignment of all parts, is entirely enclosed in a fire proof casing. The front or right hand door has a long window of wired glass, the full length of the door, which on account of the straight line threading feature of the Super Kinetoscope, makes the entire film track visible all the time the machine is in operation. The right and left doors can be opened without interfering in the least with the crank handle, making all parts of the mechanism immediately accessible for oiling or for any other purpose.

Directory of New Theatres

This department is designed to be a weekly guide to all sales, leases, construction and remodeling of photoplay theatres. If you are building, selling, leasing or renovating, kindly communicate it at once for publication.

ARIZONA

W. E. TAYLOR opened a new theatre in Oatman on November 3. Oatman is the latest gold mining camp, is "dry" and has a population of more than 5,000.

Fire which originated presumably in defective electric wiring of a motion picture theatre at Lowell, a suburb of Bisbee, destroyed a block of buildings including the theatre. The damage totals $65,000.

CALIFORNIA

The Poppy theatre on Sixteenth street, near Valencia, San Francisco, has been opened again after extensive alterations with the price of admission raised to 10 cents. A fine foto player is one of the leading improvements.

The Electric theatre on Church street, San Francisco, formerly conducted by Davis Brothers, is being remodeled and will be practically a new house when the work is completed.

A permit has been granted to Marot & Webber to conduct a moving picture theatre in the T. A. Work Building on Lighthouse avenue, Pacific Grove.

Work is under way on the new moving picture theatre for Adolph Kutner at Fresno. The house has already been leased to an exhibitor of that city.

The old Helm theatre at Richmond, is now being conducted as the Regent theatre by Mrs. Dobyns.

V. Preston has disposed of the Ocean View theatre at San Francisco to F. Kuitzig, who plans to make a number of improvements.

Vernon A. Palmer, manager of the Empress theatre at Sacramento, has announced his intention of opening a moving picture theatre in a small town near there.

The Princess theatre on Thirty-fifth street, Oak Park, has changed hands, and is now being conducted under the direction of Mrs. C. Siebert.

The Idle Hour theatre, a new house at Woodlake, has been opened by O. Snyder.

The Novelty theatre at Napa, which has been closed for some time, has been taken over and reopened by F. Hater, who for a long time conducted the Opera House at Hanford.

Matthews and Chambers have taken over the Alcatraz theatre at Oakland.

CANADA

The Empire motion picture theatre, erected by Berhold Hopp at Peace River Crossing, Alberta, British Columbia, is unusually comfortable for so small a town, and has a seating capacity of 300. The floor has a slight pitch, and the equipment includes a stage 24 by 24 feet, so that theatrical performances may be given if desired. The house opened December 1.

CONNECTICUT

Samuel J. Kantor has taken a lease on the motion picture theatre in the proposed $20,000 store building to be erected in Westport by Epstein and Joseloff of Norwalk.

The Auditorium picture theatre of Devon, was recently reopened.

Windsor Locks is to have three motion picture theatres in the future, as the New Idea Society has started to build a picture house in Grove street, which will probably be ready for business by January 1.

ILLINOIS

George D. Greenough and C. A. Flinn have purchased the Grand motion picture theatre at Sterling, from Robert LaGrille. The house will be enlarged, redecorated, a modern system of ventilation will be put in and a pipe organ installed, according to plans now under way.

Messrs. Nelson, Schwindler and Sohm have opened their new Belasco motion picture theatre at Quincy. A feature of the new theatre is that it has twelve boxes arranged in the most desirable places before the screen.

According to Charles T. Smith, former manager of the Star motion picture theatre at Elgin, Bodkin & Kein, of Chicago, are planning to erect a new motion picture play house in Elgin.

The new Spencer Square moving picture theatre was opened to the public for the first time Wednesday, November 24. The theatre has a seating capacity of 1,000, the seats being very roomy and the rows being placed far enough apart that there is no crowding.

Emil Wykofska, of Springfield, has been granted the right to open a motion picture theatre at 1836 South Fifteenth street.

KANSAS

A motion picture theatre is to be erected in the rear of the Central Office Building, Salina. It is already leased by Herbert Thatcher.

KENTUCKY

Both the Rex theatre and Roman's Opera House at Lancaster, have been leased for a term of years to Green C. Walker. The Rex theatre will be closed while the Opera House under the management of Mr. Walker will remain open with a picture program.

The management of the Walnut theatre, Louisville, which has been putting on Triangle films for the past few weeks at prices ranging from 15 to 50 cents, have reduced the admission to 10 and 20 cents. Instead of only one afternoon and one night show as heretofore, continuous shows will be given from 11 o'clock in the morning to 11 at night.

Roy D. Stamler, proprietor of the Royal theatre at Walton, and the Duncan theatre at Falmouth, has opened a new picture house at Crittenden.

Algin Daniel has taken over the Opera House at Irvine, and will continue the former policy of the house, giving a picture show daily.

M. G. Weiseger, proprietor of the Colonial theatre, Danville, has closed his house for a few weeks during the period of a religious revival which is being held in that town. Improvements will be made in the theatre during the time it is closed.

LOUISIANA

Sid S. Levy, who until recently was connected with the General Field Company's exchange in New Orleans, is again an exhibitor. He has constructed a 1,000 seat house at Ursuline and Dorgenois street, which he has christened the Eugie theatre. Mr. Levy formerly was owner of the Roseland theatre, 606 Frenchmen street, and is well known to exhibitors in the Crescent City.

It is rumored that St. Charles street, New Orleans, is to have a new house that will cost $35,000. The location probably will be in the 400 block, four blocks off Canal street. A Mr. Billet, a business man of New Orleans, is said to be back of the project. details of which are lacking.

The Dreamland theatre, Shreveport, which is owned by the Hippodrome Theatre Company, has been overhauled and repaired, and is now open again.

MAINE

The Leeman block on Water street, Lubec, is being moved to accommodate a motion picture theatre.

MASSACHUSETTS

The motion picture theatre in Medway, formerly owned by

Fred B. Joyce, is now in possession of Sheldon and Poole, of Rockland.

The $30,000 Strand in Haverhill, operated by Goldstein Brothers Amusement Company, was recently destroyed by fire.

The Inman Square theatre, Cambridge, owned by Michael O'Leary, chairman of the Democratic State Committee, and his brother Dennis D., opened last month before a large gathering of notables, including Governor Walsh.

MICHIGAN

Walter Jacobsen, manager of the Strand theatre in Lansing, is soon to open a new theatre in that city.

Bursma and Gannon, of Grand Rapids, are erecting a two-story motion picture theatre building in Holland. It adjoins Meyer's music store.

C. H. McLaurin has sold the Princess picture theatre, Manistique, to Edward Garden and Laurence Boudin.

MISSISSIPPI

A. D. Treloar, formerly of Moss Point, will soon take charge of the old Fredericks Brothers' theatre in Pascagoula.

MISSOURI

The American theatre, at 12th and Barton streets, St. Louis, was sold by John Michael, who is retiring from the picture business, to John F. Brinkmeyer, who will make some repairs before reopening the house. Mr. Brinkmeyer also leased an airdome adjoining the theatre, which seats 1,200 persons, the house seating 700. The American has a complete electricity generating plant in the rear of the building, and an auditorium 45 feet wide, with no posts to obstruct the view.

The Delmar theatre, at Delmar and Kingshighway, St. Louis, has opened again after being closed for repairs, after Benjamin P. Stromberg bought the property from the Crawford interests. C. A. Maberry, who managed the house when it first opened two years ago, is again in charge of the Delmar, which will show a feature program, changed four times a week, with a continuous performance on Sunday from 2 to 11 p. m., at ten cents admission.

The Dixie theatre, 13 North Broadway, St. Louis, formerly known as the Sun, which has been closed for a long time, opened on Thanksgiving Day with J. H. Kientzle as manager. Five reels of pictures for five cents is the policy of the Dixie, and a continuous run from 9 a. m. to 11 p. m.

The Garrick theatre, Sixth and Chestnut streets, St. Louis, has become an all picture house under the management of the Cincinnati Amusement Co., who have taken an eight year lease on the property, and will be under the personal management of W. E. Jackson, of Cincinnati. The Garrick has just closed the engagement of the "Birth of a Nation," which had the longest run St. Louis has ever known.

The Ritz theatre, on Sixth street near Olive, St. Louis, formerly a famous restaurant, will open early in December with features. More than $25,000 has been spent in transforming the restaurant into a beautiful theatre, which will seat 1,000 persons. The building has been made fireproof, and will be one of the de luxe down town theatres.

NEBRASKA

Hugh McCaffrey is building a motion picture theatre at 3307 Leavenworth street, Omaha, to cost $10,000.

NEVADA

P. W. Hull and C. O. Fleming, of the Consolidated Amusement Company, have taken over the Liberty theatre at Ely.

NEW YORK

Manager Clarence E. Daley will have extensive alterations made to the interior of his Auditorium theatre, Castile, in order to properly handle a higher class of pictures than has ever been shown there. Roller skating will also be discontinued at this house.

An interest in the World in Motion theatre, Glens Falls, has been purchased by Ira F. Spencer, of Sydney, and with Mrs. Spencer he has taken up his residence in that city. Mr. Spencer is experienced in conducting motion picture houses.

Floyd C. Vickers, of Newfane, has leased the Town Hall, La Salle, for Wednesday and Saturday evenings, the balance of the fall and winter season to inaugurate a motion picture entertainment on those nights.

TEN SUNSETS
TO BUILD A "MINUSA"

Next in importance to the chemist's skill in building a Minusa Gold Fibre Screen is T-I-M-E. It takes ten days to build a "Minusa" from start to finish, to solve each different projection problem.

There is a simple reason. They are built to order—there are no two just alike. A "Minusa" built for a seventy-five foot throw would be unsatisfactory at one hundred and fifty feet. This is only ONE of the MANY features which distinguish our screen from all others, and that's why it takes "Ten Sunsets" to finish the job.

We cannot carry screens IN STOCK, for the same reason an oculist could not prescribe a universal lens for all his patients.

Besides giving you a "Natural" picture a "Minusa" is an investment that pays big dividends. Because of its greater REFLECTIVE POWER it cuts your light bill IN HALF. The electric light company pays for your screen.

Even if you do not care about the comfort of your patrons' eyes your business sense impels you to install this MONEY SAVER.

The proof of the pudding is in the eating, so get a Minusa Gold Fibre Screen, "Built by Brains," and we will stand back of it.

OHIO

George Haller, Port Clinton, is having plans drawn for an $8,000 motion picture theatre.

The Liberty theatre, better known as the "Little Liberty," to distinguish it from the big house of that name, has been sold by Paul Ulesker to a Cleveland company formed by Frank I. Hogan. This house is located on Fulton road. Mr. Ulesker retains his interest in the Addison theatre, Cleveland.

A $12,000 addition will be built by the management of the Alhambra theatre, Canton, by Ney & Bermower.

M. Greenwald has taken a partnership interest in the Market Square theatre, Cleveland.

The Savoy, 103rd street and St. Clair avenue, Cleveland, is the newest theatre to open. The house seats 1,200. Herman J. Garfield is manager.

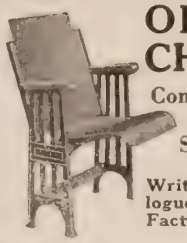
The Wind-A-Meer is another new theatre just opened in Cleveland.

OREGON

R. A. Redfider has bought the Star theatre at Heppner, from J. B. Sparks.

PENNSYLVANIA

The United Theatre Company, Wilkesbarre, is soon to erect a picture theatre in Luzerne avenue, W. Pittston. The United, of which C. K. Trumbower is president, is capitalized at $250,000.



C. A. Wagner and John Wishart, proprietors of the Globe theatre, Connellsville, are altering the building at Main street and Mountain alley for use as a 700 seat picture theatre. The estimated cost of altering and equipping is $10,000.

The Regent theatre, Shamokin, under the management of Bingham, Crose and Cohen, opened on Thanksgiving Day.

The Royal Palace picture theatre, 2716-18 Girard avenue, Philadelphia, has been sold by Spiers Brothers to Benjamin Shindler for a nominal consideration subject to a $15,000 mortgage.

Music and the Picture

Edited by Ernst Luz

This department is maintained for the exhibitor's assistance with a view of suggesting proper musical illustrations for current photo plays. MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be pleased to help solve any difficulties the exhibitors may have with their musical programs. All communications should be addressed to the Music and the Picture Department.

M. J. S., Pottsville, Pa.—As a subscriber of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, which I esteem highly, I have availed myself of the privilege of asking your assistance in helping me to build up the efficiency of my little orchestra. I am running nothing but productions each day made by the V-L-S-E, the Equitable, the Mutual Film Corporation (Mutual Masterpicture, Pathé's Gold Rooster productions, George Kleine's, and the Fox).

I am getting some musical suggestions in cues from these different exchanges, but all my subjects are not being supplied with suggestions.

I also wish to ask you to give me some idea of what class of music to play for Kleine's Mrs. Fiske in "Vanity Fair." We have four pieces of music consisting of the piano, violin, flute, cello, and I would deem it a great favor to be favored by a prompt reply.

You are in the same quandary that hundreds of exhibitors before you have been. You have one advantage over the many that have tried to do what you are doing; viz.: you will not have to wait long to realize your desires. You are evidently getting the Music Plots for your Pathé and Equitable pictures. If not, ask for them at your exchange or write directly to the manufacturers. For the others I have memorandum plots, which are similar to the ones appearing in the NEWS.

They would be of little use to you unless notes would be added, which it is impossible for me to do as it requires too much time. To be done correctly it must be done at the time of seeing the picture, when the picture is still fresh in your mind. My directors are all taught to the meaning of my work and I am in daily contact with them, consequently much of the detail can be omitted.

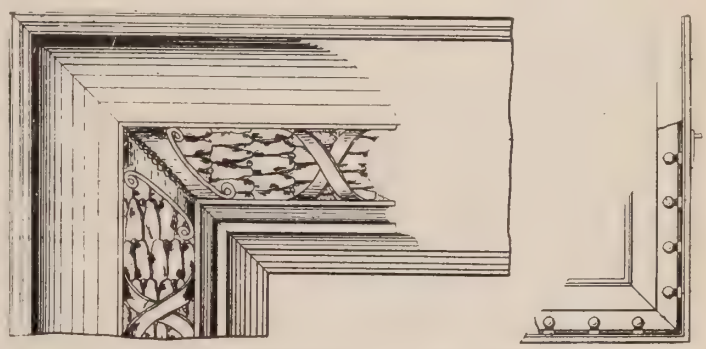
Unfortunately I have not seen "Vanity Fair" and can therefore not answer your question. You have an excellent combination for playing pictures and I want you to succeed. As I have so often said, every interested exhibitor should write and then write again to the producers of film that they need the music plots for the pictures, for this is the only means whereby you can hope to get relief.

Some of them will answer that they have tried it and their suggestions have been criticized, but this is a lame excuse. The same producers of film have had directors and camera men making pictures that were worse than poor and they changed their directors until they made pictures that were not critized.

Most producers are seriously thinking of the music and the picture and it only requires the united efforts of the exhibitors to get plots that can be used by the exhibitor to good advantage.

OMAHA CENTER OF NEW CIRCUIT OF PICTURE THEATRES

OMAHA is the center of a new photoplay circuit of houses, operated by the recently formed Empress Theatre Co. The company has taken over the Empress at Omaha and opened a new Empress at Kansas City immediately afterward. An Empress theatre will be opened in Denver early in December. Other cities are to be added to the circuit until a chain of fifteen or twenty houses will look to Omaha's booking agency.



W. Ledoux, heretofore of Winnipeg, Canada, but now of Omaha, is president and manager. A. Lemarquand, a successful exhibitor in Nebraska and Iowa, is vice-president, and Paul Lemarquand, of Minneapolis, is secretary-treasurer. The new company has been organized as a Nebraska corporation.

FEATURESCOPE, FRAME AROUND THE SCREEN, LATEST INNOVATION FOR PICTURE THEATRE

IN the steady progress of improving the presentation of motion pictures by perfecting the projection, screen, etc., a new wrinkle has made its appearance. This latest innovation consists of a frame around the screen. This frame is made of plate glass and is shaded and stenciled, so that the invisible low candle power lamps behind it give a most realistic picture-frame effect.

A representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS inspected a Featurescope, as this frame is called, in the Majesctic theatre in Streator, Ill. The added effect given to the picture by this invention is really impressive. At a distance of a few feet it is impossible to realize that the frame is a flat surface of glass, and not a carved moulding. It seems like a beautiful, hand-carved border, diffusing a ruddy, ruby glow.

The light is indirect, consequently no sharp rays shoot forward and conflict with the light on the screen. This subdued glow not only seems to add a finished touch to the picture, but livens and gives warmth to the front of the house. The Featurescope has the effect of adding depth to the picture, an effect which is obtained by dividing the frame and the screen by a wide black moulding border. The background is thrown backward and the foreground forward, which results in a much better perspective. The cold, metallic effect so noticeable in pictures ordinarily projected is practically eliminated, and the disagreeable flicker is minimized—apparently absorbed in the contrasting colors.

Mr. Day, manager of the Majestic theatre, expressed his satisfaction with the Featurescope in very strong terms. He said that patrons had been attracted at first by the novelty of the device, but they now come because the pictures are more restful to the eyes. He has sometimes left the screen unlighted, but the audience has complained when he has done this, claiming that their enjoyment had been marred.

Mr. Davis, the inventor of the Featurescope, is a technical expert who has been connected with the Barley Manufacturing Co., of Streator, Ill., and has devoted several months to perfecting this device.

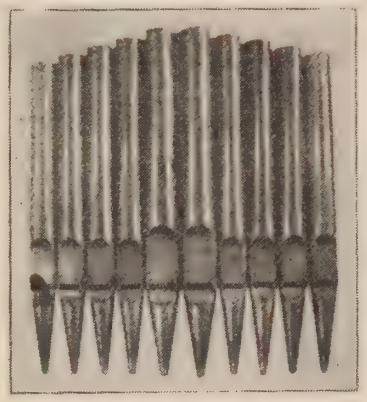
THE Manhattan Slide & Film Company has opened a branch studio in the Advance Building, 1514 Prospect Ave., Cleveland, Ohio

PLAN FOR YOUR ORGAN



A certain theatre owner who built what has been called "the handsomest picture theatre in America," signed the contract for his Kimball Organ on the day the company operating that particular house was incorporated.

This man wanted the architect and the organ builder to consult together and make proper provision for the organ in the original plans, without costly and time-wasting alterations. He wanted—and got—the utmost in musical quality and architectural beauty.

The modern divided electric theatre organ is more intricate than the building which contains it. To wait until the house is nearly ready for occupancy and then to stick in a "stock" instrument of some sort is an unintelligent procedure, unworthy of the men who in so short a time have built up the second greatest industry in America, and is unprofitable.

Give the organ builder a chance!

EDISON SUPER KINETOSCOPE MARKS GREAT ADVANCE

The crank is of the clutch type, and when not in use disengages itself automatically, hanging straight down and never being in the way when opening or closing doors.

The Motor

The motor drive (Fig. 8) is entirely closed and is provided with a mechanical speed-changing device which is simple, efficient and "fool proof."

The operation of the motor is not affected in the least no matter at what angle the machine is set.

The torque of the motor is greatly in excess of the power required to drive the machine. This generous provision insures certain steady running and freedom from heat in the motor which so often results in many machines where there is not abundance of power provided for.

The speed-changing device (see handwheel next to switch, Fig. 1) is one that has stood the test of time—the best and only test of mechanical design. It never wears out and there is nothing about it to get out of order. As would be expected from this, it is also simple in adjustment.

The finish of the Super Kinetoscope is in accord with its substantial design. The entire machine is black enameled and highly polished nickel trimmed, giving it a beautiful appearance. The magazines and mechanism head for projection and optical reasons are finished with optical black.

Editor's Special Comment

During the test in the laboratories at Orange, the Edison Super Kinetoscope produced an absolutely flickerless, steady picture at normal speed. The construction of the machine permits it being installed in almost any existing booth, without special foundations.

Outside of the points referred to above concerning the design and construction of this machine the application of an automatic device which will instantly stop the machine in case the film should break, is herewith for the first time applied by a manufacturer of motion picture projectors. The Edison Super has a roller bearing against the film just below the lower sprocket. When the film is slack, as might be the case with a defective take-up or broken film, the roller of its own tension and weight automatically opens an electric circuit which controls the driving motor which then becomes inoperative, putting the machine at rest. If the film is in proper position the roller with its jointed support and contact arrangement as illustrated in the lower left hand corner of Fig 4, is supported by the film, causing contact to be made for the motor circuit which then operates and drives the machine in the regular way. The contact, which is enclosed in the base, can also be operated by the small hand button illustrated on the base of Fig. 4. The contacts within the base do not make and break the main motor current. The make and break is what you might call an auxiliary arrangement which carries a very small amount of current and is therefore thoroughly practical and not likely to get out of order as has been the case with many inferior devices put on the market as auxiliary attachments to various makes of machines which have proven unreliable.

The editor considers this new automatic stop, which may be operated by hand as well as by the film in case of failure, of great importance in that it protects the film from injury and also protects it against fire, due to the accumulation of a broken film within the machine which would ultimately clog the mechanism and become ignited.

The straight threading of the film and the disengagement of the upper and lower sprocket in making the loop at top and bottom after the machine has been threaded are important features. They contribute to the longer life of the film and obviate guess work as to the length of the loop. As a matter of fact, the loop can be increased or decreased in length almost instantly, as it is unnecessary to disengage the idlers and to actually lift the film off the sprockets.

The machine looks and operates right. The price is between $600 and $650.

The sales organization is under the able direction of L. C. McChesney and J. W. Farrel, and Motion Picture News extends its best wishes for the prosperity of this welcome improvement tending to better projection.

20.	Agitato	"A. B. C. Dramatic Set No. 10"—B2 (Jos. W. Stern & Co.)	Not Guilty.
21.	Dr. Plaintive	"A. B. C. Dramatic Set No. 10"—C3 (Jos. W. Stern & Co.)	To End.

Music Notes.—From the end of the first reel to the end of the picture the plot is very heavy and dramatic. The dramatic tone should be held throughout. Care should be taken in selecting suitable numbers at the points where (Path.) pathetic appeal is suggested.

No. 1 can be any light descriptive number having a slow introduction. Avoid the waltz so as not to repeat on No. 2. Nos. 3, 4, 6, 8 and 12 should be slow legato numbers having a pathetic appeal and a positive dramatic effect. Nos. 11, 14 and 19 must be slow numbers with a positive dramatic effect. No. 18 and 19 should be long numbers. I know of no better number than "Puccinianna," lately published by Ricordi & Co., No. 12 East 43d street, New York City, for No. 18. The number comprises the better melodies of the different Puccini Operas. No. 5 should be a slow waltz played legato.

No. 7 can be a 4/4 intermezzo. This is the only point where a light musical relief can be properly obtained. No. 9 should be a minor waltz lento movement. No. 13 can be a 2/4 movement, not slow, but should be in minor key. No. 10, 15, 16, 17, 20 and 21 are melodramatic numbers necessary for accentuating the important dramatic climaxes.

The above to be SPEER Carbons. If memory serves me right, Mr. Bogrett asked me to write you in regards as to how we found the SPEER CARBONS. My operator informs me that they are giving fine satisfaction, as the above order signifies.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) A. P. BIBBER,
Manager.

Marysville, Pa.,
November 19, 1915.

Dear Sirs:

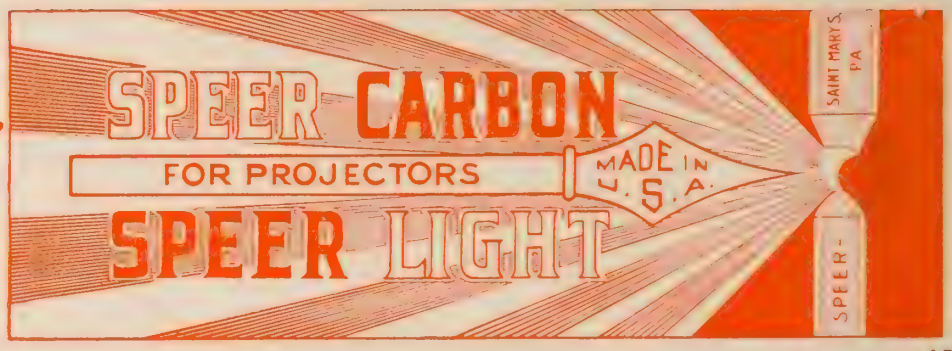
Am operator for Oliver Landis at Princess Theatre and have given Speer Projector Carbons a thorough test and find them as good as any of the foreign carbons.

Yours truly,
ALBERT B. ADAMS.

Chattanooga, Tenn.,
September 27, 1915.

Gentlemen:

We received the carbons all O. K. and beg to advise that, while we have only used them for a few days, we find them to be good. We get better results from them than from any American-made carbons, and second to Bio.



Will give you our orders.

Respectfully yours,
BONITA THEATRE,

"Landon's Legacy"

A Charming Drama by the Popular Author, Meredith Nicholson

Story to Be Published Simultaneously by

Collier's Weekly

LANDON'S LEGACY is charmingly simple and Simply Charming. It's the type of Play that will enthuse and delight ANY audience in the world. J. Warren Kerrigan as Landon is alone sufficient guarantee of packed houses. If any of the widely advertised Feature Makers had the great Kerrigan in "Landon's Legacy"—you'd see pages of advertising about it and you wouldn't be able to touch it because of the price they would ask for it.

But—released on the REGULAR Universal Program as a Broadway Universal Feature—you get it not only at an absurdly low cost which enables you to make a handsome profit, but also this type of production places your House on a par with the biggest House in this country showing the costliest pictures. "Landon's Legacy" is a "cracker-jack." Wire your Exchange for release date and booking, today.

The Spirit of Christmas—
COMES now the time of giving—the happiest of all joys.
And comes, too, a little more forcibly than at any other season of the year, the realization that we get in life what we give.
A man must contribute to the stock of human happiness before he can participate in its profits, because happiness goes out from the heart before it comes in—
It never by any chance stays at home. You can harvest it, but you cannot hoard it. You can lend it, but you cannot borrow it. You can earn it, but you cannot buy it.
To seek it without giving it, is a futile quest, "and all our longings for what we have not learned to give others will be as empty bottles in the wine cellar of the soul."
The happy man is the man possessed of a simple, honest desire to make all those happy whose lives touch him.

And its Practical Application
THIS company was organized with the definite belief that to gain the most was to serve the most. It has never lost sight of this basic principle.
In the production of pictures; in employing aids to help resell those pictures:—it has given unreservedly the fullest fruits of sincerity of purpose, wealth of resources and years of experience.
To those who have prospered with us, we extend our felicitations and gratitude for their confidence.
To the many more with whom we hope to work, we extend the hand of fellowship.
To both and all, we extend our heartfelt wishes for ever increasing success and prosperity.

in

A genuine feast of fun, in three acts of comedy drama

"THE MATCHMAKERS"

'Tis that theme always rich for good laughs when done well—two who would be married by designing money seekers, but two who would, instead, love their own way.

Sally Crute is given a real chance to "let out" all of her characteristic fun-making ability, not to speak of her seizure, in her own speaking way, of the dramatic in this cleverly plotted drama, by William Addison Lathrop. Then, for the fun of it, too, there are the comedians, William Wadsworth and Carlton King, doing their best. Others cast are Margaret Prussing, Paul Bliss, Robert Brower, Mrs. Erskine, and Leonora von Ottinger.

Director George Ridgwell makes this comedy-drama funnier still. "The Matchmakers" is the kind of a feature that will be heartily welcomed by a play-going public already wearied of too many serious and heavy dramas. Friday, December 31. 3000 feet.

Birds-eye Hearst — NEWS

Here is a graphic representation of the news gathering plant of Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial.

These successors to Hearst-Selig ought to be the supreme news reel because it has at its disposal the tremendous Hearst photographic camera staff.

Coronation of a Japanese Emperor

A few minutes after "Falaba" was torpedoed

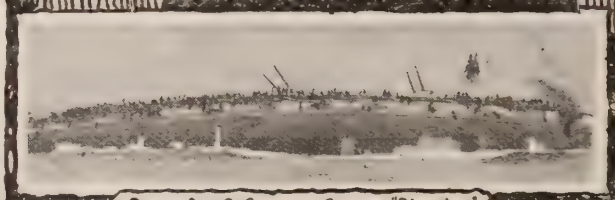
Fire & Explosion at a Paint Factory

Siberian Comitages charging Austrian trench

U.S.S. Missouri Panama Canal

Captain Scott and party arriving at Amundsen's tent.

N.Y. Central Wreck at Yosts N.Y.



Grouped about this panel are a handful of "scoops" selected from the hundreds achieved during 1915 by the International Film Service.

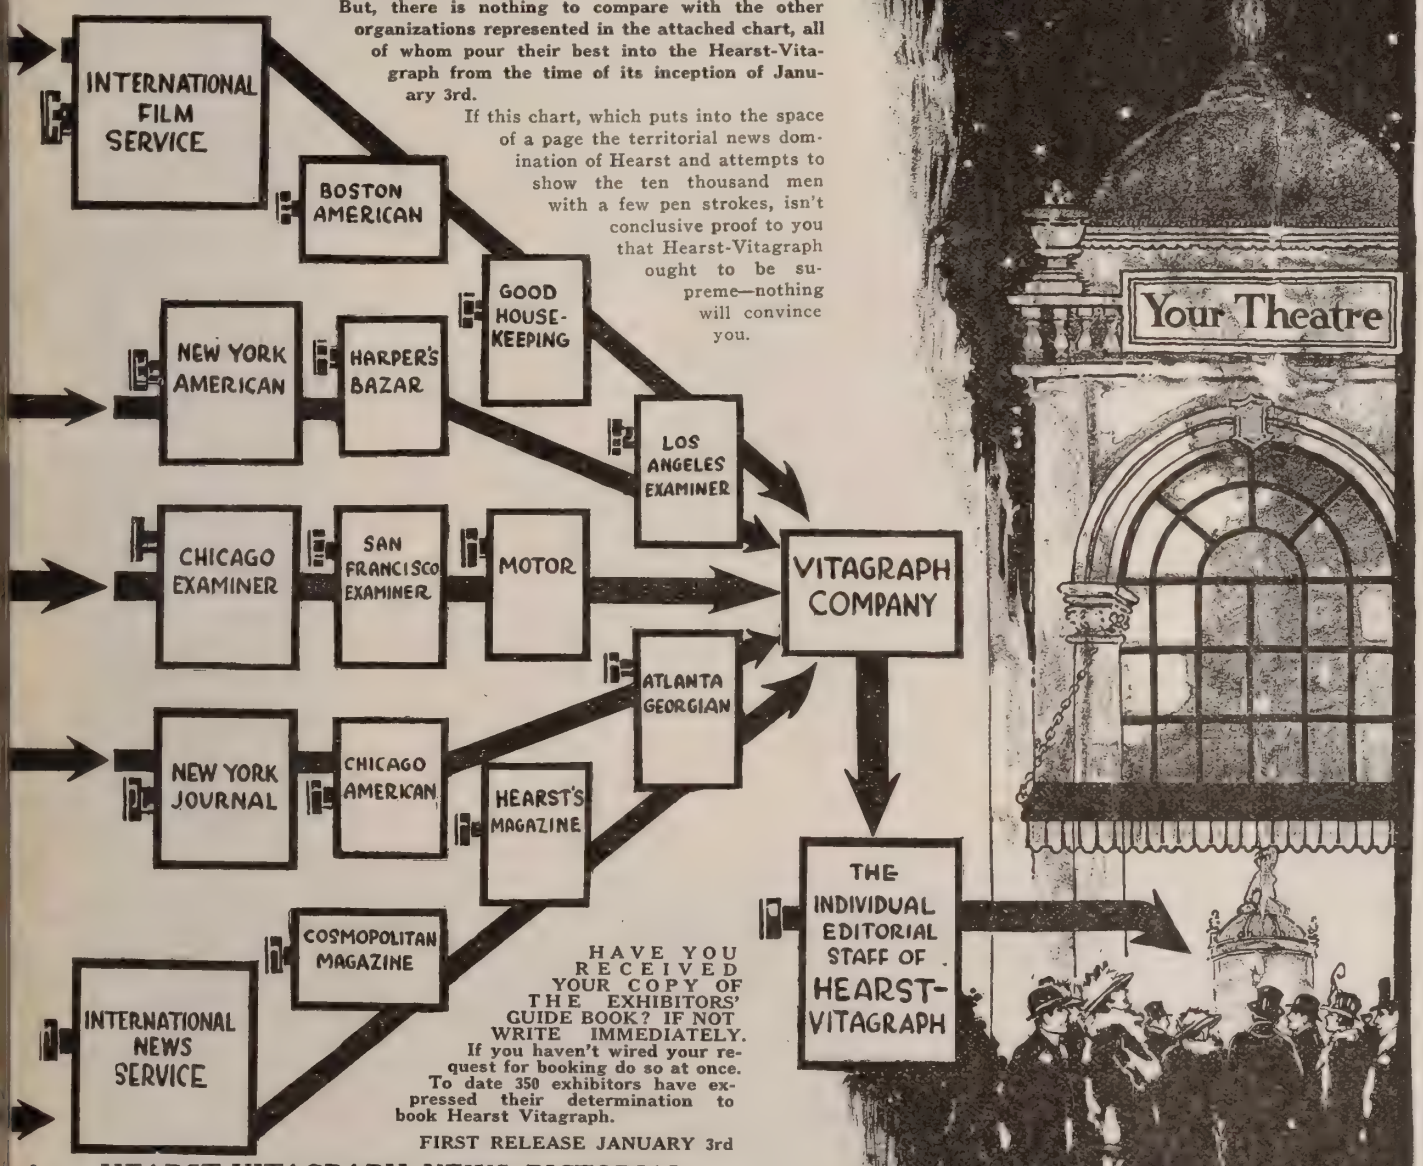
This assortment gives you an idea of the variety of exclusive pictures made by Hearst's International Film Service.

Realize, if you can, what it means now that this same organization turns its best into the Hearst-Vitagraph.

S.S. Eastland disaster in Chicago River

Arrest of Assassin of Archduke Fernand Austria

Sinking of German Cruiser "Bluecher"



Dayton Flood

View of Vitagraph PICTORIAL

In order to compare Hearst-Vitagraph with any other news reel, it is necessary for you to examine the attached chart. Cast your eye down into the lower right-hand corner of this page, which you will note "The individual editorial staff of Hearst-Vitagraph." This square represents those individuals whose time is devoted exclusively to Hearst-Vitagraph. Other news reels may be able to point to a staff the equal of this, although that is a question.

But, there is nothing to compare with the other organizations represented in the attached chart, all of whom pour their best into the Hearst-Vitagraph from the time of its inception of January 3rd.

If this chart, which puts into the space of a page the territorial news domination of Hearst and attempts to show the ten thousand men with a few pen strokes, isn't conclusive proof to you that Hearst-Vitagraph ought to be supreme—nothing will convince you.

HAVE YOU RECEIVED YOUR COPY OF THE EXHIBITORS' GUIDE BOOK? IF NOT WRITE IMMEDIATELY. If you haven't wired your request for booking do so at once. To date 350 exhibitors have expressed their determination to book Hearst Vitagraph.

Triangle Ideas and Box Office Returns

Ideas lie at the root of every plan. Valuable Ideas result in valuable product. When the value is proved the public buys, and pays a profit to the vendor. If the Ideas are very big the returns are correspondingly large.

TRIANGLE PLAYS are based upon the biggest, most imaginative ideas that are to be found in the motion picture world; Ideas in the possession of men who have proved their right to pre-eminence—Right Ideas, in brief. To be of value an Idea must be made effective and this requires money. Coupled together, Big Ideas and Big Money produced a Big Valuable Product—a product the Public will buy.

That last test is the final test. The Public has proved that it likes Triangle Plays, and what is more important, is willing to back that liking with its cash—pushed through a box office window. It may like this particular TRIANGLE PLAY, or it may like that, perhaps one better than another, but above all it likes Triangle Quality—that Quality born of those Great, Comprehensive Ideas.

Every exhibitor knows that the steady customer is worth two or three or a dozen occasional patrons. TRIANGLE PLAYS make habitual patrons; and habitual patrons pay rentals, overhead charges, and furnish habitual profits. On the right-hand page will be found confirmation.

Midnight Show to Handle Triangle Crowds

The man who pays the bills usually suffers no illusion as to the quality of what he buys. He looks at the results with the cold calculating eye of an adding machine—no sentiment whatever. Hence—

Our house was packed all of last week with TRIANGLE. We had to turn away business every night, and were even compelled to run a midnight show in order to accommodate the crowd.

Our Triangle opening a big success. Played to capacity all day long. Everybody went away boosting.

And many other such expressions about TRIANGLE PLAYS are being received from successful exhibitors all over the country. Is there anything further we can say?

Why Is "FORBIDDEN FRUIT" All Sold Out Before Showing?

At the right hand side of this page you read the names of those who now represent Ivan Film Productions in the various parts of the country.

Ivan Film Productions, Inc., has demonstrated its policy to produce regularly consistently good and dramatic features of intense human emotions.

Ivan Abramson, the famous Russian author and director, steeped in his work of inspiration, forgetting questions of finance and business, is demonstrating to the motion picture field at large, that a producer can do more than produce a once in a while good picture.

Today there are three territories still open on Ivan Productions. Now, Ivan is connected with state rights men and exchanges who are anxious to take an option on all future Ivan Productions for these territories.

For one a month releases that you can depend on, wire or telephone today to "Forbidden Fruit" is the sort of story which is the real backbone and foundation of the moving picture theatre. It is the sort of production you can put on at any time and carry audiences off its feet. It is the sort of production you can headline.

Exhibitors in the following territories should apply to:

New York and Northern New Jersey—Merit Film Corp., 110 W. 40th St.

West. Penn., West Virginia—Liberty Film Renting Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Ohio—Standard Film Service Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

Michigan—Standard Film Service, Detroit, Mich.

Illinois, Indiana, So. Wisconsin, Kentucky—Gen. Feature Film Co., Chicago, Ill.

Minnesota, No. and So. Dakota, Northern Wisconsin—Zenith Feature Film Co., Duluth, Minn.

Pacific Coast—All Star Feature Distributors, San Francisco and Los Angeles, Cal.

Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana—Hub City Film Exchange, Waco, Tex.

Exhibitors eager to book Forbidden Fruit will be interested to read the following cast:

PAULA SHAY—the leading lady with an individuality.

JAMES COOLEY—probably the most versatile man in pictures today.

MINNA PHILLIPS—the "darling" of the stock audiences.

EVERETT BUTTERFIELD—now creating a sensation in the big New York stage drama, "The Unborn."

Inasmuch as we have disposed to the Supreme Film Company the rights on The Cowpuncher, we will not be in a position to advertise with you until our next production is ready for release.

You may be sure that we shall communicate with you at that time, as we are more than pleased with the results that our advertising in the Motion Picture News has brought us.

Seventy-two State Rights buyers replied to the one-half page advertisement we placed in your issue of October 23d, and as a result after the one insertion we received offers from practically every state in the country. This same result was not attained or equalled in any other publication.

Very cordially,

Dear Mr. Mead:

We have now disposed of the rights for "WAS SHE TO BLAME?" for practically the entire country and our next feature is not yet ready to be announced.

Consequently we shall discontinue advertising for the time being.

As soon as we are ready with the next feature, we will certainly take the matter of advertising up with you as we were more than satisfied with the result that our four one-eighth page advertisements in your paper brought.

We received 48 inquiries from this ad, while our ads in corresponding issues of other trade papers brought us 12 inquiries in all.

Bids from every territory in the U. S. A. results from these ads placed with the News.

We remain,

Yours very truly,

Volume XII DECEMBER 25, 1915 No. 25

On the Threshold of 1916

IT must be quite as interesting to the reader, as it is to me, to look back over the 1915 files of this publication and noting their editorial expressions, to compare these with the actual progress of the motion picture and its industry as together they stand upon the threshold of 1916.

THE dominant feeling—within the editor—is one of humility.

And if I were to select from the review of the year past a dominant fact, I should select that which was noted upon the page a year ago—the elasticity of the motion picture.

Truly it is greater than any one of us and than any of us can predict.

IN the face of very great industrial dangers—overproduction, poor production, economic waste, ruthless stock-jobbing, legislative injustice and other pitfalls—the motion picture goes solidly surging on—even past what we decide to be its apex of development, and into wider fields.

Only its tremendous hold upon the public can account for this. It is not so much the force we put behind the picture; it is more the force within the picture which is pulling us along despite the economic and artistic mistakes we make.

THIS force is the motion picture's varied and pleasing expression—its comprehensive expression—its wonderful elasticity of expression of life itself.

It has a message, a message of its own, for every man, woman and child who has eyes to see.

It is today the world's mirror of the world's life and history.

LAST year with some pride we pointed out the dramatic achievements of the motion picture in these words:

"We know now that we can and will make good pictures of good books and good plays—and this on a general scale.

"We even know—because it has been fully proven—that the picturization of a play can be made more attractive than the play itself.

"Indeed a wonderful and a new achievement."

YES—but not wonderful now. Now we know that the picture is a greater vehicle than the stage and an art quite distinct from the drama.

Now we know that it is not wholly necessary to translate from the stage to the picture. We want fresh creations for the picture.

We are not dependent upon books and plays. We want the men and women who can make good plays and books to turn their genius to the picture, to study the new art of expression and to build for it and its distinct requirements—to become photodramatists.

WE don't want the picture to imitate the stage, or to suffer from comparison with the stage. We don't, for instance, want pictures to talk. It is no detraction that they don't talk, any more than a sculptured bust suffers because it hasn't pink cheeks, or a masterpiece painting of flowers because they are not fragrant—as Hugo Munsterberg recently pointed out in his able article.

Painting, sculpture, drama, music—these are distinct arts, unreliant upon each other; and so is the motion picture a distinct art, and so must it be unreliant upon anything save the freshly creative genius of its producers.

IF, however, we did fail to measure fully the picture we have at least within the year past made some true prophesies and some successful contentions.

We did prophesy the national advertising of pictures and we have persistently and helpfully stood for newspaper co-operation, believing that the success of the exhibitor and producer is founded upon good advertising as well as upon good pictures.

Vol. XII December 25, 1915 No. 25

AS 1916 opens, therefore, it is with considerable gratification that we note the announcements of so many producers and distributors—to launch into national advertising campaigns. It is still more gratifying to note that—vastly unlike the situation a year ago—there is scarcely a newspaper now of any consequence but what has a motion picture department, and that of these, many are of striking size and merit.

We take to ourselves considerable credit for bringing about this important advance. We speak advisedly because many newspapers have granted us this credit, and nearly all today rely upon this publication for their news service.

AND certainly this country-wide newspaper co-operation—this conveying to the millions every day a week the definite information, the true information of the motion picture—must stand forth as one of the signal advances of the year.

We have, of course, stood for good pictures—but not, we trust, in a platitudinous way. We have at least emphasized the importance of the story to some good effect. There are many things about production we do not know and which the producer does; but we do know that the basis of the picture is the story told upon the screen. And we shall continue to devote our best efforts to making photodramatists, as the name truly signifies.

I WANT to invite the careful attention of the reader to the interviews and special articles which follow this page. The interviews are brief but real; each expresses sincerely one vital thought. The feature articles are designed to bring out what we consider to be the dominant notes of progress in 1915 and for 1916.

These interviews say some very significant things. They outline pretty well what is going to happen in 1916.

THEY indicate another year of the stern—an even sterner—survival of the fittest. We are going to have "fewer pictures, better pictures, longer runs" (the quotation is from an editorial six months ago). Our present weekly release quota of about 230 reels, comprising 14 features, is going to be cut considerably, and out of this overabundance will survive the best pictures backed by the truest policies.

SPECIALIZATION will be a factor. Producers will become more and more known for the definite kind of pictures they make. Their pictures will succeed increasingly against the deadly similarity of many pictures, and the specialist's name will acquire a very enviable trademark value.

Service to the exhibitor has seen the light this year, and this sensible policy of helping the exhibitor resell his wares to the public will be a common one in 1916.

STILL more important is the fact that the open market is at last a reality. The leading producers and distributors openly advocate it. They differ in their policies of bringing it about, but they are truly sincere in their efforts toward this very important end—an end which unquestionably makes for the prosperity of the theatre, the satisfaction of the public, and the continuous uplift and development of the picture itself.

MERIT will be the order of the day. The successful distributor will demand merit of the producer, and the successful exhibitor will be largely instrumental in fixing this grade of merit. And the exhibitor, by the way, will not care how or through what policy he gets pictures of merit, but just that he gets them.

THE spirit of co-operation has appeared this year as never before. It is quite apparent that it will be a vital force for general good in the year 1916; and that it will be heightened by the work of the Motion Picture Board of Trade. In this general unification of interests and promotion of mutual good, MOTION PICTURE NEWS will aim to do its due share.

WILLIAM A. JOHNSTON.

"Progress," Manufacturers' Keynote For New Year

A Series of Interviews by William A. Johnston

H. E. AITKEN

NINETEEN HUNDRED AND SIXTEEN holds out promise of even greater achievement than the year now closing. The Triangle output of the next few months is going to make film history. A masterpiece a week sounds like a wild dream, yet that is just what the Triangle studios seem to be approaching.

The Triangle service won instantaneous and triumphant success upon its inauguration, November 7. It became a great institution in a day. The foundations of Triangle are broad and deep, it has won the confidence of the film world by presentations of the highest quality, and Directors Griffith, Ince and Sennett may be confidently expected to surpass in 1916 the best previous work they have done.

One of the most interesting developments of the coming year will be the rapid extension of America's film supremacy to foreign lands, a movement in which I am glad to say the Triangle will have a large share.

H. E. AITKEN, President, Triangle Film Corporation

J. A. BERST

THE General Film Company has elected new officers, and has adopted a new policy. This new policy is to a very large extent based upon co-operation with our customers, with the motion picture manufacturers and with our employees.

By co-operation with the exhibitor we intend to study more carefully what are his requirements, and provide for the same at a fair compensation.

It has been proven in the past that the manufacturers releasing through this company have released too many films every week. With a smaller number of releases, under our new policy, this company will be able to give better service.

Hence, our determination to market two different programs: A Regular Program, and a Unit Program. The first, composed of one, two and three reel subjects, will total 42 reels a week, while the Unit will consist of one, two, three and four reel subjects, the length being five or six reels in all. Therefore, the Regular and the Unit, together, will total 52 reels per week as a minimum.

J. A. Berst, President, General Film Company

WILLIAM FOX

THE policy of the Fox Film Corporation is that of specialization.

"Fox films," said Wm. Fox, "are made for the masses. First we select carefully the themes of broadest, deepest human appeal. Then, regardless of expense and painstaking attention to every detail in picture making, we make the very best possible pictures of these themes."

On this broad policy a most efficient producing organization has been built up at the head of which and supervising every detail from beginning to end, is the guiding hand of William Fox.

"This consistent selection of themes and this equally consistent success in quality production have given Fox Films a definite character. The name 'Fox' to all the public means a picture with a definite appeal produced better than any other pictures of similar themes.

"About January 1 Fox 'De Luxe' films will be introduced to the public simultaneously in all the large cities. The first will be Hall Caine's 'The Bondman'; the second the Annette Kellermann production now being made in Bermuda. These big productions will be marketed as big shows, with orchestras and all road show equipment."

J. R. FREULER

EXHIBITORS can expect broad developments in the Mutual policy of "service beyond the films." Nineteen sixteen will see many new applications of this policy.

The time has passed when an exhibitor can make money and build success by merely taking so many reels out of an exchange and putting them on the screen. The picture is just part of the entertainment. Most of the rest of it must come out of the exhibitor's genius. But the manufacturer and the distributor can help him, and this help in its many expressions and forms is the "service beyond the films."

I believe, too, that the year will see the elimination of a great many of the makers and promoters of what I call "bankrupt films"—those who have made a try at motion picture making because of the lure of "easy money." The end of 1916 probably will find the market cleared of a lot of this "junk" and "homeless feature" material which now tends to mislead the unwary exhibitor.

By John R. Freuler, President, Mutual Film Corporation

GENERAL MANAGER LOUIS J. GASNIER of Pathe states that his resolution for the New Year largely concerns the "Gold Rooster Plays."

"I am absolutely determined," he said, "to make Pathe Gold Rooster Plays the very best that can be produced. We have already secured the plays of A. H. Woods.

"I am now completing negotiations for the plays of other well-known theatrical producers, and expect before long to be able to announce the signing of very important contracts. We have already secured picture rights to many well-known books.

"In 1916 we will secure many more. The Pathe Gold Rooster Play must be made from the writings of the very best authors, played by the best artists and produced by the cleverest producers. That's my New Year's resolution."

W. W. HODKINSON

PARAMOUNT PICTURES will always be paramount pictures. "This," said W. W. Hodkinson, "you may announce for 1916, 1917 1918 and continuously, because we are looking that far ahead. You may also announce that in this statement is struck the big, dominant note of the Paramount policy.

"Paramount Pictures will always be what the name signifies—paramount for the following reason. Our contracts with the producer call for a definite grade of quality production. The exhibitor decides this grade by appraising each picture on our criticism blanks. If the exhibitors decide any class of pictures are not up to the Paramount standard, after a certain length of time as specified by our contracts, the producer is automatically corrected or eliminated.

"Therefore the Paramount program from the producing end is always open. We have no desire to close it. It has always been open. The only reason why it has been limited to certain producers thus far is because we have got paramount pictures from these producers. We have always looked for pictures from other sources, and are now beginning to get them in short reels on the outside.

"And being open on the producing end the program is open on the exhibitor end. He is the one who selects the producer. This may be the line of greatest resistance, but we believe it to be the logical line, the line for the future, and it is and will remain the Paramount policy.

W. W. IRWIN

THE primary policy of the V-L-S-E is service to the exhibitor, and the principal feature in our service is the open booking. Various exhibitors have various classes and kinds of people as a clientele; people with different ideas and temperaments.

Consequently, to ask an exhibitor to take every picture on a program is not giving service, for the reason that all pictures cannot be of uniform merit nor of uniform theme. The policy of this company is to invite, in fact almost to insist, that each exhibitor view the picture before he takes it. An exhibitor can have from our program what he wants, when he wants it and as long as he wants it.

This brings about longer runs; for when an exhibitor is always able to get pictures that are pleasing to his people, he is encouraged to run such pictures until the proper percentage of his people has seen them. In one instance a 21,000 population town ran a picture for nineteen consecutive days.

Another service policy is to give nine-tenths of the time of our sales force to the exhibitor, and one-tenth to the sale of our product.

We consider that pictures are a product which must be sold by showing the exhibitor how he is going to make money after he has purchased.

Moreover, the open booking policy makes each feature stand largely upon its own merits, and we have now arrived at a time in this industry, where the principle of the survival of the fittest must be applied.

Walter W. Irwin, General Manager, V-L-S-E

CARL LAEMMLE

CARL LAEMMLE, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, believes that the moving picture regular program is coming back into its own.

"The tired business man doesn't want to see a big feature play," said Mr. Laemmle, "with a deep and complicated plot after his hard day's work. He doesn't mind a one reel, two reel or even three reel, possibly four, but when it comes to five, six and seven, he cannot be enticed into the theatre.

"The feature has convinced the exhibitor that the moving picture is filling the need required of it, and for which it was actually created; to furnish an interesting, educational and instructive program of amusement to those who could not afford to attend the legitimate theatre and pay the high price for comfortable seats. But the people do not care to see a long production, for such performances can be seen at the legitimate theatres. The patrons of a picture show enjoy seeing a little bit of everything."

RICHARD A. ROWLAND

METRO PICTURES CORPORATION during the year 1916 will follow its fixed course in the making of better pictures and still better pictures. Quality first, regardless of price, continuity, good action, real drama, clean interesting stories that brim with healthful excitement, good acting, able direction and the best photography will mark Metro pictures throughout the year, because no other kind of pictures will be released by Metro.

Consistency has been the watchword of Metro, and exhibitors everywhere do not have to write that Metro has made good on its watchword.

Metro success has been due solely to the fact that Metro never has deceived its exhibitors.

Metro looks forward confidently on the New Year because it believes its business and producing methods are sound, square, alive and aiming only at the best.

Richard A. Rowland, President, Metro Pictures Corporation

LEWIS J. SELZNICK

THE distinct policy of the World Film Corporation for 1916 will be economical distribution.

"I started the Equitable," said Lewis J. Selznick, "to prove to other producers my policy of economical distribution—how it is possible and what it means. I believe that pictures can be distributed, that eventually they will be distributed, for one-fourth the present cost.

"The distributing firm that can accomplish this will attract many producers. It will enable the exhibitor to come to one firm for his entire program, selecting from this firm's large list a program of sufficient variety and quality.

"I am going to make the World Film Corporation exclusively a distributing organization, and I am going to make it along these lines of concentrated economical distribution."

What the Board of Trade Will Do in 1916

By J. W. Binder, Executive Secretary of the Board

IT is much easier to write history than prophecy. When "Motion Picture News" asks me to write what the Board of Trade will do in 1916, it is putting me up to some job. I might easily set down what the Board hopes to do; but I know that this would not be satisfying. So, if I must be a prophet, here goes.

In the first place, the Board of Trade will before May have enrolled as members more than a thousand of the leading men and concerns in every branch of the film industry, and in the allied supply and equipment lines.

IN the second place, the Board of Trade will fight censorship. Censorship, legalized and all other types or kinds, will be fought as never before.

Some of America's greatest writers will strip the monster bare of all pretense of cults and isms with which it is now cloaked. They will tear down the ramparts of specious and misleading arguments behind which it hides.

It will be fought by the Board of Trade wherever and whenever it raises its head. It will be fought in the national, state and city legislatures. It will be killed!

AND while the Board of Trade is fighting censorship, it will just as aggressively and just as earnestly fight within the ranks of the industry, the practices and policies which have given rise to it, which have been seized upon by the advocates of censorship as an excuse for their activities.

These practices, too, will be annihilated by the good sense of the right-thinking men in the industry banded together for common defense against the enemy from without or from within. Their slogan will be that of the Board of Trade: Progression, protection, promotion.

PROGRESSION: From the day-by-day, quick-dollar, haphazard, to-the-devil-with-tomorrow methods of producing, distributing and exhibiting pictures, to the standardized, know-your-cost, study-your-market, build-for-permanency methods of all other safely established businesses.

PROTECTION: From the exactions and demands of the grafting politician—whether national, state or municipal. From the assaults of the well-meaning but uninformed social and religious reformer.

FROM that much more dangerous class who, recognizing in the motion picture one of the most potent forms of thought expression, would throttle it because they fear it.

From those within the industry who would not hesitate to apply the unclean-picture, quick-dollar, stock-jobbing torch to the industry's great business edifice on the chance that in the resulting confusion they might snatch for themselves a handful of filth-laden gold. And protection from anything, within and from without, which endangers the good name and well-being of the industry.

PROMOTION: Of everything which will strengthen and standardize and upbuild this great art. Of methods and means of production, distribution, and of presenting the pictures to the public. Of fewer pictures, but better pictures. Of longer runs in the same theatre for those pictures. Of standards from moral, artistic and ethical standpoints in the pictures made by ourselves and not set by so-called censors. Of plans for the elimination of the tremendous waste that now permeates every branch of the industry.

ASIDE from these, the Board of Trade will, early in the year, likely occupy the top floor of the Board of Trade Building, at Forty-ninth street and Seventh avenue, New York. Here, besides its own offices, will be fitted up a library into which will be gathered all the literature of the art, from legal, technical and historical standpoints. Here members may come at any hour of the day and secure authoritative information on any phase of the industry. Here, too, the Bureau of Standards, the committee on statistics and other bureaus of the board will carry on their activities.

THE work of securing rate reductions in fire and other forms of insurance for its members, already well under way, will be carried through to completion. Modification of the railway rule governing the carriage of cased film on railroad trains and reduction of freight rates on transcontinental shipments of film, machines and other apparatus, will be carried through to a conclusion.

One of the biggest tasks will be the organization of the American manufacturers and distributors so that the great South American and other foreign markets now open will be captured.

THE modification of the Sherman law so as to permit combinations of competing or non-competing concerns for the purpose of getting foreign trade, in the shaping of which the Board of Trade has had a hand, will remove the most formidable obstacle in the way of getting this trade.

The organization of a credit department for the benefit of the members of the board will be begun immediately after the annual meeting in January. An arbitration committee has already been created to which members may refer their disputes.

A REAL trade show will be held some time during May or June, at which lectures by experts on different phases of the industry will pleasantly relieve the splendid treats from an entertainment standpoint which will be arranged.

Board of Trade dinners will be given at intervals which will be addressed by speakers of national and international reputation. The first of these will be held soon after the New Year.

If I Were a Producer

By S. L. Rothapfel

IF I were a producer, I would endeavor to build for myself a reputation for artistry and consistency.

If I were a producer, I would not use superlatives or call my pictures the "greatest ever made."

If I were a producer, I would market my pictures in the open, relying upon their merit to gain for them a substantial profit.

If I were a producer, rather than have a poor film come out under my trade mark, I would destroy it, or dispose of it in some manner, even though the loss entailed reduced my earnings at the end of the year.

IF I were a producer, I would endeavor, omitting the hypersensational, to be creative and original, aiming rather at tomorrow than today. My slogan would not be "Give the public what they want." Rather, I would create something that would draw the public to me.

If I were a producer, I would obtain stories and scenarios adaptable to the camera rather than some well-known or time-worn novel, with a successful or doubtful stage career. I would concentrate my efforts upon the tout ensemble and details of the production as a whole.

IF I were a producer, I would select as my directors artists, gentlemen of refinement and education, with a knowledge of life. I would either supervise every detail of production from the selection of a theme to the cutting and assembling of the negative, or I would have men as competent as myself to act for me. I would select these men as carefully as editors and artists are selected. I would require of each the highest grade of intelligence and culture.

IF I were a producer, I would credit my patrons with intelligence equal to my own. I would strive for subtlety and suggestion rather than realism, with, of course, some exceptions. I would remember always that my first principle is to entertain in a wholesome, uplifting manner.

If I were a producer, I would see to it that the stagey, melodramatic poseur and his acting gave place to the real actor.

IF I were a producer, I would eliminate as far as possible from my representations repulsive creatures, such as reptiles.

If I were a producer, I would seek the atmosphere, artistry and environment required by the public, in the product upon which my best efforts would be expended.

If I were a producer, I would not vilify my contemporaries, but seek co-operation to promote the best interests of the industry as a whole.

IF I were a producer, I would specialize. That is to say, I would aim to produce a certain kind of picture better than any other producer. I would have a very definite aim and policy.

If I were a producer, I would regard the motion picture as an art in itself, different and distinct from every other art. I would not be swayed by the drama. I would not copy the stage.

IF I were a producer, I would regard my art so highly that I would not permit coarseness, either by suggestion or vivid portrayal, to have any place in any production which bore my name.

If I were a producer, I would remember always that the story is the picture's life blood. I would remember always that unless the story is good, the picture cannot be good. I would keep in mind always this fact: The great pictures already produced have been built upon great stories.

IF I were a producer, I would regard my scenario department as second to no other in importance. I would see to it that this department, under perfect organization, approached with an open mind every script offered it. I would not countenance for an instant the rejection of stories for any reason other than lack of merit.

To this end, if I were a producer, I would encourage writers who wish to devote themselves to the art of the photoplay, remembering that the photoplay must develop its own art.

IF I were a producer, I would remember, in this connection, that the photoplay will not develop its own art unless and until it develops its own writers, who will understand the screen, who will fit their imaginations to screen art, just as writers hitherto have created, in the novel form, the essay, the poem, the drama.

If I were a producer, therefore, I would be the first to recognize latent talent in the would-be screen writer, just as I would be quick to recognize talent in an actor or an actress. I would not deceive myself into thinking that the photoplay can long prosper or develop with perfect mechanics, and poor stories.

I WOULD study the picture and its many wonderful and unknown possibilities of expression. I would create for the picture.

If I were a producer, I would remember the best of the past, but I would keep my eyes and imagination upon the future.

If I Were An Exhibitor

By Richard A. Rowland, President of the Metro Pictures Corporation

"IF I Were an Exhibitor" was selected as the title of this series of answers, and I must explain that I am an exhibitor, but as I also am a producer and a marketer of pictures, I am willing to write from the title if anything I may say will serve to aid other exhibitors in presenting motion pictures under present day conditions. Therefore—

IF I were an exhibitor my first attention would be to the service of pictures that I presented in my theatre. I would take nobody's word for it. I would try them all out and by a process of elimination find the pictures that would please my patrons. Once I had made my choice I would stick to that service.

IF I were an exhibitor I would advertise individually every feature picture that was to be exhibited in my theatre and I would use the local newspapers for as much space as I could possibly afford.

If I were an exhibitor I would invariably advertise the brand name of the service I had chosen, because if I had a consistent service I would wish to share in the prestige of that service and I would wish to guarantee my patrons in advance, by showing the brand name prominently, that they might expect quality pictures in my house.

IF I were an exhibitor, I would advertise, in addition to using the local newspapers and billboards, with proper publicity matter sent direct to the homes of my patrons and to my possible patrons not less than once each week.

If I were an exhibitor I would endeavor to so work up my patronage in regular, consistent feature pictures that I would not have to depend on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays to make my profits with so-called "knockout pictures."

IF I were an exhibitor I would avoid stag pictures as I would a plague, because although there may be temporary profits through their use, in the long run stag pictures stamp a house as unfit for ladies and children, and this is bad business. The trouble with stag pictures is that each one must be more stag than the one preceding, and their progress is inevitably toward the sewer.

If I were an exhibitor I would insist on clean, interesting pictures with a good story, good continuity, good photography, good direction and good acting. I would feel that if I was paying for the best I had a right to expect consistency and I would be satisfied with nothing else.

IF I were an exhibitor I would not demand a masterpiece in every release, because I would know that no one program in the world, and probably not the combined programs of the picture field, could supply it.

If I were an exhibitor I would remember that no national advertising would be sufficient to keep people coming to my theatre and that the chief advertising responsibility rested with me.

If I were an exhibitor I would have a neatly uniformed house staff, the best of ventilation, comfortable seats, polite treatment of patrons and, above all, cleanliness.

IF I were an exhibitor I would be content with nothing short of perfect projection on the best screen that money could buy.

If I were an exhibitor I would stage my pictures in their own atmosphere, because I know that a good picture is always a better picture when properly presented.

If I were an exhibitor I would give extraordinary attention to the music, because I have seen good pictures spoiled with bad music and fair pictures made into positive successes by appropriate music.

IF I were an exhibitor I would remember that no matter how good my pictures were I could not expect the public to know about them unless I told them, and in the most conspicuous manner, all about each release, and well in advance of the showing.

If I were an exhibitor I would not permit a releasing company to sell me printer's ink in lieu of good pictures or persuade me to take service for large money, on the ground that I would be regarded as a high player and a good sport by so doing.

IF I were an exhibitor I would have a creed that would be made up of these three items:

LOCAL ADVERTISING,
GOOD PICTURES,
MORE LOCAL ADVERTISING.

If I were an exhibitor I would not be interested in the ancient history of pictures or their makers. Rather would I seek pictures that met the new demands for quality, consistency, drama and art, and when I had found them I would tie to them hard and fast, and advertise, and advertise—and advertise.

Why National Advertising Is Necessary

By William W. Hodkinson, President, Paramount Pictures Corporation

WHY National Advertising? is the question put to me by William A. Johnston, himself a man of long advertising experience, who, looking upon the motion picture business from a different point of view from mine, has yet frequently come to the same conclusion. I feel that in answering it I shall have the attention of one who thoroughly understands the proposition, and the belief will encourage me to deal in particulars.

THIRTY-SEVEN daily newspapers throughout the country and magazines of national circulation, such as the Saturday Evening Post, the Ladies' Home Journal, Woman's Home Companion, Ladies' World, and American Sunday Magazine, now carry our advertising in a campaign which will cost us more than $250,000. Since our first list was made up many newspapers have seen the light with regard to motion pictures.

WE have every hope of extending the campaign to other cities and to more mediums in those where we need them at the earliest possible time.

In these publications of large and high-class circulation announcements of Paramount Pictures which will appeal to the people they reach are carired.

The fundamental idea behind our campaign is that upon which Paramount is based, namely, building attendance for Paramount theatres.

To do this the mountain trade mark of Paramount must be popularized nationally and the exhibitor must be enabled to "tie up" to the company's advertising.

AS was explained in a recent issue of Paramount Progress, it is pounding in many ways and over and over again, year after year, that has caused the words Uneeda, Kodak, Royal Baking Powder, to be worth more to their owners than the factories themselves in which these products are made. A trade mark or a trade name in itself has only potential value. It becomes real value only in so far as it becomes a trade mark in popular demand, and, therefore, represents large sales possibilities.

THE advertisements of Paramount Pictures are seen approximately by 55,000,000 people.

As a concrete example of just how advertising affects a particular locality, take the case of Grand Rapids, Michigan. Grand Rapids, with a population of 112,571, has 9,891 native white families, who subscribe to publications like the Ladies' Home Journal and the Woman's Home Companion. The publications in which Paramount is advertising extensively go into Grand Rapids as follows:

Saturday Evening Post.....5,691 copies each week
Ladies' Home Journal.....3,665 copies monthly
American Sunday Magazine.4,170 copies monthly
Woman's Home Companion..1,926 copies monthly
Ladies' World.....3,787 copies monthly

Total 19,239

IN other words, there are 19,239 copies of each issue of these publications going into Grand Rapids, or twice as many copies as there are native white families. Practically every desirable family in the town is getting one or more of these publications and is reading about Paramount Pictures.

In addition, the Paramount newspaper campaign affects Grand Rapids in this way: No advertising is carried in the local papers, but Paramount advertisements appear in the Chicago Tribune, of which 244 copies go into Grand Rapids each day and 400 copies Sunday; in the Detroit Free Press, of which 365 copies go into Grand Rapids each day.

CINCINNATI may be cited as a further example. In this city of 364,463 people, there are 13,869 copies of the Saturday Evening Post each week; 765 copies of the Ladies' Home Journal; 1,158 copies of the American Sunday Magazine; 3,693 copies of the Woman's Home Companion, and 4,990 copies of the Ladies' World.

Three newspapers outside Cincinnati, in which Paramount advertises—the Pittsburgh Gazette-Times, the Chicago Tribune, and the Cleveland Plain-Dealer go into 163, 140 and 62 Cincinnati homes, respectively. In addition to that Paramount advertises in the Cincinnati Enquirer, which has a circulation in the city of 115,000 daily.

To benefit fully from this campaign it is necessary, I repeat, for the exhibitor to "tie up" to the trade mark.

HE does this, first, by showing in front of his theatre the Paramount one-sheet. This sheet says: "We show Paramount Pictures," and the Paramount trade mark is in a conspicuous place on it. People passing the theatre are reminded that they can see there the pictures about which they have read and which they may have seen at the best theatre on their visit to New York or any other big city.

FINALLY, he makes use of the newspaper cuts of advertisements, also furnished him free, and prepared by an expert. These cuts, placed in the local newspapers, are mortised so that the exhibitor can insert his copy in an advertisement constructed in harmony with the constructive policy of the Paramount advertising his patrons have read in national publications, the Paramount trade mark, again, being prominently displayed.

THE exhibitor also displays the Paramount twenty-four sheet, furnished free of charge by the manufacturer, so that his town has some permanent stands advertising the fact that he shows Paramount Pictures.

Overproduction Cry Not So Very Alarming

By Arthur S. Kane

RUMORS of overproduction and overcrowding in the industry fill the air. At the same time if one were permitted to look at the books of many concerns which view conditions with alarm one would find them in a healthy condition. It should be some comfort to those not old in the business to know that there has never been a time for the last eight years at least to my certain knowledge when the Other Concern was not going broke. So and So had been refused another loan. Such and Such had been spared a few days by providentially getting a few thousands from a new source.

MIND you, this right in the face of accumulating plethoric bankrolls themselves. They could understand making money themselves but could not see how the Other Fellow got along. So it always has been, is now and ever shall be apparently in the photoplay industry.

Eight years ago a manufacturing concern of which I was general manager was refused admission into the ranks of the makers at their organization because there were too many manufacturers already in the business, they said.

MANUFACTURERS now are as the sands of the seashore compared to the handful there were then. That was the time of wondering how long the "craze" would last. The new diversion was compared to everything else in the amusement field and it was shown that styles and tastes run in cycles. In theatricals for awhile everyone wanted stock, then vaudeville, then something else. Roller skating died out over night; so would pictures.

ONE manufacturer who has since made his millions, openly declared that not one cent that came out of his business should go back into it. The remark typified his lack of confidence in the future of the business. The difficulty was not to find successful enterprises then but failures. Two or three were forced out of business by combinations. But I do not remember any failures at all.

YES, there is overproduction and the crowding at some of the levels is terrific. But do you notice any elbowing at the top? It is in the middle and especially at the bottom where the greatest pressure from too much and too many occurs. Quality is not being overproduced, and certainly efficient distribution is not overdone.

INDIVIDUALS with ideas will succeed. Those who do something for the business will have something done for them. If nothing is put in, it is likely nothing will be taken out. The other day a man was discussing with a manufacturer the possibility of advancing him $15.000 or $20,000 on each production as part payment of the amount to become due on his percentage. The maker quickly rejoined, "Then I would have to make subjects for $7,000 or $8,000."

SUCH a case, it seems to me, is absolutely hopeless. The man could not be a real producer, no matter how long he kept at it.

A year ago a certain sales manager, newly come to the business, told me he was in to grab as much as he could and get out. Since then that man has had his bumps and they have done him a world of good. He is in a fair way to become a convert and help in the upbuilding of motion pictures.

HERE let me say a word for the much flouted "film man." It was the penchant of this manager and is the fashion of most newcomers in the exchange field to scorn the "film men" in their organizations. "Look at what this roundhead out in ——— branch has done"; "What can you expect with a 'film man' in charge of ——— office?" and the like. At the same time the branch managers may be receiving all kind of conflicting instructions from the home office written by different departments, or in some instances by the same department.

ONE of the most earnest of "film men," a man who never thought merely of the present but projected his mind far into the future, asked his supervising officer: "What of the morrow?" Then he proceeded to outline many ideas. They looked revolutionary. They really were evolutionary. "What can I do with the material with which I have to work?" quoth the boss. "First we have to get decent managers." He never did get them.

BUT the constructive thinker took largely of the same "material," the same "film men," and, putting the identical ideas to work, astounded the country.

I hold no brief for the "film man" except to maintain that experience is not a detriment. Given two men of equal ability, one knowing the film business and the other not, the skilled exchange man has at least a year's start of his rival.

THE term has been brought into disrepute by the adventurers who flocked into the "game," as they call it, when it was new. When I am employing men I instinctively shrink back when an applicant comes into my office and begins to talk about "the moving picture game." Some, who have won great success in the past, may have regarded it as a game, but those who come now must give it considerably more thought and attention than a game or gamble.

To the Big Man Back of the Company

By Jacob Wilk, Manager Authors Associated Agency, New York City

YOU, the big man back of the company, should make the scenario department your own particular pet, because you will find greater opportunities for improvement in that department than in any other branch of your organization. You have overlooked that branch just as many of your competitors have. Were you to personally pay as much attention to that department as you do to the other angles of the business, you would solve the disturbing problem of distributing the cost of production.

YOU would be able to show your studio directors how you want the scenario made and you would make sure that they did not tamper with the stories once they had been given to them.

If you gave the scenario department the personal attention it deserves the unwarranted delay and procrastination that is usual would come to an end, because the author and his representative would be treated with the consideration that is due them.

THEY would not be told that the scripts have been read when they have not been looked at, neither would they be compelled to wait weeks and months for an answer while the dust is accumulating on their scenarios. There is a film company that gives you a reply in a week after it receives a script. Instead of being the exception this should be the rule. Scripts would not be lost or placed in the hands of irresponsible individuals who forget where they leave them.

ONCE the story is accepted and the price agreed upon, there should not be a tiresome delay before the papers are prepared and signed and a check given to close the deal. There is no reason why authors and reputable agents are made to waste days and days, as at present, in getting consideration for their material.

TO date there has been a sufficiency of photoplay material, and there has been no reason for conservation of the sources; but the enormous output of features has eaten into this supply at an alarming rate; and now it is evident to the far-sighted producer that the original scenario writer must be encouraged. Just the contrary has been the condition in the photoplay world. The writer who submits a story that is worthy of production is frequently not treated with the consideration due him.

IT was the self-satisfied, blind attitude of the theatrical world toward new play writers that helped greatly to make it easier for pictures to get the terrific hold they have on the public. Had theatrical managers welcomed the work of new playmakers instead of consistently closing their theatres to them, the public would not have tired of the theatre so readily and found the motion pictures so popular.

IT may be wise for the picture producer to profit by the experience of the theatrical world and nourish the new and younger brains that want to write and produce photoplays.

When you personally take an active interest in the scenario department you will find room for improvement in the personnel of the department. It frequently happens that one gets a report on a manuscript today that is vastly different from the opinion rendered three months ago.

WE had the pleasure of selling a story to a producer who had six weeks previously sent back the story to the author with the perfunctory card stating that his material did not fit the needs of the producer; just as though there was a closed season for good stories. Every time your scenario department gets a story that is worthy of consideration you can make no better investment than buying it and placing it in your safe for future use.

STOCKS and property may increase in value, and they may not, but there is no question about the increase in value of scripts. That increase has been a gradual one. The day of the ten dollar script is past, and the day of the scenario writer who makes pin money writing is on the wane. The men and women who are to write the photoplays of the future will devote themselves entirely to that work, just as Pinero, Sheldon, Hopwood, Broadhurst, have to the theatre today.

THERE are a number of writers who are getting fairly good prices for their work now, but they should have more than fifty dollars a reel for making an adaptation and one hundred dollars a reel for original stories. They will do better work when they are able to devote more time to the subject in hand. But it is not fair to ask a writer to work twice as hard as usual without paying him proportionately. Today it is not unusual to ask for an adaptation in three days.

HOW can anyone work out all the possibilities of a five-reel feature in that time? They are barely able to skim the surface in that time. You tie up $20,000 in a production and you begrudge the scenario writer a week to give you the basis upon which you are to make a successful or unsuccessful feature. How many times must the conscientious director stop in the middle of a picture to work out some better handling of the story?

THE big brains in the past have been devoted to distributing pictures; in the future brains will have their widest scope in the scenario departments. Now that you have the means of selling pictures, you will see that you have the right sort to sell.

Demand for Film News in Dailies Is Lasting

By P. R. Plough, Photoplay Editor, Philadelphia "Evening Ledger"

THE first item in any article on co-operation between the newspaper and the exhibitor must be a word of appreciation for men like W. A. Johnston, of Motion Picture News, and others on trade papers and manufacturers' press sheets who have steadily urged the theatre proprietors to go to the newspapers for publicity.

The stage learned the lesson of printers' ink a good many years back. It has been a valuable lesson. Co-operation between the press and the legitimate theatre owners has cut two ways, and the situation is just the same as regards motion pictures.

THE advertising of the local houses assures the newspaper owner of something more valuable than the mere weekly check. It assures him of the stability of this big, broad field of interest embraced by an audience almost as extensive as his subscription list; it assures him that motion pictures are no "piking" matter. They have come to stay. The people want them. They have solid financial backing.

THE newspaper editor who cultivates a good photoplay department is not only making a bid for theatre advertising; he is keeping his readers interested and adding to their numbers.

When the Evening Ledger was hardly out of its swaddling clothes, it appreciated the growing popular interest in the photoplay. The first theatre advertisement came from J. J. McCarthy, of the Epoch Producing Company and "The Birth of a Nation." J. Allen Boone, then of Lubin's, brought us the first advertisement of a producer.

THE Evening Ledger began tentatively with a serial, but soon began to cultivate the much more varied and appealing field of news and personalities—matter relative to a larger circle of theatres and playgoers.

The beginnings were small, but on June 20 the Evening Ledger made the experiment of a special Photoplay Section in place of one of its regular Saturday pages.

THE returns in public interest as well as advertising were so promising that with this fall the paper began to put out regularly each Saturday a special, magazine-form Amusement Section devoted to photoplays and the drama.

In the daily photoplay department and the Saturday magazine the Evening Ledger aims to cover the news and personalities of photoplay land.

NEW producing corporations and new films receive record and comment. New line-ups in the distributing companies are interpreted in their probable effects in filmdom. Descriptions of the latest technical developments alternate with newsy gossip of the doings of the players.

Pictures of the players, scenes from photoplays, novel episodes in the taking of films and the whole varied pictorial side of the art of cinematography are presented in half-tone every day.

ALL this, of course, reacts to the benefit of the local theatres showing live films by the live companies.

In the matter of handling the feature films the Evening Ledger thinks it has hit upon the fairest method to exhibitor, producer and public.

It doesn't pretend to review the houses advertising either as regular theatres in the amusement columns or in the special section, "Prominent Photoplay Presentations."

THERE are too many changes to make genuine, impartial criticism possible. Instead, the editor or his assistant sees the more important releases at private screenings and describes those of real merit and interest. In this work, as in such else that concerns local theatres, the Evening Ledger has found the Philadelphia organization of the Stanley Booking Company of great aid.

THERE are many other angles of co-operation. I shall mention only a few. One of the most valuable, to reader and exhibitor alike, is the Photoplay Chart, printed Mondays and showing in tabular form all the film bookings of the coming week.

Abe L. Einstein, publicity manager of the Stanley Company, made the very worth-while suggestion of the theatres' co-operating by showing slides which tell the audience to look for the program in the Evening Ledger each Monday.

THE information bureau at "Ledger Central" for the use of the public as well as the exhibitor supplies full data upon all subjects pertaining to the industry. Exhibitors are furnished blanks for the week's program similar to those furnished by the exchanges, return envelopes and other similar matter.

Election, baseball and other scores are supplied to theatres by direct wire.

All the advertising is uniform and each exhibitor has the same amount of space as another.

THE Evening Ledger was the first newspaper to join the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America.

There are a score of openings for work like this which the press can embrace. They all mean more readers for the paper, and more playgoers for the theatres.

The enterprising exhibitor is the man who advertises—and also the man who prospers.

GLIMPSES OF PAULINE FREDERICK, VINCENT SERRANO, MARY PICKFORD AND MARGUERITE CLARK IN FAMOUS PLAYERS PRODUCTIONS

HAMILTON BACK IN KALEM "HAM" COMEDIES

Lloyd V. Hamilton, the "Ham" of Kalem's "Ham and Bud" comedies, is once more in the harness, having started work last week at the Kalem California studios. "Ham" steps before the camera again after an absence of close to two months caused by an injury to his leg which kept him in St. Catherine's Hospital, Santa Monica.

During the last two weeks "Ham," unable to keep away from the atmosphere of the studio, has hobbled about on crutches lending his advice and encouragemnt to the making of "The Caretaker's Dilemma," and "The Missing Mummy," comedies, featuring Bud Duncan and Ethel Teare.

A gala feast, tendered by the players in the comedy company, marked "Ham's" return to active work. At the height of the festivities, Hamilton Smith, the recently appointed Kalem Western representative, sprung a surprise he had taken along with him from the New York offices. It consisted of a handsome album, the three hundred pages covered with letters from exhibitors requesting news concerning "Ham's" injury and expressing their anxiety for his early return to the screen.

TOURNEUR USES STOCK FARM SCENES FOR "THE GENIUS"

If numbers add to the impressiveness of a film drama, M. Maurice Tourneur will have something most impressive to offer in his next picture, "The Genius," starring George Beban, on which he is working at present in Fort Lee, N. J.

Many of the scenes were made on the stock farm of Senator W. Hunter Vaughn, near Montgomery, Ala., and there are employed nearly one thousand extra people. 1,200 sheep, 300 head of cattle, 200 horses a great prize flock of white turkeys and a numerous prize litter of white pigs.

Hoyt, High-Priced Scenario Man, Goes to Metro

He Is a Veritable Nestor for Length of Time His Pen Has Been in the Service of the Screen, While He Is a Wizard at Beating Old Father Time in Quick Output

HARRY C. HOYT, who has had more than four hundred scenarios accepted and produced, and is said to be the highest salaried writer in the profession, has joined the Metro staff, and in the future will write exclusively for that company. Until he was attracted to the Metro forces Mr. Hoyt was scenario editor for the Fox company, and before that was on the scenario staff of Kalem and Biograph.

Mr. Hoyt's record as a scenario author dates from the time when he began writing for motion pictures ten years ago, when he was still a student at Columbia University. He continued writing after he went to Yale, where he was graduated with a view of taking up the practice of law.

The increasing demand for his scripts prompted him to give up his proposed career as a barrister, and devote all his time and energy to writing.

For several years Mr. Hoyt, who lives at the Yale Club, was a puzzle to his friends. He went into the motion picture business at a period in which actors, authors, theatrical managers and others were inclined to sneer and scoff at the business.

Consequently, Mr. Hoyt kept his own counsel in the matter, and kept plugging away. Even today, there are few of his friends that know the profession he is following. He is extremely modest and reticent.

Among other things Mr. Hoyt wrote the first picture in which Mary Pickford was featured. In fact, there is not a single artist, of any note, in the motion picture business, that has not appeared in at least one of his successful photoplays.

Under high pressure he recently made a picturization of Booth Tarkington's famous novel, "The Turmoil," for Rolfe-Metro, in thirty-six hours. Edgar Jones, who directed the "The Turmoil," was obliged to have the script within that time, or else call for a postponement of the production. Mr. Hoyt proved equal to the task, though he was obliged to survive on three hours sleep, and numerous quarts of black coffee.

Mr. Hoyt wrote the scenario of "The Man Without a Conscience," in which Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne will be starred, and which is now in process of production for an early release on the Metro program. This feature is being made by the Quality Pictures Corporation. Mr. Hoyt has also scenaroized the new and popular novel, "Big Tremaine," which Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne will also use for their starring vehicle.

"Rose of the Alley," an original five-part feature, in which little Mary Miles Minter is starred for the Metro program, is also the work of Mr. Hoyt. Mr. Hoyt also picturized "Dimples," a five-part production in which Miss Minter will be starred.

Mr. Hoyt was born in Minneapolis, Minn., and after attending high school there was graduated from the University of Minnesota, and then came East to attend Columbia University, and afterward Yale. He has been engaged in every branch of the motion picture business, save publicity and the actual printing of films.

Three Masterpictures a Week Offered by Mutual

This Addition of "De Luxe Edition" Subjects Gives the Company a Total of Six Multiple Features Every Seven Days —Releases Under New Title Will Begin January 17 with Picturizations of Famous Plays, World-Famed Books, and Also Original Scenarios from Writers of Note

THREE Mutual Masterpictures, De Luxe Edition every week—each in five reels; an additional three reel feature for the Mutual's $8,000,000 program—a total of three 3-reel features a week—these are the high lights in an announcement of new and important increase in the output of the Mutual Film Corporation, just issued from the New York offices by President John R. Freuler.

This development gives the Mutual a total of six multiple reel feature releases a week.

"Masterpictures, De Luxe Edition," is a re-cast of the established title name of "Masterpicture." They will be released beginning the week of January 17. They will be picturizations of famous plays, world-famed books and works of fiction, and original scenarios by noted authors.

Big Production Increase

Big increases in productive capacity have been made by the large group of manufacturers represented in the Mutual group.

A large number of stageland and screenland stars have been put under contract for work in the array of additional companies which have been organized by the Mutual manufacturers.

Studios have been built and new facilities for the printing, handling and shipment of film have been added. Work of preparation for the announcement just made has been quietly under way for months.

"I am speaking with a properly conservative estimate of values when I declare that this is the biggest development that has come in the history of the motion picture industry," President Freuler observed.

"The vast increase in the Mutual output is the expression of a carefully evolved plan to meet the ever developing demands for higher quality, better pictures, more appealing entertainment.

"When a few months ago we announced the new Mutual program and thereupon proceeded to deliver it as an all-star, all-feature product, we found the exhibitors of the nation ready and anxious to receive it.

Mutual Not Done Growing

"We were not content merely with that announcement and the resulting product. It will be recalled that not long ago I was at some pains to tell the exhibitors of this country that the Mutual never would be done growing. That is just what the announcement of today means—just another great big long stride ahead."

Among the new Mutual Masterpictures, De Luxe Edition, in the release schedule now immediately ahead are:

"Silas Marner," George Eliot's famous book, featuring Frederic Warde; "The Other Side of the Door," Lucia Chamberlain's famous novel, featuring Harold Lockwood; "Vengeance is Mine," featuring Crane Wilbur; "The Bait," featuring William Clifford and Betty Hart; "The Idol of the Stage," featuring Malcolm Williams; "The Five Faults of Flo," featuring Florence LaBadie; "Lord Loveland Discovers America," featuring Arthur Maude and Constance Crawley, and "As a Woman Sows," featuring Gertrude Robinson.

The Masterpictures De Luxe, scheduled for release in the first few weeks include picturized works of some of the best names connected with classic and popular fiction.

In "Silas Marner" Frederic Warde has its leading role, as the bent and twisted miser whose life of selfishness is changed by the influence of a child. Mr. Warde has been for years appearing in Shakesperian roles.

The picture was directed by Mr. Warde's son, Ernest Warde, who has for some time been connected with the Thanhouser directing force, but who had never before had the opportunity to direct a film in which his father appeared.

"Silas Marner" marks the elder Warde's motion picture debut.

Florence La Badie's "Faults"

Another five-part photodrama produced by the Thanhouser Corporation is entitled "The Five Faults of Flo." It features Florence La Badie, the Thanhouser star. The company of Thanhouser players, with Miss La Badie at the head, spent several weeks in Connecticut filming this interesting glimpse into feminine psychology.

"The Other Side of the Door," the American Film Corporation's first Masterpicture De Luxe, from Lucia Chamberlain's book, is a story of California in the early days, and is possessed of all the picturesque setting of 1865.

Quaint touches of realism are added by the introduction of an old horse street car, built in 1840, by the ancient city hall of Monterey, California's first capitol, and by the attractive costuming of the period in which the story is laid.

Harold Lockwood and May Allison, in the leading roles, are particularly well cast. In support of them are William Stowell and Orral Humphreys.

Arthur Maude Directs

The characterization of Lord Loveland by Arthur Maude, in "Lord Loveland Discovers America," who directs as well, is given with peculiar understanding of the eccentricities of the Englishman, since Mr. Maude is himself from the British Isles, and has not been in America so long that he has forgotten English mannerisms. Constance Crawley, as Lesley Dearmer, the American heiress, gives Mr. Maude support.

The well known stageland stars have been added to the forces of the Gaumont Company at their studio at Jacksonville, Fla., to play the leading roles in the first Gaumont releases of the De Luxe Edition. Malcolm Williams has been engaged for the production of "The Idol of the Stage," which will be the first of this new brand of Mutual output to be released upon the market, and will appear January 17. Gertrude Robinson, went to Florida to play the leading role in "As a Woman Sows."

At the Horsley studios at Los Angeles, Crane Wilbur is playing the leading role in a Masterpicture De Luxe entitled "Vengeance is Mine!" William Clifford, the newly acquired star of the Horsley contingent, is starring in a production using the Bostock animals, "The Biat," which was written by Theodosia Harris.

Changes at the Studios

At all the studios where Mutual Masterpictures De Luxe have been quietly nearing completion, consequential changes have been under way.

The recent enlargement of the American Film Corporation's plant at Santa Barbara, the erection of the glass-covered studio, and increase in technical equipment which meant the building of a three-story property and transformer building, a scenery dock and painting, finishing and upholstering rooms, was made so that the American's offerings to the Mutual tri-weekly Masterpicture De Luxe release could be readily produced.

It was partly to permit outdoor work, and partly to allow for the enlarging of the Gaumont Company's Flushing studio so that it, too, would be able to meet the new De Luxe Edition requirements, that the two Gaumont companies were sent to Jacksonville, Fla.

Only last week was announced the proposed acquisition of a third Gaumont Company of stock players, which will combine with the present company in the support of the well known Broadway stars featured in Gaumont releases.

More Horsley Players

David Horsley has added several new members to his force at Los Angeles. In addition he has tripled the efficiency of his studio by adding a new indoor studio and indoor work shops, which will give his directors 20,000 additional feet of floor space. Betty Hart, Gypsy Abbott, Brooklyn Keller, all newcomers to the Horsley company, are well known picture players. William Bowman and Ulysses Davis have recently been added to the directing force and Frank Stammer and Frank Crompton have been put in charge of the technical department.

Two of the Thanhouser stock companies have already gone south to Florida, and a third company will leave shortly for Hudson Bay, while work will continue at the New Rochelle studios as usual. Mr. Thanhouser promises a great variety of Masterpicture material from his widely scattered forces.

The expansion of the Mutual program brings in an additional three-reeler, giving the program a total of three a week. This gives the Mutual with the three Masterpictures, De Luxe Edition, a total of six feature releases a week. Among the new three reel features to come are "Lillo of the Sulu Seas," "Across the Sunlit Sea," "The Extra Man and the Milk-fed Lion," and "Water Stuff."

COMMITTEE ON WEST COAST TO REPRESENT BOARD OF TRADE

The Motion Picture Board of Trade of America has just announced the appointment of a committee to represent its activities in southern California. The committee includes Mabel Condon, J. C. Jessen, Clark Irvine and Kenneth A. O'Hara.

The committee held its first meeting last Tuesday and organized by electing Miss Condon as its presiding officer. Its duties will be to represent the Board of Trade in its campaigns for members and to take charge of Pacific coast publicity as well as to keep in close telegraphic touch with headquarters in New York on all matters affecting the motion picture industry as a whole.

The first activities will be in following up a list of approximately five hundred invitations that have been sent out to prospective members in southern California. This list covers all branches of the film industry and is already producing flattering results.

Specially engraved stationery for the use of the committee containing their names and addresses on the regular stationery of the board has been prepared.

The constitutent members of the committee are so well known throughout the industry that it is hardly necessary to say that Miss Condon is a free-lance correspondent and publicity writer, while Mr. Jessen and Mr. Irvine represent respectively the News and the World on the Pacific Coast, while Mr. O'Hara is the advertising and publicity expert for the New York Motion Picture Corporation.

ANOTHER FLOOR AT 25 WEST 45th ST. FOR PATHE

Owing to the great increase of business Pathé has taken the twelfth floor at 25 West 45th street, New York, and is now occupying two entire floors in that fine new building.

The bookkeeping and clerical staff will be located on the twelfth floor, and the executive offices on the eleventh.

Only Three Vitagraphs a Week After December 20

Monday, Friday and Saturday Days Fixed for the Releases—Monday Is a "Personally Picked Program," Comprising Four-Part Drama and Single-Reel Comedy

COMMENCING with Monday, December 20, the Vitagraph company will inaugurate a new policy, releasing their output only on three days a week, Monday, Friday and Saturday. Monday's releases will consist of a one-reel comedy and a locked-reel program.

This will be known as "A Personally Picked Program," comprising a four-part drama and a single reel comedy. Friday's release will be the same as before with a single reel Sidney Drew comedy, and a three-part Broadway Star Feature every Saturday. This change will bring the Vitagraph output up to ten reels a week, with three of comedy and seven of drama for the initial week.

The first personally picked program announced for Monday, December 20, will consist of "On Her Wedding Night," a four-part drama, and the one-reel comedy, "The Patent Food Conveyor." The regular release is "Levy's Seven Daughters," a single reel comedy.

"On Her Wedding Night" is a dramatic story of the murder of a man on his wedding night while speaking over the 'phone to the girl he was going to make his wife. The case bears on one of the guests, who is an amateur detective.

He succeeds in clearing up the mystery after many trying experiences. Eugene Mullin wrote the story, and it was produced under the direction of William Humphrey, with an excellent cast, including Edith Storey, Antonio Moreno, Carolyn Birch, Charles Kent, William Dunn and Louise Beaudet.

The single reel comedy accompanying this drama is "The Patent Food Conveyor," written by C. Graham Baker, and produced by C. Jay Williams, with a cast comprising Kate Price, Harry Fisher and Charles Eldridge. The other comedy release of this day is "Levy's Seven Daughters," produced by Wally Van from the script of J. G. Nattinger, Edward Elkas, Eulalie Jensen, Edwina Robbins and others, will be seen in this comedy.

For Friday, December 24, a one-part comedy is announced for release entitled "Is Christmas a Bore?" featuring Sidney Drew. The story was written by James Montgomery Flagg and produced by Mr. Drew. This is an appropriate comedy for the yuletide season.

The story deals with the thought of Christmas boring on a man's mind, after being wished a Merry Christmas by his mother, wife and friends, to all of whom he pays no attention.

He begins to realize the bad behavior toward his mother and becomes remorseful. He wakes up to find it all a dream, and on Christmas morning rejoices in wishing everyone "A Merry Christmas." Mr. Drew is assisted is the laugh-making by Mr. Sidney Drew and Mary Maurice.

A three-part Broadway Star Feature is announced for release on Saturday, December 25, entitled "The Thirteenth Girl." This drama is taken from the magazine story of "Where Did Lottie Go?" and was produced under the direction of Theodore Marston.

The script is written around the hardships of a poor girl given a position of a model in a fashionable department store. Her beauty attracts the attention of the junior partner, also that of the head art advisor.

The girl has many trying and exciting experiences.

The story ends with the death of the father, caused by the shock of his son's scandal and the son's suicide. A life long friendship begins between the pretty model and the girl the junior partner was supposed to marry.

Arline Pretty as The Thirteenth Girl, and Robert Whitworth as the junior partner, will be seen.

Quaker City Is Scene of Gay Dance and Entertainment

Philadelphia Filmland Meets the Town's Fandom in Funland at Turngeminde Hall, Where Thousands of People in and Out of the Industry Gather for a Good Time—Lillian Lorraine Leads the Grand March with Earl Metcalfe—Event a Financial Success

Philadelphia, Dec. 11.

PHILADELPHIA filmland met Philadelphia "fan" land at Philadelphia funland recently. The proverbial "merry marriage bell" was cast in the shade for the yet more merry "movie" belles, who were on hand in great numbers, to be gazed at with interest and delight by their yet more numerous number of admirers.

Not only was the Quaker City contingent of stars well represented. Gotham sent its large quota and other cities were only prevented from sending their favorites by the great distances.

Pathe led off in numbers from out of town, and also captured the honor of leading the grand march, Lillian Lorraine being chosen, with Earl Metcalfe, of Lubin, as her partner. As this was Miss Lorraine's very first motion picture ball, she enjoyed the novel experience.

From the thousands present, as well as the generous support given the souvenir program, with its numerous advertisements, the ball must have been a huge financial success.

The ball committee, consisting of Jay Emanuel, chairman; M. A. Benn, P. J. Cropper, Jack Delmar, Earl Forte, Carl Hess, Walter Jacobs, Dave Sablosky, Morris Spears, worked indefatigably to make affairs run smoothly.

The large Turngeminde Hall was decorated with lilies, poinsettias and chrysanthemums, while the stage was occupied by the Hirshberg orchestra, which furnished the music not only for the dancers, but for the vaudeville entertainment which was an added attraction to the program and one of the big surprises of the committee.

Refreshment Room Handy

A unique feature was the refreshment room right at one end of the ball room, thus enabling all in search of either liquid or solid sustenance to at the same time watch the dancing.

This added joy too to the "fans" who could see their favorites enjoying sparkles or bubbles as the case might be.

When the strains of the last waltz were echoing through the early morning hours, another pleasant surprise was in store for the guests of honor. The committee were hosts at a delightful little breakfast at the Bingham House. Here there was a chance to really get acquainted with the stars and their satellites and the exhibitors present were not slow to take advantage of the opportunity.

Charles Segall, president of the Exhibitors' League, made a speech of welcome and then called on several present, beginning with the chairman.

Bliss Millford, of Pathe, entertained the party with some original songs. Clarence Elmer told a funny story. Billy Reeves did a little stunt. Lillian Lorraine, Rose Duggan, of the Evening Mail, Beulah Pointer, author; Alice Lake, of Vitagraph; Irene Page Solomon, of Motion Picture News; Flo Barrington, Steve Talbot, of The Billboard; Alvin Plough, of the Evening Ledger; Pete Schmid and Julian M. Solomon, Jr., of the Morosco Company, were all called upon to say a few words.

At the ball, the usual introduction of the stars was performed by Carl Miller, of the Knickerbocker theatre. Each made her or his little bow and their degree of popularity was shown by the amount of applause.

The management of the grand march was in the hands of Mrs. S. W. Cortissoz and several teachers from the Cortissoz School of Dancing. The publicity representatives were in evidence and pulled off some clever stunts.

Live Rooster Struts for Pathé

Pathe, who had a box, had as their mascot a large, gold colored live rooster, which was much in evidence during intermissions, when G. H. Atwood, or some one from the local Pathe exchange, paraded him around the ball room. Pathe also gave away gold rooster buttons and seals.

What proved useful to both sexes, especially the reporters who had forgotten their notebooks when they changed their working clothes, were the cute, celluloid memorandum tablets distributed by June and Pete from the Morosco offices, with pictures of Anna Held and Dustin Farnum on the memos.

Equally clever, if not so useful to half of the audience, were the powder puffs in silk bags handed around by Harry Reichenbach, of Equitable and World fame. These were with the compliments of Gail Kane.

Pop Lubin had a box for his party, and was on hand himself, along with Octavia Handworth, Joseph Kaufman, D. L. Don, June Daye, Bernard Siegel, Peter Lang, Patsy DeForest, Kemp Green, Anthony Kelly, little Eleanor Dunn and small Mimi Yvonne, besides those already mentioned.

Pathe had also Lois Meredith, Marie Wagner, Mary Allen, Ramies Torres, Earl Smith, and the publicity manager, W. A. S. Douglas. Mrs. Atwood, Earl Schweigert and others from the local exchange assisted Mr. Atwood in doing the honors.

George Beihoff saw that the World and Equitable celebrities were well entertained. Mary Charleson, Frances Nelson, Marie Wells, Ben August, were of this party. It seemed strange to find Mary Charleson away from the Lubinites, but such is picture life.

Harry Scott, of the local office, was host to the Kleine-Edison stars, Viola Dana, Mabel Trunelle, Ruby Hoffman, Robert Conness, Edward Earl, Allen Crossland.

Oh, Sam, Gallivanting, Were You?

Sam Speedon, from Vitagraph, had with him Kate Price and Virginia Pearson.

Then there was May Ward, of Franklin Film, Mary Moore, of the Mitsch-Ellis Company, two Philadelphia companies; George Seitz, author; Harry Schwalbe, V. C. Carrick, Jean Marcus, George Dembow, exchange men. Mrs. Oscar Morgan with her husband, of Paramount publicity. Abe. Einstein, G. Ticknor and William Katz, of the Stanley forces.

Amongst exhibitors and managers were B. Steifel, M. Rogasner, Ben Selicman, Earl Kirk, Jules Catsiff, and many others.

Herman Dieck, of the Record, H. Bonte, of Public Ledger, F. Armato, of the Evening Telegraph, were amongst the newspaper men noted.

Eli Orowitz, of Amusement, gave out the latest copy of his paper as souvenirs.

Real Firemen Give Realism to Thanhouser Stunt

Volunteers in Portchester Make Response to Hurry Call, Sent in by an Unsuspecting Citizen, to Save House from Fire (Pots) and Get in Picture

DIRECTOR W. EUGENE MOORE of the Thanhouser forces recently resorted to strategic methods in filming a series of fire scenes for "The Woman in Politics," a forthcoming five reel feature to be released through Mutual.

Moore discovered an old factory somewhere on the back lots of Portchester, N. Y., and decided that that place and no other would smoke with Thanhouser smoke pots and burst into flame with Thanhouser torches when it came to the fiery part of "The Woman in Politics."

All of which was very well conceived, but at the last moment Moore bethought himself of the firemen. Would he employ "sups"? By no means. Suping firemen had no place in "The Woman in Politics." Moore, after entertaining and dismissing various solutions to his predicament, finally decided that the Portchester fire department would be the correct article.

But then Moore remembered that fire departments, even though they be situated in Portchester dislike any sort of motion picture publicity. So he kept the entire affair dark until the building flared up with flame, and then some agitated citizen turned in an alarm and the volunteer firemen of Portchester just had to come and have their pictures taken, much as they tried to evade the shots of six camera men busily engaged in catching the scenes.

The entire affair was realistic to some several hundred Portchester citizens and a half dozen newspaper representatives that Leon J. Rubenstein gathered here and there in New York, taking them with more or less alacrity to the scene of the fire.

There were jumps from windows, the roof, rescues by ladders and shrill cries of 'Fireman, save my child,' bits of realism that will show to good advantage in the completed picture.

Two Adaptations and 2 Original Plays for Famous

Pauline Frederick to Appear in "Lydia Gilmore," from a Henry Arthur Jones Drama, and Mary Pickford Will Be Seen in "The Foundling," Specially Written for the Company

IN view of the controversy which is rife among producers concerning the relative merits of the adaptation of successful plays and novels, as compared with original stories, to the motion picture screen, the announcement of the Famous Players releases on the Paramount Program for the first month of the New Year proves particularly interesting.

Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players, is among the staunchest advocates of the desirability of adapting any meritorious dramatic material, from whatever source, to the requirements of the screen. But that his earnest advocacy of the play and the story has not closed his eyes to the power of the photoplay, which is written expressly for the screen, is clearly demonstrated by the fact that, of the next four films released by his company, two are adaptations and two are original scripts.

On January 3 Pauline Frederick appears in an adaptation of Henry Arthur Jones' "Lydia Gilmore," the first Paramount release for 1916; on the tenth Marguerite Clark will be seen in an adaptation of "Mice and Men"; on the twentieth, Mary Pickford stars in "The Foundling," an original script, and on the twenty-fourth Hazel Dawn plays "My Lady Incog.," another original photoplay.

"Lydia Gilmore," in which Pauline Frederick makes her first appearance since her triumphant presentation in "Bella Donna," is one of the most successful dramas from the pen of Henry Arthur Jones. Unlike the roles in which Miss Frederick has recently been starred, it is the story of a noble woman whose love for her little son leads her to shield him at the sacrifice of her own conscience.

His father is guilty of infidelity and of murder, but in order to save her son from disgrace, Mrs. Gilmore perjures herself on the witness stand and suffers unmitigated torture until she is finally exposed by a servant who gives damaging testimony to the court.

In the supporting cast appear Vincent Serrano, who was especially engaged to play Dr. Gilmore, in which role he makes his screen debut; Thomas Holding, Michael Rale, Robert Cain and Helen Luttrell.

"Mice and Men," in which Marguerite Clark is starred, is an adaptation of the famous play by Madeline Lucette Ryley in the stage version of which Annie Russell and Lady Gertrude Forbes-Robertson scored in New York and London, respectively. It is the story of a little girl who is adopted by a scientist, who becomes obsessed with the idea that the girls he knows are too frivolous to make good wives.

He determines to train this orphan, and then marry her. But the philosopher has reckoned without youth. He soon finds himself the rival of his own nephew, a young army officer. The development of the girl under the tuition of the professor, and her ultimate struggle between gratitude for what the older man has done for her, and the neutral interest which she takes in the officer, give Miss Clark a great opportunity to do some of her best histrionic work.

Mary Pickford's next starring vehicle is "The Foundling," which presents a story of beautiful sentiments and tender appeal to the finer senses.

As the castaway child, as the slavey in the home of the cruel woman who takes her from the orphanage, as the servant in the boarding-house, and as the triumphant but humble girl of her father's dreams and love, when she is finally returned to his home and restored to the social position rightfully hers, Miss Pickford is consistently charming and artistically effective.

In "My Lady Incog.," which was written especially for her, Hazel Dawn plays a character different from any she has previously interpreted on the screen. It is a big comedy with a big thrill, in which she plays a detective role, masquerading as a baroness in high society.

But the crooks whom she is trailing become suspicious of her, and one of them appears at the house in which she is a guest, proclaiming himself as the husband of the baroness. Then there follows a battle of wits between the two, each one trying to disclose the real identity of the other without revealing his own assumed character.

WOOD, GAUMONT HEAD IN ENGLAND, PLEASED WITH BUSINESS HERE

H. Wood, general manager of the Gaumont Company, Ltd., for Great Britain,, with headquarters at 6 Denman street, Shaftsbury avenue, London, who has been in New York for two weeks, returned Tuesday on the New Amsterdam. Mr. Wood likes New York, Chicago and whatever he has seen of the United States, so much so, that he expects to make regular and frequent trips hereafter. Undoubtedly the affairs of the Gaumont Co. both here and abroad will have much to do with these trips, but Mr. Wood is not to be interviewed. MOTION PICTURE NEWS hopes to make some announcements later pertaining to Gaumont progress. Suffice to say that the British manager is an extremely efficient and experienced executive of a firm very powerful in the world's film business.

TWO-INCH TALISMEN BRING TALL LUCK TO THEDA BARA

Theda Bara, one of William Fox's best-known film stars, attributes her success to the whisperings of two little gods, each of which is no more than two inches high.

Daikoku, who knocks anything into your life, and Abesu, the god of laughter and sunshine, are the names and their missions.

All Gaumont Films 5-Reelers for Mutual's De Luxe

Company Will Make Pictures for This Brand Only—Two Studios Busy and a Third Organizing for Immediate Production at Jacksonville, Florida

RUMORS current in the motion picture industry for the last few weeks have been crystallized into the announcement that the Gaumont company will devote its photo-drama activities entirely to the making of five reel features for release on the Mutual Program as Mutual Masterpictures, Edition de Luxe. Two companies already at Jacksonville are now at work upon these pictures, and a third is in process of organization.

PRETTY BILLIE BURKE PHOTOGRAPHED IN A LEISURE MOMENT AT HER INCEVILLE HOME IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Two of these companies will be headed by prominent stars in the employ of the Gaumont company. At the head of one will be Gertrude Robinson and Alexander Gaden. The other will have as its leading woman a young actress whose name is being withheld by the Gaumont company for the present.

The third company will differ slightly in policy from the others, in that it will have only a permanent woman star—Lucille Taft.

Among the people already engaged is Iva Shepard. She has been featured in emotional roles for the past five years by Selig, Kleine, Universal, Life Photo and Famous Players. What Director Richard Garrick characterizes as a distinct acquisition is a player practically new to the screen. This is Yvonne Chappelle. Hitherto her greatest fame has been gained as an esthetic dancer.

JENNIE BIDGOOD CAST FOR "PARISIAN ROMANCE"

Jennie Bidgood, who has left the legitimate stage to return to motion pictures, is cast for a part in "A Parisian Romance," a William Fox production.

Exhibitors Should Use Home Papers, Says William Fox

Flash on the Screen a Complete List of the Dailies Published in Your Town, Urging Patrons to Read Them, Is His Advice—The Press, If Made an Ally, Will Popularize the Industry the Way It Made the Automobile Business

WILLIAM FOX is throwing all of the extensive resources of his film corporation behind a movement destined to be of great financial value to the daily newspapers of America.

The Fox campaign is not linked in the slightest way with his own private interests, or shaped in any way to be personally beneficial. It is done to bring a closer feeling of friendship between all daily newspapers and the film manufacturers as a whole.

Mr. Fox is now appealing to the thousands of American exhibitors to advertise their home town newspapers freely, generously and without pay.

For weeks his bulletin, issued for exhibitors, has been emphasizing the methods by which the exhibitor can team with the daily papers.

This was merely laying the groundwork for what he now reveals.

William Fox's personal success is very largely based upon vivid, shrewd paid advertising in the daily newspapers. Using the motion picture trade publications he and his thousands of exhibitors resort to the local daily newspapers of their towns and cities to sell their pictures to the people.

Flash Names of Home Dailies

There has been begun in his Bulletin a series of editorials introducing both exhibitors and branch managers to the editors, owners and managers of newspapers of all sections.

As an encouragement to closer friendship between newspaper owners and the owners of motion picture theatres, Mr. Fox offers the following suggestions:

"First. Buy advertising space in your home city newspapers.

"Second. Every motion picture theatre in the United States ought to throw on the screen once during each performance just before or just after your big feature picture a slide of this sort:

Newspapers are the greatest factors for the good of any city. Read them daily.

"Do not omit the name of any newspaper, no matter whether you think an owner is friendly or not. Include all in your slide.

"Do not go to a newspaper owner or manager and try to swap or exchange this courtesy for any publicity.

"Just do this openly and freely every day in the year.

"The newspapers have made the automobile industry and have given remarkable impetus to motion pictures—now the fifth greatest industry in America and crowding hard to attain fourth place in industrial importance.

Nation-Wide Campaign

"Manufacturers and exhibitors owe the newspapers much.

"No nation-wide campaign of this kind ever has been suggested before. This has been done for individual newspapers in cities here and there.

"William Fox urges and advises that all exhibitors of Fox films and the features of other manufacturers as well, do this service for all newspapers in all cities and towns.

"Do not let the fact that you may not be on friendly terms with some particular publisher destroy the value of this suggestion.

"Advertise his paper with all the others.

"There is nothing masked or hidden about this suggestion.

"It will be of immense value to your city and to you to help your local newspapers entirely without pay. They do more for you than any other industry you have.

"The newspapers and the motion picture industry are twin agencies of amusement, educational enlightenment and human interest. They are in no sense competitive, nor can they be. Each can be made mutually reliant upon the other—with profit for both.

"We can do something constructively fine and intelligent for newspapers at small cost and little trouble to ourselves and they will continue to be the powerful allies of our industry that they have shown themselves to be for several years past."

Mr. Fox also suggests that some alert newspaper manager furnish his local exhibitors each week a flashy, strong catchline to go at the bottom of all the free slides run about the local papers, thereby affording them with a new and challenging weekly change of copy.

"The Dragon" with Miss Fischer for Equitable

The Feature Will Be Released December 27—Julia Dean Makes Appearance in "The Ransom," for Triumph, Ready January 3—"Behind Closed Doors" Stars Marie Empress

THE definite program for the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation, which releases through the World Film Corporation, has been laid out for the forthcoming three months.

Following Henry Kolker in "The Warning," William Courtenay in "Sealed Lips," and Gail Kane in "The Labyrinth," will be seen Margarita Fischer in "The Dragon," which is now completed, and which represents the best work of Director Harry Pollard. This release date will be December 27.

Julia Dean makes her first appearance in an important picture in the Triumph Film Corporation's visualization of the well-known play "The Ransom," which is in the final stages of studio and laboratory work now and which will reach the program January 3.

Molly McIntyre, late star of "Bunty Pulls the Strings," and Molly McKay will be seen in S. E. V. Taylor's original story, "Nan Perrine, or One Night," which Mr. Taylor wrote and which he is producing for Equitable.

Miss McIntyre makes her first screen appearance in this picture, which will be released on the program January 10.

Marie Empress, last seen in a Metro play, comes from the Triumph Film Corporation's plant in "Behind Closed Doors." Miss Empress will feature the program January 10, after which will come Muriel Ostriche in "Babette of the Ballyhoo," Frank Sheridan and Lily Cahill in "Caste," Gail Kane in "Her God" and Charles J. Ross in "The Senator."

In addition to the above stars, Marguerite Leslie, Teddy Sampson, Carlyle Blackwell and Clara Whipple, will be seen in important productions.

Philadelphia Celebrates 160th Showing of "Nation"

Although D. W. Griffith, Producer of the Picture, Was 3,000 Miles Away, on Pacific Coast, He Was the Host, and Wired Greetings to Diners

Special to Motion Picture News

Philadelphia, Dec. 4.

THE one hundred and sixtieth performance of the "Birth of a Nation" in the Quaker City was celebrated by an elaborate banquet given to the newspaper men and other friends of D. W. Griffith at the Ritz-Carlton hotel on Friday, December 3.

Although bodily in far away Los Angeles, Mr. Griffith was the host of this memorable occasion and was connected by wire with the gathering for nearly an hour, during which time greetings and felicitations were flashed back and forth on the private telegraph line from the banquet hall to Mr. Griffith, who was sitting in that haunt of Los Angeles filmdom, the Alexandria Grill.

The first message wired across the continent was from the host of the evening as follows:

"My Philadelphia Friends:

"To you all and everyone now so far away kindest greetings. The first words of encouragement and praise the little play of ours ever received was in your dear old city on a rainy Sunday night last winter. That we are so far away makes no difference, for that sympathy that is between us now make warm the cold wires and puts away entirely the space, and let us be close together in love.

"There is just now beginning here the first bud of the orange trees, so with our far away thoughts I will just send you a little of their fragrance. God bless and keep you all."

Ralph Bingham, noted humorist and lecturer, toastmaster of the evening, answered in kind. Other messages were dispatched by various guests. One of the beautiful menu cards was autographed by every one present and sent as a souvenir to Mr. Griffith.

During the evening speeches were made by James Barnes, African explorer; Herman L. Dieck, dramatic editor of the Philadelphia Record; H. T. Craven and Richard J. Beamish, of the Philadelphia Press; Harry T. Jordon, manager of Keith's Theatre; Fred R. Zweifel, Philadelphia manager of "The Birth of a Nation"; Thomas N. Love, manager Forrest Theatre; J. Fred Nixon Nirdlinger, theatre magnate; Percy Heath of "Stop! Look! Listen!" and Thomas McNichol.

S. F. Nixon, who was ill, sent his regrets and greetings.

Others present were: F. M. Armato, the photoplay editor of the Evening Telegraph; A. R. Plough, photoplay advertising manager of the Evening Ledger; Howard Bonte, of the Public Ledger; Charles Bell and Morris Pancoast, well known cartoonists; Sydney Smith, secretary to J. McCarthy, general manager of "The Birth of a Nation;" Dr. Wilmer Krusen, director of health; Harry Knapp, of the Philadelphia Inquirer; A. Duross Ferriss, of the Evening Telegraph; J. S. McSween, C. C. Wanamaker, F. C. Dieck, R. Hartley, J. P. Nolan, Jack Patton, H. Sauers, P. A. Kingsley, J. A. Slemmons, H. P. Quicksall.

Seventy guests all told enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. Griffith.

One of the most unique features of the evening was the vocal and instrumental music by the negro orchestra, lending as it did just the right atmosphere to the celebration of such a southern classic.

"The Birth of a Nation" had to leave the Forrest Theatre last week on account of other attractions being booked there, but so great was the demand for seats, a further run of the picture was decided on by the management. Accordingly, it was moved to the Garrick, a first-class legitimate theatre on Chestnut street.

Here the feature is repeating its success at the Forrest. On account of previous arrangements at the Garrick, however, only a four-weeks' engagement could be had and "The Birth of a Nation" will therefore sing its Philadelphia swan song on Christmas night.

It is expected that Baltimore and Washington will be the next points to get a peep at the big photo drama.

SEITZ DROPS PATHE EDITORSHIP TO WRITE SCENARIOS FOR COMPANY

Owing to his desire to devote his whole time to scenario writing rather than to editorial work, George B. Seitz has turned over to John Clymer the position of scenario editor for Pathé.

Mr. Clymer has been a scenario writer for years, and was formerly publicity man for the Gaumont company. He is also known as a short story writer and musical critic. Mr. Seitz will continue to devote his whole time to writing for Pathé.

IMP SCENARIO MAN A DIRECTOR

Raymond Schrock, who has been editor of scenarios for the Imp-Universal forces, has written 112 scripts in the last two years. He will become a director when the Universal gets into the new studios.

IMP STUDIOS TO MOVE IN 2 WEEKS

The Imp Universal studios on Eleventh avenue, New York City, are preparing for the great haul to Leonia, N. J., which is being made day by day. It is expected that the move will be made in two weeks.

"Strange Case of Mary Page" Brings Familiar Faces

Walthall and Edna Mayo, Appearing in a Dizzy Succession of Gowns, Will Be Seen in Essanay Picture to Be Novelized for 500 Newspapers and Magazines

"THE STRANGE CASE OF MARY PAGE," a drama of mystery, is being produced by the Essanay Company. Henry B. Walthall and Edna Mayo will be the stars.

The drama will be issued in a series of episodes, the first of which is to be released early in January. Each episode will be complete in itself.

The production is announced as being "not a dramatized dime novel acted by acrobats," but a first-class drama with a notable cast and with direction and photography of the highest type.

The story, which will be printed in serial form by nearly 500 newspapers, is by the author of the serial, "What Happened to Mary."

A feature of the photoplay, appealing especially to women, will be Miss Mayo's gowns. Her elaborate wardrobe, which includes costumes for every occasion—from boudoir to ball room—is being designed by Lady Duff-Gordon (Lucile).

"The Strange Case of Mary Page" is the first series ever offered by the Essanay Company, which has kept out of this department of picture production until its officers were positive that they could release satisfactory films.

In addition to the publication of the series of tales in the newspapers, an extensive advertising campaign in a score of magazines of wide circulation has been launched Among the periodicals that will be used are Cosmopolitan, McClure's, Ladies' World, Pictorial Review, McCall's, Metropolitan, Hearst's, Mother's, Collier's, Leslie's, Munsey's and all the motion picture publications.

Al Ray Begins Production of Comedies for National

Creator of Louie Smaltz in Vaudeville, with Long Career in Biograph, Vitagraph, Mutual and Other Companies, Makes Plays in Baltimore Studio

THE National Film Corporation of Baltimore has just completed several comedies produced under the direction of Al Ray, who also took the leading roles in the photo dramas founded on a comedy sketch entitled "Breaking Into Society," in which Ray was seen on the vaudeville stage as Louie Smaltz.

The National Film Corporation, with a stock company of sixty players, is producing in and near Baltimore, where the locations have been found particularly suitable for the exteriors of the comedies.

Among the members of the cast is a number of acrobats, who will be trained for comedy stunts by Paul Sorg.

Mr. Ray is a director of long experience, and has to his credit a wide career as an actor on the speaking stage and in the silent drama. Mr. Ray began with child parts at the old Biograph.

He has been associated with Champion, Ramo, Comedy, Drako, Vitagraph, Federal, Astor and many other companies.

For the last six weeks he has been with the National studios in Baltimore, which he joined after completing "Spring Onions" for Mutual.

Mr. Ray's character of Smaltz proved popular on the Associated program. Five productions recently completed by Mr. Ray are: "Love and Cannon Balls," "Knocked Out," with Kid Williams, bantamweight champion; "An Artist's Romance," "An Accidental Hero," and "A Lover's Rocky Road."

Miss Ward Puts Aside Stage Mirth for Screen Emotion

Actress Who Ranked as One of the Best-Known Comediennes Before the Footlights in America, Finds a New Talent When She Goes into Pictures and Plays in "The Cheat" for the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company

KNOWN in the theatrical world for some years as one of the leading high class comediennes of the American stage, Fanny Ward, by reason of a somewhat reluctant appearance in motion pictures, has built anew for herself through the medium of the screen a reputation as a star in motion pictures as enviable as her reputation as an artiste on the dramatic stage.

Since the advent into great popularity of the feature play stars of the legitimate stage by the score have been persuaded to appear on the screen. Yet probably not one other than Miss Ward in so short a time has achieved that unusual success which seems to come only to those particularly fitted and chosen.

Miss Ward Wins Film Fan Friends

The story is told at the studios of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company that when Miss Ward completed her first Paramount picture, "The Marriage of Kitty," from the farce in which she achieved one of her greatest stage successes, she was anything but enthusiastic over her debut on the screen.

On the night of the special invitation projection several score of Miss Ward's friends gathered to see the motion picture play. The star herself sat apart, expectant, nervous. As the story progressed smiles of amusement became noisy laughter until at the end of the photoplay, which was a comedy, Miss Ward was called upon to make a short speech, which she did with some misgivings.

It subsequently has happened that "The Marriage of Kitty" is among the most popular comedies on the Paramount program and Miss Ward as a comedienne has won unusual attention from the photoplaygoing public. "The Marriage of Kitty" long ago broke into the circle of re-booking.

Cecil B. DeMille, director general of the Lasky company, watched the performance of Miss Ward in "The Marriage of Kitty" very closely.

His announcement that he would persuade her to appear in an emotional role on the screen caused no end of comment among Miss Ward's friends. The star herself, who for years had made playgoers laugh instead of cry, was eager to enter the experiment, as she herself, playfully, termed it.

Shows Emotional Ability

The photoplay selected was Hector Turnbull's "The Cheat," a modern drama in which the principal feminine character is made to pay the price of his thoughtlessness by becoming the center of a tense, gripping complication. Mr. DeMille, having but a short time before completed the last of the three productions in which Geraldine Farrar appeared for the Lasky company, personally supervised the direction of "The Cheat."

Writing to W. W. Hodkinson, president of Paramount Pictures Corporation, Jesse L. Lasky said that "The Cheat," in his opinion, was one of the finest photoplays the Lasky company had made. He wrote after the private studio showing:

FANNY WARD

"Fanny Ward, the star, will in this picture take her place as one of the few great emotional actresses of the screen. I doubt if her remarkable performance in 'The Cheat' has ever been surpassed. She runs the gamut of emotions, and in the most thrilling, dramatic scenes so swayed her audience last night that she was applauded time and again.

"Right here I wish to prophesy that from the release date of 'The Cheat" Miss Ward will be recognized as the leading emotional actress of her type on the screen. Real praise must be given to Cecil B. DeMille. In staging 'The Cheat' his genius seems to have reached a climax. The picture should mark a new era in lighting as applied to screen productions."

It needs but a glance at the picture forming the supplement to this week's issue of the NEWS to see the screen possibilities in the face and poise of the head.

Fanny Ward has been placed under a long term contract to appear exclusively in productions of Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company. As one of the regular stars of the company she joins the coterie already consisting of Blanche Sweet, Victor Moore, Charlotte Walker, Wallace Reid and Cleo Ridgely and others.

Rush of Business Pushes Metro Into Bigger Offices

Company Will Take Quarters in the Longacre Building, Diagonally Across from Its Old Location, on December 20—Projection Room Will Have 45 Feet Throw

IN order to meet the demand for greater office facilities, and provide room for an increase in the executive and clerical force, the Metro Pictures Corporation will move from its present location in the Heidelberg building at Forty-second street and Broadway, to the Longacre building diagonally across the street, at No. 1476 Broadway, New York.

The rapid growth of Metro within the remarkably short space of time since its inception is indicative of the possibilities of the motion picture business and the growth of the industry. The proposed change from their present offices will be made on or about December 20.

In their present home Metro has been obliged to use two floors, the executive offices being on one floor and the publicity, magazine and mailing department on the floor above. In their new quarters the Metro company will occupy a large suite on the eleventh floor of the Longacre building, which is erected on one of the most costly pieces of property in the world.

In all there will be 8,200 square feet of floor space, and each department will have its own offices opening on a general reception and waiting room.

One of the practical and most valuable additions in the new Metro location will be a large projecting room that will permit of a forty-five foot throw. This room will be done in old blue and white and furnished with every possible convenience and comfort. The chairs, which are now being specially constructed, are craft wicker.

There will be special tables for the use of those wishing to make notes, censors, newpaper and magazine critics, musical directors who arrange special programs for Metro pictures, and Metro employes desiring to make notes on corrections and suggestions on the pictures shown.

The new offices will be sumptuously and luxuriously appointed in every particular, and represent the last word in equipment and furnishing, in line with Metro's general plan in everything. Richard A. Rowland, president of the Metro Corporation, will have his private suite of offices, and other private offices will include one for Joseph W. Engel, treasurer; W. E. Atkinson, general manager, and Charles W. Stern, auditor. Arthur James, director of publicity, will have his offices on the Broadway side of the building. Merritt Crawford, managing editor of the Metro Pictures Magazine, will also have his offices on this side, as will Henry James, business manager of the magazine.

The poster department, mailing rooms and kindred departments will adjoin the magazine and publicity suite. In this suite will also be located the scenario department, which is conducted under the supervision of Arthur James.

Decorators, painters and carpenters are now at work remodeling the new offices to meet the needs of Metro. This work is being done under the personal directions of Treasurer Engel, who is especially fitted for the task. The lease for the new offices is for a term of years.

HENLEY DIRECTS CAREY FROM HIS BEDSIDE FOR "GRAFT"

With the accident which laid Hobart Henley up in the Universal hospital, unable to continue in the chief role in the latest of the Universal serial features, "Graft," Walter Woods, author of the scenario, conceived the idea of putting Harry Carey in the other's place to act as his lieutenant and operate under his instructions given from his bed in an hospital.

In this way none of the thrills would be left out of the story and at the same time

HOBART HENLEY AND HARRY CAREY AS THE LARNIGAN BROTHERS IN "GRAFT"

Henley, the original leading character, would be able to continue his work in it.

In the above illustration, Harry Carey, in the role of Tom Larnigan, is seen at the bedside of his brother, Bruce Larnigan (Hobart Henley), taking instructions from his relative to running down and frustrating the gang of trust magnates.

An interesting fact in connection with the illustration is that it was actually made in the company hospital at Universal City. The white walls of the rooms lend themselves admirably for photographic purposes and the greater part of subsequent scenes in which Henley appears will be made there.

SCREEN CLUB HOLDS BEEFSTEAK DINNER

A beefsteak dinner was held at the Screen Club, New York, December 11, at 8:30 p. m., Adam Kessel, Jr., acting as rewinder.

The following is a partial list of talent that appeared:

Bruce Weyman, the celebrated baritone; Louis Leon Hall; Harry Benham, tenor solo; Howard Crampton, impersonations of great men past and present; Gladden James, dialectic stories; J. I. Johnson, tenor solo; Jack Sarvey, the Mother Machree Boy; Sydney Bracey, and Bill McKenna.

Industrial Company's Premises Ready February 1

Building Will Contain a Vault with a Capacity of 6,000 Reels, and Laboratory Will Have Facilities for Handling 2,000,000 Feet of Film a Week

NEW LABORATORY OF THE INDUSTRIAL MOVING PICTURE COMPANY AT CHICAGO

Chicago, Dec. 11.

A NEW laboratory and studios are now being erected by the Industrial Moving Picture Company, who expect to occupy the new premises about February 1. The building is 124x129, two stories and fireproof throughout. It contains a vault capable of safely holding more than 6,000 reels. The laboratory will have an actual capacity of nearly 2,000,000 feet of film per week.

The studio will be able to comfortably and efficiently handle six sets at one time and will be equipped with swimming pool and the most modern of lighting equipments. The carpenter shop and paint shops will be models of their kind. Ample provision has been made for property and dressing rooms.

Adjoining the building proper is an outside yard of 124x48, which will be enclosed in an eight foot concrete fence. This area will be used for garaging and for storage tanks. The roof has been built so as to carry a very heavy live load, and the electric elevator runs up to the roof, so that in the event an extraordinarily large set is to be used, an outdoor studio can be arranged on the roof and by light diffusion, a setting can be made of more than 150 feet in length.

As Watterson R. Rothacker, general manager of the Industrial Moving Picture Company states, the present factory of that concern will be kept in full operation until the new plant is "hitting on four," so that there will be absolutely no interruption of business.

Detailed description of the new place will be given some time in January.

First Heeza Liar Cartoon for Paramount January 6

His Creator's Assistant, Glackens, Will Show "Haddem Badd's Elopement" on Jan. 13, While a Silhouette Fantasy by Gilbert, the Artist, Will Be Seen Jan. 20

FOLLOWING the announcement that J. R. Bray, animated cartoonist, creator of Colonel Heeza Liar, and other characters had become associated with Paramount Pictures Corporation, it is now stated that Mr. Bray's schedule of releases for the first four weeks has been prepared, and although subject to change, has been adopted.

The new year will usher in the first release on January 6, when Mr. Bray's own cartoon "Colonel Heeza Liar's Waterloo," will have its initial unreeling under the Paramount banner, together with several hundred feet of startingly original film now in course of preparation.

On January 13, L. M. Glackens, one of Mr. Bray's corps of six assistants, will be represented by "Hadden Badd's Elopement," a cartoon, and also a part reel of educational material, yet to be announced.

On January 20, a silhouette fantasy by C. Alan Gilbert, the noted illustrator, entitled "The Chess Queen," will be released.

C. T. Anderson, another of Mr. Bray's assistants, will prepare for Paramount, on January 27, a cartoon entitled "The Police Dog on the Wire," and other films of entertainment value will be assembled with the cartoons. In this connection Mr. Bray has a plan which is so humorous, and yet so deeply interesting, that he desires to work it out fully before allowing the details to become generally known.

The releases of the Bray Studio, Inc., herein announced, are in addition to the political cartoons and others which Mr. Bray will draw for Paramount Newspictures.

ARDEN, IN "VAGABOND," PATHE, OWNS "SHOP DE LUXE"

Edwin Arden, the actor who will appear December 17 in Pathé's "The Beloved Vagabond, owns what he calls "a carpenter shop de luxe," and is as proud of his ability to do carpenter work as he is of his profession.

In the basement of his home at Forest Hills, Mr. Arden has a shop all fitted out with everything necessary to a carpenter's outfit. He has a specially perfected lighting system, arranged so that there are no shadows and so that Mr. Arden may work at night.

The actor declares that there isn't anything from a box to a house which he cannot build in his work shop.

The Press, Press Representative and the Picture—XI

Real News Value Must Be Essential of Motion Picture Publicity for Acceptance by Editors of Dailies, Says Arthur James, Publicity Director for Metro Pictures Corporation—Newspapers Are Eager to Publish Items Concerning Pictures, But the Press Matter Must Be Worth While

RESPONDING to the invitation of the editor of MOTION PICTURE NEWS to contribute to the series on motion picture publicity and the daily newspaper I must express my appreciation of the privilege, first, because I have regard for my early lessons in manners and then because I hope to add to the interest of his publication subsequently and by the column.

In accordance with time honored custom I sound first my keynote and then I shall sing my aria through. The keynote of motion picture publicity for the daily newspaper is that more people are interested in motion pictures than any other one amusement in the world. If people are interested in pictures, literally millions of people, the newspapers who have any regard at all for their circulations are going to print the news of motion pictures. The rest lies with the industry and the newspaper sense of the publicity man.

I have always described advertising as the thing paid for and publicity as its free and untrammeled brother. But there is no such thing as something for nothing, and publicity to be a fair proposition must be in its essence valuable to the newspaper, magazine or trade journal which gives it space.

In other words, publicity must justify itself. Newspaper publicity in behalf of motion pictures must be of real value as news, if it is to be continually accepted by newspapers, and it has been my personal observation that any other kind of publicity is pure waste.

Copy Must Be Worth While

Newspapers everywhere will print good clean, interesting pictures and run news matter in reams if the publicity man will take the precaution to make his news matter worth while. It must have a reasonable percentage of brains in it. It must recognize the accepted news values of the newspaper office. It must be fresh, it must interesting and worth printing.

Newspapers do occasionally fall for the apocryphal yarn, but they should be permitted to do it with their eyes open. It is not impossible to "fake" an editor now and then, but his vengeance of "verboten" is sure and lasting for the publicity man who imposes upon him.

It was my privilege to secure more than 500,000 columns of newspaper space for a motion picture group in a period of fourteen months and the methods were so simple as to be almost childlike. All I did was to prepare news stories and present news pictures, and then see to it that they were widely distributed. Nothing could be simpler and nothing is required except a newspaper point of view and a reasonable amount of toil.

It has never been my good fortune to encounter a publicity genius, but I have met several hard working honest successes.

The prime essential for continued success in publicity is truth. I have known only two fakers who have flourished, and these will wind up their publicity careers when they have completed the rounds of their alloted territory. It is not so much a matter of morals or of ethics, as it is a question of horse sense.

Get the "News Trance"

Also it may be said that faking is a confession of incompetence. It means that the publicity man hasn't brains enough to extract the news element from the pictures or stars he represents.

Of course the so called "dog story" or three legged cat legend is not to be sneezed at, but it must not be pretended that they are true. And they must be sufficiently ingenious to be interesting. Publicity is not so much an art as a state of mind, or a news trance into which the subject must throw himself to see things from the newspaper point of view. And the publicity man's chief trouble is rarely with the newspapers.

More often it is with the bright business man who doesn't realize that one proper mention in the news columns is worth two in the paid columns. I believe motion pictures makers have a better sense of publicity than men in similar places in other businesses. It is because publicity and pictures have been Siamese twins from the very first and those who have grown up with this business have a better idea of publicity's limitations than the others.

One thing more in completing this small contribution to the splendid series that has graced the pages of MOTION PICTURE NEWS. No publicity man can afford to overlook the fact that his is the most interesting, the most alive, the most worth-while profession in the world, and that while what he does is simple enough his way of doing it makes the difference.

ARTHUR JAMES.

Fox Bulletin Aligns Itself with the Cause of Common Sense in Picture Publicity

"LINK Fox Films and Your Theatre Up Tight with Your Local Newspapers," says a caption on an editorial in the first issue of the new William Fox Press Department Bulletin.

Again we quote from the same editorial (addressed to Fox exchange men and exhibitors):
